Allah the Exalted defines the issue as one which endures forever once it is perpetrated. He says: 'O, mankind, your injustice is only against yourselves, [being merely] the enjoyment of worldly life.' In this verse, it is as if Allah Glorified is He is addressing the unjust aggressor, 'O, you who covet the rights of others, know that what you gain from usurping these rights is a little comfort in this work, but ultimately, you shall be eternally damned in Hellfire.' Now if you compare the time that one enjoys the fruits of unrighteous exploitation with the eternity of the punishment, you will find that the enjoyment derived from injustice pales in comparison to the suffering that you will have to endure as a punishment. Thus, do not take the life of the physical earth as your reference. The True Lord the Most High might allow the earth itself to have a life spanning twenty million years; however, your life on this earth is limited to a period much shorter than that figure.

Thus, take care of yourselves and protect yourselves against punishment and torture in the Hereafter and realise that the enjoyment of this world is very little, especially if this enjoyment is accompanied by injustice towards you. Everyone will eventually suffer the consequences of their injustice. The enjoyment and pleasure which you might get as a result of this injustice is confined to your limited life in this world. You must know that every person lives on this earth for a given age as an individual, not the whole age of humanity. Hence, The True Lord Glorified is He says in another verse: ‘Say to them, "Little is the enjoyment in this world"…’ (an-Nisa’: 77).

In this verse, the True Lord the Most High stresses this fact: ‘...your injustice is only against yourselves...’ (Yunus: 23). Allah Glorified is He may punish a wrongdoer by letting him see before his death the persons whom he has wronged in a very good condition. So, I always say, ‘If wrongdoers learnt about the great compensation awaiting their victims, they would not commit acts of oppression against them.’ While wrongdoers supposedly enjoy being transgressors which is considered a little worldly enjoyment, we find the True Lord Glorified is He says: ‘…Then to Us is your return...’ (Yunus: 23) When we return to Allah Glorified is He there will be no injustice; no one will wrong others or be wronged by them. Everyone will get the requital for their deeds from Allah the Almighty either with rewards or punishments since the True Lord the Most High says: ‘…Then to Us is your return, and We will inform you of what you used to do.’ (Yunus: 23).

The news about the requital is announced before the occurrence of deeds so that all people know well that every act will be met with a reward or a punishment. Moreover, the fact that the news concerning the requital comes before the actions represents censure of those who wrong themselves by oppressing others.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

إِنَّمَا مَثَلُ ٱلۡحَيَوٰةِ ٱلدُّنۡيَا كَمَآءٍ أَنزَلۡنَٰهُ مِنَ ٱلسَّمَآءِ فَٱخۡتَلَطَ بِهِۦ نَبَاتُ ٱلۡأَرۡضِ مِمَّا
يَأۡكُلُ ٱلنَّاسُ وَٱلۡأَنۡعَٰمُ حَتَّىٰٓ إِذَآ أَخَذَتِ ٱلۡأَرۡضُ زُخۡرُفَهَا وَٱزَّيَّنَتۡ وَظَنَّ أَهۡلُهَآ
أَنَّهُمۡ قَٰدِرُونَ عَلَيۡهَآ أَتَىٰهَآ أَمۡرُنَا لَيۡلًا أَوۡ نَهَارٗا فَجَعَلۡنَٰهَا حَصِيدٗا كَأَن
لَّمۡ تَغۡنَ بِٱلۡأَمۡسِۚ كَذَٰلِكَ نُفَصِّلُ ٱلۡأٓيَٰتِ لِقَوۡمٖ يَتَفَكَّرُونَ ﴿٢٤﴾

The life of this world is like this: rain that We send down from the sky is absorbed by the plants of the earth, from which humans and animals eat. But when the earth has taken on its finest appearance, and adorns itself, and its people think they have power over it, then the fate We commanded comes to it, by night or by day, and We reduce it to stubble, as if it had not flourished just the day before. This is the way We explain the revelations for those who reflect [24] (The Quran, Yunus: 24)

The water that comes down from the sky is the one suitable for irrigating and drinking since the water that exists on the earth represents storehouses for sustaining life. It is often salty like that of the oceans and seas since the True Lord the Most High wants to protect it from being rotted and decayed. Then, the process of water desalination takes place due to the sun rays which cause the water to evaporate and gather to form clouds that turn into fresh distilled water falling from the sky to be used for drinking and irrigating. The True Lord Glorified is He says: '…is like this: rain that We send down from the sky is absorbed by the plants of the earth…' (Yunus: 24).

The Arabic word al-ikhtilat, which means absorption in this verse, refers to the combination of two or more elements in such a way that they can be separated later on. For instance, if you put some seeds of beans together with some seeds of lupin, you can then separate them from each other. There is another kind of putting things together in the form of mixture just like when you squeeze a lemon and mix it with some water and sugar; this causes the particles of the lemon and the sugar to dissolve into the water.

In this verse, the True Lord Glorified is He says: '…is like this: rain that We send down from the sky is absorbed by the plants of the earth…' (Yunus: 24). It might be understood from this verse that water and plants become mixed with one another. Actually, plants—as we know—are living beings that are made out of water as Allah the Almighty says : '…that We made every living thing from water?...' (al-Anbiya': 30).

In this regard, we must pay attention to the difference between the Arabic letter Ba' when denoting 'mixing' and the same letter when referring to 'causality' as in this verse in which Ba' is translated as 'by' to suit the rendering into English in this instance. Thus, the meaning of this part of the verse reads as follows: plants grow profusely out of the earth thanks to the water sent from the sky. After rainfall, you notice that water covers the surface of the earth; then after a few days or weeks, you see the earth filled with plants that have branches and leaves, becoming closely intertwined. The more they get intertwined, the stronger is the proof that a given piece of land is fertile and well irrigated; this is the result of the interaction between water and soil.

On the other hand, when land is not fertile, you find that plants are few and distant from each other; you find one plant here and another there. This is evident when the people of the Egyptian country grow corn, for instance, at a certain time; they say that 'the corn is going bankrupt' which means that every strand of corn stands isolated from the others since the land is arid. Thus, land fertility is essential for the life and growth of plants; water is necessary for dissolving food elements that nourish plants and make their roots grow.

If you one day visit agriculture-related scientific centres in Tokyo or California, you will find that they grow plants on thin strings and irrigate them with water that contains essential food components required for their growth. The people in such cities have found that all plants take from the earth the elements necessary for life at a rate not exceeding five percent of their weight, whereas they take from air ninety five percent of their weight. Thus, the rain that falls from the sky through the air is what dissolves the elements of the earth, so that they can be absorbed by plants.

In this verse, Allah Glorified is He sets forth a simile for us; a simile is an expression that describes something by comparing it with something else. Here, the thing that we bring to clarify the original thing must be well known. So, we cannot liken an unknown thing to another unknown thing; rather, we shed light on an unknown thing by making reference to something that is already known. For instance, when a friend of yours asks you if you know a certain person, you answer that you do not know that person. Then, your friend tells you that the person in question looks like another person whom you know well. Thus, you know the unknown person by making reference to another person who is quite known to you.

Some of those who attack the Quran have argued this way by saying, 'When there is something that is unknown and we wish to shed some light on it, should we not do so by referring to something that is known?' Then, why does Allah Glorified is He say concerning the tree of Zaqqum ‘This tree grows in the heart of the blazing Fire, and its fruits are like devils’ heads’ (as-Saffat: 64-65).

How can Allah Glorified is He tell the believers that the emerging fruits of the tree of Zaqqum, which is one in the Fire unknown to us, resemble the heads of devils? Thus, Allah Glorified is He compares one unknown thing with another unknown thing. The people who have made this claim have overlooked the fact that it is Allah the Almighty is speaking. The True Lord the Most High intends to describe Zaqqum with a horrible thing which is known to us, the devil. The True Lord Glorified is He does not want to restrict this conception of horribleness so as not to limit this simile to a certain picture. You may see a certain thing as terrible, while another person may see it in a different way. Allah Glorified is He wants to make Zaqqum fruits horrible; so He chooses the one thing which we all agree that it is horrid, the heads of devils. Every man can imagine the terrible and disgusting image of the devil from his own perspective. The Greatness of Allah the Almighty lies here in the fact that He leaves the image of the devil more or less ambiguous.

Let us go back to the simile which we are now examining in this verse: the life of this world is compared to the rainwater which the True Lord Glorified is He sends down from the sky and which causes the plants of the earth to grow so abundantly that their branches and leaves intertwine with one another. Every one of us lives a part of this worldly life, along with playing a part in this long film; none of us has witnessed its beginning and some of us might not live to witness its end. So, the True Lord Glorified is He states a simile which includes things known to us all, namely, crops that are watered by rain. Allah Glorified is He intends to depict the picture of this earthly life through talking about something known to all of us; thus, we realise and witness both past and coming events—everything in existence is given its share of growth and prosperity, then all things come to an end. Such is life in this world. Once again, let us recall what the True Lord Glorified is He says: '…is like this: rain that We send down from the sky is absorbed by the plants of the earth, from which humans and animals eat. However, when the earth has taken on its finest appearance, adorns itself and its people think they have power over it, then the fate We commanded comes to it, by night or by day…' (Yunus: 24).

The Arabic word Az-zukhruf translated as 'finest appearance' refers to something that is beautiful and attractive that pleases the soul when gazed upon. The world adorns itself with a variety of colours arranged in a wonderful manner, then all of that is ruined; this is what we witness in our own lives. Thus, Allah Glorified is He gives us a brief description of the world from its beginning to its end by depicting a familiar picture which can be seen by all of us, so that none may be seduced by the beauty and tempting adornment of this worldly life.

In this regard, the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'Let man consider the food he eats! We pour down abundant water and cause the soil to split open. We make grain grow, vines, fresh vegetation, olive trees, date palms, luscious gardens, fruits and fodder, all for you and your livestock to enjoy. When the Deafening Blast comes—the Day when man will flee from his own brother, his mother, his father, his wife, his children; each of them will be absorbed in concerns of their own on that Day.' ('Abasa: 24-37).

Thus, the world with all of its visible beauty is destined to wilt; all the wonderful colours that you see are bound to wither. Even if this world becomes more and more beautiful, it is destined to pass away. Therefore, take care not to be an aggressor. Though you might get some worldly enjoyment through aggression, you will lose everything afterwards as the whole world is destined to come to an end, just as a garden whose flowers grow and flourish due to rainwater, and then all of this ultimately withers away. In this context, Allah Glorified is He says: 'We have tried them as We tried the owners of a certain garden, who swore that they would harvest its fruits in the morning and made no allowance [for the Will of Allah]. A disaster from your Lord struck the garden as they slept and by morning it was stripped bare, a desolate land.’ (al-Qalam: 17-20). Thus, this is the nature and description of this worldly life.

In this verse, the True Lord Glorified is He says: '… But when the earth has taken on its finest appearance, adorns itself …' (Yunus: 24). The earth adorns itself by its Lord’s Command. Allah Glorified is He attributes perceptions to beings that we would never think of as having minds and wills of their own. Does the True Lord the Most High, not say concerning the story of the 'virtuous servant, Khidr': 'And so they travelled on. Then, when they came to a town and asked the inhabitants for food but were refused hospitality, they saw a wall there that was on the point of falling down …' (al-Kahf: 77)? Does the wall have the will to fall down? If we look closely at this point, we will find that Allah Glorified is He has given every created being in existence a life a will and a power that suit it well. The True Lord Glorified is He has given us a multitude of examples in this regard; wherever there is something which our minds strain to comprehend; Allah Glorified is He sheds light on it through Divine expositions. An example of this is the hoopoe’s knowledge of monotheism (Tawhid) in the story of Prophet Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him and how it informed Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him of the news about the Queen of Sheba whose people worshipped the sun, not Allah the Almighty. It is as though the hoopoe intuitively recognised that it is Allah Glorified is He Who is truly worthy of worship; he says in the Quran: 'Should they not worship Allah Who brings forth what is hidden in the heavens and earth…’ (an-Naml: 25).

Who can think that the hoopoe—which is a mere bird—could have possessed such a great insight concerning doctrines? Allah Glorified is He wants to show us that this bird does not have any whims which could corrupt its doctrinal beliefs and that it is our (humans) whims, which corrupt doctrines. The one whom Allah Glorified is He has given the freedom of choice is the one who abuses this grace so long as he does not safeguard this freedom with faith and does not make his choices in the light of Allah’s Guidance. We can clearly see that all the created beings other than man can never bring about corruption, for they are guided by their instincts. You can hardly see an animal, for instance, stuff itself over its capacity, while we find that some people satiate their appetite to the point of gluttony. Similarly, we cannot find a donkey attempting to jump over a stream of water that it knows it is too wide; we rather note that the donkey backs away from the water. Meanwhile, you may find a person rolling up his sleeves to jump over a pond, only to fall into it.

Thus, our whims take control of our instincts and rush us into danger unless we protect ourselves with Allah's Guidance. Concerning the example of the hoopoe, we have a form of the clearest and purest understanding of Tawhid which is similar to that of the most pious mystics, so to speak. The bird's remark hits the target: 'Should they not worship Allah Who brings forth what is hidden in the heavens and earth…' (an-Naml: 25). The Arabic word khab' translated in this verse as 'what is hidden', represents the sustenance of the hoopoe—this bird does not eat from anything which lies visibly on the surface of the earth; rather, he strikes the ground with his beak, digging it up to find the food it needs. The True Lord Glorified is He gives us another example—that of the ant that says in the Quran: '…"Ants! Go into your homes, in case Sulaiman [Solomon] and his soldiers unwittingly crush you"' (an-Naml: 18). Look at the fairness of this ant. It does not say that Sulaiman (Solomon) and his soldiers will oppressively crush its fellow ants; rather, it says: 'unwittingly' because they are too small to be seen by the marching army. Thus, every being in existence has its particular life; the problem is that we want to see the life of the other beings in the same way we look at the life of the supreme creature—man. We must realise that plants have their own life; and so do animals, inanimate objects and other beings in this universe.

We have previously pointed out that Allah Glorified is He says : '…so that those who were to perish might perish after seeing a clear proof and so that those who were to live might live after seeing a clear proof...' (al-Anfal: 42). Perishing is the opposite of life, just as life is the opposite of death, and perishing is more or less equal to death. The True Lord the Most High describes what will happen on the Day of Judgment by saying: '…Everything is bound to perish, save His [eternal] Self…' (al-Qasas: 88). So, all inanimate objects are destined to perish after having a special kind of inner life that we know nothing about. The problem, as we have just said, is that man tends to identify the life of these lower beings in the same manner he identifies his.

Notice how the Quran is most accurate when we recite: '…But when the earth has taken on its finest appearance, adorns itself and its people think they have power over it, then the fate We commanded comes to it, by night or by day…' (Yunus: 24). This verse had been revealed centuries before science made progress and confirmed that the earth is rather spherical and that it revolves around itself; also, the night and day are alternate in a continuous cycle. The True Lord Glorified is He also says: 'Do the people of these towns feel secure that Our Punishment will not come upon them by night, while they are asleep? Do the people of these towns feel secure that Our Punishment will not come upon them by day, while they are at play?' (al-A'raf: 97-98). Thus, Allah's Commands are carried out at the very moment He wills; it does not matter whether it is morning or night. Then, Allah Glorified is He says: '…and We reduce it to stubble, as if it had not flourished just the day before…' (Yunus: 24). It is as if it had never existed.

The True Lord Glorified is He concludes the verse by saying: '…This is the way We explain the Revelations for those who reflect.' (Yunus: 24). So, if the life in this world is like the life of plants which grow, multiply and flourish, must we not realise the fact that all beautiful things are destined to pass away? We must not be seduced by the pleasures and delights of this world. We must also be careful not to do wrong on the earth since aggression is a passing enjoyment confined to this mortal worldly life. There are many instances in the Quran that feature such explanation of the verses which is made to those who 'reflect', 'take heed', 'use their intellect' or 'contemplate'. All of these processes are aimed at reaching a single conclusion through a number of different steps. 'Reflection' depends on bringing out premises to draw conclusions. 'Taking heed' means not forgetting or ignoring important matters. 'Using intellect' refers to using one's faculty of thinking whose instrument is the mind. 'Contemplation' is concerned with digging deeper into the hidden aspects of things, not restricting to the outer ones. Allah Glorified is He says: 'Will they not contemplate this Quran...?' (an-Nisa': 82). The verse encourages us to use our insight to look into the beginnings and the ends of all events to realise that all things are destined to return to Allah Glorified is He. A wise person is the one who prepares himself for the meeting with Allah the Almighty; he endures hardships in this mortal world, only to feel secure in the eternal Hereafter. If we compare this world to the Hereafter, we will find that the latter is much more profitable. An individual cannot determine his age in this life; he does not know whether he will live on this earth for a year, for ten years, for seventy years or for a hundred years. No matter how long this world as a whole endures, it will ultimately come to an end. You enjoy the pleasures of life according to your potential and conception as a human, while the Life to come is endless and everything related to man there is absolutely certain. The blessings and pleasures of the Next Life are matchless as they are bestowed by Allah Glorified is He. Thus, if you compare this life with the Hereafter, the latter will have the upper hand. In this regard, the True Lord, and the Most High, says: '…the true life is in the Hereafter, if only they knew' (al-'Ankabut: 64). Allah's Words 'the true life' underscore that such a life has no end. Therefore, adhere to the Guidance of Allah Glorified is He to lead you to the Home of Peace and security. Search for a safe exit from this insecure and ever-changing world and respond to the One Who calls upon you to join the Home of Peace. Here, the True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَٱللَّهُ يَدۡعُوٓاْ إِلَىٰ دَارِ ٱلسَّلَٰمِ وَيَهۡدِى مَن يَشَآءُ إِلَىٰ صِرَٰطٖ مُّسۡتَقِيمٖ ﴿٢٥﴾

But God invites [everyone] to the Home of Peace, and guides whoever He will to a straight path [25] (The Quran, Yunus: 25)

The 'Home of Peace' refers to the Hereafter in contrast with the life of this world which is full of hardships and suffering—this world which adorns itself to seem beautiful, but it ultimately falls into ruin. So, Allah Glorified is He calls on us to seek another abode, the Home of Peace. Man may enjoy a share of the delights of this life: power, wealth, and good health. However, this is always accompanied by two permanent worries: the first is that a person may worry about losing these blessings during his life and the second is that he may worry about losing them when he dies. On the other hand, man will enjoy everlasting pleasures in the Hereafter; this is why Allah Glorified is He says: 'But Allah invites [everyone] to the Home of Peace…' (Yunus: 25).

In the Afterlife, no one will cause harm to others; you will not find someone seize another's money as happens in this worldly life. While we live in this life according to the laws that Allah Glorified is He has created, we will be in the Hereafter in the company of Him Glorified is He. Everything occurs to your mind will be instantly brought before you. Now, while good people's conditions and resources are different in this world, they live in the Hereafter in the shade of Allah's Bounty without any suffering or troubles on their part since the Home of Peace is the Home of Allah Glorified is He and Allah Himself the Almighty is Peace. Imagine, for example, that your boss invites you for lunch; he prepares for you what he can do as an important man to make you feel at home. Allah has the highest image. Now imagine that you are received by your Creator Glorified is He. What will He prepare for you as being a follower of His Path and Guidance? Indeed, He Glorified is He says: 'The people of Paradise today are happily occupied—they and their spouses—seated on couches in the shade. There they have fruit and whatever they ask for. "Peace", a word from the Lord of Mercy.' (Ya Sin: 55-58). This 'Peace' is not from human beings since there are some people who pretend to be at peace with you but, in actuality, harbour a grudge against you. However, others might faithfully bring you peace at first, and then become unable to do that due to changing life circumstances. However, when peace comes from Allah Glorified is He it comes from the Most Powerful Lord Who can do anything, needs nothing from His creation and never changes. This is why Allah Glorified is He says: '... the angels will go in to them from every gate, "Peace be with you"...' (ar-Ra'd: 23-24).

When the angels utter these peaceful words, they derive their peace from Allah's Genuine Peace. Likewise, when the People of the Heights in the Hereafter (A'raf) who are not admitted into Paradise, see the People of Paradise and the People of the Fire, they pass their greetings of peace to the People of Paradise alone. Thus, the People of Paradise dwell in an all-comprehensive peace that encompasses them and makes them feel secure. This is due to it being Allah the Almighty Who calls upon believers to come to this Home of peace; no one can force Him to terminate this everlasting flow of it.

The Call of Allah Glorified is He is His Religion that He entrusted His Messengers to convey to humanity to control the movement on the earth in the light of Faith, so that people can live according to the Divine Way of Life. Thus, our world becomes a paradise. What brings unhappiness to people is that some of them ignore a part or parts of Allah’s Religion. If you find that a society suffers from whatever form of misery, be certain that some parts of Allah’s Religion have been overlooked.

If all people were to follow Allah’s Path, there would not be a single flaw in the universe; it is the ignorance of human beings which creates flaws in it. If you come upon some poor people who have nothing to eat, then know well that some people have disrupted Allah’s Religion—either from among the poor themselves because of the laziness of some, or from among the rich who have given up their responsibility towards the poor as decreed by Allah Glorified is He. Thus, Allah’s Divine Way of Life becomes disrupted. On the other hand, if Allah’s Religion were to dominate our life, it would surely be like a paradise.

The True Lord Glorified is He says: ‘... and guides whomever He wills to a straight path.’ (Yunus: 25). We may know that there are two types of guidance and one is that which guides all people to the Straight Path. When people believe in this Path, Allah Glorified is He facilitates their journey in this life. Thus, believers amongst them move from the stage of being generally guided to the stage of being particularly assisted. On the Day of Judgment, Allah Glorified is He grants believers light to lead them to paradise: ‘... their Lord will guide them because of their faith...’ (Yunus: 9). Thus, whoever adheres to the Divine Way of Life after having been convinced through proofs, the True Lord Glorified is He grants him light ahead of him: ‘...With their lights streaming out ahead of them and to their right...’ (at-Tahrim: 8).

Allah Glorified is He says: ‘... and guides whomever He wills...’ (Yunus: 25) because everything in this universe is tied to His Will. Laws do not control Him, but He controls everything. While Allah Glorified is He has shown us that He guides whom He wishes, He has also shown us that He makes whom He wishes go astray for He Glorified is He says: ‘... Allah does not guide those who refuse to acknowledge the Truth..’ (at-Tawba: 37). Allah Glorified is He also says : '... Allah does not guide those who break away.’ (at-Tawba: 24).

Thus, the True Lord the Most High has shown us those whom He guides to Paradise and those whom He does not. Let nobody ask: for what are the disbelievers and the disobedient guilty?' This is due to the True Lord Glorified is He Who has made His Religion clear; whosoever abides by it, Allah the Almighty bestows on him an illuminating light ahead of him to show him the way to Paradise.

Then Allah Glorified is He says:

لِّلَّذِينَ أَحْسَنُوا۟ ٱلْحُسْنَىٰ وَزِيَادَةٌ ۖ وَلَا يَرْهَقُ وُجُوهَهُمْ قَتَرٌ
وَلَا ذِلَّةٌ ۚ أُو۟لَٰٓئِكَ أَصْحَٰبُ ٱلْجَنَّةِ ۖ هُمْ فِيهَا خَٰلِدُونَ ﴿٢٦﴾

Those who did well will have the best reward and more besides. Neither darkness nor shame will cover their faces: these are the companions in Paradise, and there they will remain [26] (The Quran, Yunus: 26)

The Arabic word al-husna, translated in this verse as ‘the best reward’, is similar in form to imra’h fudhla 'one of the best women' and imra’h kubra 'one of the greatest women'. In Arabic, these words ending in a are called superlative adjectives, aimed to give nouns special significance. What Allah Glorified is He means when He says: ‘Those who did well will have the best reward...’ (Yunus: 26) is that these people excelled when doing good deeds. As we know, a Muslim person receives the reward of ten good deeds when he does only one good deed. Let us go on reciting the verse: ‘Those who did well will have the best reward and more besides...’ (Yunus: 26). What is meant by ‘more besides’ in this verse? This is extra compensation. It is a special bonus for good deeds starting with a reward for a single good deed which is equivalent to the completion of ten good deeds as a minimum, and may reach as far as the equivalent of seven hundred good deeds. Regarding sins, they are treated as single sins without any multiplication. After all, nothing can restrict Allah’s Bounty and Grace; the True Lord the Most High bestows His endless Grace upon whom he chooses. This is why we should not regard Allah’s Justice and His Grace on the same footing: His Justice applies to wrongdoers, while His infinite Bounty and Generosity belong to those who do well. The True Lord Glorified is He says: ‘Say [Prophet Muhammad], “In Allah’s Grace and Mercy let them rejoice."' (Yunus: 58).

Some of the most pious mystics have said that the ‘more besides’ refers to the reward ranging between ten times and seven hundred times, whereas Grace refers to that which goes far beyond the seven-hundred maximum.

Thus, there are several levels of rewarding: there is the equivalent of ten, the equivalent of seven hundred, al-husna ‘the best reward’ and ‘more besides’. In this regard, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'When the People of Paradise enter the Gardens, Allah Glorified is He will say, "Do you wish that I give you anything more?" They would say, "Have You not brightened our faces? Have You not made us enter Paradise and saved us from the Fire?" The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said, "Allah will lift the veil, and of things given to them nothing will be dearer to them than the sight of their Lord the Almighty and the Glorious."'

Then, Allah Glorified is He: ‘... Neither darkness [nor dust] nor shame will cover their faces...’ (Yunus: 26). This means that their faces are not covered in darkness (or dust); Allah Glorified is He says elsewhere in the Quran: ‘On that Day there will be radiant faces, looking towards their Lord’ (The Quran, 75: 22-23). He the Almighty also says: ‘but some faces will be dust stained and covered in darkness.’ (‘Abasa: 40-41).

The Arabic expression tarhuquha means that 'it is covered in'. The Arabic word qatarah means ‘darkness’ or ‘dust’, and the latter is related to the word al-qitar, which is the smell of burnt fat that fills the air when meat is roasted; this smell may be appetising and mouth-watering. However, when a face is covered in this qitar, a layer of black ash is formed. The True Lord the Most High says: ‘... Neither darkness [nor dust] nor shame will cover their faces...’ (Yunus: 26) for they fear Allah Glorified is He and cherish His Divine Way of Life.

Elsewhere, Allah Glorified is He also says: ‘On the Day when some faces brighten and others darken’ (Al-‘Imran: 106). Thus, the point is not the colour of the skin because you can find a person whose skin colour is black but who is so pious that light illuminates his face and his features are marked by an aura of magnificence. Similarly, there are some people whose faces are white, but as a result of their disobedience of Allah’s commands, their faces have become completely devoid of spiritual light.

The True Lord Glorified is He says: '... These are the companions in Paradise, and there they will remain.’ (Yunus: 26). This means that they have become firmly connected to Paradise as if they are two close friends who never leave each other. Another meaning is that they are the owners of paradise.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَٱلَّذِينَ كَسَبُواْ ٱلسَّيِّـَٔاتِ جَزَآءُ سَيِّئَةِۭ بِمِثْلِهَا وَتَرْهَقُهُمْ ذِلَّةٌۖ مَّا لَهُم مِّنَ ٱللَّهِ مِنْ عَاصِمٍۖ كَأَنَّمَآ
أُغْشِيَتْ وُجُوهُهُمْ قِطَعًا مِّنَ ٱلَّيْلِ مُظْلِمًاۚ أُوْلَٰٓئِكَ أَصْحَٰبُ ٱلنَّارِۖ هُمْ فِيهَا خَٰلِدُونَ ﴿٢٧﴾

As for those who did evil, each evil deed will be requited by its equal and humiliation will cover them – no one will protect them against God – as though their faces were covered with veils cut from the darkness of the night. These are the inmates of the Fire, and there they shall remain [27]
(The Quran, Yunus: 27)

Since Allah Glorified is He has spoken about those whom He has summoned to the Home of Peace and rewarded them with Paradise for their good deeds, He now speaks about the other side; the gathering of these two parties makes the issue clearer to the mind. The True Lord the Most High says in another verse: 'Let them, then, laugh a little – for they will weep a lot.' (at-Tawba: 82).

Another example of the comparison of two extremes can be seen when Allah the Almighty says: ‘The good will live in bliss, and the wicked will burn in the Fire.’ (al-Infitar: 13-14). Thus, when two opposites are mentioned, the issue becomes well understood. Since Allah Glorified is He has spoken about the call to the Home of Peace—where those who respond to the call are rewarded with abiding eternally in Paradise, along with never fearing darkness of faces or shame—Allah Glorified is He also mentions their opposites, underscoring the grievous consequences of ignoring the call to the Home of Peace; He also mentions the happy end of those who accept the call. The believers must therefore take joy in this offer, for they will not be among the people of the Fire. Meanwhile, some of the disbelievers, if not all of them, must wake up from their oblivion so as to avoid the fire and turn to Faith. In this verse, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘As for those who did evil...’ (Yunus: 27).

We may know that the Arabic word al-kasb is related to pure nature and harmonises with doing good deeds since the obedience of Allah through the performance of religious rites is consistent with upright human nature. No one is ashamed to pray, give to the poor, fast or perform Hajj (pilgrimage), while many people are ashamed to be recognised as liars, usurers or consumers of alcohol. When a man commits a sin, he experiences contradictory reactions. For example, a person who steals his father's money while he is asleep walks on his tiptoes and is careful not to hit anything in the dark, which could make a sound and expose him. It is the same thing with the one who gazes at others' girls and women. These examples suggest that committing sins is accompanied by unnatural reactions; there is some sort of trouble or uneasiness when sinning. The worst thing that man can do is to continue following the path of sins until it becomes second nature to him, and he becomes accustomed to committing such acts. In other words, he becomes a professional in this regard; it is no longer a matter of occasional sinful acts, but a regular process that is made without having any feeling of guilt. A libertine might even attain a level of stable immorality; he may tell others about his sins and his transgressions in a proud tone by saying, for instance, that he stayed up late last night in a mind-blowing party and that he did such-and such. He recalls that wild party with such a sense of satisfaction that he has committed sins and vices. It is a mercy from Allah Glorified is He that He punishes sinners for the sins they commit in an equal way. Allah Glorified is He says: '... each evil deed will be requited by its equal ...' (Yunus: 27).

The True Lord's Mercy can also be seen when He bestows special status upon those who do not commit sins; such people become amongst those whom Allah Glorified is He says: '... Neither darkness [nor dust] nor shame will cover their faces...' (Yunus: 26). Meanwhile, the True Lord the Most High says about those who do not follow the Straight Path: '... no one will protect them against Allah...' (Yunus: 27). This means that no one will stand up for them and intercede with Allah the Almighty on their behalf; no one will beg Allah Glorified is He by saying, 'O, Lord, please do not punish them.' This part of the verse could also mean that Allah Glorified is He will not forgive them afterwards.

Their woeful state does not stop at this point; moreover, the True Lord Glorified is He says: '... as though their faces were covered with veils cut from the darkness of the night...' (Yunus: 27). It is as if portions of dark night have covered their faces. Their ultimate fate is to reside in the Fire forever: '...These are the inmates of the Fire, and there they shall remain.' (Yunus: 27).

This is the state of those who reject the Signs of Allah Glorified is He lie about His Messengers, turn down Allah's Call to the Home of Peace, follow their whims and associate partners with Allah Glorified is He. It is the True Lord's Will that such transgressions are manifested in their entirety in this world so that the whole universe will stand as a witness in the Hereafter and be aware of what will happen to sinners as a result of what they have done on the earth in this worldly life.

Afterwards, Allah True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَشُرَكَآؤُكُمْ ۚ فَزَيَّلْنَا بَيْنَهُمْ ۖ وَقَالَ شُرَكَآؤُهُم مَّا كُنتُمْ إِيَّانَا تَعْبُدُونَ ﴿٢٨﴾

On the Day We gather them all together, We shall say to those who associate partners with God, 'Stay in your place, you and your partner-gods.' Then We shall separate them, and their partner-gods will say, 'It was not us you worshipped [28] (The Quran, Yunus: 28)

The Arabic word al-hashr translated in this verse as gathering means taking people who are dispersed over a wide area and bringing them together in one place. These different places will drive the disbelievers therein to be gathered at that one place where Allah Glorified is He wants them to be.

The more people draw closer to this designated location, the more crowded and tightly packed it becomes. This is just as you move from outer circles to inner circles until you reach the centre. Now, there is no doubt that the more you get near to the centre, the smaller, and tighter the circles become: this is the idea of al-hashr. Thus, we will be tightly packed together; however, it is supposedly understood that we are going to suffer much as a result of this stifling atmosphere so that people will pay no heed to such a situation since they will be fully busy with the horrors of that woeful day—the Day of Judgment.

The Words of the True Lord the Most High: 'On the Day We gather them all together...' (Yunus: 28) refer to the assured rounding up of all those who have not responded to Allah's Divine Way of Life and His Call to the Home of Peace, those who have lied about their messengers and those who have associated partners with Allah Glorified is He. All will be gathered and confronted with their crimes; it will truly be a scene of shame and scandals that are exposed on this horrible day. The polytheists who worshipped false idols will be brought to task and punished for their acts, whether those idols commanded their followers to worship them or they were unaware of the whole process. This is why Allah Glorified is He says: '... We shall say to those who associate partners with Allah, "Stay in your place, you and your partners (whom you had worshipped)."' (Yunus: 28).

Thus, people who worshipped angels finally get to meet those angels, and people who worshipped a prophet will meet him in person; the same thing applies to those who worshipped idols, the sun, the moon, jinns or human/jinn devils. Indeed, there are many false deities that may be worshipped; each of these false idols will have its own judgement and come face-to-face with his/its worshippers in a public confrontation on the Day of Resurrection. Among those worshippers, we find those who used to worship and be fascinated by a false deity, such as an angel or a messenger who was basically sent to guide them to the worship of the One God, Allah Glorified is He. Also included are those who worshipped objects which could not have been conscious of their worshippers like idols, the sun, the moon, or trees. Meanwhile, you can find the worshipped deities, who are aware of their worshippers and who actively call upon people to worship them, among the devils of the human world and the devils of the jinn world, in addition to Iblis (Satan) himself.

Regarding angels, Allah will bring them in front of their worshippers and ask them, 'Have you ever enticed these people into worshipping you?' The angels will reply, 'Glory is to You, our Lord.' Thus, they will disown their worshippers as the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'When those who have been followed disown their followers...' (al-Baqara: 166). Now the angels know nothing about those who take them as deities. If we turn our focus to human beings, especially messengers peace be upon them, we find that the most famous example is that of 'Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary) peace be upon him. He is addressed by the True Lord Glorified is He: '... did you say to people, "Take me and my mother as two gods alongside Allah?"' (al-Ma'ida: 116). 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him is quoted by the Quran as saying: ‘May You be Exalted! I would never say what I had no right to say— if I had said such a thing You will know it...’ (al-Baqara: 116). Therefore, he was not aware that he had been worshipped by his people; indeed, he never asked them to worship him.

Similarly, the idols have no knowledge about those who have made them gods. On the other hand, Iblis (Satan) is fully aware of his worshippers. Let us have a look at his story. After he had disobeyed the command of Allah, he turned to Adam peace be upon him and tempted him into committing sins. Adam peace be upon him then repented of his sins and Allah Glorified is He accepted his repentance, while He did not forgive Iblis for he had disobeyed His Command concerning bowing down before Adam. Indeed, Iblis was arrogant and considered himself to be of a higher class. Regarding Adam peace be upon him he did not refuse to comply with Allah’s Commands. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘We created you, We gave you shape, and then We said to the angels, “Bow down before Adam”, and they did, but not Iblis. He was not one of those who bowed down. Allah said, “What prevented you from bowing down as I commanded you?” He said, “I am better than him. You created me from fire and him from clay.”’ (al-A’raf: 11-12).

We can deduce the following conclusion out of this verse: those who cannot bear submitting themselves to Allah’s Divine Way of Life have to admit that Allah’s Divine Way of Life and Laws are the Truth, and they are too weak to follow His Path. By so doing, they safeguard themselves against the great sin of rejecting Allah’s Commands; they can also repent with the intention of never falling into such a sin again.

Thus, Iblis (Satan) wages a comprehensive war against all human beings; he has sworn— by Allah’s Might—that he will mislead all the sons of Adam, except those whom Allah Glorified is He has chosen for dutiful worship. Iblis knows well that he does not have power to tempt people of this kind. Thus, it is Allah’s Might that makes Iblis—and all his followers from among the jinns—to either seduce or not seduce the Creation of Allah Glorified is He. Devils are rebellious jinns, for we know that the jinn is a species opposite to that of the human beings. Some of the jinns are obedient and virtuous, while others are disobedient (shayatin); these latter serve Iblis by tempting human beings. They exert influence upon humans by targeting their weaknesses: money, beauty, power or whatever, enticing them to use immoral methods that go against Allah’s Divine Way of Life to reach their goals. Every human has a weakness or more which the devil exploits to get hold of his soul. Meanwhile, Iblis and his progeny may also recruit some to seduce and corrupt others. Hence, there are three categories of beings who seek to derail human beings from Allah’s Path and the Call of the Truth: Iblis, disobedient jinns (devils) and human beings who cooperate with Iblis to tempt their brothers into committing sins—these are the human devils who act in a way that contradicts the Messengers’ Divine Way of Life.

Now, this raises two questions: 'Will there be a dialogue—on the Day of Judgment—between angels and their worshippers from amongst the human beings?' and 'Will there also be a dialogue between idols and those who worshipped them without the former being aware of such worshipping?' Also, another question is raised: 'Will there finally be a dialogue between ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him and those who took him as a god without his consent?' One of the most pious mystics, so to speak, puts these words into the mouths of the idols by saying:

They worshipped us while we are more worshipful of Allah

Than those who pray before dawn for forgiveness

In this regard, the True Lord Glorified is He says: ‘There is not a single thing that does not celebrate His praise’ (al-Isra’: 44).

The mystic continues:

They considered our silence as evidence against us

But we became the fuel of the Fire they are going to be thrown into

In this context, the True Lord the Most High says: ‘then beware of the Fire prepared for the disbelievers, whose fuel is men and stones' (al-Baqara: 24).

The pious man continues to say:

They levelled false accusations due to their ignorance

Just as they did with son of Maryam (Mary) and his disciples

Then, what will Allah Glorified is He do with the two parties? We may say also in a poetic pattern:

Those who exceed limits will get their punishment

While the blameless party will be saved by the Mercy of the Forgiver

Thus, we have learnt the destiny of those who worship false deities or associate partners with Allah Glorified is He; these people are included in Allah's Words: 'On the Day We gather them all together' (Yunus: 28).

Hence, those who worship idols or planets, those who associate partners with Allah Glorified is He and the devils from among the jinns and the human beings, will be assembled on the Day of Resurrection. Let everyone in this world remember that all matters will be disclosed, and all idolaters will be exposed during this great assembly. There will be a confrontation between those who worshipped false deities and the false deities themselves—whether these be angels, messengers, planets or idols of stone, for none of them were aware of the fact that they had been worshipped. All will respond to the Command of Allah Glorified is He: 'We shall say to those who associate partners with Allah, "Stay in your place"…' (Yunus: 28).

When you hear the command makanak in Arabic, its translation is 'in your place'; however, the exact meaning is 'stay in your place'. It is not used for greeting, rather, it indicates threatening and menacing. Such an order is not in one's interest when issued. Again, we learn that angels, messengers, planets, and stones have no knowledge about the people who worship them. So, the people to whom this order applies are the polytheists who think that they can evade the Day of Reckoning. However, when they hear the command: '..."Stay in your place, you and your partners (whom you had worshipped)."...' (Yunus: 28); does this mean that they will come together with angels, messengers, planets and stones in a single procession? No, it does not; this is due to those slaves adhering to falsehood, whilst the True Lord Glorified is He intends to distinguish between the Truth and falsehood. This is why Allah Glorified is He says: 'Then We shall separate them, and their partners (those whom they had worshipped besides Allah) will say, "It was not us you worshipped."' (Yunus: 28). This means that Allah Glorified is He puts the group of idolaters on one side and those who were worshipped without their knowledge on the other. This latter side will announce this fact: '..."It was not us you worshipped."' (Yunus: 28). This means that we did not know that you had worshipped us.

Consider the shameful situation that the idolaters will find themselves in; each of them worshipped his respective false deity, while this deity was neither mindful nor aware of such worshipping. Now remember that the whole point of worshipping is the adherence of the worshippers to the commands of the worshipped God. This rule applies to angels and Prophet 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him just as it applies to planets and stones since the True Lord Glorified is He Who makes man's organs speak on the Day of Judgment—to bear witness against their owners—is capable of making stones speak. In this context, Allah the Almighty says: 'On the Day when Allah's enemies are gathered up for the Fire and driven onward, their ears, eyes, and skins will, when they reach it, testify against them for their misdeeds. They will say to their skins, "Why did you testify against us?" and their skins will reply, "Allah, Who gave speech to everything, has given us speech"...' (Fussilat: 19-21). On the Day of Judgment, we will see stone idols damn those who worshipped them, exactly as the skin disowns the sins of its disobedient owner, for the True Lord Glorified is He says in another verse: 'On the Day when their own tongues, hands and feet will testify against them about what they have done.' (an-Nur: 24) However, do not allow yourself to dwell on how an idol will speak, for you have believed, as a matter of faith, that your body parts—including hands, feet and skin—will be capable of speech on the Day of Judgment. Be certain that they all will speak in the Hereafter by the commands of Allah Glorified is He. You believe in the Hereafter, so do not look at the events of that Day according to the laws of this world since everything changes in the Afterlife. Have you not been told by Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that you will eat in paradise as you want without producing excreta. This is illogical as far as the laws of this world are concerned; however, we take this for granted as a matter of creed. When the True Lord Glorified is He informs us of things that will happen in paradise, we must not think of them through our finite reason and imperfect worldly knowledge in order not to reach a complete deadlock. A faithful and truthful heart sees the events and scenes of the Day of Judgment and the Hereafter as pertaining to the world of the unseen where the laws and criteria are quite different.

We should know that man lives in a world that lies between the heaven and the earth; this world has its own earth and heaven, while the Hereafter has its own earth and heaven. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘One Day—when the earth is turned into another earth, the heaven into another heaven…’ (Ibrahim: 48). Thus, everything changes on the Day of Judgment. If you are told that idols will speak—denouncing that they had been worshipped as partners with Allah—and if you are told that angels will bear witness against those who had worshipped them in lieu of Allah Glorified is He do not be astonished.

Allah Glorified is He says in the following verse:

God is witness enough between us and you – we had no idea that you worshipped us’ [29] (The Quran, Yunus: 29)

Thus, the created beings that were worshipped instead of Allah will proclaim their disapproval and astonishment of having been deified. The hoopoe(1) of Sulaiman (Solomon) announced with amazement that it saw certain human beings worship deities other than Allah. It said, as Allah tells in the Quran: ‘Should they not worship God, who brings forth what is hidden in the heavens and earth…’ (an-Naml: 25). The hoopoe was amazed that other deities were worshipped instead of Allah the Almighty Who knew all that was hidden in the heavens and earth. If the hoopoe was aware of this truth, then it is logical for other created beings to show disapproval of disbelief, whether they be Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him the angels, stone idols, trees or planets. Allah the Exalted will pose the following question to the angels:

(1) Allah tells us the story of Prophet Sulaiman’s hoopoe in the Quran: ‘I found a woman ruling over the people, who has been given a share of everything– she has a magnificent throne– [but] I found that she and her people worshipped the sun instead of Allah. Satan has made their deeds seem alluring to them, and diverted them from the right path: they cannot find the right path.’ (an-Naml: 23-24)

‘…"Was it you these people worshipped?"’ (Saba’: 40), and the angels will reply: ‘…"May You be exalted? You are our supporter against them! Really, they worshipped the jinn…"’ (Saba’: 41).

Allah the Most High gives us numerous examples of this attitude throughout the Holy Quran. By this frequent mention of examples, Allah means to remind us of the truth and prevent us from immersing into heedlessness. For instance, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘On the Day He gathers everyone together [saying], “Company of jinns (Devils)! You have seduced a great many humans,”…’ (al-An‘am: 128). Allah the Exalted mentions those who take jinns as allies: ‘…adherents among mankind will say, “Lord, we have profited from one another, but now we have reached the appointed time you decreed for us.” He will say, “Your home is the Fire, and there you shall remain”– unless Allah wills otherwise. [Prophet], your Lord is All-Wise, All Knowing.’ (al-An‘am: 128)

One might ask how jinns succeed in luring so many human beings. The answer is that Allah the Almighty has given jinns a nature different from that of human beings and faculties unlike human faculties. He the Most High says, in reference to Satan: ‘…He and his forces can see you from where you cannot see them…’ (al-A’raf: 27). Allah the Exalted has given jinns powers greater than that which He has given human beings; He has given them the capability of passing through physical barriers, for example. This is natural, for jinns have been created from fire, whereas human beings have been created from earth. There is a difference between the fundamental natures of the two elements. That which comes out of earth (or clay) is static, immobile, and opaque, whereas that which comes out of fire is radiant with light and heat. For instance, if you are sitting in a room outside of which a fire is burning, the walls will conduct some of the heat of the fire to the room except if the barrier is insulated from heat. An apple, which is made out of earth, has no such an effect that can reach you inside the room. Thus, fire has special properties, and earth, or clay, has its. The properties of something made of earth are such that the object will not reach you unless you physically transport it to where you are sitting.

We are reminded of these scientific facts in the story of Prophet Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him. When he learnt that the Queen of Sheba was on her way to his palace to announce her conversion to Allah’s religion, Prophet Sulaiman (Solomon) wanted her throne to be brought to him before she arrived, so he asked those in his assembly: '…Which of you can bring me her throne before they come to me in submission?' (an-Naml: 38) This means that there were various kinds of beings present in his assembly, and every one of these species possessed different powers. Carrying the throne from Yemen to the court of Prophet Sulaiman (Solomon) would require time and strength. Were they all equal in their powers, Prophet Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him would not have said: '…Which of you can bring me…' (an-Naml: 38). The first to come forth and offer to carry out Prophet Sulaiman's order was not just any ordinary jinn, but a powerful and crafty one; some jinns are weak and dim-witted, while others are intelligent and skilful. They are all jinns; all belong to one kind, but they are different in powers. One of the jinns was the first to speak: "I will bring it to you before you can even rise from your place' (an-Naml: 39). However, Sulaiman's assembly could go on for another hour or even several hours, for he was preoccupied throughout the day with resolving disputes and cases brought before him. The jinn who spoke these words knew that he had powers that surpassed those of human beings. As for any human beings who were present at Sulaiman's assembly, none of them spoke, for the task was beyond their means or capabilities. The jinn who spoke next was one who had knowledge of the Book. He said: '…I will bring it to you in the twinkling of an eye…' (an-Naml: 40). The task was accomplished instantly, and the Quran's depiction of the event is expressive of such extraordinary swiftness: 'When Sulaiman (Solomon) saw it set before him, he said, "This is a favour from my Lord…"' (an-Naml: 40).

Thus, jinns have the power to do certain things which human beings cannot.(1) This jinni did not owe his ability and agility to his constitution; rather, it was by the Creator's Will that he was able to perform such extraordinary things. To remind jinns that it is only by His Will that they possess such powers Allah the Almighty puts them at the service of human beings who have far less powers. This is why some people try to exploit the powers of jinns so as to gain power over their fellow human beings. However, Allah the Almighty has willed that those who engage in these types of activities must suffer from it.(1) Allah Glorified is He says: ‘And they followed what the Shayateen (devils) chanted of sorcery in the reign of Sulaiman, and Sulaiman was not a disbeliever, but the Shayateen disbelieved. They taught men sorcery and that was sent down to the two angels at Babylon, Harut and Marut, yet these two taught no man until they had said, "Surely, we are only a trial, therefore do not be a disbeliever"…’ (al-Baqara: 102). Thus, the jinns' teaching people about the ways of magic is a proof that their powers surpass the powers of human beings.

(1) Jinns have powers far exceeding those of human beings since they are created from fire. However, humankind can be spiritually stronger if they follow the guidance of Allah and ponder the secrets of His Revelation. Two jinns that offered to bring the throne of the Queen of Sheba to Prophet Sulaiman (Solomon), but the one who had knowledge of the Book was stronger and abler. Nevertheless, this pertains to spiritual power, but as to physical powers, humankind are created from clay, and clay is not like fire.

However, when the angels Harut and Marut(2) taught magic to human beings, they first warned them not to exploit their knowledge to oppress their fellow human beings and that it was all a test to them to be taught such powers. If you are knowledgeable in the ways of magic, you should use it in a defensive manner to protect yourself against harm, not in order to harm others. Furthermore, a human being is likely to be influenced by whims and desires; you might easily acquire the knowledge of magic, but will you prove yourself to be a responsible practitioner, or will you be tempted to use it to harm others?

Suppose that a person entrusted you with a thousand dollars. Will you honour your trusteeship? Or will you deny that person his right when he asks for his money back? Would you use this money if you were to go through some hard financial circumstances? This is why a wise person would refuse to be entrusted with money, fearing his whims and desires would make him betray a trust.

(1) Allah says: ‘Men have sought refuge with the jinn in the past, but they only misguided them further’ (al-Jinn: 6). They only increased them in humiliation and weakness. Ibn Kathir said in his exegesis, ‘A man would set out with his family and settle in a valley. Then he would say, “I seek refuge with the jinn who rules this valley from harm or damage to myself, my money, my offspring and my cattle!”’

(2) Harut and Marut are two angels that were sent down to earth. It is said they were displeased with the way human beings passed Judgements on one another, so they ruled justly between people. They also taught human beings about the ways of magic. They vowed not to teach magic to anyone unless they proclaimed upfront: ‘… "Surely we are only a trial, therefore do not be a disbeliever."…’ (al-Baqara: 102).

It is no wonder one should fear being entrusted with something precious. The heavens and earth were afraid of bearing the trust, as Allah Glorified is He says: ‘We offered the Trust(1) to the heavens, the earth and the mountains, yet they refused to undertake it and were afraid of it; mankind undertook it– they have always been inept and foolish.’ (al-’Ahzab: 72) When you deposit a trust with someone, the only guarantee is his honesty. It does not mean that you have to have witnesses or documents proving that you have entrusted that thing with him. The only guarantee is the word and honour of the trustee, so he may keep the trust until you restore it, or he may deny having been entrusted with it.

The heavens, the earth and the mountains said to Allah they are not up to such a responsibility; they did not wish to be given free will to obey or disobey Him and asked Him instead to make them submissive to Him without their choice in order to avoid such a heavy responsibility. Allah the Exalted has elevated and honoured mankind above all other created beings by virtue of their reason and their ability to make a choice when faced with different options. This is why they accepted to carry the trust. However, when the time came to show how far they would honour that trust, they found themselves less trustworthy than they had initially thought after having accepted the heavy responsibility.

Some perhaps learn magic with the intention of only repulsing any harm that might come their way. Let them think of this advice, though: you cannot guarantee that you will stick to your original intentions; as a human being, you are likely to be controlled by your whims and desires. Someone may enrage you, and you may well use your knowledge of magic to harm him, which means you will only bring suffering upon yourself in the first place.

(1) Scholars have differed concerning the interpretation of al-amanah (the trust). However, the majority of scholars have agreed that it is worshipping Allah by the creatures’ free will. Ibn 'Abbas said, ‘It means worship; Allah has offered the trust to the heavens, the earth and the mountains, but they were afraid of bearing it, so Allah offered it to Adam; He said to him, ‘I have offered the trust to the heavens, the earth and the mountains, but they could not bear it, so will you accept to bear it?’ Adam replied, ‘What responsibility will it entail?’ Allah said, ‘If you do good, you will be rewarded and if you do wrong, you will be punished.’ Thus, Adam accepted to bear the trust. [See: Exegesis of ibn Kathir, 3/522.]

Thus, Allah the Almighty says: '…" Company of jinns! You have seduced a great many humans"…' (al-An'am: 128). The jinns have given to many a human being the weapon which they can use against their fellow humans. Allah the Exalted says about them: '…"Lord, we have profited from one another …"' (al-An'am: 128). Human beings profit from jinns by virtue of the power that they can gain over other human beings. Meanwhile, jinns profit from human beings by leading them astray, for this is the vow Satan has made: '…"I swear by Your Might! I will tempt all."' (Sad: 82)

In the end, however, this mutual profit does not really give either of the two parties any additional powers than those they already have. This is why you will find that all those who work in the domain of magic and the exploitation of jinns suffer from it. Thus, Allah Glorified is He says: 'Men have sought refuge with jinns in the past, but they only misguided them further.' (al-Jinn: 6)

Those who engage in the business of bewitchment and the calling forth of jinns can only make money by means of those who know nothing about magic. If knowledge of magic really gave a person special advantages or powers over other human beings, they would not resort to exploiting those who are ignorant of the ways of magic to make money. Rather, they would — by those special powers — find other resources to earn their livelihood. Moreover, they have to pay dearly for their works. If you ever see one of these people, you find his face dust-stained and his children blind, crippled or suffering from any given disability. This is due to such a person trying to gain an advantage over others through the services of jinns. However, with this advantage comes great suffering. Therefore, let every human being show respect for his Creator and content himself with the natural ability He has willed for him. Let no one try to unfairly gain an advantage over others and, in doing so, bring suffering upon him. Someone would hire a bully or a thug to strike terror in the hearts of others. They may gain a transient benefit from this bargain, but then the strong thug might turn against his master. Thus, every person must respect the powers with which Allah, the All-Powerful has endowed him. Otherwise, one will only bring suffering to himself, as Allah, says: '…adherents amongst mankind will say, "Lord, we have profited from one another, but now we have reached the appointed time you decreed for us." He will say, "Your home is the Fire, and there you shall remain”–unless Allah wills otherwise. [Prophet], your Lord is All-Wise, All Knowing.’ (al-An‘am: 128)

Therefore, we see that the destiny of those who exploit the powers of jinns is Hellfire, and so is the destiny of the jinns who tempt human beings into sin. Another issue follows this, which Allah the Exalted mentions in the Quran: ‘on that Day, friends will become each other’s enemies ─ not so the righteous.’ (az-Zukhruf: 67)

'Friends' mean people united by common bonds of affection and companionship and involved in the affairs of each other’s lives. Friends are two kinds, and one of these kinds is those who are bound to each other by their love for Allah. They go to the mosque together, remind one another of Allah, earn their living by lawful means, and recite the Quran, etc. If one of them commits a sin, he will find a friend who offers him sincere advice and assistance to repent to Allah the Almighty. They commit themselves to the tenets of Islam. In their relationship, they represent the description Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him gave in the Hadith, ‘Two persons who love each other out of their love for Allah, so they meet for His sake and depart for His sake…’(1) This is a type of friendship. The other type of friendship includes people who tempt one another into committing sinful acts. They would drink alcohol, engage in gambling, and transgress against Allah’s Law. When the Day of Judgment comes, they will be given their due recompense, for it will be ‘…a Day when there will be no bargaining and no friendship…’ (al-Baqara: 254). The only real friendship (or companionship) is the friendship that is based upon love for Allah the Almighty and devotion to Him. Such are the friends who will rejoice at each other’s company when they meet again in the Hereafter, for they used to help each other in doing the good and avoiding evil. As for those who used to get together in this world to commit sinful acts, each will curse the other. On the Day of Judgment, they will argue against each other as Allah the Most High foretells the situation in the Quran: '…the weak will say to the power-seekers, "We were your followers. Can you protect us from any of Allah's punishment?"…' (Ibrahim: 21). The other party will respond: '…"If Allah had guided us, we would have guided you. It makes no difference now whether we rage or endure with patience. There is no escape"…' (Ibrahim: 21). Then, Satan will make his confession, as Allah Glorified is He foretells in the Quran: 'When everything has been decided, Satan will say, "Allah gave you a true promise. I too made promises but they were false ones. I had no power over you except to call you, and you responded to my call, so do not blame me. Blame yourselves. I cannot help you, nor can you help me …"' (Ibrahim: 22).

(1) On the authority of Abu Hurayra, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘There are seven whom Allah will shade in His Shade on the Day when there is no shade except His Shade: a just ruler; a youth who grew up in the worship of Allah, a man whose heart is attached to the mosques, two people who love each other for Allah's sake, meeting for that and parting upon that; a man who is called by a woman of beauty and position (for illegal intercourse), but be says, 'I fear Allah', a man who gives money to charity and hides it, such that his left hand does not know what his right hand gives in charity; and a man who remembers Allah in private so his eyes shed tears.’

This dialogue depicts the scene on the Day of Judgement. Allah Glorified is He says: 'Like Satan, who says to man, "Do not believe!", but when man disbelieves, says, "I disown you. I fear Allah, the Lord of the Worlds."' (al-Hashr: 16) All those are glimpses of the scenes of the Day of Judgment; they come to mind as we study the verse: 'So sufficient is Allah as a witness between us and you that we indeed knew nothing of your worship of us' (Yunus: 29). The idols, the angels, the Messengers, and every created being that was falsely worshipped will also speak and disown their worshippers. Thus will the idolaters be exposed and disgraced. Then, they will make their way to their final abode: Hellfire. Allah Glorified is He says: 'Gather together those who were unjust and their associates and what they used to worship.' (as-Saffat: 22) The Arabic word used in the original text of the verse and translated as 'associates' also literally means 'spouses'. This draws attention to the fact that spouses can be more dangerous to each other than enemies can be to each, and more influential in tempting one to do wrong. A husband or wife, being a constant companion, can truly drag one into sinning and cause him to stray from the Straight Path. (1) After ordering them to be gathered together, Allah the Most High will command: 'And halt them for questioning.' (as-Saffat: 24)

(1) Allah says: 'Believers, even among your spouses and your children you have some enemies– beware of them…' (at-Taghabun: 14).

They were companions to each other in the life of this world — the world where one can choose because he has free will. However, on Judgment Day, they find themselves in the world of 'compulsion' where they no longer have the freedom of choice; this is why Allah the Most High says: ‘And halt them for questioning: “Why do you not support each other now?” No indeed! They will be in complete submission on that Day—and they will turn on one another accusingly. They will say, “You came to us from a position of power.”’ (as-Saffat: 24-28) In the life of this world, they had power by which they compelled the weak to follow them. That power is not necessarily one of coercion or subjugation; the verse refers to any kind of power, even if it is only the power of temptation. The disbelievers will thus be exposed, and it will be the first kind of torment they will have in the Hereafter. Their punishment will start with their disowning and cursing one another even though they were companions and friends in the life of this world. True are the Words of Allah: ‘On that Day, friends will become each other’s enemies — not so the righteous.’ (az-Zukhruf: 67)(1)

This shows us the importance of choosing one’s friends well in the life of this world. One should not choose a friend who drags him into sinning. One should choose a friend who helps him commit himself to the Ordinance of Allah. Allah Glorified is He describes one of the scenes of the Day of Judgment by saying: ‘The disbelievers will say, “Our Lord, show us those jinn and men who misled us(2) and we shall trample them underfoot, so that they may be among the lowest of the low.”’ (Fussilat: 29) Such will be the state of those who strayed from the Straight Path; they will claim they were misled by others and will ask for permission to punish with their own hands those who led them astray! However, those they falsely held as deities — whether angels, Messengers, or even stone idols — will disown them as Allah foretells in the verse we are currently examining: ‘"So sufficient is Allah as a witness between us and you that we indeed knew nothing of your worship of us.”’ (Yunus: 29)

(1) On the authority of Abu Hurayra, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘If two people love each other out of their love for Allah, one of whom is in the east and the other in the west, Allah will gather them together on the Day of /resurrection. He will say, “This is your brother you have loved for My sake.”’ [Cited by Ibn Kathir in his exegesis (4/134), narrated by Al-Hafez ibn ‘Asakir]

(2) ‘Ali ibn Abu Taleb Allah be pleased with him said that “those jinn and men who misled us” is meant to refer to Iblis (Satan) who was the first to disobey Allah and defy His order and Cane, the son of Adam who was the first to commit sin on earth. [Exegesis of Ibn Kathir (4/98)]

Allah Glorified is He says in the following verse:

ٱلْحَقِّۖ وَضَلَّ عَنْهُم مَّا كَانُواْ يَفْتَرُونَ ﴿٣٠﴾

Every soul will realize(1), then and there, what it did in the past.
They will be returned to God, their rightful Lord, and their invented [gods] will desert them [30] (The Quran, Yunus: 30)

The Arabic word hunalik (translated in this verse as 'then and there') is an adverb of time and place. Every action is associated with a particular time and place, yet sometimes this adverb is used to refer to place only or time only. We find it used in the story of Prophet Zachariah peace be upon him; Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Hunalika (at that time), Zakaryya (Zechariah) invoked his Lord…’ (Al-‘Imran: 38). In this verse, it is used as an adverb of time. It refers to the time when Maryam (Mary) gave to her guardian, Prophet Zachariah, an answer to his question, which called his attention to a fundamental truth about faith. Allah the Exalted has willed that she would be the one to teach him. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘…Whenever Zakaryya (Zechariah) visited her in the sanctuary, he found her provided with food…’ (Al-‘Imran: 37). Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him used to provide her with what she needed, but he was surprised when he found that she had provisions which he did not give here. This made him ask: ‘…“Maryam (Mary), how is it you have these provisions?”…’ (Al-‘Imran: 37).

This observation expressed Zachariah’s attentiveness as a guardian. His question to her was intended to get an explanation regarding the provisions she received from other than him. This attitude is quite essential for economic security of the whole society. When every guardian asks those under his charge, ‘Where did you such-and-such’, this would guarantee that no one would steal, embezzle or usurp the rights of others since he knows he will be questioned. This is sure to provide protection from corruption. Ponder the reply of Maryam when Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him asked her that question. She said: ‘... "It is from Allah. Allah provides limitlessly for whomever He wills”’(1) (Al-‘Imran: 37). Zakaryya (Zechariah) found with her fruits that were out of season, so his surprise stemmed from two reasons. First, he did not bring her these fruits, and second it was unusual that such fruits were available at that time. For instance, he perhaps found that she had grapes even though it was not the season for grapes, or he found that she had oranges (2) even though it was not the season for oranges. It was natural to any alert guardian to ask such a question to her under his charge, and her answer to him expressed a fundamental fact about faith: ‘"… Allah provides limitlessly for whomever He wills”’ (Al-‘Imran: 37). In light of this fact, there is no room for logical calculations of human beings. However, was Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) heedless of the fact that Allah the Almighty showers His blessings on whomever He wills beyond all reckoning? The answer is that he was not heedless of this fundamental fact; it just was not at the focus of his thoughts at that particular moment, so the words of Maryam (Mary) served to remind him of that fact. Hence, he realised that his old age and infertility of his wife would not prevent their having a child since Allah the Almighty showers His blessings on whomever He wills beyond all reckoning. Allah Glorified is He describes the inner thoughts of Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him: "at that time, Zakaryya (Zechariah) invoked his Lord' (Al-'Imran: 38). The adverb hunalika can also mean 'there and then'; it can be an adverb of time as well as place in this verse, too. The answer thus came to him from Allah the Most High: '…"It is easy for Me. I created you, though you were nothing before."' (Maryam: 9)

(1) Some provisions are limited and some are limitless. The former is dependent on the diligence of each person. It is the provision Allah grants to His servant, out of His Justice, in proportion to his effort and struggle. As for the limitless provision, Allah grants it to those who give themselves over to Him, who act in light of the verse: ‘Say, “My prayers and sacrifice, my life and death, are all for Allah, Lord of all the Worlds”’ (al-An‘am: 162). Allah has provided limitlessly for Maryam (Mary), and such is a favour He bestows on whoever He chooses of His servants: ‘The life of this world is made to seem glamorous to the disbelievers, and they laugh at those who believe. But those who are mindful of Allah will be above them on the Day of Resurrection: Allah provides immeasurably for whoever He pleases’ (al-Baqara: 212). One of the eminent scholars said: Whoever follows a middle course with Allah will receive his reward in proportion to his deeds and whoever devotes himself completely to Him will be rewarded limitlessly for his devotion.

(2) In their interpretation of the verse: ‘... Whenever Zakaryya (Zechariah) visited her in the sanctuary, he found her provided with food…’ (Al-‘Imran: 37), Mujahid, ‘Ikrima and other exegetes have said it means he found her provided with summer fruits during winter and winter fruits during summer. That was evidence for the special bestowals Allah grants to His devout servants. [Exegesis of Ibn Kathir: 1/360]

Allah the Exalted brings up this issue so as to prevent anyone from questioning the chastity of Maryam (Mary). She would be put to an exceptional situation, so Allah put the following words in her mouth: '…"…Allah provides limitlessly for whomever He wills."' (Al-'Imran: 37) His blessings are beyond all reckoning since they are independent of time, causes, and the knowledge of people. The wife of 'Imran realised this, so she prayed to Allah and He accepted her prayers: 'But when she gave birth, she said, "My Lord! I have given birth to a girl"– Allah knew best what she had given birth to. The male is not like the female ─I name her Maryam (Mary) and I commend her and her offspring to Your protection from the rejected Satan." Her Lord graciously accepted her, made her grow in goodness, and entrusted her to the charge of Zakaryya (Zechariah)...' (Al-'Imran: 36-37).

Hearing that fundamental fact from Maryam (Mary), Zakaryya (Zechariah) prayed to Allah to grant him a child despite all the logical causes that could prevent it. Later, Allah the Almighty proves further to Maryam (Mary) that He grants whatever He wills to whomever He wills, so He sends her the news that she would bear a child by the name of 'Isa, son of Maryam (Mary) peace be upon them. Allah the Exalted braced her for the exceptional event of her bearing a child without ever being touched by a man; she knew that the laws of biology were such that there could be no procreation without sexual intercourse between a man and a woman. However, it was Allah's Will that she had a child without going through this process. Allah Glorified is He made Maryam (Mary) herself herald the unexpected event by declaring this fundamental fact: '"… Allah provides limitlessly for whomever He wills."' (Al-'Imran: 37) When she wondered: '…"My Lord, how can I have a son when no man has touched me?"…' (Al-'Imran: 47) Allah the Exalted had already told her that the promised child would bear her name, so he would have no father since no man would touch her: 'The angels said, "Maryam (Mary), Allah gives you news of a Word from Him, whose name will be the Messiah, 'Isa, son of Maryam (Mary)…"' (Al-'Imran: 45). From this, He knew that her spiritual awareness would lead her to understand that the lineage of that child would be traced back through his mother and that there would be no father in his family lineage. This was meant to make her realise that her child would not be conceived as a result of marriage, either then or at some later times. The news of the child could have no explanation except that she had herself declared before: 'Allah provides limitlessly for whomever He wills' (Al-'Imran: 37).

In the verse we are currently reflecting on, Allah Glorified is He says: 'every soul will realise, then and there, what it did in the past…' (Yunus: 30). On the Day of Judgment, every soul will be informed of what it has done and will see the outcomes of its deeds. The righteous and the sinful will be duly recompensed. Allah the Almighty then says: '…They will be returned to Allah, their rightful Lord…' (Yunus: 30). The word 'return' denotes moving to a condition in which one had formerly been. Since disbelievers had in their lives sought lords other than Allah, on the Day of Judgment, they will be forced to return to their True Lord. The word 'return' means they belonged to Allah the Most High in the beginning, not to their false gods, and even though they strayed from Him, they still belong to Him in the end. Allah Glorified is He says about Prophet Musa (Moses): 'and thus we returned or restored him to his mother…' (al-Qasas: 13). It means that he was with his mother, then he left her, then he returned to her once again, so he belonged to her in the beginning and in the end. So, will disbelievers return to Allah on the Day of Judgment, as Allah says: 'They will be returned to Allah, their rightful Lord(1)…' (Yunus: 30).

(1) Allah says in this verse: 'They will be returned to Allah, their rightful Mawlahum…' (Yunus: 30) He says in another verse: '… the disbelievers have no mawla' (Muhammad: 11). The Arabic word mawla has several correlated connotations. In the first verse, it means "Lord", the One Who provides for them, while in the second verse it means "protector", so Allah provides for those who disbelieve in Him, but He would not protect them. He is their mawla (Lord Who provides for them) but He would not be their mawla (Protector).

Every person is born with a sound disposition that is submissive solely to Allah. Then, his parents direct him towards becoming a Magian or an adherent of any other religion where associates are worshipped besides Allah.(1) When a person becomes an adherent of a polytheistic religion, he becomes at the service of a false god, a lord and a lawmaker other than the True God and Rightful Lord. 'Every soul will realise, then and there, what it did in the past…' (Yunus: 30). Every soul will see the outcomes of what it has done. Disbelievers will generally face the embarrassment of having worshipped false deities instead of Allah, and each will be exposed because of his own individual sins as well.

Allah Glorified is He concludes the verse by saying: '…their invented [gods] will desert them.' (Yunus: 30) The false gods they worshipped will not know where they are, nor will they realise that they are in danger, so they will not save them from punishment. If these deities they were wont to worship instead of Allah true gods, they would know that their worshippers are in trouble and would save them. However, they were only a flagrant lie invented by the disbelievers, so '…their invented [gods] will desert them.' (Yunus: 30)

Thus, does Allah the Exalted foretell what will happen in the Afterlife? Having shed light on the severe punishment that is prepared for stubborn disbelievers in the Hereafter, there is hope that they, upon knowing this, might turn back to the Divine Way of Guidance. Furthermore, it is a warning intended to remind them of the absolute necessity of returning to the worship of the True Lord Glorified is He. After this, Allah the Almighty invites them to ponder the fact that will certainly re-establish faith in their hearts. He the Most High says:

(1) On the authority of Abu Hurayra, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Every person is born with a disposition in which faith in Allah is naturally ingrained. Then his parents turn him into a Jew, Christian, or a Magian. This is like a livestock animal that is born perfectly sound; then, life would strike its body with imperfection.' Then he recited: "This is the natural disposition Allah instilled in mankind– there is no altering Allah's creation– and this is the right religion…" (ar-Rum: 30).' [Cited by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (4775) and Muslim (2658)]

قُلْ مَن يَرْزُقُكُم مِّنَ ٱلسَّمَآءِ وَٱلْأَرْضِ أَمَّن يَمْلِكُ ٱلسَّمْعَ وَٱلْأَبْصَٰرَ وَمَن يُخْرِجُ ٱلْحَىَّ مِنَ
ٱلْمَيِّتِ وَيُخْرِجُ ٱلْمَيِّتَ مِنَ ٱلْحَىِّ وَمَن يُدَبِّرُ ٱلْأَمْرَ ۚ فَسَيَقُولُونَ ٱللَّهُ ۚ فَقُلْ أَفَلَا تَتَّقُونَ ﴿٣١﴾

Say [Prophet], ‘Who provides for you from the sky and the earth? Who controls hearing and sight? Who brings forth the living from the dead and the dead from the living, and who governs every- thing?’ They are sure to say, ‘God.’ Then say, ‘So why do you not take heed of Him? [31] (The Quran, Yunus: 31)

Allah the Exalted commands Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to ask disbelievers this question. Such a question can only be given by one who is confident that his addressee cannot possibly find any answer except the one the questioner already expects. Suppose someone was complaining that his father was neglectful of him, so you asked him, ‘Who has brought you these clothes? Who provides for you and educates you?’ The son would answer, ‘My father.’ You would only ask him that if you were certain that he would inevitably give the answer that you expected from him. If you knew he would give you a different answer, it would sound as if you were asking his opinion on the matter, not teaching him a lesson by eliciting the answer you wanted.

The verse begins with a command to Prophet Muhammad: ‘Say [Prophet]…’ (Yunus: 31). This is quite frequent in the Quran; Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Say, "He is the One God”…’ (al-Ikhlas: 1). Suppose a father asked his son to deliver a certain message to his uncle. He would transmit the father’s message without prefixing it with the command, ‘Say’. However, when Allah addresses His creation, it is His Will that His Prophet peace and blessings be upon him should communicate this message to us just as it has been revealed to him. Thus, when Allah the Exalted sent him a verse beginning with: ‘Say…’, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was so honest and trustworthy that he communicated the message of Allah without ignoring or failing to deliver even a single word. Since the revelation came from Allah, His Messenger dutifully complied with His commands, so he would not withhold even a single word. He would not deprive the ears of Allah’s creation from a single word revealed by Him.

Thus, Allah the Almighty commands to pose this question to disbelievers: ‘…“Who provides for you from the sky and the earth" (Yunus: 31). Provision is all that one derives benefit from. It consists of the basic necessities that sustain life as well as luxuries. Basic provision is mainly the rain that falls from the sky and the plants that grow because of it from the earth.(1) Therefore, Allah the Most High poses a question that already contains its own answer. He does not command Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to give them the right answer that they may know the truth. Rather, He allows them to answer the questions themselves.

Allah poses another question: '…Who controls hearing and sight?…' (Yunus: 31). The faculties of hearing and seeing are the two primary ways of perception. The process of keeping information(2) is performed through various ways. Smells are detected by the nose. Smoothness is felt by the skin. We use the tongue for tasting; we use it for speaking too, along with the other organs of speech. Sounds are caught by the ears. The world becomes visible thanks to the eyes. All these senses, together with others, make up one's perception. Chief among these is the intellectual faculty. A little child may see fire as a beautiful and eye-catching spectacle. However, as soon he tries to touch it, it burns him, so he learns to never touch fire again. After experiencing the power of the fire with his senses, the fire's capacity to burn was saved in his mind and became firmly rooted in it. This is how our various senses work. They form the concrete basis for perception and the basis on which the intellectual faculties grasp abstract notions. Thus, the instruments of knowledge for living beings consist of the senses, and these senses provide the mind with information which becomes implanted in it. This information becomes so firmly settled in the consciousness so they turn into beliefs. Therefore, the different stages of perception are the following: recognition through the senses, intellectual analysis and reflection, which all lead to the crystallisation of beliefs.

Allah the Almighty describes to us the stages where perception takes place in the human soul so that a human being can gradually acquire knowledge;

(1) This is the provision Allah Almighty mentions in His words: 'Let man consider the food he eats! We pour down abundant water and cause the soil to split open. We make grain grow, and vines, fresh vegetation, olive trees, date palms, luscious gardens, fruits, and fodder: all for you and your livestock to enjoy' ('Abasa: 24-32).

(2) Perception leads to realization on which basis one makes his choices. One's choices direct his thoughts and reflections, and sound reflections must lead to Allah, the Creator of all things.

He says: ‘And Allah has brought you forth from your mothers’ wombs knowing nothing–but He has endowed you with hearing, sight and minds, so that you might have cause to be grateful.’ (an-Nahl: 78) A newborn has not yet been given the power to utilise his senses. Soon, however, Allah bestows upon him the ability to use the senses for perception.

In the verse we are examining, Allah Glorified is He mentions only the primary senses: hearing and sight. Our perception of the world and reception of Allah’s Guidance depend mainly on these two faculties. They are the most important when it comes to conveying the Divine Message, for it is through the eyes that we behold the signs of creation and miracles of the Prophets, and it is through hearing that we receive the Ordinance of Allah as conveyed by His Messengers. ‘Ali ibn Abu Taleb Allah be pleased with him directed our attention to these wonders when he said, ‘How full of wonders the creation of the human being is! He sees with a bulk of fat, speaks with a piece of flesh, hears through a bone, and breathes through a hole.’(1) Sound waves strike the ear bone, causing it to vibrate. We see through the fatty membranes of the eye, and we utter words using the tongue. Some have also added, ‘He smells through a cartilage, feels by means of the skin and thinks with dough-like material.’ When a human being is born, his brain is like a piece of dough used for soaking up and storing information from the surrounding environment. Such information later serves as the basis for feelings and spirituality.

When modern science speaks about the functions of the senses, it gives a summary definition of the five major ones. This means that there are other senses which have yet to be discovered. There is, for example, the faculty we use to distinguish the thickness of a material by placing it between two fingers. There is also the faculty that enables us to distinguish between different weights; thanks to this faculty, we can recognise the amount of effort it takes for us to lift one object compared to that it takes to lift another.

It is established that when things supposed to be similar are made different, there must be a reason for their difference. Both hearing and eyesight are senses used for perception. In the verse, the Arabic word used for the former (sam’ meaning 'hearing') is in the singular form, whereas that used for the latter (absar meaning 'eyesight) is in the plural. Why is that? Why does Allah the Almighty not mention the two senses in the singular form? Every word of Allah is put right in place; every word is chosen for a purpose and cannot be replaced by another. The ears capture all the surrounding sounds even though they originate from various sources. As for the eyes, they focus on one single direction at a time. If you want to see what the view is like on your right side, you shift your eyes to the right, and if you want to see what is behind you, you change your position. The ears, unlike the eyes, capture sounds from all directions without requiring you to consciously direct it to do that. Also, when it comes to the sense of hearing, you do not have a choice; you cannot prevent your ears from hearing something. As for the sense of sight, you have more control over it because either you can look in a different direction or you can close your eyes to stop seeing something. Allah the Exalted mentions the sense of hearing first since it is the first means of perception that starts functioning after birth. As for the eyes, it takes three to ten days after birth before they are able to function.

So, Allah Glorified is He says: '…Who controls hearing and sight?…' (Yunus: 31). Allah is the One Who possesses both blessings. He is their Creator. He is Capable of preserving them for us just as He is also Capable of causing them to stop. Allah the Almighty gives us an example of this in the Quran when He says about the people of the cave: 'We sealed their ears [with sleep] in the cave for years' (al-Kahf: 11). He suspended their sense of hearing when he sealed their ears, so they fell into a deep sleep that lasted three centuries and nine years. How did this happen? Under normal conditions, a human being can sleep a day and night together. This is why when Allah the Exalted brought them back from sleep, they asked one another: '…One of them asked, "How long have you remained thus?" [The others] answered, "We have remained thus a day, or part of a day."' (al-Kahf: 19) However, their physical appearance clearly told otherwise: their hair had grown extremely long, and its black colour had changed into pale grey. They looked much too old that Allah the Most High says about their description: '…If you had seen them, you would have turned and run away, filled with fear of them' (al-Kahf: 18).

It is worth noting that Allah says in the verse we are examining: '…Who controls hearing and sight?' (Yunus: 31) In another verse from the chapter of as-Sajda, He the Most High says: '…He endows you with hearing and sight....' (as-Sajda: 9) There is a difference between 'creating', 'endowing' and 'controlling'. We know what the act of creating means, and we believe Allah possesses everything. This is a fundamental fact of faith. As for the act of endowing, it consists of making that which has been created perform its proper function. We, humans, create things and make them function, like creating pots from clay or clothes from cloth. Allah's creation is different, for it is He Who creates the matter then from it creates all things. So, He is the One Who creates, possesses, and endows us with blessings. Reflecting upon another verse, Allah the Almighty directs our attention to this fact. All the things that are useful to Adam peace be upon him and his progeny have been created by Him and are possessed by Him, and He is the One who grants them to us. Consider the human body and all its faculties, including hearing and sight. We are endowed with these faculties so we may benefit from them. Still, Allah is the One Who possesses these faculties; He can preserve them in their proper state, take them away, or cause them to stop functioning as a result of illness or the like. (1) He manages them however He wills: the beating of the heart, the feelings of love or hate and all of the unconscious biological functions performed for our benefit—all of these fall within Allah's Dominion. For example, Allah the Exalted has given every animal a skin which we can tan and make into leather. Only the skins of two kinds are exempted from this: the skins of human beings and the skins of pigs. It is forbidden to use the skin of a human being because of the dignity Allah the Exalted has bestowed upon us, and we are also forbidden from using the skins of pigs due to their impurity.

So, Allah is the Creator, Controller, and Giver of all things. He has granted us life and He is the One Who possesses and governs it. This is why whoever commits suicide is barred from Paradise.(1) Only the Giver of life can take it away. We, human beings, are not owners of our lives. There is no excuse for anyone who receives this message. Whoever receives it and does not ponder it will meet Allah one day and will have to bear their destiny. It is He Who has bestowed blessings on His creatures, and it is He Who owns all things.

(1) Allah says: 'The lightning almost snatches away their sight: whenever it flashes on them they walk on and when darkness falls around them they stand still. If Allah so willed, He could take away their hearing and sight: Allah has power over everything' (al-Baqara: 20).

Then, Allah Glorified is He says: '…Who brings forth the living from the dead and the dead from the living…' (Yunus: 31). We know that every being in existence has a life that suits it, for Allah the Most High says: '…Everything is bound to perish save His [eternal] self…' (al-Qasas: 88). Since there will come a time when everything perishes, this means that everything has a life. Human life seems to consist of perception and movement. A human being consumes vegetables, bread, fruits, and other nutrients. Both the male and female receive the same food, yet the male body produces sperm, whereas the female body produces ova, and the combination of these two produces a new human being. Similarly, chicks hatch from fertilised eggs; an unfertilised egg will not produce a chick, for it is lifeless, and no embryo can be formed in it. There is a difference between the potential for life and life itself. A date pit has to be planted in the soil, and the right conditions have to be present, so it may grow into a date palm.

Then Allah Glorified is He says: '…and who governs everything?...' (Yunus: 31) 'Governing' means correct management. It is putting things in place so they would properly perform their functions. Now think about who manages the beating of your heart? Who manages the movement of your bowels? Who orders your body to extract and absorb useful nutrients and discard wastes? No one would dare claim that he manages his heartbeats or breathing mechanism. It is the Creator Who does. Therefore, do not be concerned about those bodily functions which you do not consciously control, for He who has created them in you is Ever Watchful over them. No slumber or sleep overtakes Him, nor does He ever fail to manage all that.

(1) On the authority of Abu Hurayra, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Whoever kills himself with an iron tool will have it in his hand and will stab his belly with it in Hellfire, there to continue in that state eternally. Whoever kills himself with poison will keep taking in that poison in Hellfire, there to continue in that state eternally. Whoever kills himself by falling off a mountain will keep falling in the depths of Hellfire, there to continue in that state eternally.' [Cited by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (5778) and Muslim (109); this is Muslim's version.]

Allah the Almighty has commanded Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to pose these questions, and yet He knows they would have no answer that He has not already specified and foretold: '…They are sure to say, "Allah."…' (Yunus: 31) Thus, should we not then use our ears and an eye to contemplate the Power of Allah, the One Who has bestowed upon all of us these blessings out of His Bounty? Should we not ponder the signs of His creation, from the sense of hearing to the sense of sight, from the giving of life, to the causing of death and resurrection from it, along with the managing of everything? Should we not then expect that the One Who has created us wants us to perform a certain mission to make the universe prosperous? Allah is our Creator, so He has sent down to us His guidance and ordinance. How then can some people turn to worship other deities besides Allah, the sun, the moon, angels, Prophets, or idols? How can this be even though worship means obeying Divine Ordinance? Can there really be a deity with no doctrine to reveal to worshippers? Likewise, have the sun worshippers ever received commands from the sun? No, they have not! Does it give any advantages or rewards to its worshippers? No, it is the same for those who worship false deities and those who do not. This is enough to invalidate any false deity worshipped instead of Allah. This is why Allah the Almighty concludes the verse by saying: '…So why do you not take heed of Him?' (Yunus: 31) Since Allah is the Creator of all things and He has revealed His religion to be acted upon, should we not be mindful of Him? Should we not seek to avoid the manifestations of His Attributes of Majesty and hope for the manifestations of His Attributes of Beauty?(1) You must heed the message of the Messengers peace be upon them and abide by the commands of the One who has sent them.

Since every human being who is given the questions posed in this verse must certainly acknowledge that the answer points to Allah, then let everyone obey the Creator and seek protection from His punishment. What is strange is that everyone admits that Allah is the Creator; He the Most High says: ‘If you [Prophet] ask them who created them they are sure to say, “Allah”…’ (az-Zukhruf: 87). He also says: ‘If you ask them who created the heavens and earth, they are sure to say, “Allah”…’ (Luqman: 25). So long as it is Allah Who has created all things, bestows His blessings on all creatures, and governs all existence, how then can you turn your backs on Him and worship anything else?

(1) Allah has Attributes of Beauty manifested in His Mercy and Forgiveness and the Good Pleasure He bestows on His servants. As for the Attributes of Majesty, they manifest themselves in His Power over all things, His Might, Control, and Loftiness. One should obey Allah to attain the effects of His Attributes of Beauty and avoid those of His Attributes of Majesty so Allah may make him of His devout servants.

Allah Glorified is He says in the following verse:

فَذَٰلِكُمُ ٱللَّهُ رَبُّكُمُ ٱلْحَقُّ فَمَاذَا بَعْدَ ٱلْحَقِّ إِلَّا ٱلضَّلَٰلُ فَأَنَّىٰ تُصْرَفُونَ ﴿٣٢﴾

That is God, your Lord, the Truth. Apart from the Truth, what is there except error? So how is it that you are dissuaded?’(1) [32] (The Quran, Yunus: 32)

'That is Allah' is a reference to what has previously been mentioned, His control of hearing and sight, His Power to breathe life into that which is dead and take away life from that which is living, along with the management and organisation of everything in the universe.

Allah Glorified is He says: ‘That is Allah, your Lord, the Truth…’ (Yunus: 32). The truth always has one side. The truth is one and unequivocal.(2) Falsehoods are many, and anything but the truth is falsehood. This is why Allah the Almighty says: ‘…Apart from the Truth, what is there except error?…’ (Yunus: 32). Thus, whoever ascribes divinity to other than Allah has abandoned the Truth. It means he is in error. The Arabic word dalal used in the original text of the verse denotes 'error', 'misguidance' or 'delusion'. It means taking the wrong way that, therefore, does not lead to the goal. Whoever takes other than the Way of Allah has therefore strayed into error. This is why Allah Glorified is He concludes the verse with emphasis that the only two options before a person are ‘Truth’ and ‘error’. He says: ‘…So how is it that you are dissuaded?’ (Yunus: 32) Allah is One, Eternal and Unchanging. Those who worship angels, planets, stars, Messengers or idols are led by their whims and desires into error.

(1) It means: how is it that your minds are dissuaded from the One Who provides for all creatures and who causes life and death and worship instead of Him false deities who have no power over anything? [Exegesis of al-Qurtubi 4/3267]

(2) The Truth is one, not from the perspective of human intellect, but due to the nature of truth. The truth is constant and unchanging. The truth about everything is unequivocal despite the attempts of orators or those who believe falsehood to be truth and truth to be falsehood. Truth is not subject to the peculiarities of human intellect that seek to contradict the truth and propagate falsehoods.

Let us recite and ponder the following Words of Allah:

كَذَٰلِكَ حَقَّتۡ كَلِمَتُ رَبِّكَ عَلَى ٱلَّذِينَ فَسَقُوٓاْ أَنَّهُمۡ لَا يُؤۡمِنُونَ ﴿٣٣﴾

In this way, your Lord’s word about those who defy
[the Truth] has been proved – they do not believe [33]
(The Quran, Yunus: 33)

This verse, like the previous one, deals with the concept of the Oneness of Allah. Disbelievers have misunderstood this concept and fallen into error. They deserve punishment, for they ascribe divinity to a false deity. This speech was addressed to the contemporaries of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. However, some of those contemporaries embraced faith in Allah, so the suffering is reserved only for those who rejected faith. These words are addressed to those whom Allah has already known will not attain to faith. It is also addressed to those who are wont to sin and who will never repent from their disbelief and insistence on straying from the Truth by worshipping deities other than Allah the Exalted and Almighty. Allah’s Omnipotent Knowledge encompasses all things; Allah already knows who will believe in Him and who will not: ‘as for those who disbelieve, it makes no difference whether you warn them or not. They will not believe’ (al-Baqara: 6).(1) Allah knows who will believe, who will disbelieve and who will persist in disbelief.

(1) The verse alludes to hypocrites, and these live among two communities: the community of the believers about whom Allah says: ‘Such people are following their Lord’s guidance and it is they who will prosper’ (al-Baqara: 5). The other community is that of the disbelievers about whom Allah says: ‘But the deeds of those who disbelieve are like a mirage in a desert: the thirsty person thinks there will be water but, when he gets there, he finds only Allah, who pays him his account in full–Allah is swift in reckoning’ (an-Nur:39). Hypocrites are more dangerous than disbelievers. The latter is a well-known enemy, but the former deceives the believers into thinking they belong to them.

The latter will be punished; Allah the Exalted has already known, with His Omnipotent Knowledge, that even if they were given a second chance, they would not embrace faith.

Then, Allah the Exalted mentions a point one can use to debate disbelievers based on their own logical premises. Inside every disbelieving soul, there exists a primordial disposition for doing the good and calling others to it. This tendency exists even among disbelieving nations; every nation seeks to do good in different ways depending on their ethics and principles. People of different ranks, judges, doctors or scientists, would encourage others to do what they believe to be good deeds. A child acquires his beliefs, habits, and attitudes from his parents; his background is formed by their education. He would get away from fire or electricity since the directions given to him regarding their dangers become firmly ingrained in his psyche. Through the instructions of others, he learns how to deal with such hazardous elements such that no harm would touch him. A stranger would find someone to guide him to a destination he is seeking and the one-way and two-way roads; he would find someone to caution him against the dangerous bends on the road. A volunteer would organise traffic near schools and encourage people to slow their cars down for children. Such people are not necessarily believers. They do not do that for the sake of Allah, but the tendency to do good is a natural instinct all people are created with. If one human being is keen to direct another towards doing good, is not Allah ever Keener on guiding His servants to what is right? It is He Who has created human beings, and it is He Who has created everything that sustains them on this earth. This is why He the Most High says:

قُلْ هَلْ مِن شُرَكَآئِكُم مَّن يَبْدَؤُا۟ ٱلْخَلْقَ ثُمَّ يُعِيدُهُۥ ۚ قُلِ ٱللَّهُ
يَبْدَؤُا۟ ٱلْخَلْقَ ثُمَّ يُعِيدُهُۥ ۖ فَأَنَّىٰ تُؤْفَكُونَ ﴿٣٤﴾

Ask them, ‘Can any of your partner-gods originate creation, then bring it back to life again in the end?’ Say, ‘It is God that originates creation, and then brings it back to life, so how can you be misled?’ [34] (The Quran, Yunus: 34)

In this verse, Allah Glorified is He asks Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to ask them, ‘Can any of your partner-gods (Allah's so-called partners) originate creation, then bring it back to life again?’ (Yunus: 34) Posing this question to them means that its answer is inevitably in accordance with Allah's Will. If someone says, ‘How can Allah Glorified is He trust them to deliver the proper answer? Is it not possible that they might attribute all of these actions to a deity other than Him?’ We reply that the question posed to them is asked only when the questioner knows that there can be only one valid answer; thus, the questioned will only be able to answer by saying, ‘Verily the One Who does all of this is Allah Glorified is He.’ He will not be able to say, ‘Verily, it is the idols who do all of this’ since they know that they made the idols with their own hands and that these idols have no power to perform such actions. Thus, the answer is already known beforehand: verily, Allah the Almighty solely is capable of these things; and this demonstrates that falsehood is a mere cacophony of clashing voices and that the truth is pure light. In fact, the truth will always have the power to expose and undermine falsehood. Therefore, once you utter a word of truth regarding a matter, you we will find that the truth successfully undermined the argument of the one who is in error. The latter will need a long time to come up with a response to what you said; he will even be dazed and surprised, and his argument will be undercut. This is why Allah the Exalted does not say what He previously said: '… they are sure to say, "Allah."...' (Yunus: 31) Rather, He says: '...Say, "It is Allah Who originates creation, and then brings it back to life ..."' (Yunus: 34). So, He expresses the answer in this way because when they had been asked this question, they were dazzled by the truth which left them speechless; they stood incapable of saying anything whatsoever. An example of this—and to Allah Glorified is He belongs the finest of examples—is when we find a prosecutor tightening the noose around the neck of the accused by asking him a variety of questions; then, at one point, he asks him a question that is so precise that the accused becomes astounded, for there is only one possible answer to that question, which he cannot refuse to answer. Thereby, the accused answers the question and admits his guilt.

Now man—as a being created by Allah Glorified is He—has in front of him the possibility of either being a believer or being a disbeliever; at this point, it is man’s free will which involves. As for the rest of his organs, they believe in, worship, and praise Allah the Almighty. Therefore, the tongue, for instance, which might utter a blasphemy, in reality, believes in, exalts, praises, and thanks Allah Glorified is He. However, it is man’s free will which—by Allah's leave—is unique among the human faculties in that it can choose disbelief; so the tongue—Allah forbid—utters the words of disbelief. Similarly, a person’s hand will comply with his orders to steal, or a person’s feet will comply with his orders to go to the place where alcohol is consumed. However, are these faculties pleased with such actions? No, they are not pleased, but they are subject to the will of a human being.

Also, when the question is asked, 'Who originates creation and then brings it back to life?' The tongue, by virtue of the pure condition in which it was first created, wants to speak, but it does not have the ‘will’ to do so. Thus, Allah the Most High commands Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to answer on behalf of the ‘believing’ faculties. Accordingly, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘... Say [Prophet], "It is Allah Who originates creation, and then brings it back to life..."’ (Yunus: 34). The formulation hereby emphasises this fact, and it suffices that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him conveys this statement on behalf of his Lord. This speech earns the honour of whom it comes from.

Allah Glorified is He says: ‘... Say, "It is Allah Who originates creation, and then brings it back to life, so how can you be misled?"’ (Yunus: 34) Now the word al-Ifk refers to the intentional lying and deliberate defamation. There is a difference between intentional lying and unintentional lying. Unintentional lying is when a person transmits a statement he heard to the best of his knowledge and according to the way he understood and believed it. This is a kind of lying since it does not concur with the truth, but a person will immediately retract his statement if he knows the truth. As for al-Iftira', it refers to the intentional lying, which means a person is aware of the truth, but he still distorts it. For this reason, some religious scholars have differed regarding this issue. Some have said that there is such a thing as honesty, and there is such a thing as lying. However, other religious scholars have said that there is a grey area between honesty and lying. Take the example of a son rushing to his father, after he had heard from some people that a fire broke out in the house of so-and-so. The son tells his father, ‘There is a fire in the house of so-and-so’, and so the father goes to assess the situation. If he discovers that there is indeed a fire, then his son is saying the truth, but if there is no fire, then the news about the fire is false. However, a reporter only transmitted what he had heard from others. Thus, there is a difference between the verity of the report and the truthfulness of a reporter. Sometimes the report is true, and the reporter is truthful. Sometimes the news is true, but the reporter is untruthful. Furthermore, sometimes the reporter is truthful, but the report is not. There are thus four possibilities. Those who say that there are different degrees between truth and lying hold that truth requires that reality conforms to the report. As for lying, it occurs when reality does not concur with the report. Thus, we must differentiate between the truthfulness of the report itself and the truthfulness of a reporter; for a reporter reports what he knows to the best of his knowledge. As for the truthfulness of a report, this occurs when the content of the report conforms to the reality of the situation. So when Allah Glorified is He says: '... so how can you be misled?' (Yunus: 34), this means, in essence, how can you distort and reverse the truth, or you are well aware of the truth yet you intentionally distort it. We all know the following Words of Allah Glorified is He: 'It is He Who brought down the ruined cities (Al-Mu'tafikah)' (an-Najm: 53). The name al-Mu'tafikah refers to those cities that were upturned so violently that their tops became their bottoms. Similarly, the liar 'upturns' and distorts the truth.

Afterwards, Allah Glorified is He says:

قُلْ هَلْ مِن شُرَكَآئِكُم مَّن يَهْدِىٓ إِلَى ٱلْحَقِّ ۚ قُلِ ٱللَّهُ يَهْدِى لِلْحَقِّ ۗ أَفَمَن يَهْدِىٓ إِلَى
ٱلْحَقِّ أَحَقُّ أَن يُتَّبَعَ أَمَّن لَّا يَهِدِّىٓ إِلَّآ أَن يُهْدَىٰ ۖ فَمَا لَكُمْ كَيْفَ تَحْكُمُونَ ﴿٣٥﴾

Say, 'Can any of your partner-gods show the way to the Truth?' Say, 'God shows the way to the Truth. Is someone who shows the way to the Truth more worthy to be followed, or someone who cannot find the way unless he himself is shown? What is the matter with you? How do you judge?' [35] (The Quran, Yunus: 35)

This is command for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to ask them yet a new question that has an answer dictated by reality which emphasises that guidance can lead only to the truth, as every being is created for a purpose, and nothing is created in vain.

With our own limited capabilities we are able to invent a microphone, the television, and a refrigerator, along with making beds and so forth; all of these have a purpose, and each of them has its own specific procedures for maintenance. The creator is the one who determines what the purpose of this and that. He sets up the procedural steps for maintaining an object so that it might continue to perform its function. Thus, the purpose of an object exists before the existence of the object itself; so it comes into existence according to its purpose that was determined beforehand.

The spiritual disease that afflicts the world today is that people know that Allah the Almighty has created them, but they come up with their own laws for regulating the life of human beings. This is a testament to the stupidity and the ignorance of those who do such things. They should have left the question of regulating the life of human beings to the laws that were established by the Creator of them.

For Allah the Exalted has determined the purpose of creating human beings, and He has laid down laws for the regulation of their lives. The evil that exists today is the result of an ignorance of what the ultimate purpose of human beings is. It is also the result of straying away from the Way of Allah, which human beings must follow. So, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Say, "Can any of your partner-gods (Allah's so-called partners) show the way to the truth?’ (Yunus: 35)

In other words: do any of these ‘partner-gods’ guide man to his purpose? Has the sun, for instance, ever stated such a purpose? Have the angels ever stated such a purpose? Have the trees or the stones or the Messengers—which they have worshipped—stated anything that is contrary to the Will of Allah Glorified is He? These are false deities that know neither the ultimate purpose of their worshippers nor how to guide them to the path leading to that purpose. This is why the decisive statement is made: ‘Say, "Allah shows the way to the truth."’ (Yunus: 35)

Allah the Almighty has guided you, O, man, to the truth in your every movement, as long as this movement is in harmony with the Doctrine which Allah Glorified is He has revealed completely to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him from the prime testimony that ‘There is no god but Allah’ down to the instruction of removing harmful objects from a way; this comprehensive Doctrine encompasses every aspect of man’s life. The answer to the question is provided by Allah the Almighty Who puts the words in the mouth of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him for they stood dazzled by the question and, in their stuttering, no one among them could offer a counterargument. The purpose of the creation of man and other created beings is summarised in Allah's Words: ‘I have created jinns and mankind only to worship Me.’ (adh-Dhariyat: 56)

Now worship is not restricted merely to the five pillars of Islam; rather, it includes building the universe as the living structure of Islam. The One Who has determined purpose of the creation is the Creator Glorified is He and it is He Who has determined the path to reach it. When we want to reach a destination in the desert, for example, we first have to determine the location of our destination, and then we choose the best route to reach it. So, if the straight path to our destination is filled with obstacles and mountains, then we will be forced to deviate from this route in order to reach our destination. Thus, this curved route is the straight path because it helps us avoid all of the obstacles. For example, the rain that falls on the hills of Ethiopia, these have chosen for themselves the easiest possible course, and the result was the Nile River. Unlike the sewers or the Suez Canal, the Nile River is no work of man. Rather, it is the result of large quantities of water falling as rain and then choosing the easiest possible course—and this caused the river to flow between the obstacles, sand dunes and boulders. This is why we find that anything in which man is not involved might turn and swerve so as to find a way out. However, human-made objects cannot do this.

Therefore, every created being must have a purpose, which is why we find our master Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him saying: ‘It is He Who has created me. It is He Who guides me.’ (ash-Shu'ara’: 78) Thus, the One Who creates determines the purpose because He knows it before He sets out to create. There is a remarkable precision in the words which the Quran quotes our master Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him as saying, for he does not say, 'The One created me will guide me.' Rather, he says: ‘It is He Who has created me. It is He Who guides me.’ (ash-Shu'ara’: 78) Thus, this is an indication that this issue will be contested, and after the creation of man, some human beings will come forth and, in order to protect their own interests, will establish another path which will completely contradict the original purpose; it is this path that leads to error.

As for Allah the Almighty He has revealed the Quran wherein is the true guidance, for the Creator is the One Who codifies and sets down laws. This is why the Quran mentions and quotes our master Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him as saying: ‘He Who gives me food and drink.’ (ash-Shu'ara': 79) These words of our master Ibrahim peace be upon him show that he had reached the realisation that the One Who bestows sustenance upon parents and has the Power to bestow sustenance—including food and drink— is Allah Glorified is He. The Quran also quotes our master Ibrahim peace be upon him as saying: ‘He Who will make me die and then give me life again.’ (ash-Shu'ara': 81). Thus, the power to bring about death and the power to bring about life both pertain to Allah the Exalted; so no one should question about the One Who owns the power to bring about death and life. As for the curing of the sick, Ibrahim peace be upon him says: ‘He Who cures me when I am ill.’ (ash-Shu'ara': 80). Thus, you might go to a doctor thinking that it is he who has the power to heal you; in fact, the doctor can only treat the symptoms, for it is Allah the Almighty Who truly has the Power to heal.

Thus, we realise that the words of our master Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him: ‘It is He Who has created me. It is He Who guides me’ (ash-Shu'ara': 78) are quite logical since the creator of something is the one who guides it to its ultimate purpose. Thus, the purpose of something always precedes its actual creation; then, the thing is shown the way that leads it to its purpose. Thus, if it is caused to deviate from that way that leads to its purpose, then there is no good in that thing whatsoever. In the Quran, you find our master Musa (Moses) peace be upon him quoted as saying: ‘He replied, "Our Lord is He Who has given everything its form, then has given it guidance."’ (Ta Ha: 50)

As long as it is Allah the Exalted Who creates, then it is He Who guides His creation along the path that leads to their ultimate purpose; the Quran also says: ‘[Prophet], glorify the name of your Lord the Most High, Who has created [all things] in due proportion, Who determined their destinies and guided them.' (al-A'la: 1-3) Thus, it becomes clear to us that so long as there is a purpose, and there must exist a path that leads us to it, and our Creator must indeed lead us along that path. Likewise, in the verse that we are currently reflecting on, Allah Glorified is He says: 'Say, "Allah shows the way to the truth."' (Yunus: 35) since it is He Who has created. Therefore, it makes sense that the following question arises: 'Is someone who shows the way to the truth more worthy to be followed, or someone who cannot find the way unless he himself is shown?' (Yunus: 35) The reason why there is the letter lam (to) in Allah's Words: '... shows the way to the truth...' (Yunus: 35) is due to it being a case of looking 'toward' the true purpose. Furthermore, the reason why there is the letter 'Ila in His Words: '... to the Truth...' (Yunus: 35) is to attract our attention to the fact that reaching this purpose requires the existence of a path; thus, Allah the Most High wants to combine the two meanings in a single verse.

Now we know that this verse was revealed regarding those who set up associates with Allah Glorified is He for they actually admit His Existence, but they associate false deities with Him. Allah the Almighty has singled Himself out in His Divinity because of His Lordship over the created cosmos, for He has created out of nothing, and He has bestowed sustenance where there was naught. Also, He has created for us the means of acquiring knowledge and has managed all things in the universe for us; He has brought out the living from the dead, and the dead from the living. Furthermore, He has guided all to the truth. Where, then, are these associates which they had set up with Him? Have any one of these false deities—or even all of them combined—ever created a single one of these aforementioned things? This is why Allah Glorified is He says: 'Say, "Can any of your partner-gods (Allah's so-called partners) show the way to the truth?"' (Yunus: 35) Thus, the One Who guides is the same One Who has created, and those who set up false associates have admitted that Allah Glorified is He is the Creator in their testament, as when He says: 'If you [Prophet] ask them who created them they are sure to say, "Allah."' (az-Zukhruf: 87) Thus, those who set up false associates with Allah the Almighty have committed the gravest of sins; these false associates consist of either the angels or the Prophets and the Messengers who were wrongfully idolised by certain people. In addition, there are some who adopted other intermediaries from the ‘higher’ beings such as the sun, the moon and the stars, and some people have taken up other ‘lower’ intermediaries such as trees or stones. Do any of these false deities lead to the truth? Also, what is the doctrine that they set forth, and how have these false deities communicated this ‘doctrine’ to you? All of these people realise that none of these false deities have the power to guide to the truth; rather, they themselves are guided by Allah Glorified is He; so from whence did you get the idea that the angels will guide you? Also, how could some people have idolised their Messenger and mistook him for a deity? From whence did this Messenger derive his doctrine in the first place? There is no created being that can guide to the truth unless Allah Glorified is He guides it before that to the truth. Likewise, if these things—which are set up as associates—have no power to guide, no doctrine to offer, no mind, no reason (like the sun, the moon and other ‘high’ elements, and also like trees and stones when it comes to the ‘lower’ elements), then what have these things said? Indeed, these things did not utter a single word. Thus, your act of setting up associates with Allah the Exalted—even if these associates be angels—can never be right. Verily, it is Allah Glorified is He Who chooses which of the angels will convey His Message on His behalf. Also, it is He Who selects the Messengers peace be upon them: ‘Is someone who shows the way to the truth more worthy to be followed, or someone who cannot find the way (Yahedi) unless he himself is shown?’ (Yunus: 35) The words Yahedi (find the way) is pronounced in this way instead of Yahtadi as there is a ‘softening’ of certain words in the Arabic language so as to produce a more correct, pleasant sounding effect. Now we know that the word Yahdi means: ‘to find the way’, and its root is Yahtadi. However, the word Yahtadi includes the letters h, t, d and i; and the closeness between the areas where these sounds are produced causes the meaning to become clouded and the pronunciation to become heavy; so, the Arabic language proceeds to switch around certain letters and assimilate others. Thus, the effect is that it reaches our ears in the way that Allah Glorified is He has revealed it—easy to pronounce and beautiful in meaning, for the Quran which is the Words of Allah Glorified is He coming down from heaven, had the effect of taming the Arabic language such that its sound and its meaning have become 'eternalised'. Thus, if you are on the path of guidance, then know that the guidance comes from Allah the Almighty.

Allah Glorified is He concludes the noble verse by saying: 'What is the matter with you? How do you judge?' (Yunus: 35) What this means is what has tampered with your minds such that you have arrived at such conclusion: that you take up associates who can offer no doctrine nor offer a doctrine they bring it forth on behalf of Allah Glorified is He. Whenever you hear the word kayf (how), know that its purpose is to find an explanation for a strange act which—in the mind of the sane—should never have happened. It is as if you say, 'How could you strike your father?' or 'How could you curse your mother?' These are matters which our primordial nature instinctively shuns and our temperament and our religion abhor. Thus, when Allah Glorified is He says: '... How do you judge?' (Yunus: 35), it is as if He is saying that this is a strange and abnormal act which should never have happened, for Allah Glorified is He Alone is God; He is unchangeable and His purpose and path never change. It is He Alone Who has determined our purpose and the path leading to this purpose. He says: 'But Allah invites [everyone] to the Home of Peace...' (Yunus: 25).

The Doctrine of Allah Glorified is He is the path that leads away from the ever-changing flux of the life of this world to the Home of Peace, for the whole world consists of nothing but a process of change. One day you might have strength, and the next day you might become weak; one day you might be in good health, and the next day you become sick; you might be rich, and then become poor; you might enjoy the power of sight today and lose it tomorrow, or you might have an excellent ear now but turn deaf later. Thus, it is a world that is ever changing. Suppose that a person enjoyed all of the blessings of the worldly life including good health, safety, security, wealth, etc., we will find that he carries a sense of anxiety, and the source of this is two-fold: the first source of his anxiety is his fear of losing of these worldly blessings, while the other source is his fear that he will die and leave these blessings behind; this is what we witness in our lives. Thus, because of the ever-changing nature of the worldly life, no real security can be found therein. For this reason, we should understand that all of the gifts with which a created being is blessed are but blessings bestowed from the Creator Glorified is He. Were these gifts ‘innate’, you would be able to hold to them. However, the truth is that they are gifts from Allah the Almighty and every gift that is bestowed can be taken back.

Afterwards, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَمَا يَتَّبِعُ أَكۡثَرُهُمۡ إِلَّا ظَنًّاۚ إِنَّ ٱلظَّنَّ لَا يُغۡنِي مِنَ ٱلۡحَقِّ
شَيۡـًٔاۚ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ عَلِيمُۢ بِمَا يَفۡعَلُونَ ﴿٣٦﴾

Most of them follow nothing but assumptions, but assumptions can be of no value at all against the Truth: God is well aware of what they do [36] (The Quran, Yunus: 36)

Allah's Words, ‘Most of them follow nothing but conjecture...’ (Yunus: 36), imply that some of them used to follow certainty since the opposite of ‘conjecture’ is certainty. Verily, the relationship that exists between things binds together between the subject and its attribute or between that which is judged and the judgment. This is a relationship which we have previously spoken of and about which we are hereby reminding once again. There are things which you can affirm with certainty, and there are things which you are unable to affirm with any degree of certainty. That which you can affirm with certainty and offer its evidence is the knowledge of certainty. On the contrary, that which you cannot provide its proof is not knowledge of certainty; it is merely imitation; such as when a child utters the verse: ‘Say, "He is Allah the One."’ (al-Ikhlas: 1). This is true, but the child is not capable of providing its evidence.

Someone may say something with certainty, but it is not true; this is an example of ignorance. Knowledge refers to matters which have been determined to be true; they are ‘real’ and are substantiated by real proof. Ignorance, on the other hand, is when something has been determined to be true; however, there is no real proof to support it. Now ‘conjecture’ results from the parity of two statements—one positive and the other negative, such that one cannot affirm anyone of them; if one of the two statements were to outweigh the other, the issue becomes outweighed, and an outweighed issue is one that is either ‘conjecture’, ‘doubt’ or ‘illusion’. Thus, ‘conjecture’ is when one statement outweighs the other, and ‘doubt’ is when the two statements are equal.

Allah's Words, ‘Most of them follow nothing but conjecture...’ (Yunus: 36), shows us that those who used to oppose Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did so either out of sheer spite—even though they were aware of the truth of what he was conveying. Or they adopted an intransigent attitude out of ignorance, as in Allah's saying: ‘But they are denying what they cannot comprehend...’ (Yunus: 39). Were any of them to look carefully at the Message communicated to him on Allah’s behalf and were he to consider all of the supporting arguments, he would announce his faith. However, there were some who looked at the evidence and, nevertheless, remained stubbornly entrenched in their opposition; and those who followed ‘conjecture’ followed that which is of no value against the truth. This is why Allah Glorified is He shows them that He is aware of the secrets of their souls, and He knows whether their refusal to embrace the faith is the result of stubbornness or the result of an intellectual inability to grasp the concept of faith; so, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Allah is well aware of what they do.’ (Yunus: 36) Thus, He eternally knows that some of them, in the deep recesses of their souls, are certain about the true value of faith, but they deny it outwardly, as Allah Glorified is He says: ‘We know well that what they say grieves you [Prophet]. It is not you they disbelieve. The evildoers reject Allah’s revelation.’ (Yunus: 36) Thus, Allah Glorified is He is Omniscient, and it does not escape His Omniscience that they denied what they failed to comprehend and that some of them did not realise the value of faith, along with those who did gain such a realisation and denied it as a matter of intransigence and arrogance. He says: ‘They denied them, in their wickedness and their pride, even though their souls acknowledged them as true...’ (an-Naml: 14).

بَيْنَ يَدَيْهِ وَتَفْصِيلَ ٱلْكِتَٰبِ لَا رَيْبَ فِيهِ مِن رَّبِّ ٱلْعَٰلَمِينَ ﴿٣٧﴾

Nor could this Quran have been devised by anyone other than God. It is a confirmation of what was revealed before it and an explanation of the Scripture – let there be no doubt about it – it is from the Lord of the Worlds [37] (The Quran, Yunus: 37)

When you listen to the Quran with all that it contains of secrets of numbers and its divulging of the secrets of the unseen which are subject neither to the logic of time nor to the logic of space, the primordial nature naturally arrives at the certainty that the Quran was not contrived; rather, the Author Who revealed it must be Omniscient and Aware since the Quran was revealed in conformity with the rest of the previous Books. In other words, its content is always on full display for people to see; it faces them, and it is a Book that corroborates the previously revealed Books, before they were distorted, like the Torah, the Gospel and the Psalms. These are the Books that are revelations in time that preceded that of the Quran, but the latter conforms perfectly to all of them. In other words, these other sacred Books, before being distorted, and the Quran mutually confirm each other. These sacred Books gave the glad tidings of the coming of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as a Messenger. Likewise, the Quran tells us of how 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him announced the coming of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: '... and bringing good news of a Messenger to follow me whose name will be Ahmad...' (as-Saff: 6).

So, when Ahmed/ Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did come and the Quran was revealed to him, he confirmed the Gospel in that statement. All of the essential creeds that the Quran mentioned have been revealed previously through the other sacred Books; Allah Glorified is He says: 'We have sent revelation to you [Prophet] as We did to Nuh (Noah) and the prophets after him, to Ibrahim (Abraham), Ismail (Ishmael), Ishaq (Isaac), Ya'qub (Jacob), and the tribes, to 'Isa (Jesus), Ayyub (Job), Yunus (Jonah), Harun (Aaron), and Sulaiman (Solomon)— to Dawud (David) We gave the book [of Psalms].' (an-Nisa': 163) He also says: 'In matters of faith, He has laid down for you [people] the same commandment that He gave Nuh (Noah), which We have revealed to you [Muhammad] and which We enjoined on Ibrahim (Abraham) and Musa (Moses) and 'Isa (Jesus), "Uphold the faith and do not divide into factions within it."' (ash-Shura: 13) Thus, there are certain essential creeds which have been expounded by all the heavenly Books. Furthermore, there are also certain events which these sacred Books tell, and Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him told us, through the Quran, about these events; so from where could he have come up with all these sound doctrines and information contained in the ancient sacred Books while he was not from the people of the Book, nor was he taught by any of them?

Thus, when Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him mentions that which has been previously said in the sacred Books before the Quran, these Books corroborate his Message, for these events had happened, and this is a confirmation of the truth of what he says. Furthermore, his contemporaries have confirmed that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him never sat down with a teacher or read a book. His history and his biography are well known to them because he is one of them, and he was never known to have engaged in high-level discourse, nor was he ever known to have addressed his people before the Message was revealed to him, nor did he ever compose or recite poetry. Also, when this splendid revelation descended upon him from heaven, he was just as surprised as you were; so from whence did he get this revelation? You claim that he invented it himself; however, he attributes this lofty Book to its real Author, and he declares that he is but a Messenger; and so he says that which Allah Glorified is He commands him to say: ‘Say, "If Allah had willed, I would not have recited it to you, nor would He have made it known to you, for I had remained among you a lifetime before it. Then will you not reason?"’ (Yunus: 16) The Holy Quran orders Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to ask them the following question: have they ever detect a trace of such eloquence previously in his words? Let us look at the verses which state that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was not present when some events had taken place, such as when Allah Glorified is He says: ‘This is an account of things beyond your knowledge that We reveal to you [Muhammad]. You were not present amongst them when they cast lots to see which of them should take charge of Maryam (Mary)...’ (Al-‘Imran: 44). This is one of the stories that have been confirmed. Allah the Exalted also says: ‘You [Muhammad] were not present on the western side of the mountain when We gave Our command to Musa (Moses). You were not there.’ (al-Qasas: 44) The revelation to Musa (Moses) peace be upon him as well as the place where that revelation was sent down are confirmed stories. In addition, Allah the Most High says: ‘We have brought into being many generations who lived long lives; you did not live among the people of Midyan or recite Our Revelation to them. We have always sent messengers to people.’ (al-Qasas: 45) In many of these verses, it is as Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is asking his contemporaries: how could I have been given news of events that happened in another time and place? It must, therefore, be that Allah has informed me of such events, which, moreover, are corroborated in the ancient sacred Books. Thereafter, the Holy Quran brings forth that which confirms the truth of earlier revelations: '... Jibril (Gabriel) who by Allah's leave brought down the Quran to your heart confirming previous scriptures.' (al-Baqara: 97) This means that it is a Book which contains the truth of all future events, for the Quran penetrated the veils and the barriers of the past and future. Now we know that events pertaining to the unseen happened because of two reasons; one of which is when it speaks of something concerning a time that has long past, for it is speaking of the past which Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was not a part of, nor was he one of those who could research and gain more knowledge about that particular era.

The Holy Quran also penetrated the veil of the present—the time in which the Quran was revealed; this 'present' might be veiled by the particularity 'in space'. I often give the following example—and to Allah belongs the loftiest of examples—some accident might happen in Alexandria at the same time that you are present in Cairo, and you are not aware of this accident because the condition of 'space' veils you from this event; this 'veil of place' is relevant to the present events. As for the future events, they are veiled from us by both the veil of time and the veil of space. Thus, when the Quran informs us of an event which Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not witness, and he neither learnt nor read about it. Therefore, the Quran penetrates the veil that separates us from the past. Likewise, if the Quran informs us of an event occurring in the present but in a place far away from where Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is receiving the revelation, this, therefore, is a penetrating of the veil of space; for instance, Allah Glorified is He says: '... and say inwardly, "Why does Allah not punish us for what we say?"' (al-Mujadala: 8) When the hypocrites and the disbelievers heard the words of this noble verse, they did not deny their inner thoughts—which the Quran speaks of. Thus, the Quran pierced the veil of 'space' within their very selves. Thus, the news of the unseen that is related to us in the Quran pierces either the veil of past events or the veil of present events, or it splits asunder the veil of time and space of the future. Now we know that while the Quran was being revealed, the Muslims were weak, being unable to defend themselves, and nobody could protect anybody else. Meanwhile, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him headed towards At-Ta'f to invite its people to Islam in the hopes of gaining their protection; however, he was met with cynical, even physical, opposition, and he advised some of his companions to emigrate to Abyssinia. And in the midst of all of these crises, the following words of the Quran were revealed: ‘Their forces will be routed, and they will turn tail and flee.’ (al-Mujadala: 8) Even ‘Umar ibn al-Khattab Allah be pleased with him wondered: ‘What are these forces that will be defeated? We cannot even defend ourselves.’ Then, when the battle of Badr took place, ‘Umar witnessed the defeat of the Quraysh warriors and their routing. Thus, he came to see, with an eye of certainty, that which the revelation had spoken about earlier. Thus, everyone came to realise with certainty that the Holy Quran had not been made up; so how can Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him be accused of contriving the Quran?

Likewise, if this Quran is merely made up, why did you not try to come up with something like it while there are many poets, men of eloquence and public speakers amongst you? Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him never claimed that he was a man of eloquence, a public speaker, or a poet. Also, the Quran did not ask them to bring someone who has nothing to do with eloquence—such as Muhammad—to come up with the like of the Quran. Rather, the Quran asks them to rally the finest poets and see if they can say a single verse comparable to the verses of the Quran. Moreover, if you were to say that what Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him has brought us is sorcery and that he is a sorcerer who mesmerised the poor and the weak and convinced them to embrace Islam, then why did he not mesmerise you as well? The fact that you have not been mesmerised yourselves is proof that your claim of sorcery is baseless.

Then Allah Glorified is He says: ‘... It is an explanation of the Scripture–let there be no doubt about it. It is from the Lord of the Worlds.’ (Yunus: 37), for the Quran has expounded every virtuous principle that will endure until the Day of Judgment, As for the sacred Books that were revealed prior to the Quran, they contained the principles that were appropriate to the time and place of their respective revelations. It is also a Book about its verity there is no doubt. It exposes disbelievers and makes plain their spiritual confusion and their lying, for they had acknowledged the greatness of the Quran when they said: ‘Why was this Quran not sent down to a distinguished man from either of the two cities?’ (az-Zukhruf: 31) Thus, they realised that the Quran contained neither flaws nor imperfections, and even disbelievers have no doubt about it.

Afterwards, Allah Glorified is He responses to their claims that the Quran was a human fabrication when He says:

أَمۡ يَقُولُونَ ٱفۡتَرَىٰهُۖ قُلۡ فَأۡتُواْ بِسُورَةٖ مِّثۡلِهِۦ وَٱدۡعُواْ مَنِ
ٱسۡتَطَعۡتُم مِّن دُونِ ٱللَّهِ إِن كُنتُمۡ صَٰدِقِينَ ﴿٣٨﴾

Or do they say, ‘He has devised it’? Say, ‘Then produce a sura like it, and call on anyone you can beside God if you are telling the truth’ [38] (The Quran, Yunus: 38)

The previous verse mentions the reason why they will not able to live up to this challenge, for it states that the previously revealed Books confirm its revelation. In fact, the earlier revelations give mutual credibility to each other. Thus, disbelievers have already lost the challenge, even before the Quran had been revealed. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘... Say, "Then produce a chapter like it ..."' (Yunus: 38). Allah Glorified is He has challenged them at one time to produce the like of the Quran: 'Say, "Even if all mankind and jinns came together to produce something like this Quran, they could not produce anything like it, however much they helped each other.’ (al-Isra’: 88), and they were unable to do so. Then the degree of the challenge was lowered, and they were asked to come up with ‘...ten invented chapters like it…’ (Hud: 13). Still they were unable to come up with ten chapters; so they were asked to come up with one chapter that comes somewhat close to the style of the Quran, but they could not ‘…then produce a single chapter like it…’ (al-Baqara: 23). Therefore, how can they still claim that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had fabricated the Quran since he was not acquainted with the art of linguistic eloquence?!

The Quran calls upon you to rally all of the poets and all of the men of eloquence so as to compose even one verse that is comparable to the Quran; there is, however, one condition that the Quran stresses when it says: ‘... and call on anyone you can beside Allah...’ (Yunus: 38) as Allah the Exalted solely has the Power to reveal the Quran; this is why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him told them that they may call upon the help of false gods so that disbelievers and die-hard cynics cannot say, ‘We will call upon the Help of Allah.’ For this reason, the Quran spells out this one exception: ‘... and call on anyone you can beside Allah if you are truthful.’ (Yunus: 38) Of course, disbelievers are not truthful about their claims that the Quran was made up. When Allah the Almighty sends forth a Messenger into some community—so as to instruct them about His Doctrine—His Will is that people amend their lifestyles so as to conform to their role as Allah’s vicegerents on the earth; this is why the Messenger that is sent forth is always a human being from amongst them because if the Messenger were an angel, for instance, he would be an unfitting role model for human beings. Rather, the Messenger must himself belong to the human species. Allah the Most High never sends forth any Messenger but that he is armed with clear, unmistakable proofs that he is indeed a Messenger conveying a Message on Allah's behalf. Furthermore, this clear proof must be analogous with the particular skills of the community in question. The Messenger cannot bring them a miracle that involves some domain of life with which they are not familiar, lest they may claim, ‘Were we familiar with such art, we could have produced something just as miraculous as that which you bring us.’ Now the Quran was revealed in order to confirm their inability to come up with anything comparable to it even though the domain of words—eloquence and poetry and public speaking—are their specialty. The Quran was Prophet Muhammad's miracle amidst a people of eloquence who used to hold poetry festivals and who hung up the name of the winner of the contests on the walls of the Ka'ba as a reputation and recognition of his brilliance. Thus, they were a people deeply knowledgeable about the art of eloquent speech, and the miracle which Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him brought forth was one that was based on language—the same art which they were adept at. The Quran challenged them, and every challenge requires that the adversary be given the chance to muster all his strength to meet that challenge, but if he loses the challenge, he must admit his defeat. Allah Glorified is He has challenged all Arabs with the Quran: ‘Say, "Even if all mankind and jinns came together to produce something like this Quran, they could not produce anything like it, however much they helped each other.' (al-Isra': 88) They were not able to come up with anything comparable, and so the Quran gradually reduced the difficulty of the challenge; it asked them to come up with what is lesser than that: just ten comparable chapters, as Allah Glorified is He says: '... produce ten invented chapters like it…' (Hud: 13). Then, it challenged them to come up with only one chapter like the Quran. Upon close inspection, we find that the manner in which it puts forth this last challenge—that is, to come up with one chapter that is similar to the Quran—has two kinds; in one instance, the Quran says: '... a chapter like it (suratin min mithlihi)...' (Yunus: 38), and in another instance, it says: '…then produce a single chapter like it (…suratin mithlihi….)' (al-Baqara: 23). Each of the two kinds are eloquent in its respective position, as the latter verse challenges them to produce a chapter that is comparable in quality and style to one of the chapters of the Quran. As for Allah's Saying: '... a chapter like it (suratin min mithlihi)...' (Yunus: 38), it means that one should try to produce a chapter such as those uttered by Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him considering that he had never sat with a teacher, never had learnt to read and never was known to be capable of speaking in an eminently eloquent manner at any point in his life up until he received the Divine Message. Allah Glorified is He says: 'Say, "If Allah had willed, I would not have recited it to you, nor would He have made it known to you, for I had remained among you a lifetime before it. Then will you not reason?"' (Yunus: 16) Therefore, '... a chapter like it...' (Yunus: 38) means to try to make a person, who is an illiterate like Prophet Muhammad, meet that challenge.

However, why does the Quran pose this kind of a challenge? It does so due to the reason that they had said the following about the Quran: 'It is just ancient fables, which he has had written down. They are dictated to him morning and evening.' (al-Furqan: 5) In fact, out of their extreme ignorance, they accused him of having studied under a man living in Mecca, and so the Quran pointed out to them that this man—whom they claimed to be Prophet Muhammad's teacher—was a non-Arab, as Allah Glorified is He says: '... but the language of the person they allude to is foreign, while this revelation is in clear Arabic.' (an-Nahl: 103)

Afterwards, Allah Glorified is He categorises these disbelievers by saying:

بَلْ كَذَّبُوا۟ بِمَا لَمْ يُحِيطُوا۟ بِعِلْمِهِۦ وَلَمَّا يَأْتِهِمْ تَأْوِيلُهُۥ ۚ كَذَٰلِكَ كَذَّبَ
ٱلَّذِينَ مِن قَبْلِهِمْ ۖ فَٱنظُرْ كَيْفَ كَانَ عَٰقِبَةُ ٱلظَّٰلِمِينَ ٣٩

But they are denying what they cannot comprehend – its prophecy has yet to be fulfilled for them. In the same way, those before them refused to believe – see what was the end of those evildoers! [39] (The Quran, Yunus: 39)

This is the category of people who ‘are denying what they cannot comprehend...’ (Yunus: 39), and they were surprised when they were informed about what they did not know; generally speaking, people are always hostile to that which they had been ignorant of. Thus, they denied the Message of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him before they even had the chance of contemplating the beauty of the Quranic language and its lofty ideals. However, if they had the chance to inspect the beautiful style of the Quran, they would incline towards Faith. ‘Umar ibn Al-Khattab Allah be pleased with him is a prime example of this, for he was a disbeliever when he heard that his sister and her husband had entered Islam. Then, he went to her house to confront her; he hit her so badly that he shed her blood and a blow to one’s sister that leads to her bleeding can only but make one’s heart soften. This is what happened with ‘Umar; so when his anger subsided, he approached the Quran with an open spirit, free of all obstinacy. Thereupon, he went to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and entered Islam. Before that time, he was amongst those who ‘... are denying what they cannot comprehend–its prophecy has yet to be fulfilled for them...’ (Yunus: 39). They were completely ignorant of Prophet Muhammad's Message, and as soon as they had heard about it, they immediately accused him of being a liar—Allah forbid!

Therefore, read Allah's saying: ‘Some of these people listen to you [Prophet], but once they leave your presence, they sneer at those who have been given knowledge by saying, "What was that he just said?"’ (Muhammad: 16) This is evidence that they did not understand the content of the Quran that had been revealed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him; so there comes Allah's response: ‘Say, "It is guidance and healing for those who have faith, but the ears of disbelievers are heavy; they are blind to it.’ (Fussilat: 44)

Thus, the Quran is guidance to those who open up their hearts to faith; as for those whose hearts filled with hatred for the Quran and for Islam in general, their view can never be set aright. If any of these people wishes to arrive at a sound judgment, then let him wipe out what goes against the Quran from his heart; then let him put the two views for or against the Quran side by side. Truly, his heart will be convinced by the side that has the stronger argument, and this would be Islam. Therefore, he whose heart has been filled with false doctrine cannot be guided.

Allah Glorified is He says: 'But they are denying what they cannot comprehend–its prophecy has yet to be fulfilled for them.' (Yunus: 39) The word ta'wil connotes 'returning to something', and this shows us that there are issues in the Holy Quran that have not been explained yet; these issues will be explained by events as they happen. The Quran might refer to an issue that has to do with the unseen, then the time comes and events come to pass and affirm this issue. At that point, we shall realise that this issue's interpretation has come. These people had denied the verses of the Quran before their ta'wil (interpretation) had come to pass. The reason for the delay of Allah's explanation of the issue is that the ta'wil (interpretation) of this issue had not yet come since the time of the issue occurs later. For example, consider 'Ammar ibn Yasir, a companion of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him when the battle occurred between Mu'awiya ibn Abu Sufyan and 'Ali Allah be pleased with them and 'Ammar fought in the camp of 'Ali and was killed. At this point, the companions realised the interpretation of one of the Prophet Muhammad's Hadiths, in which he had said, 'May Allah be merciful to 'Ammar. He will be killed by the rebellious group.'(1) This is how the interpretation of the Prophet's Hadith came about when the actual events took place; this was one of the reasons why some of the companion abandoned their ranks in Mu'awiya's army.

Thus, Allah Glorified is He says: '... its prophecy has yet to be fulfilled for them...' (Yunus: 39) which means that the interpretation has not yet been made apparent for them. One of the particles of negation is the word lam (did not), we can say, for example, 'So-and-so (Lam) did not come.' We can also say, ‘So-and-so has not (lamma) come yet.' The negation in the first example has no bearing on the present state of affairs; it is a statement referring only to the past. As for negation using the word lamma, it is extended to the present times; so-and-so still might show up in the future because the word lamma gives the meaning of negation with the expectation that the negated action will happen in the future.

(1) [Narrated by Al-Bukhari and Muslim]

Allah Glorified is He says: ‘The desert Arabs say, "We have faith." [Prophet] Tell them, "You do not have faith. What you should say instead is, ‘We have submitted.’"' (al-Hujurat: 14). These desert Arabs said, ‘We have faith’, even though they had seen the Muslims and had emulated them outwardly and hypocritically; however, true faith had not yet entered their hearts at that point. Thus, when they heard Allah's Words: ‘... for faith has not yet entered your hearts’ (al-Hujurat: 14), they said, ‘Praise be to Allah’ since this means that eventually ‘faith’ would enter their hearts, Allah the Almighty also says, ‘Did you think you would enter the Garden without Allah first proving which of you would struggle for His Cause and remain steadfast?’ (Al-‘Imran: 142) When they heard this they said, ‘Thus, we are now certain that Allah Glorified is He will come to recognise us among those who struggle in His Cause and as people of patience.’ Therefore, we know that the particle lamma means that which is negated is nevertheless expected to occur in the future. Furthermore, ta’wil, as we know, is the returning to something. In the Quran, there are numerous pieces of news which, at the time of their revelation, were not likely to happen. However, when they actually happened—and human beings had nothing to do with this—this means that the one who uttered this speech received it from the One Who is Capable of making events happen. Consider, for example, the prediction that the Byzantine Empire would be victorious over the Persians, even though the Byzantines had been defeated at the time. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘The Byzantines have been defeated in a nearby land. They will reverse their defeat with a victory in a few years’ time—Allah is in command, first and last. On that day, the believers will rejoice at Allah’s help...’ (ar-Rum: 2-5). This prophecy was revealed and the Muslims awaited the fulfilment of this prophecy, and it occurred exactly as the Quran had predicted. Sometimes the prophecy is fulfilled in the Hereafter, and then they will know the consequences of their denial at a later point of time.

Allah Glorified is He also says: ‘We have brought people a Scripture ─We have explained it on the basis of true knowledge ─ as guidance and mercy for those who believe. What are they waiting for but the fulfilment of its [final prophecy]?...’ (al-A’raf: 52, 53) They await the prophecies contained in the Quran, and they await to see whether their own prophecies will come true; if the prophecies contained in the Quran materialise in this life, the people of the Quran will be victorious, and if the prophecies of the Quran materialise in the Hereafter, Allah Glorified is He says concerning that: 'On the Day it is fulfilled, those who had ignored it will say, "Our Lord’s Messenger spoke the truth. Is there anyone to intercede for us now? Or can we be sent back to behave differently from the way we behaved before?"...' (al-A’raf: 53) This is the fulfilment of the prophecy which some had previously rejected. Thus, the fulfilment of the prophecies concerns whoever is left from amongst the disbelievers so that they might see that which the Quran had predicted occurs exactly as the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had said while he had no control over the course of events. It is as if Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was taking a risk by prophesising about that which might not be fulfilled, and then the believers would abandon him. However, he uttered only that which he was sure and confident would happen, as it was a prophecy coming from the Omniscient and Aware. The other possibility is that the final materialisation of the prophecy will be in the Hereafter. Thus, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘But they are denying what they cannot comprehend–its prophecy has yet to be fulfilled for them...’ (Yunus: 39).

Allah Glorified is He directs Prophet Muhammad's attention to the fact that what is happening with him has already happened with Messengers before him; so in the same verse, He says: ‘In the same way, those before them refused to believe. See what was the end of those evildoers’ (Yunus: 39). That is, witness the procession of Messengers, one after the other, beginning with the very first message from heaven—was there ever a Messenger whom heaven sent forth only to let him succumb to his disbelieving adversaries? No, this was not the case since victory was always granted to the Messengers of the True Lord the Exalted as the following words of His Glorified is He confirm: '[For] Allah has thus ordained: "I shall most certainly prevail, I and My prophets!"… ‘(al-Mujadala: 21). We know what happened to the unrighteous;

Allah drowned some of them, others were swallowed up by the earth and some were obliterated by the 'shout'. Therefore, the ta'wil (explanation) is clear regarding all of the Messengers that preceded the Message of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him; if the unrighteous people of the past received the punishment that corresponds to the message of their respective Messenger, then the unrighteous people who deny the Message of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him shall receive the punishment that corresponds to his peace and blessings be upon him overall Message. When the True Lord the Most High says: '... See what the end of those evildoers was!' (Yunus: 39), we must realise the meaning of the word Azh-zhulm (injustice, unfairness, inequity, oppression). It consists of transposing the rights of one who deserves to one who is undeserving. Now there are different levels of rights; there are some rights that are supreme, some that are intermediary and some that are 'lower' and not as significant. When it comes to the 'supreme' rights, if you transpose God's Divinity the Almighty unto that which is undeserving of this Divinity—this is the height of injustice. Also Allah Glorified is He says: '... behold, such [a false] ascribing of divinity is indeed an awesome wrong!' (Luqman: 13) If one were to do so, he is taking 'Divinity' away from Allah Glorified is He and attributing it to that which is other than He; now if only we could say that this 'other' enjoyed some sort of status with Allah the Exalted such that it could act as a mediator, but the truth of the matter is that it does not, However, the unrighteous person will claim that it does, but this is purely arbitrary and has no basis in reality. The unrighteous person sets up false associates in lieu of Allah, but this is injustice of the highest order and these associates never approved of their being deified. Imagine if Allah Glorified is He were to say: 'There is no deity but I.' either this is true, or there are indeed other deities. If someone were to deem this statement to be untrue—Allah forbid—then the other deity should speak for himself; it should not let someone else speak on its behalf. Otherwise, one is forced to conclude that such a deity is deaf and clueless. However, there are no other deities that have come forth and announced their divinity; thus, the sole Divinity of the True Lord Glorified is He is confirmed. The True Lord the Most High has stated to us, 'There is no deity but I. I am the Creator, and I am the Sustainer.' There is no other being that has come forth and claimed these roles. Therefore, the True Lord in the statement ‘There is no deity but Allah’ is confirmed. The next level of unrighteousness or injustice concerns legal matters. If someone were to make usury ‘lawful’ (halal), then this would be a great injustice indeed. However, if a judge orders a borrower to repay his debt, then this is justice. The judge who is unrighteous (or unjust) in his rulings is one who strips the deserving of their rights and hands these rights over to those who are undeserving. Thus, there are different levels of ‘injustice’ depending on the issue wherein the injustice is committed. Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَمِنْهُم مَّن يُؤْمِنُ بِهِۦ وَمِنْهُم مَّن لَّا يُؤْمِنُ بِهِۦۚ وَرَبُّكَ أَعْلَمُ بِٱلْمُفْسِدِينَ ﴿٤٠﴾

Some of them believe in it, and some do not: your Lord knows best those who cause corruption [40]
(The Quran, Yunus: 40)

In this verse, the speech concerns those who denied. How can Allah split the deniers—who by definition do not believe—into two groups: a group that believes and a group that does not believe? We know that belief and faith involves the work of the heart, not the work of the senses. We do not have the ability to see what is in other peoples’ hearts. However, the True Lord the Exalted knows who amongst these deniers is hiding his faith in his heart.

Thus, some of these people who, outwardly, deny with their tongues, inwardly, their hearts harbour a secret faith. Then there are some whose statements of denial conform to their hearts’ lack of faith. Of those who have said that this Quran is a fabrication, some of them nevertheless believe that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is a Messenger sent by Allah. Inwardly, they believe in the message conveyed to them on Allah’s behalf; however, out of their sheer spite, arrogance, and jealousy, they say that they do not believe. There is another category of people who, indeed, do not believe and openly proclaim their disbelief. Thus, the criterion is not the faith that emanates from the heart and is proclaimed by the tongue. The criterion is the faith that is secretly harboured in the heart but which is not expressed. Such faith has not yet developed to the point where it can be proclaimed by the tongue. The reason why some people keep their faith confined in their hearts—an untold secret—is due to their jealousy, their hate, and their inability to control their souls and make them conform to the demands of faith. When the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him asked Arabs to declare, ‘There is no deity but Allah’, a testament which, if they believed in sincerely, would guarantee that they would become politically dominant over the whole world, some of them refused to utter the statement; since they understood that this formula was not merely an empty statement, they realised the full implication and significance of it. They understood that the principle that ‘there is no deity but Allah’ means equality between human beings. Furthermore, they would loathe losing their eminent position and their dominance over other tribes. What this also indicates is that Allah the Almighty wished to incept the religion of Islam in Mecca, where the community openly makes its opinion known. This is why we find that ‘hypocrisy’ began only in Medina, whereas in Mecca, the society there was well homogeneous and well integrated. When the latter proclaimed their disbelief, they did not have to suffer from a loss of material possessions. However, it was the hypocrites of Medina and other places that suffered from the loss of their material possessions. Some of them used to play sides, saying one thing but believing something else. This is why the True Lord the Most High consoles His gracious Messenger; Allah comforts him and explains that he should not be sad for those who reject him since he is in fact loved and revered by them. Allah Glorified is He says: 'Well do we know that what such people say grieves you indeed. Yet, behold, it is not you to whom they lie to…' (al-An‘am: 33); this means that you are, O, Muhammad, far above such lies. Allah’s Words: '… but Allah’s messages do these evildoers deny.' (al-An‘am: 33) means that Allah Glorified is He exonerates His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him from the sins of some of his people for the True Lord Glorified is He knows that His Messenger is known to be honest and trustworthy amongst his people. Even while they fought him, some of them still deposited their possessions with him as trusts. Those who believed in His Message did not proclaim their faith, as well as those who did not believe—the fate of both groups is in the hands of Allah Glorified is He; their Creator shall be the Judge of their case and the settler of their accounts since He the Most High knows more than anyone else those amongst them who denied the Message out of spite and those amongst them who denied the Message as a way of disavowing their association with the new religion. Allah the Exalted is the One Who punishes and causes suffering, and every one of those people shall receive his due reward according to the degree of perversion; this is why the True Lord the Most High concludes the verse by saying: '… and you Lord is fully aware as to who are the spreaders of corruption.' (Yunus: 40)

Now the perverse—or the corrupt—person is he who causes that which is good to become rotten since the world has been created in a state of unspoiled perfection before the coming of human beings. The work of Allah Glorified is He was only affected by corruption as a result of the influence of human beings. By default, Allah's creation performs its function properly and in an efficient manner. Likewise you, O, human being, if you wish that all things would be set right in your universe, then look at that higher cosmos in which you have no influence; you will find that everything within that cosmos is set right. In the words of Allah Glorified is He: 'And the skies has He raised high and has devised [for all things] a measure, so that you [too, O, men,] might never transgress the measure [of what is right]. Weigh, therefore, [your deeds] with equity and cut not the measure short!' (ar-Rahman: 7-9), this means to take charge of your responsibilities and be conscientious thereof and to perfect that which is in within your jurisdiction just as Allah Glorified is He has perfected that which is outside of your jurisdiction. What is asked of man—therefore—is that, if he cannot ameliorate that which is good, he should at least allow that which is good to remain so. Thus, so that he might not join the ranks of those who bring about corruption.

Thereafter, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَإِن كَذَّبُوكَ فَقُل لِّى عَمَلِى وَلَكُمْ عَمَلُكُمْ ۖ أَنتُم بَرِيٓـُٔونَ
مِمَّآ أَعْمَلُ وَأَنَا۠ بَرِىٓءٌ مِّمَّا تَعْمَلُونَ ﴿٤١﴾

If they do not believe you, [Prophet], say, 'I act for myself, and you for yourselves. You are not responsible for my actions nor am I responsible for yours' [41] (The Quran, Yunus: 41)

This verse brings comfort to the heart of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him for Allah Glorified is He does not say: 'when they give thee the lie' (idha kadhabuk), rather, He says: '… if they give you a lie …' (Yunus: 41), and the True Lord the Most High wishes to mention the issue of their denial as one that is 'in doubt'. Also, He follows this up by telling His Prophet peace and blessings be upon him: '…say, "To me [shall be accounted] my doings, and to you, your doings…"' (Yunus: 41) which means to inform them of the following: 'I do not wish to hold you responsible for my own actions; rather, I wish for the best and hope that you perform good deeds. If you do not do good deeds, then this, in turn, will not have an effect on the reward I shall receive for my work.' Thus, it becomes clear to us that the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him is not to be rewarded according to the number of his followers, but depending on whether he conveys the Message in the manner that Allah Glorified is He had wished for it to be conveyed. The True Lord the Exalted has wished that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him transmit good to his community; if they remain entrenched in their evil ways, this evil will not affect him because he had faithfully conveyed the Doctrine to them and will receive a goodly reward from Allah, for Muhammad holds himself to the tenets of the credo he is conveying, and the evil of those who do not follow him shall come back to hurt them. Likewise, those who refuse to answer the call always think that the caller will benefit. The message from Allah is delivered and applied by the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him as a doctrine and a code of conduct. Also, for this he shall be rewarded. There is no room for confusion is such matters '…"To me [shall be accounted] my doings, and to you, your doings …"' (Yunus: 41). Then, Allah the Almighty puts the following words in the mouth of His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him: '… you are not accountable for what I am doing, and I am not accountable for whatever you do."' (Yunus: 41) The word bari' (not accountable or innocent from) means that sin is involved here; these words of the True Lord the Most High indicate that there is a sort of rivalry taking place with the enemies. Allah Glorified is He wishes to educate His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him and the believers in the ways of civilised discourse; He says: '… And, behold, either we [who believe in Him] or you [who deny His oneness] are on the right path, or have clearly gone astray!"' (Saba': 24), which means that either we—the Prophet and his followers—or you—the disbelievers—are on the right path, while the other is on the side of error. The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him is certain that it is he who is on the right path and that disbelievers are on the side of error; however, he still acknowledges their position, as a courtesy and out of His sense of fairness. This is why His Lord Glorified is He teaches him to say: 'Say: "Neither shall you be called to account for whatever we may have become guilty of…"' (Saba': 25). In other words, he is telling them that suppose that I commit a sin; you are not going to be held responsible for it. The Prophet's courteousness was such that the True Lord the Most High decreed for him to say, '"… nor shall we be called to account for whatever you are doing." (Saba': 25) Then, Allah does not say: 'We will not be responsible for your crimes.' Similarly, the True Lord Glorified is He has willed that, in this verse which we are currently studying, the Prophet would say: '… you are not accountable for what I am doing, and I am not accountable for whatever you do."' (Yunus: 41)

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَمِنْهُم مَّن يَسْتَمِعُونَ إِلَيْكَۚ أَفَأَنتَ تُسْمِعُ ٱلصُّمَّ وَلَوْ كَانُوا۟ لَا يَعْقِلُونَ ﴿٤٢﴾

Some of them do listen to you: but can you make the deaf hear if they will not use their minds? [42]
(The Quran, Yunus: 42)

Now the word min (amongst) might refer to that which is singular and male, and it also might refer to that which is singular and female. It might also refer to that which is dual, and it might refer to that which is plural. Sometimes the sentence is more precise such as when Allah Glorified is He says: 'And there are amongst them such as [seem to] listen to you …' (al-An'am: 25); other times, it is the general meaning that is more important: 'and there are amongst them such as [pretend to] listen to you …' (Yunus: 42).

The word min can be used in both instances. Now the act of listening, as we know, is when the ear registers sounds; if the sound is jarring and unintelligible like the sounds of animals or the sound of sticks, then these sounds as useful to the body as the tone of some concussion or shudder. Or sounds can have an intelligible meaning such as the sounds of the various languages which people use to speak with one another in various countries. If you were to speak English in a country where people speak English, they would understand you and you would understand them. This is what ‘intelligibility’ means in the context of language; it means that the speaker and the listener are on the same ‘linguistic’ page. Now the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him was an Arab who spoke in an Arabic tongue to an Arab audience who understood him; so if the language itself was not the communication barrier, then what was? The communication barrier in this case is the fact that the ear rejects everything that it receives from someone who is perceived as an enemy. Hearing, as we know, depends on the willingness of the listener to understand the ideas of the speaker. If a listener lacks the willingness to understand that which is being spoken to him, then the speech falls upon deaf ears. Thus, on a listener’s side, there must be a willingness to understand what the speaker is telling him. A saying goes as follows. ‘This ear is made of clay, and the other is made of dough.’ Or as a joke goes as follows: 'A person approached his friend and whispered into his ear, ‘I want to tell you a secret.’ The friend became attentive and listened eagerly for this secret, whereupon the man said, ‘I want to borrow a hundred dollars.’ The friend said, ‘It’s as though I have not heard this secret.’ Thus, speech is not just sounds that reach the ear; rather, there must be willingness and attentiveness on the part of the listener. Furthermore, they, it must be said, do not have such a positive predisposition. This is why the True Lord Glorified is He says: '… but can you cause the deaf to hear ...' (Yunus: 42); in other words, it is as if their hearing faculty is inoperative. An example of this is when a teacher is explaining a day’s lesson to students; amongst the students there are some who are paying attention, eager to hear more. This is why they end up understanding the lesson; however, for those who were not in a state of attentiveness, it is as if they had not heard anything from their teacher. Disbelievers have surpassed the state of deafness, for even the deaf can understand the gist of a message from hand signals or just by reading the language of the eyes; however, these people neither hear the words nor understand them: '… but can you cause the deaf to hear even though they will not use their reason?' (Yunus: 42)

Thereafter, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَمِنْهُم مَّن يَنظُرُ إِلَيْكَ ۚ أَفَأَنتَ تَهْدِى ٱلْعُمْىَ وَلَوْ كَانُوا۟ لَا يُبْصِرُونَ ﴿٤٣﴾

Some of them look at you: but can you guide the blind if they will not see? [43] (The Quran, Yunus: 43)

The act of seeing also requires attentiveness. Sometimes a person approaches that which he wishes to see, and sometimes he is not in a state of full attentiveness since his heart is not in synch with the information being registered by the eyes.

A person was asked,(1) 'You say, that whoever sees so-and-so, the virtuous will be guided by Allah.' The listener responded to him and asked, 'How can you say this?!' The man said, 'Abu Jahl has beheld a person more virtuous than he, and he still remained a disbeliever.' The listener said, 'Abu Jahl did not see Muhammad, the prophet peace and blessings be upon him but rather what Abu Jahl saw was the orphaned son of Abu Taleb.' Thus, the man explained that Abu Jahl did not see Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as a Messenger, for if he had beheld him peace and blessings be upon him in such a light, Abu Jahl would have been overcome by the serenity of faith, the grandeur of reverence and the majesty of piety. We might find a virtuous man with dark black skin, and his virtue beams forth as an aura of light all around him; he has a powerful, captivating presence due his to piety. Furthermore, if Abu Jahl had seen Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as a prophet, his state would have changed. Witness Fadalah as he tells the story(2) of the time when he tried to assassinate the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him as the latter was circumambulating the Ka'ba during the 'Year of Victory'. When he approached him, the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said, 'What were you thinking to yourself?' He said, 'Nothing. I was just invoking Allah.' So, the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him laughed and then said, 'Ask Allah for forgiveness.' Then, he put his hand on the chest of Fadalah. When Fadalah heard this, and he saw Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saying these words, he said, 'There was nothing in the world I hated more than his face, but when I approached him I was overcome by love, and then there was nothing in the whole world that I loved more than his face.'(1) This is an example of what ‘hearing’ really is and what ‘seeing’ really is; both of these—seeing and hearing—are the most noble of all the faculties since hearing enables us to hear the Word of Allah. Before a man can sit down and read, he first needs to ‘hear’.

(1) The story of the man who said: "He who sees a righteous man shall be guided by God" someone told him that Abu Jahl saw the Prophet and was not guided so he replied: "he did not see him, but he saw the orphan of Abu Taleb.

(2) The story of Fadalah with the Prophet peace be upon him in the year of the conquest of Mecca.

The concept of ‘blindness’ that is implied in the words of the True Lord the Most High: '… but can you show the right way to the blind even though they cannot see?' [Yunus: 43] has to do with blindness of the heart.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ لَا يَظۡلِمُ ٱلنَّاسَ شَيۡـًٔا وَلَٰكِنَّ ٱلنَّاسَ أَنفُسَهُمۡ يَظۡلِمُونَ ﴿٤٤﴾

God does not wrong people at all – it is they who wrong themselves [44] (The Quran, Yunus: 44)

The word Allah is the proper name for He Who is the One Whom everyone needs, He Who is endowed with all of the qualities which we have come to know from His ninety-nine Divine Names. In fact, the Attributes of Allah are infinite; the attributes that are described by the ninety-nine Divine Names are not enough to describe all of His Attributes Glorified is He—for His Attributes are infinite. This is why the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him used to utter this supplication, 'I beseech You and call upon You with every Name which You have named Yourself, with every Name which You have taught You servants and with any Name which You hast claimed as Your Own in Your Knowledge of the unseen.'(2) Also, if one were to ask, 'Why does Allah claim for Himself—and to the exclusion of all others—certain Names in the world of the unseen?' The answer is because in this way Allah Glorified is He will have more Names which we can come to know in the hereafter; this is why we find that the True Lord the Most High shall reveal to and inspire His Prophet peace and blessings be upon him with some of His Praises and Glorifications which He had not revealed to anyone before him. These are amongst the gifts that flow endlessly from the Supreme Name of the One Whom everyone needs. These are Attributes that emanate from the Supreme Name of the One Whom everyone needs. The ninety-nine Divine Names that we know suffice us insofar as our lives here on the earth; however, in the hereafter we shall become aware of other Divine Attributes. It is the Name Allah which encompasses all of these other Names—the Names we know of and those which we do not. When a human being sets out to do any kind of work, a host of attributes are required. He needs to have the physical ability, knowledge, wisdom, subtlety, and mercy, along with many other attributes. So, if you were to say, ‘In the name of the Omnipotent’, this means that you are in need of power. On the other hand, if you were to say, ‘In the name of the Capable’, this means that you are in need of capacity. Likewise, if you were to say, ‘In the name of the Clement’, this means that you are in need of clemency, Also, if you were to say, ‘In the name of the Wise’, this means that you are in need of wisdom, Lastly, if you were to say, ‘In the name of Allah ’, this Name will suffice you because it encompasses all of these aforementioned Attributes and more; this is why the inception of all manner of activities should begin with Bism Allah (with the name of Allah). Thus, if you are in need of power, you will find it; and if you are in need of wealth, you will find it; and if you are in need of ample sustenance, you will find it. Allah Glorified is He has included all of these Attributes of ‘Completeness/ Perfection’ in the formula: Bism Allah. Furthermore, when you begin your work with this formula, you are thereby acknowledging that all the power and the agency that you possess have been bestowed upon you by Allah. Also, the things that respond to the power which you exert upon them do as such in the Name of Allah. All things are put at your service in His Name. Allah Glorified is He says: 'Are they, then, not aware that it is for them that we have created, amongst all the things which Our hands have wrought, the domestic animals of which they are [now] masters? And that We have subjected them to men’s will, so that some of them they may use for riding and of some they may eat ' (Ya Sin: 71-72). Had Allah the Exalted not subjugated the animals and the inanimate objects and put them at our service such that they respond to the power that we exert upon them, we could never ‘own’ these things. To be sure, Allah Glorified is He has not subjugated certain things, so that we might realise that we cannot ourselves bring them under our control, neither through our knowledge nor through the power that we possess. Indeed, it is the True Lord the Most High Who is solely capable of subjugating things. In rural areas, you see a child as he herds camels; he orders them to kneel, and they kneel; and he orders them to stand up, and they stand up. However, if we saw a snake, most of us would flee; only those who are experienced and know how to kill a snake will stand their ground. A small, tiny little mosquito could try to bite you at night, and you would not know how to kill it since it is one of those creatures that Allah has not subjected for you. Similar is the case of fruit from a tree: if you pick it before it is ripe, it will not be tasty. However, if you pick it when it is ripe, you will enjoy its sweet taste. Then you take the fruit’s seed and you plant it again, and thus you ensure the continued survival of the species. In fact, when a piece of fruit is ripe, it will fall to the ground as if it is asking to be eaten by someone. It is the same thing with a human being when he reaches puberty; that is, he becomes capable of procreation. At that point, Allah the Exalted charges him with the duties and responsibilities of faith; if Allah were to charge him with these duties at a younger age, he might not be able to carry the burden, especially when the problems of adolescence set in. This is why the True Lord the Most High wished to create from naught and to train a person gradually until he becomes fully grown. Then, when a person reaches puberty, the obligation is clearly defined. These become effective when the mind and the body attain maturity, otherwise spiritual illness or insanity could result. There is none stronger or more powerful than Allah the Almighty that may force you to go against His wishes; this is why it is the True Lord’s Will that religious duties and cognitive maturity should coincide. As for a person who suffers from mental insanity—Allah Glorified is He has not charged him with religious duties. Religious duties are also not applicable to one who has no freedom since the essence of religious duty lies in the freedom to choose between alternatives. Such is the ultimate spirit of justice that pervades Divine legislation.

(1) Cited by Ibn Hisham in his (Sira Nabawiyya) (4/4170): {I swear by God, the moment he lifted his hand from my chest there was no creature of Allah that was dearer to me than him}

(2) Narrated by Ahmad in his (Musnad) (1/391,452) and by Al-Hakim in his (Mustadrak) (1/509), A Hadith narrated on the authority of Ibn Mas‘ud

When you consider your religious duties, do not focus on those which religion takes away because, in reality, it does not curb your freedom; rather, it ensures the freedom of others. At the same time, others are forced to respect your freedom. If you are forbidden to steal from others, Allah the Almighty has protected you by making it forbidden for others to steal from you.

Thus, the apparent restrictions on your liberty end up benefiting you. Imagine if you were given a free hand to take all you wanted from other people. What would happen if people were then given a free hand to take all they wanted from you? When your religious obligations forbid you to peer into the private lives of others, others, at the same time, are forbidden from peering into your private life. Thus, when you are commanded to give alms, you are indeed losing some of your wealth, and this money of yours which Allah has blessed you with is going to the poor. So do not just focus on that which is taken away from you, consider also that which could be given to you if you are destined to go through financial difficulties. In addition, when it comes to wealth that you feel is being stripped from you; Allah intends to reward you many times over for that sacrifice. Furthermore, consider the rhythm of life, along with those things which Allah the Most High has made forbidden for you, as well as those things which He has made permissible for you. In the end, you will find that the things that have been made permissible for you far outnumber those things which have been made forbidden. Therefore, overall, the religious obligations end up benefiting you. All of this aside, do any of your actions—involving religious duty—benefit the True Lord Glorified is He? No. Do your actions give Him any new attributes that were not there before? The answer is no, for Allah the Exalted has created us with all of His Attributes of 'Completeness/Perfection'. There is nothing that we can do that could increase or diminish the essence of His Self.

Thus, it is in your best interest that you perform your religious obligations since you ultimately benefit from them. Consider, for example, a farmer in his field. A farmer tills the earth, transports the fertiliser plants the seeds and irrigates his crops—all of which is quite tiring. However, after it is done, a farmer can sit back and enjoy the fruits of his labour. Therefore, when you carry out the True Lord's directives, you will enjoy similar returns. In your own life, you will note that a lazy farmer suffers a severe crisis at harvest time. Imagine what will happen on the Day of Judgment. A farmer who withdraws a certain amount of grain from his storehouse in order to plant is, in reality, not reducing his overall stockpile because after the season is over he shall reap fifteen times that which he showed. Thus, a person who carries out his religious duties reaps all the benefit. This is why I always say to consider what you get out of Allah's Doctrine, not what you give up. Thus, you see, there is no injustice, for we are, after all, the created beings of Allah, and have you ever seen a creator tarnish his own creation? Thus, the Supreme Creator does not wrong His creation nor does He ever tarnish it. Rather, He improves it, along with making it even more beautiful and splendid; this is why the True Lord the Most High says: 'Verily, Allah does not do the least wrong unto men, but it is men who wrong themselves.' (Yunus: 44), which means that people are the ones who harm themselves; such injustice always involves a repudiation of the Truth, and this is the ultimate injustice. Injustice also means that a man goes after immediate gratification, only to suffer punishment later, and thus depriving himself of everlasting felicity. Also, by committing an injustice to himself, he thereby loses the capacity to measure his life on earth, for no matter how long one's life is, human life will always be relatively short. If something is finite, it is by definition short and ephemeral. When Allah Glorified is He addresses mankind, He sets up signs that shall endure until the Day of Judgment. They all take part in these signs; they are the cosmic signs, and then Allah gave each Messenger a sign and a special miracle. He revealed a Doctrine comprising the basic directives of 'dos' and 'don'ts' and through the verses of His Book, He showed what is needed to be done as well as what is needed to be avoided; other than that, He left everything else permissible for you. The example that I always give is the following: the one of a student who fails at the end of the year. This student was not wronged by the school because there were others who did succeed. This is why it would not be proper to say it is the school that failed so-and-so. Rather, the proper thing to say is so-and-so is responsible for his own failure, and his classmate is responsible for his own success. All the school does is simply announcing the results.

Injustice can also involve begrudging the blessings of others, where the unjust seeks to strip the victim of his righteous possessions. Thus, the True Lord the Most High can never begrudge the blessings of His own servants since He is far above that; moreover, there is nothing that His servants possess which He would ever covet, for it is He, after all, who bestowed these blessings upon them. This is why it is not possible that any injustice should come from Him, and if there is any perceived injustice, it only comes from human beings themselves.

Thereafter, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَيَوۡمَ يَحۡشُرُهُمۡ كَأَن لَّمۡ يَلۡبَثُوٓاْ إِلَّا سَاعَةٗ مِّنَ ٱلنَّهَارِ يَتَعَارَفُونَ بَيۡنَهُمۡۚ
قَدۡ خَسِرَ ٱلَّذِينَ كَذَّبُواْ بِلِقَآءِ ٱللَّهِ وَمَا كَانُواْ مُهۡتَدِينَ ﴿٤٥﴾

On the Day He gathers them together, it will be as if they have stayed [in the world] no longer than a single hour, and they will recognize one another. Those who denied the meeting with God will be the losers, for they did not follow the right guidance [45] (The Quran, Yunus: 45)

This world which man lusts for, and in which he seeks his fortune, might make him forget about the Hereafter. Furthermore, when the Day of Judgment comes, you will feel as if you dwelled in this world for only an hour. The 'hour' is also when all people shall be gathered together on the Day of Judgment; however, an hour in this world is a period of time, and we know that the day is composed of twenty-four hours. The word As-sa'a is also the one which designates the clock that hangs on the wall or the watch that people wear on their wrists—both devices are used to tell time. Now, the rate at which time passes is standard—it is measured by the hour, by the minute and by the second—from the time of Adam peace be upon him and continuing through the ages of all those who would come after him. However, time varies from one place to another. The time in Cairo, for example, is two in the afternoon, while in New York it is seven in the morning; in another country the time is three in the morning. The exact time of day will never be the same for all human beings around the world—except on the Day of Judgment. This is why Allah the Exalted says: '… And when the Last Hour dawns, those who had been lost in sin will swear that they had not tarried [on earth] longer than an hour …' (ar-Rum: 55). Therefore, they will be surprised to find out that their long and prosperous lives went by so quickly that it is as if an hour only had passed. Thus, they will discover how short their time on the earth was. That is not all, for they will realise that, since they did not take advantage of it, that time becomes wasted time and of no real value. The True Lord the Most High says: 'Remain, then, [O, believer,] patient in adversity, just as all of the prophets, endowed with firmness of heart, bore themselves with patience. And do not ask for a speedy doom of those [who still deny the truth], on the Day when they see [the fulfilment of] what they were promised, [it will seem to them] as though they had dwelt [on the earth] no longer than one hour of [an earthly] day! [This is our] message. Will, then, any being [really] destroyed save iniquitous folk?' (al-Ahqaf: 35) What this means is that while they are preoccupied with their trivial pleasures, distractions and pursuits, their time on earth passes them by, and they did not apply to their lives on earth the serious attitude that it deserves; therefore, it passes them by quickly as if it were only an hour. This is why Allah the Exalted hereby says: 'and on the Day when He shall gather them [unto Himself, it will seem to them] as if they had not tarried [on the earth] longer than an hour of a day …' (Yunus: 45). Now the people who shall be assembled on that Day fall into one of two categories: the first category of people is those who used to be each other’s companions in good works, and the second category of people is those who used to be each other’s accomplices in sin. Those whose relationship, in this world, revolved around good works shall rejoice in each other’s company, whereas those whose relationship, in their lives on earth, revolves around sin shall shun their former partners and be hostile towards them. Indeed, Allah Glorified is He says: 'On that Day, friends will be foes unto one another – [all] save the God-conscious.' (az-Zukhruf: 67). Regarding those who used to be each other’s partners in crime, Allah the Almighty also says: '[On that Day] it will come to pass that those who had been [falsely] adored shall disown their followers …' (al-Baqara: 166); they shall get to know one another, but their acquaintance with one another will not last long, and it will soon turn to hostility. None of them wishes to be friendly with the one who was the cause of his sorry fate. Their acquaintance with one another shall be marked by violence. The True Lord the Most High says: '… [And] lost indeed will be they who [in their lifetime] considered it a lie that they were destined to meet Allah…' (Yunus: 45) When you hear the word khasar (lost) being used, know that the issue in question has to do with a commercial transaction of some kind. Al-khusara means that a merchant loses either a portion or the totality of his capital and holdings. The stages of any commercial transaction—as we know—consist of either an increase in the merchant's capital, or a breaking-even, when the merchant neither gains nor loses; in the latter case, the merchant still feels as though his time and efforts have been wasted. This is all part of and related to commercial transactions.

We find Allah Glorified is He describing the religious act in this world in the following verses: 'O, you who have attained to faith! Shall I point out to you a bargain that will save you from grievous suffering [in this world and in the life to come]? You are to believe in Allah and His Messenger and to strive hard in Allah's cause with your possessions and your lives. This is for your own good – if you but knew it!' (as-Saff: 10-11) Allah the Exalted also says: '[It is] they who [truly] follow Allah's revelation, are constant in prayer and spend on others, secretly and openly, out of what we provide for them as sustenance – it is they who may look forward to a bargain that can never fail,' (Fatir: 29). A successful trade requires that you only enter into a commercial agreement when you are certain that your returns shall outweigh your investment. This is why the True Lord Glorified is He says regarding losing transactions: '[for] it is they who have taken error in exchange for guidance; neither has their bargain brought them gain, nor have they found guidance [elsewhere].' (al-Baqara: 16) He also says: 'Yet [it does happen that] when people become aware of [an occasion for] worldly gain or a passing delight, they rush headlong towards it and leave you standing [and preaching]…" (al-Jumu'a: 11). It is the True Lord's Will that the word tijara would have such a clear and lucid meaning, capable of expressing a variety of situations since the word tijara really refers to the sum of all actions that are conducted in the life of human societies. Thus, one person works in his field of expertise, so as to benefit himself and also to benefit others, while another person works in another field thereby benefiting himself as well as others.

Thus, a human being comes to benefit from his own work and the work of others. In fact, a person benefits from the combined work of other people more than he benefits from his own work. Furthermore, it is in the interest of every human being to perfect the work which he performs. This way he does not have to worry because the work of other people—which he will also end up benefiting from—will be perfected in its turn. Trade (tijara) is also the link that unites producer with consumer. This is why, when Allah Glorified is He wanted us to respond to the call of the Friday Prayer, He said; 'O, you who have attained to faith! When the call to prayer is sounded on the day of congregation, hasten to the remembrance of Allah and leave all worldly commerce. This is for your own good, if you but knew it.' (al-Jumu'a: 9) Note that Allah Glorified is He does not say to desist from both agricultural and industrial activities, nor does He say desist from teaching. Rather, of all the activities of life, He chose to cite that of buying and selling since it involves trade, and trade sums up all of the other activities of life. The merchant is the middleman between the producer and the consumer, and every commercial transaction requires buying and selling. When buying, the merchant pays a certain price, and when selling, the merchant receives a certain price. Therefore, the goal of all work is to make a profit. This is why a merchant prefers to sell rather than to buy. When you buy something, you feel a sense of reluctance to do so, but you know that you are in need of the purchased item. However, when you sell something, you feel highly satisfied. Thus, due to buying involving taking, and selling involving giving, the giving always has a pleasurable effect upon the soul since you reap the fruits of the transaction immediately.

If you happen to be a farmer, you know that you have to prepare the soil by ploughing it; you need to plant the seeds, water and prune them. Then you sit back and watch the plants grow and come to fruition. If you happen to be a craftsman, you know that you have to spend a lot of time perfecting your particular craft, but when you sell your wares, the reaping of profits is a much quicker affair. So, when Allah the Exalted uses the example of trade in this verse, it is as if He is emphasising the selling aspect of trade more than the buying aspect. Thus, you must consider your religious obligations as a kind of commercial transaction, where your returns ultimately exceed your investment, with you making a handsome profit. If you neglect certain aspects of your religious obligations, your 'losses' will be proportional to that which you neglected. In fact, you will end up losing more than that which you neglected. In any commercial transaction, you can always make up for the losses you might have incurred. Likewise, even if your losses persist, their effect can only last as long as your time on earth. You can still make a profit after that, and even if you did not, the only thing you will lose is the effort you put into it. Since life in this world is limited, the losses incurred on this planet are also limited. However, any losses incurred in the time that is limitless—eternity—are heavy losses indeed since the Hereafter is not marked by change and becoming such as is the case with the life of this world. In the Hereafter, you will either be in Paradise, where you will enjoy everlasting felicity—and this is the ultimate 'profit'—or in hell, which is the ultimate 'loss'. To incur an ultimate loss, such as this, happens when people deny, not just the blessings of Allah, but also deny their meeting with Him. Allah*'s Words* '… [and] lost indeed will be they who [in their lifetime] considered it a lie that they were destined to meet Allah and [thus]…' (Yunus: 45) mean that He was not on their minds; however, when the Day of Judgment comes, these people shall find themselves face to face with Him. This is why the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'But as for those who are bent on denying the truth, their [good] deeds are like a mirage in the desert, which the thirsty supposes to be water …' (an-Nur: 39).

A mirage, as we know, is that which a traveller sees in the desert. It consists of reflection of light. He thinks that he is beholding water, but if he makes his way towards it, he will find no water. It is thus that Allah the Almighty compares the work of a disbeliever to the one who walks in the vastness of the desert and sees a mirage. He thinks that it is water, but it is only a mirage. Once he starts getting closer to the mirage, the following verse of Allah the Exalted starts to apply to his situation: '…until, when he approaches it, he finds that it was nothing. Instead, he finds [that] Allah with him…' (an-Nur: 39); this means that he is startled and taken aback by the Presence of Allah Glorified is He and He thereby settles his account. This is why the one who is a disbeliever and at the same time works towards humanitarian ends shall receive his reward from those whom he helped, but his work will not amount to anything in the Hereafter. You will find that such a person is honoured by others, effigies are built in his honour, and he is granted prizes. It is this kind of person that the Messenger's Hadith refers to: 'You have done such-and-such an action so that your deeds might be circulated among people; and indeed word of your deed has spread.'(1) Furthermore, in this verse, Allah Glorified is He says of those who deny their meeting with their Lord: '… and [thus] failed to find the right way.' (Yunus: 45); what this means is that they did not actively tread on that Path which their Creator Glorified is He had put before them—that Path and that Doctrine wherein are enshrined the laws that protect Allah's Creation. Allah the Almighty has created man for a purpose, and it is through this Doctrine that Allah Glorified is He and protects human beings— as individuals and communities— in order that human beings may carry out their function successfully. The Path of Guidance is that Path which, if a human being follows faithfully, will enable him to carry out the function that has been assigned to him, for the True Lord the Most High has created man as His vicegerent on earth. The man who does not believe in Allah Glorified is He Who decreed the Doctrine and Who does not put this Doctrine into effective practice is headed towards certain ruin, or in other words, a state of ruin that is all-encompassing. Then, the True Lord the Most High says:

(1) Narrated by Muslim in his (Sahih) (1905) and by an-Nasa'i in his Sunnan (6/23); ed. Dar Al-Kutub Al-'Ilmya – Beirut

وَإِمَّا نُرِيَنَّكَ بَعْضَ ٱلَّذِى نَعِدُهُمْ أَوْ نَتَوَفَّيَنَّكَ فَإِلَيْنَا مَرْجِعُهُمْ ثُمَّ
ٱللَّهُ شَهِيدٌ عَلَىٰ مَا يَفْعَلُونَ ﴿٤٦﴾

Whether We let you [Prophet] see some of the punishment We have threatened them with, or cause you to die [first], they will return to Us: God is witness to what they do [46] (The Quran, Yunus: 46)

The word, which the True Lord the Most High uses is wa-imma (and whether), which is composed of in and ma; both are subject to linguistic elision. In this case, Allah Glorified is He is promising those who lie to His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him that He will make them suffer, will punish them and will expose and humiliate them. In other words, O, Muhammad, either you shall witness them suffer such punishment and humiliation in this life, or we shall bring your life to an end before these events come to pass. However, you shall witness all of this in the Hereafter when you will see them mired in everlasting ignominy which they shall be condemned to on the Day of Judgment. This is a consolation for the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him.

As for the Words of Allah the Almighty 'And whether We show you …' (Yunus: 46), they mean that We shall show you that which We have promised them in the way of humiliation in this life. Furthermore, if you do not see it in this life on earth, you shall surely witness their humiliation in the Hereafter, where all is due to return unto Allah Glorified is He since He shall afflict them with things that go beyond the usual sense of humiliation which human beings sometimes feel; they will experience such emotions as deep heartbreak and angst, especially when they behold the believers emerging as victorious. As far as that which is ‘to be seen’ is concerned, it is the issue at hand. What all this is referring to is the humiliation, the defeat, the sorrow, the destruction, the loss of wealth, the capture of women and children and a number of other catastrophes which will befall them while you look on; when your soul returns to Allah, then shall you see them suffer through that which He had promised them. Furthermore, you will not need anyone to testify against them since Allah Glorified is He says: '… is witness to all that they do.' (Yunus: 46) Furthermore, He is the Supreme Witness such that no other witness is shall be needed: '… and none can bear witness [thereto] as Allah does.' (an-Nisa’: 79)

Allah Glorified is He continues and says:

Every community is sent a messenger, and when their messenger comes, they will be judged justly; they will not be wronged [47] (The Quran, Yunus: 47)

Now, the True Lord the Most High does not act unjustly towards anyone; He does not punish a people until they deny the Messenger whom He has sent to them. Indeed, Allah Glorified is He says: '… for there never was any community but a warner has [lived and] passed away in its midst.' (Fatir: 24). Allah the Almighty has also says: 'And so it is that your Lord would never destroy a community for its wrongdoing so long as its people are still unaware [of the meaning of right and wrong]' (al-An‘am: 131). There is thus no inculpation nor the passing of any punishment unless there is a clear mandate which identifies such-and-such an action as a crime, and heaven carries this out by sending forth Messengers; thus, nobody can complain that he did not receive a criterion or a principle by which to judge his own actions. The True Lord the Most High is hereby making it clear that for every community there is a Messenger who is responsible for conveying to them all aspects of the Doctrine. Now, Allah Glorified is He has created the entire cosmos, and all of the created beings therein were united since the time of Adam peace be upon him but then circumstances caused human beings to become more and more dispersed throughout the earth. Encounters between different communities became rare, as the means of transportation were primitive, and there grew to be as many spiritual diseases within human collectives as there were environments. However, with the coming of improved means of transportation, contact between various human communities became more frequent such that today, any event that takes place in the East can be seen live on the television in the West. However, this also spells the coming together of all the various spiritual diseases; thus, there is a need for a Final Messenger peace and blessings be upon him. During earlier times, the spiritual diseases were isolated cases, each community suffering from its own form of spiritual decay far away from other communities. During those times, the need was for one Messenger for every human collective so that the Messenger could address the specific malady of his community. However, in this age when physical distances between peoples have been abolished, the Messenger that is to be sent forth must be capable of curing all of spiritual maladies.

This is why the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'Now every community has had a prophet; and only after their prophet has appeared [and delivered his message] is judgment passed on them, in all equity; never are they wronged.' (Yunus: 47). History has confirmed this recurring pattern. For every Messenger that is sent forth, some believe in him and others reject him. Those who believed in him were ultimately victorious, and those who rejected him were ultimately defeated. The Words of this verse: 'Now every community has had a prophet …' (Yunus: 47) could also be taken in the general sense, that is, that every community shall be referred to on the Day of Judgment by the name of its particular Messenger: O, community of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him; O, community of Musa (Moses); O, community of 'Isa (Jesus)… etc. The True Lord the Most High says elsewhere: 'How, then, [will the sinners fare on Judgment Day,] when we shall bring forward witnesses from within every community, and bring you [O, Prophet] as witness against them? Those who were bent on denying the truth and paid no heed to the Prophet will on that Day wish that the earth would swallow them, but they shall not [be able to] conceal from Allah anything that has happened.' (an-Nisa': 41-42)(2) Thus, Allah the Exalted is hereby explaining that for every community there is a Messenger who brought a message on Allah's behalf. Some believed, while others refused to do so. Furthermore, since such positions as 'belief' and 'disbelief' were taken up by people, there must therefore be a process of judging believers and disbelievers. This is why Allah the Almighty says: '... and only after their prophet has appeared [and delivered his message] is judgment passed on them, in all equity; never are they wronged.' (Yunus: 47)

Therefore, so long as it is a question of 'judgment', a believer cannot help but look upon a disbeliever as a rival; similarly, a disbeliever cannot help but see a believer as a rival. Thus, the matter becomes one where judgment needs to be passed; this is why the True Lord the Most High says: '… is judgment passed on them, in all equity; never are they wronged.' (Yunus: 47) which means that a fair judgment shall be pronounced in their case, for believers, Allah the Exalted has to take into account their good deeds. As for the disbelievers, they have no good deeds in their name because they had disbelieved in the True Lord Glorified is He so he throws them in hellfire. Moreover, they had been warned by the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him that the day would come when they would be questioned about their actions. They deemed this prospect to be improbable and said: 'Why after we have died and become mere dust and bones, shall we then be raised from the dead? And perhaps also our forebears of old?' (as-Saffat: 16-17) They were incredulous at the idea of resurrection; they rejected it. However, they shall most certainly experience the resurrection and realise that it was true. Allah the Almighty wishes to explain this issue in terms of faith, and so He says: 'Were We then weary with the first Creation?...' (Qaf: 15). So, when you die and your bodies disintegrate into the earth, would Allah Glorified is He be incapable of breathing life into you once again? No, this is not the case, for verily He the Most High says: 'Well do we know how the earth consumes their bodies, for with us is a record unfailing.' (Qaf: 4) and this means that He is capable of commanding the disparate elements of every human body to come together. Such a task is hardly difficult for Allah Who has given all of them life in the first place.

Now they had denied, ruled out, and ridiculed the coming of the Day of Judgment and the Resurrection. So derisive was their mockery that they called for the coming of this Day to be expedited. This is a mark of their ignorance. Every one of them ought to have fled from the terror of that awesome Day. This is why the True Lord the Most High continues to quote them as saying:

They ask, 'When will this promise be fulfilled, if what you say is true?' [48] (The Quran, Yunus: 48)

Such denials and disparaging comments represent the attitude of polytheists, heretics, and sceptics everywhere and throughout the ages. In recent times, this is what the communists claimed when they undertook their seditious revolution where they slaughtered the entire upper class of society under the pretext of stopping the injustices being committed towards the poor. If they had only believed in the concept of reward and punishment and who determines this, it would have been better. Should the unjust pronounce a judgment upon someone else who is unjust? The result can only be the destruction of one oppressor by another, and this is in fact what happened; so where are the communists now? Why did they not realise that there is a Creator to this universe—One Who has punished offenders in the past and Who will punish the offenders of the future. They did not pay attention to this fact because they were materialists who took base 'matter' as their god. They said that Allah (God) does not exist, and the only thing that is real in this life is 'matter'; where are they now? Furthermore, if you have gained political sovereignty over your contemporaries and if you have claimed that you have established justice among them, then what about those who had come before? And those who came later?

Thus, they did not take note of the fact that Allah Glorified is He does not allow an unjust person to die until He has taken His revenge. Nor did they take cognisance of the fact that behind this world there is another world where the virtuous are rewarded for their good works and the sinners are punished for the sins. Logic says that these people should have believed in the existence of a Just God and that there must come a Day of reckoning when every man shall be rewarded for his actions. However, they ridiculed this idea or concept just as the disbelievers before them had ridiculed it. Allah Glorified is He has quoted them as saying: 'and yet, they [who deny the truth] are wont to ask, "When is that promise [of resurrection and judgment] to be fulfilled, [Answer this, O you who believe in it,] if you are men of truth?"' (Yunus: 48) However, Allah's promise is true, and it is imminent; Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is a Messenger from Allah, who conveys the message on His behalf, for there is no part of the message which the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him has exclusive ownership over. This is why the True Lord says:

إِذَا جَآءَ أَجَلُهُمۡ فَلَا يَسۡتَـٔۡخِرُونَ سَاعَةٗ وَلَا يَسۡتَقۡدِمُونَ ﴿٤٩﴾

Say [Prophet], 'I cannot control any harm or benefit that comes to me, except as God wills. There is an appointed term for every community, and when it is reached they can neither delay nor hasten it, even for a moment' [49] (The Quran, Yunus: 49)

The Messenger peace and blessings be upon him hereby acquits himself of all forms of craftiness and luxury, along with proclaiming that which the True Lord the Most High has ordered him to proclaim, for he peace and blessings be upon him has the power to bring about neither good nor harm since good and harm lie in the hands of His Creator Glorified is He; He is your Creator, and everything depends on His Will. This verse has come as a reply to their question which Allah Glorified is He had mentioned in the previous verse: 'and yet, they [who deny the truth] are wont to ask, "When is that promise [of resurrection and judgment] to be fulfilled, [Answer this, O, you who believe in it,] if you are men of truth?"' (Yunus: 48) They ridiculed this promise and asked scornfully when this punishment was going to come; it is as if they had, in a sarcastic fashion, expressed their eagerness for the coming of the suffering, and this is indicated by the True Lord's Words: 'Now every community has had a prophet; and only after their prophet has appeared [and delivered his message] is judgment passed on them, in all equity; never are they wronged.' (Yunus: 47) This verse does not refer to the Day of Judgment; rather, its purpose was to describe the state of those who rejected the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him while those who would continue to say: '…"When is that promise [of resurrection and judgment] to be fulfilled, [Answer this, O, you who believe in it,] if you are men of truth?"' (Yunus: 48) This means that they uttered these words before the coming of the Day of Judgment, and this verse asserts that for every community a Messenger was sent to—this idea is supported by numerous other verses such as the following: '... Moreover, we would never chastise [any community for the wrong they may do] until we have sent an apostle [to them].' (al-Isra': 15) Also, the True Lord's Words the Most High: 'And so it is that your Lord would never destroy a community for its wrongdoing so long as its people are still unaware [of the meaning of right and wrong]' (al-An'am: 131). Furthermore, this is proven by Allah's Words: 'for [thus it is:] had We destroyed them by means of a chastisement before this [Book was revealed], they would indeed [be justified to] say [on Judgment Day]. "O, our Lord! If only you had sent a prophet to us…"' (Ta Ha: 134). All of this supports the principle that any messenger who was sent to the people brought Allah's commandments. Some people have believed in him, while others have rejected him. Allah's ruling was to vanquish the disbelievers while granting the victory to those who believed.

If disbelievers mockingly express their eagerness to meet their punishment, then they shall see it. This is why Allah Glorified is He ordered Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in the verse: 'Say [O, Prophet]: "It is not within my power to avert harm from, or bring benefit to, myself, ' (Yunus: 49). This verse means that if disbelievers are asking Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to bring punishment or reward, he is merely the Messenger of Allah. As a human messenger, he does not possess the power to bring about harm or benefit to himself, let alone bringing harm or benefit for others. All of this is in the hands of Allah Glorified is He. For every community, there is a set term when disbelievers shall be punished and the final Divine decision shall be implemented.

The following Words of Allah Glorified is He: '… except as Allah may please. For all people a term has been set.' (Yunus: 49) indicate that Allah's Will is decisive. His decision is the final word. It also indicates that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and people do not possess the power to bring about harm or benefit for themselves because human beings have been created in a state of ‘compulsion’ in certain matters, while having the freedom of choice in other matters.

This ‘free will’ applies to all religious matters, as Allah the Almighty says: '… let, then, him who wills believe in it and let him who wills reject it,' (al-Kahf: 29). Therefore, you are free to either obey or disobey. All of this is well within your rights. When a person leads a life of obedience, he is thereby creating benefit for himself. However, if a person lives a life of sin, he is creating harm for himself. Thus, there is the possibility of either harm or benefit in matters of free will.

An example of this is a person who tries to commit suicide by hanging himself. He is bringing harm unto himself, but he might be rescued by his relatives, if Allah the Exalted wills.

Thus, when it comes to matters of free will, man has the ability, by Allah’s leave, to bring about either harm or benefit to himself. Allah Glorified is He told us that there is a term limit for every community. Thus, you do not determine these term limits by yourselves. The term limits of extermination or punishment are determined by Allah the Exalted. Human beings are always in a hurry, but Allah Glorified is He does not operate according to the hasty tendencies of His servants. Matters only pass according to the timeline willed by Allah. He does not act according to the will of His own creation, for He is the Creator the Most High. It is Allah Glorified is He Who says: 'I shall make clear to you (the truth of) my messages. Do not, then, ask Me to hasten (them)!' (al-Anbiya’: 37) He also says: 'As it is man who (often) prays for things that are bad as if he were praying for things that are good, for man is prone to be hasty (in his judgments),' (al-Isra’: 11). Therefore, Allah the Most High postpones His Will as a Mercy for His creation, but when the term limit arrives, there is no possibility of postponing or expediting its date. That is why Allah Glorified is He said: When the end of their term approaches, they can neither delay it by a single moment, nor hasten it.' (Yunus: 49) When the end of their term approaches, they cannot delay it by a single moment.

They will also not be able to hasten their term as they please, Allah says:

قُلْ أَرَءَيْتُمْ إِنْ أَتَىٰكُمْ عَذَابُهُۥ بَيَٰتًا أَوْ نَهَارًا مَّاذَا يَسْتَعْجِلُ مِنْهُ ٱلْمُجْرِمُونَ ﴿٥٠﴾

Say, ‘Think: if His punishment were to come to you, during the night or day, what part of it would the guilty wish to hasten? [50] (The Quran, Yunus: 50)

This is an adequate answer to their demand that the day of suffering be hastened. 'When this day arrives, we shall see what your reaction will be.' By calling for the suffering to be expedited, they are thereby demonstrating their own idiocy when they questioned the suffering in the first place. When Allah says: 'Say [O, Prophet to them], "Have you ever considered (how you would feel),"' (Yunus: 50), the meaning is, 'Ask them, if they know, what will happen to them.'

It is the Will of Allah Glorified is He that the time of suffering be obscured, for He says: '… if His chastisement were to befall you by night or by day? ‘(Yunus: 50) The word al-bayt (home) refers to night since night is the time when people rest in their homes. On the other hand, the word nahar (day) is the time wherein things are exposed and human activity is heightened.

Allah the Almighty wished to make the day of punishment and its time vague. If punishment comes by night, human beings are usually unconscious and sleeping. If it comes by day, human beings will be busy and engaged in the rhythms of life. Allah Glorified is He says in another verse: 'Can, then, the people of any community ever feel secure that Our punishment will not come upon them by night, while they are asleep?' (al-A’raf: 97). Allah Glorified is He also says: 'Or do the people of the villages feel secure that Our punishment will not come upon them in broad daylight, while they are engaged in (worldly) play?' (al-A’raf: 98) Furthermore, if you were to look at the reality of this world, you would find that when an event occurs on earth, it happens during the night of one hemisphere and the day of the other hemisphere.

If the suffering comes suddenly and disbelievers tried to quickly proclaim their faith, this sudden ‘faith’ will bring them no benefit. Allah Glorified is He says regarding those who adopt this hastened position when the torment arrives: '[But Allah said:] "Now (you believe)? You had been rebelling (against us) before this (time) and were amongst those who spread corruption.' (Yunus: 91) If the suffering were to befall disbelievers at any moment, they would not be able to dismiss the punishment by uttering their belief in the last second. It would not benefit them to proclaim their faith later than the designated term. Allah the Almighty would not accept such a declaration, and they will experience the suffering of this world, in addition to the suffering of the Hereafter. Furthermore, this mocking call they requested, that the punishment be hastened for them, will only increase their final suffering twofold. There will be a punishment in this world in addition to the extended suffering they were promised in the Hereafter, Then Allah says:

أَثُمَّ إِذَا مَا وَقَعَ ءَامَنتُم بِهِۦٓۚ ءَآلۡـَٔـٰنَ وَقَدۡ كُنتُم بِهِۦ تَسۡتَعۡجِلُونَ (٥١)

Will you believe in it, when it actually happens?' It will be said, 'Now [you believe], when [before] you sought to hasten it?' [51] (The Quran, Yunus: 51)

This statement conveys the following, 'Will you only believe when the suffering befalls you?' Your declaration of faith at that moment will not benefit you. In addition, you shall not earn any credit by undergoing the suffering for which you are destined. Thus, your call for the punishment to be hastened will not benefit you in any way since the proclamation of faith (after seeing the punishment) is of no avail.

We can see an example of this in the story of Pharaoh, who only exclaimed while drowning: 'I have come to believe that there is no deity except Him Whom the Children of Israel believe in,' (Yunus: 90). Allah Glorified is He then says:

ثُمَّ قِيلَ لِلَّذِينَ ظَلَمُواْ ذُوقُواْ عَذَابَ ٱلۡخُلۡدِ هَلۡ
تُجۡزَوۡنَ إِلَّا بِمَا كُنتُمۡ تَكۡسِبُونَ (٥٢)

It will be said to the evildoers, 'Taste lasting punishment. Why should you be rewarded for anything but what you did?' [52] (The Quran, Yunus: 52)

In this verse, we are informed of the suffering that shall befall those who disbelieved on the Day of Judgment. Through their disbelief, they have wronged themselves in this world, and they shall be made to suffer in the Hereafter. Moreover, their suffering is described as '…eternal suffering!' (Yunus: 52) Their punishment will never end.

Allah Glorified is He concluded the verse by saying: '…Are you being (appropriately) rewarded for what you were earning (in falsehood)?' (Yunus: 52) This verse means that Allah the Almighty has not wronged them, for He had revealed the message of faith to them through a human messenger who was armed with a miracle. The messenger brought to them a clear set of guided commandments. Allah Glorified is He offered them the possibility of salvation over a long period of time, but they did not benefit from the Divine offer by believing in the message.

Therefore, eternal suffering awaits them. Allah the Exalted specifically mentioned this eternal suffering because the suffering on the earth is limited. Even if it is filled with disgrace and ignominy, earthly suffering is finite and relatively trivial when compared to the perpetuity of suffering in the Hereafter. Allah Glorified is He referred to this eternal suffering as the sole result of their earning. Usually, a person’s earning is that profit that he makes over and above his original investment. For instance, an investor who starts out with a capital worth of ten dollars might ‘earn’ an additional five dollars. Does a sinner actually ‘earn’ any profit above and beyond the original investment? Indeed, a sinner earns more than he invested since he declares lawful the activities which Allah Glorified is He had forbidden. Thus, he broadens the sphere of legality for himself while reducing the sphere of things that are illegal. He is under the false illusion that he ’earns’ profit since he allows his ego to dictate the terms of legality. This means that he considers only the immediate satisfaction that can be derived from pleasures, while failing to consider the consequences of surrendering to such pleasures.

Thereafter, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَيَسْتَنۢبِـُٔونَكَ أَحَقٌّ هُوَ ۖ قُلْ إِى وَرَبِّىٓ إِنَّهُۥ لَحَقٌّ ۖ وَمَآ أَنتُم بِمُعْجِزِينَ ﴿٥٣﴾

They ask you [Prophet], ‘Is it true?’ Say, ‘Yes, by my Lord, it is true, and you cannot escape it’ [53] (The Quran, Yunus: 53)

These are the same people who had previously said: 'When will that promise (of resurrection and judgment) be fulfilled?' (Yunus: 48) They have started once again with their endless questioning. The Arabic word yastanbi'unaka means, 'They are asking you for news.' However, An-naba' is an article of news about a great and momentous event. Thus, they wondered about the Day of Judgement, asking Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him if it is, indeed, true.

There are multiple elements in this particular verse that could have an influence on the meaning of the word al-haqq (the truth). The word huwa (this) could refer to the roots of the religion, namely the Quran, the Prophetic mission and the religious law. In this sense, the verse verified that the Quran, the religious law, the Prophetic mission of Prophet Muhammad and the Resurrection are all true. This also means that the eventual suffering of disbelievers and the eventual victory of believers is also true.

Therefore, when disbelievers asked: 'Is all of this (huwa) the truth (Al-haqq)' (Yunus: 53), their question refers to more than just one concept. It is as if they had asked, 'Is this Quran which you have brought forth true? Also, is the prophetic mission which you claim true? Are the laws (which you claim) that Allah has brought down to the earth as clear directives to regulate the lives of men true? Are the Day of Judgment and the resurrection true? Is the suffering in this world true?' Thus, the word huwa in the verse is indeed an all-encompassing word that can be associated with more than one question. Then comes Allah's response: 'Say [O, Muhammad], "Indeed ('Ey), by (Allah) my Lord, it is most certainly true,"' (Yunus: 53).

Someone may ask you, 'Is a man called Zayd present?' As a response, you might say, 'Yes, he is present.' You do not generally reply to him, 'By Allah Glorified is He Zayd is present!' There is no need for you to emphasise your answer, for the questioner is not denying Zayd's presence. In the same manner, there is no reason for the verse to emphasise its answer by invoking Allah's name, except that disbelievers' question was asked in a disavowing tone. Thus, you can deduce that they asked the question in a disbelieving tone. This is why the answer that is given begins with the expression, 'Indeed, which is used in Arabic as the starting clause of an oath.

There are different Arabic expressions that can be used to answer a question. Each expression corresponds to a particular context. For instance, the expression bala (surely or indeed) appears in the response to a question that is posed in the negative mode, such as in the following verse: 'He (Allah) said, "Am I not your Lord" to which they answered, "Surely, indeed,"' (al-A'raf: 172). Thus, the expression 'Indeed ('Ey)' means, 'Yes, I swear by my Lord that it is indeed true.' As we mentioned, you would never resort to an oath (of this kind) unless your questioner exhibits a sense of disbelief.

In Arabic, there are other expressions generally used for additional emphasis, like the expression, inna, which can be translated as, 'most certainly'. We find an example of this in the following Words of Allah Glorified is He: 'And set forth unto them a parable – (the story of how) the people of the township (behaved) when (Our) message-bearers came to them. Lo! We sent to them two (prophets), and they disbelieved in both. So, we strengthened (the two messengers) with a third messenger, and thereupon, they (the messengers) said, "Behold, we have been sent to you (by Allah)!"' (Ya Sin: 13-14)

What was the response of the people to whom the three messengers were sent? '(The others) answered, 'You are nothing but mortal men like ourselves. Moreover, the Most Gracious has never bestowed anything (of revelation). You are only lying!'' (Ya Sin: 15) When the disbelievers' denial of the three messengers was obstinate, the messengers told them: 'Our Lord knows that we have 'most certainly' (inna) been sent to you,' (Ya Sin: 16). The expression, 'most certainly' (inna) was duly appropriate to the adamant denial of disbelievers in this Quranic story.

Therefore, the level of emphasis in the response to a question should be proportionate to the level of denial in the questioner's words. If there are no disavowing tones in the question, there is no need for any emphasis in the response. If a question is charged with slight disavowing undertones, then its response will contain a single point of emphasis. If a question is charged with moderate disavowing undertones, then its response should contain two points of emphasis. However, if a question is charged with heavily disavowing undertones, then its response should have three points of emphasis.

In the verse we are examining now, Allah the Almighty instructed Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to respond to their query by saying: 'Indeed ('Ey), by my Lord, it is most certainly true, and you cannot elude (the final reckoning)!' (Yunus: 53) The Messenger swore by his Lord’s name, for it is Allah Glorified is He Who has charged him with his mission, then he insists the following: '… is most certainly true,' (Yunus: 53) since their question was charged with incredulous and derisive undertones. If they still do not believe in his message, then they shall be made to suffer because there is no means for them to elude Allah Glorified is He and He is capable of bringing them to justice if they tried to escape. They will not elude Him by seeking the intercession of a third party, nor will they elude reckoning by working out a deal with Him the Most High.

Then, at the end of the verse, Allah Glorified is He says: '… and you cannot elude (the final reckoning)!' (Yunus: 53) In this verse, Allah the Exalted wants to shed some light on this issue since some disbelievers assume that they can elude His judgment. It is indeed possible that Allah Glorified is He accept the intercession of those who are worthy, and He can also accept ransom, but this will not be accepted from disbelievers. This is why an explanation follows in the next verse.

Allah Glorified is He says in the next verse:

وَلَوۡ أَنَّ لِكُلِّ نَفۡسٖ ظَلَمَتۡ مَا فِى ٱلۡأَرۡضِ لَٱفۡتَدَتۡ بِهِۦۗ وَأَسَرُّواْ ٱلنَّدَامَةَ لَمَّا
رَأَوُاْ ٱلۡعَذَابَۖ وَقُضِىَ بَيۡنَهُم بِٱلۡقِسۡطِۚ وَهُمۡ لَا يُظۡلَمُونَ ﴿٥٤﴾

Every soul that has done evil, if it possessed all that is on the earth, would gladly offer it as ransom. When they see the punishment, they will repent in secret, but they will be judged with justice and will not be wronged [54] (The Quran, Yunus: 54)

When the prospect of suffering is imminent, man wishes to escape from it, even if he has to pay a ransom that guards him from the torment. Look at how a sinner will be willing to put up everything which he owns to guard himself, even if he owns the heavens and the earth.

However, no one will have the ownership of the heavens and the earth besides Allah Glorified is He. Thus, there is no realistic chance that this sort of ransom could ever be possible. Even if a ransom is possible, it will not be an adequate redemption for their sins. The disbelieving and iniquitous person on earth has usurped the rights and assets that others have acquired through lawful means. Thus, this unjust person will stand guilty of seizing the fruit of other people's labour. If such behaviour were made morally acceptable, many people would seek to take the rewards of other people's efforts. This injustice would distort the movement of life. If Allah the Exalted does not forbid this injustice in this world before the Hereafter, iniquity would run rampant. This will cause unemployment to become widespread and will undermine the scales of justice. The entire economy of life breaks down. Therefore, Allah made this injustice a grave and irreparable sin on the Day of Judgement.

Suppose that an unjust person managed to seize ownership of everything in the world and sought to buy himself out of suffering on the Day of Judgment. To his surprise, he will realise that these seized possessions will not be enough to buy him salvation. This is indeed the greatest of losses.

This phenomenon exists in the world of man. A misguided person may accept bribes, commit embezzlement, or steal other people's assets. When the law seizes everything he had taken unjustly, he may wish to renounce his illegal merchandise in return for his freedom. Generally, just societies do not allow this bargain to occur. Even if this bargain is allowed in this world, it will not happen in the Hereafter.

Allah Glorified is He says in chapter al-Baqara: 'And remain conscious of (the coming of) a Day when no human being shall in the least avail another, nor shall intercession be accepted from any of them, nor ransom taken from them, and none shall be saved (except by Allah's Will),' (al-Baqara: 48). Allah Glorified is He also says in another verse: 'And remain conscious of (the coming of) a Day when no human being shall in the least avail another, nor shall ransom be accepted from any of them, nor shall intercession be of any use to them, and none shall be aided.' (al-Baqara: 123). Some sceptics have said that the two verses are similar to each other, but they did not take note of the fact that each verse has a different sequence in mentioning the ransom-giving and the intercession. These two verses exhibit a sublime level of eloquence. Anyone who reads the beginning of each verse, while recognising the true eloquence of the Arabic language, will realise that the ending of each verse appropriately corresponds to its beginning

He who reads the Words of Allah Glorified is He: 'and remain conscious of (the coming of) a Day when no human being shall in the least avail another,' (al-Baqara: 48) will realise that there are two souls we need to take into account. The first soul is the one that seeks to intercede, and the second soul is the one on whose behalf the intercession is made. The intercession is not accepted from the first soul who seeks to intercede, nor is any ransom accepted for the disbelieving and the unjust people. In the second verse, neither intercession nor ransom is accepted from the soul on whose behalf the intercession is made, for it tries, at first, to offer a ransom, then when that does not work it brings forth an intercessor. Thus, in each of the two verses, the unique wording of the verse is appropriately placed according to the particular context.

In the following verse, Allah Glorified is He says: 'and all human beings that have been doing evil would surely, if they possessed all that is on the earth, offer it as ransom (on Judgment Day),' (Yunus: 54). As we mentioned earlier, even if we rhetorically suppose that a single soul could indeed own all of that is on this earth, it would still be impossible for that soul to offer a ransom in exchange for its salvation. Allah the Almighty describes the result of this when He says: '… and when they see the suffering (that awaits them), they will be unable to express their remorse,' (Yunus: 54) and this means that they will hide the despair that befalls their souls so that there will not be any verbal or physical symptoms of distress. They will hide their worries inside their hearts because when they see the suffering that awaits them, they will be utterly astounded and stunned. It is as if their hearts will come to a standstill, while they are unable to even scream. All they can do is hold their pains within themselves, incapable of expressing their pains in a physical manner.

Nowadays we are taught that physical and verbal expressions are some of the ways in which the mind is able to vent its emotional stresses. When a person is unable to express his feelings in such a manner, he will suffer even more. Thus, disbelievers will suppress their feelings of remorse when they behold the horrid and frightening suffering. Although these words refer to the unjust people and despite their worldly blunders, Allah Glorified is He said about their judgment: 'But judgment will be passed on them in all equity, and they will not be wronged,' (Yunus: 54) so, despite their disbelief and injustice, they shall be dealt with fairly by Allah the Exalted.

Now imagine that someone who does not believe in Allah the Almighty wrongs some other disbeliever, would Allah's ruling be indifferent on this injustice? No, it would not, because the rights of one of Allah's created beings has been violated, even if the victim is a disbeliever. Allah Glorified is He will inflict a compensatory punishment on the transgressing disbeliever for committing an iniquity towards one of Allah's created beings, even though the oppressed person is also a disbeliever.

This is why Allah Glorified is He passes judgment on them in all fairness, by decreasing the amount of suffering for the one who was wronged and increasing the suffering of the wrongdoer. This is the meaning of Allah's Words: 'But judgment will be passed on them in all equity,' (Yunus: 54) since it is the matter of an unbiased judgment to be passed between all parties.

This judgment will thus render a just ruling between all of Allah's created beings when one of them wrongs the other. Allah the Almighty is the Lord and the Creator of all things. According to the principle of Lordship, whereby Allah Glorified is He has bestowed all His blessings upon believers and disbelievers, by granting sunlight, water, air and all manners of sustenance to all of them equally, He will judge them justly as well. Therefore, if a case of injustice arises, whether it is between two individuals of the same faith or between two individuals who have no faith, Allah the Most High will render an equitable judgment.

Then, Allah Glorified is He said:

أَلَآ إِنَّ لِلَّهِ مَا فِى ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضِ ۗ أَلَآ إِنَّ وَعْدَ ٱللَّهِ حَقٌّ وَلَٰكِنَّ أَكْثَرَهُمْ لَا يَعْلَمُونَ ﴿٥٥﴾

It is to God that everything in the heavens and the earth truly belongs: God's promise is true, but most people do not realize it [55] (The Quran, Yunus: 55)

The Arabic word aala (verily) is a grammatical article that serves to introduce a warning. Its function is to alert the listener that the following matter is of utmost importance. Whereas a speaker is fully aware of the gravity of the matter he is presenting, a listener is in a position of learning and revelation from ignorance. Occasionally, a speaker might express a matter verbally to a distracted listener, who may then miss some of the speaker's words. Allah the Almighty wants listeners to be attentive to the entire verse, and so the verse features the Arabic article alaa (verily) in order to bring attention to the imminent forthcoming information.

In this verse, Allah Glorified is He said: 'O, verily, to Allah belongs all that is in the heavens and on the earth,' (Yunus: 55). Thus, Allah the Exalted wanted the article of importance (alaa) to precede all the following concepts of this verse. These concepts state that He has total sovereignty over everything and that it is He Who created the universe. He also created man as a master in the universe and placed the universe in the service of mankind. In addition, Allah the Most High instituted the law of cause and effect, whereby every action produces an effect. Thus, every person who acts in the physical realm, whether they are believers or disbelievers, shall be rewarded by the fruits of their labour.

Now, a person might derive benefits from his efforts in the physical world, but he is forgetful or lacks faith in his Lord. He may think that he achieved these benefits solely due to his own ability, and thus, he becomes infatuated with a sense of power over the physical world. He may even declare what Qarun (Korah) had claimed: 'This (wealth) has been given to me only by virtue of the knowledge that I possess!' (al-Qasas: 78)

Therefore, a person who forgets that Allah Glorified is He is the Creator of all the natural laws and only puts his faith in the immediate causes will receive punishment in this world or in the hereafter. It is as though Allah the Almighty was warning them to discard their ignorance and pay attention to this important matter: 'O, verily, to Allah belongs all that is in the heavens and on the earth!' (Yunus: 55)

Therefore, human beings should beware of being conceited with a false sense of power. They should avoid misusing that power which resulted from Divine physical law of cause and effect. Certainly, they should never use this natural law to achieve ends that are not in line with what Allah has willed for them. It is Allah the Exalted Who has bestowed blessings upon them and ordained their fate. The real reason why our actions produce effects is because of the blessing and decrees of Allah the Almighty.

The constantly changing events of the universe testify to this fact. For instance, the intellectual capacity with which you make plans could be struck by a bout of madness. Your organs that include the hands, feet, tongue, eyes, or ears can become afflicted with disease. You would be paralysed and incapable without His Will. Anything that is susceptible to change is not part of your innate essence. All the abilities that you possess have been bestowed upon you by the Originator of all causes.

Thus, beware of only relying on the outward physical causes, while forgetting the Originator of all causes. Allah Glorified is He is the real possessor of everything which you own and of the faculties which you utilise. When He wills so, He can deprive you of these blessings. Therefore, take heed and beware of assuming that the physical forces are the ultimate causes. Sometimes, Allah the Exalted does not allow these causes to render their usual effects. Consider, for instance, a farmer who plants cottonseeds, ploughs the earth, and irrigates the land regularly. An infestation of insects may then ruin the entire crop. Thus, all possessions are ultimately owned by Allah the Almighty.

Know that there is a concept of ‘property’ and a concept of ‘ownership’. Ownership is to have sovereignty over the one who has property and is the ultimate form of control. Consider the verse in which Allah Glorified is He said: 'Say, "O, Allah, Lord of all dominion! You grant dominion unto whom You will, and You take away dominion from whom You will,"' (Al-‘Imran: 26). Thus, in this world, all dominion and sovereignty belongs to Allah Glorified is He.

The term alaa came in the beginning of the verse which we are currently examining, so as to alert the heedless to the Truth. A misguided person, for whom the law of cause and effect has produced results, may become conceited with a false sense of power. Thus, sometimes, Allah the Almighty suspends the natural law of cause and effect, as this helps human beings to remain conscious of the Originator of all causes.

Allah the Exalted then said in the same verse: 'Oh, verily, Allah’s promise (wa’d) always comes true,' (Yunus: 55). If the promise mentioned refers to something that is essentially good, its purpose is to give glad tidings. However, if the promise refers to something which is evil, its purpose is to warn of an impending torment. The Arabic word wa‘d (promise) can either denote a promise of good or a threat of forthcoming torment. On the other hand, the word wa'eed (threat) always denotes that which is tormenting. The word wa'd implies that an occurrence will be brought about by the one who can make such an occurrence come to pass. The execution of a promise requires multiple elements: the first is the active subject, the second is the object that is acted upon, the third is the timing, the fourth is the position in space, and the fifth is law of causality.

Power and ability are required for this promise to be brought about. If you promise someone, 'I shall come to see you tomorrow at such-and-such place in order to speak to you about a certain subject', let us see which elements of this promise you have control over. You cannot guarantee to be alive for that time period to fulfil your promise, nor does your listener have any control over the time he shall die. Similarly, the designated location might be destroyed by a catastrophe, and as far as the subject you intend to discuss is concerned, you might decide, suddenly, prior to the meeting, that you do not need to discuss the matter anymore.

If you suppose that all of these variables regarding the promise go as planned, which of the variables do you, or anyone else, really have control over? You have no control over any of the variables. This is why Allah Glorified is He instructed His creation to use proper wording when making promises over that which they do not own or control. Allah Glorified is He said: 'and never say about anything, "Behold, I shall do this tomorrow," without (adding) "Only if Allah so wills,"' (al-Kahf: 23-24).

Thus, when you mention Allah's Will, and later something comes up which prevents you from carrying out what you promised, you will not be considered a liar. Therefore, our Lord taught us how to guard our sayings from falsehood. He wanted us to speak within the limits of our power, and indeed, none of the variables of any particular event are within our control.

On the other hand, when Allah the Exalted makes a promise, there is nothing that can prevent what He had promised from being fulfilled. He is far above the possibility of breaking His promise since all of the variables of any event are subject to His Will. It is impossible for any of these variables to disobey Him, and thus, His promise is true and assured.

You are at the mercy of the changing circumstances to which Allah Glorified is He subjects you. Suppose that you wanted to construct a house, and you gave the architect the specific characteristics which you would like to see in the final render. However, the architect was unable to buy some of the materials which you had specified. In this case, your plans are not technically feasible or executable from the architect's point of view.

However, the case is different with the Almighty Creator Glorified is He. It is Allah Who owns all things. When He informs us of a promise, it will most assuredly be executed. However, disbelievers deny this. This is why Allah Glorified is He said: 'But most of them know it not!' (Yunus: 55) They do not recognise this truth, as they had previously said: 'When is that promise (of resurrection and judgment) to be fulfilled?' (Yunus: 48) The verse could also be referring to people's lack of control over any of the variables that are involved in the fulfilment of a promise. Only when the human will coincides with the Divine Will shall human plans come to pass, then Allah says:

هُوَ يُحْيِۦ وَيُمِيتُ وَإِلَيْهِ تُرْجَعُونَ ﴿٥٦﴾

It is He who gives life and takes it, and you will all be returned to Him [56] (The Quran, Yunus: 56)

Now, we know that the rhythms of life as well as its properties and ownership are elements of the science of biology. Allah the Almighty is the Living Power because He owns the original source of life. He is also capable of rendering created beings' deaths when He takes back all that comes forth from life. Allah the Exalted brings about death as He is the Owner of all things, just as He is also the Creator of the physical causes of nature. There is neither a promise that He will not keep nor a threat that He will not execute. We are born into this world by His leave, and we die by His leave. Indeed, we shall not elude Him Glorified is He. This is why Allah Glorified is He said: '… and to Him you all must return' (Yunus: 56).

Any person, who does not thankfully acknowledge Allah's order to bring him into life, must face the frightening prospect of returning to Allah the Most High.

Allah Glorified is He says in the following verse:

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلنَّاسُ قَدۡ جَآءَتۡكُم مَّوۡعِظَةٞ مِّن رَّبِّكُمۡ وَشِفَآءٞ لِّمَا
فِي ٱلصُّدُورِ وَهُدٗى وَرَحۡمَةٞ لِّلۡمُؤۡمِنِينَ ٥٧

People, a teaching from your Lord has come to you, a healing for what is in [your] hearts, and guidance and mercy for the believers [57] (The Quran, Yunus: 57)

These Words are addressed to all of mankind. When Allah the Almighty spoke to the believers who are faithful to His commandments, He used the expression: 'O, you who have believed!' (al-Baqara: 104) Sometimes, Allah the Exalted addressed all of mankind asking them to adhere to the fundamentals of faith, such as when Allah Glorified is He said: 'O, mankind! Be conscious of your Lord,' (an-Nisa': 1). However, when Allah the Most High spoke to believers, He charged them with duties. For example, Allah Glorified is He said: 'O, you who have believed, fasting is ordained for you,' (al-Baqara: 183). We find another example in the Words of Allah Glorified is He: 'O, you who have believed, just retribution is ordained for you in the (capital) punishment for murder,' (al-Baqara: 178). Therefore, the Words which Allah Glorified is He addresses believers always concern the religious law which believers are required to follow. On the other hand, when it comes to basic creed and the fundamental belief in Allah the Most High His speech is addressed to humanity as a whole.

Allah Glorified is He says in this verse: 'O, mankind! There has now come unto you an admonition,' (Yunus: 57). In this verse the ‘admonition’ is materialised, as if it were possible for the admonition to ‘arrive’ from a particular place. In reality, an admonition consists of words only, but Allah the Almighty employed this literary device to characterise the ‘admonition’ with the power of movement and the capacity to exhort men to faith, along with strengthening their convictions. Admonition and advice are the acts of exhorting a person, by means of poignant rhetoric, to do the good and to stay away from what is evil. When a person is an outstanding preacher and advisor, this means that his words are persuasive and his style is moving and eloquent. A recipient of advice will usually be weaker than the one who is giving it. The recipient’s soul is usually heavy and resistant to such advice, unless the preacher is a skilled orator who can stir his audience by the beauty of his words and the sincerity of his style. In such a situation, the recipient of advice might convince himself, 'The advisor has seen me in a lowly state and wishes to raise me up to his level.' He may then allow himself to be persuaded.

Let us remember the wise saying: 'Words of guidance and advice weigh heavily upon a listener. Therefore, when giving advice, do not adopt an argumentative tone, nor set the bar too high, instead make your point in a subtle and refined manner.' Only when this is implemented will a listener lend you his ear, when you employ eloquent, persuasive and non-abrasive statements which he finds convincing. At this point, you will succeed in conveying your message to the very core of his consciousness.

In Arabic, 'words of advice' (maw'idha) are different from 'words of wisdom' (wasiya). The Arabic word wasiya is used to define several meanings. It could mean the phrases of wisdom that are usually given as summarised recapitulations of fundamental truths. It is also used to mean the will that is written by a person falling sick, with his children gathering around him at his deathbed. This is due to that when a person proceeds to write his will, he entreats his successors to remember the matters which are more important in life.

Allah Glorified is He said in this verse we are examining: 'There has now come unto you an admonition from your Lord,' (Yunus: 57). Now, one can either accept an admonition or reject it, and since this admonition is coming '… from your Lord,' (Yunus: 57), one must be attentive and exhibit presence of mind. It is worth noting that Allah the Almighty said that the admonition is coming from our Lord, and not from our God. This is because the word 'God' (Ilah) indicates that His obligatory orders are to His servants, whereas the word 'Lord' (Rab) speaks of Allah Glorified is He as the caretaker and the educator of mankind Who guarantees their sustenance even if they disbelieve in Him. Thus, this admonition comes from our Lord, Allah. It is part of His Divine education to His creation. We know that the various aspects of Lordship fall into one of two categories. The first category consists of the sustenance of life which Allah the Exalted bestows upon us in terms of nourishment and material bounty. This sustenance is destined for both believers and disbelievers. The other category consists of the values which uphold the healthy functioning of human activity, and these are primarily directed to believers. Thus, this admonition is Divine education which comes from our Lord since He is our Caretaker. It is He Who has created us from nothing, and it is He Who has extended sustenance to us when our creation was in a state of need. He also benevolently directed these blessings to all of His creation.

Appropriate advice and admonition should come from one who expects nothing from you in return. Allah Glorified is He is sublime above any needs from His creation. He shall not gain anything from our servitude as our powers are pale in comparison to His Power.

This admonition concerns conscientious, rightly guided people, whose actions are only performed after they are processed in their minds. These righteous people then choose between various alternatives, whereas the actions performed by insane people have neither rhyme nor reason. They do not think their actions through since their consciousness is disturbed and lacks the capacity for choosing between alternatives.

However, why does a conscientious person sometimes make wrong choices? It is a man’s whims and desires which can compromise the ability of a conscientious person to make the right choice. The root of whims and desires lies in the ego and the proud heart. This is why Allah Glorified is He says in the verse which we are currently examining: 'O, mankind! There has now come unto you an admonition from your Lord, a cure for all (the ill) that may be in men’s hearts' (Yunus: 57). This means that Allah Glorified is He has sent down a cure that will free your hearts from the shackles which affect your judgment, and that which heals your hearts from spitefulness, jealousy and deceit. It cleanses your inner minds. This mind must be healed and restored to good health because the righteous actions of the physical body can only emanate from an inner core that is pure, cleansed, and sound. In that way, every action undertaken by man shall be sound. This is why Allah Glorified is He says: '… a cure for all (the ill) that may be in men’s hearts and a means of guidance and grace unto all who believe (in Him),' (Yunus: 57).

The Arabic word Ash-shifa’ (cure) is mentioned first to illustrate that true guidance on the straight path requires a heart to be cleaned from whims and desires as a preliminary condition. Truly, it is only then does guidance become effective in directing man towards the straight path. What is the difference between ‘cure’ and ‘mercy’ of the hearts? ‘Cure’ refers to cleaning that ails a heart. As for ‘mercy’, it refers to following Divine guidance so that a heart does not fall ill once again. Look at the Words that Allah Glorified is He says in this verse; 'We reveal through this Quran all that gives cure (to the spirit) and is a mercy unto those who believe (in Us),' (al-Isra’: 82). Thus, we can see that the effects of advice include healing, guidance and mercy. Not only does advice cure the outward symptoms of illness, but it also targets its very roots. Thus, we should start by purifying our hearts. This is why a skilled doctor does not merely cure external symptoms of an illness; rather, he investigates the underlying causes of these symptoms. His inexperienced, hasty colleague will treat the external symptoms without treating the underlying causes.

In the Noble Quran, we come across the story of Prophet Ayyub (Job) peace be upon him being subjected to trials in his health. Allah Glorified is He told Prophet Ayyub*:* 'Strike (the ground) with your foot. Here is cool water to wash with and to drink!' (Sad: 42) When he struck with his foot a particular place on the ground, cold water ran forth. Prophet Ayyub was instructed to wash his body with it, so that the external diseases of his body would be removed. He was also instructed to drink from it so that it would heal the roots of the illness.

Thus, in Allah’s Words, advice took on the characteristics of a tangible cure for it has come from our Lord to heal the hearts, wherefrom all human actions emanate. Then, a heart will be restored to sound health as well as achieving moral rectitude and freeing itself of taint. This advice will also become the light which guides men on the path that leads to the correct objective. It becomes a mercy, for if a man takes it to heart, no harm shall touch him. Finally, it leads to good deeds that are acceptable in the Eyes of Allah the Almighty.

However, even if you are granted these four blessings as a result of your acceptance of this advice (healing, guidance, mercy and virtuous words), do not be content with that alone. Above all these blessings are Allah’s Grace, and that is mentioned in the next verse.

Allah Glorified is He says:

قُلۡ بِفَضۡلِ ٱللَّهِ وَبِرَحۡمَتِهِۦ فَبِذَٰلِكَ فَلۡيَفۡرَحُواْ هُوَ خَيۡرٞ مِّمَّا يَجۡمَعُونَ ٥٨

Say [Prophet], ‘In God’s grace and mercy let them rejoice: these are better than all they accumulate’ [58] (The Quran, Yunus: 58)

There are no believers, no matter how much they strive to abide by religious laws set down by Allah, who can only hope to ever repay the blessings that Allah the Almighty granted prior to His commandments. Let us, therefore, reflect on this saying of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. He said to his companions, 'None of you shall enter Paradise by virtue of his good works.' They said, ‘Not even you, O, Messenger of Allah?’ He (Prophet Muhammad) said, ‘not even me, except if Allah Glorified is He bestows His Mercy upon me.’'(1) Thus, the obedience of a servant may benefit him in his life on earth, but he can never hope, through his obedience, to fully repay Allah Glorified is He for all the bounties and the blessings that He has bestowed upon him. For example, an average servant of Allah Glorified is He is not required to fulfil his religious duties until he has reached the age of puberty. If he were to consider the blessings bestowed upon him by Allah the Most High until the age of puberty, he would only be able to list a few of these blessings. Consider then, the innumerable blessings that we enjoy over the course of our entire lives.

When Allah the Exalted judges us in the Hereafter, the ruling is not only based on His Justice, but He treats us with His Benevolence. Therefore, avoid any feelings of contentment and pride with the alms you gave in charity or the number of prayers you performed. Your diligent execution of Allah’s directives must not be a source of conceit and self-satisfaction. Remember the words of the proverb: ‘It maybe that sins which bring about humility and modesty are better than acts of obedience that bring about pride and arrogance.’

Thereafter, Allah Glorified is He says:

(1) There is unanimous agreement regarding the soundness of this Hadith’s chain of transmission. It has been narrated by Al-Bukhari in his (Sahih) (6463) and by Muslim in his (Sahih) (2816); narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayra

قُلْ أَرَءَيْتُم مَّآ أَنزَلَ ٱللَّهُ لَكُم مِّن رِّزْقٍ فَجَعَلْتُم مِّنْهُ حَرَامًا
وَحَلَٰلًا قُلْ ءَآللَّهُ أَذِنَ لَكُمْ أَمْ عَلَى ٱللَّهِ تَفْتَرُونَ ﴿٥٩﴾

Say, 'Think about the provision God has sent down for you, some of which you have made unlawful and some lawful.' Say, 'Has God given you permission [to do this], or are you inventing lies about God?' [59] (The Quran, Yunus: 59)

If a human being in his life on earth can enjoy property and ownership, it is all due to the sustenance which Allah Glorified is He has bestowed upon us. It is His Grace that makes our life possible in the first place, just as the conjugal life between males and females enables the continuation of the human species.

However, the sustenance which enables us to live as biological organisms must be divinely allowed. This is why Allah Glorified is He has specified all the actions that are not lawful, in order that believers take care not to partake in them. Thus, you should abide to what Allah the Almighty has specified in this matter. You must not declare as unlawful something that Allah the Exalted has declared to be lawful, as He has granted you these foods that enable you to remain alive and which provide energy for your daily life. Therefore, treat your body in the same way that you treat a machine that you build. An energy-producing fuel is required for a machine to fulfil its function. Similarly, Allah the Most High has provided you with certain foods that are beneficial to you, by providing you with the necessary energy to perform life's actions.

Allah Glorified is He has also made unlawful those things that are harmful to you. Some people ask, 'Why did Allah create these foods if they are harmful for me?' You have to realise that there is a difference between direct sustenance and indirect sustenance. Direct sustenance gives you immediate benefit, like edible, lawful food. On the other hand, an example of indirect sustenance is fire. You are not able to ingest it directly, but you use it to prepare your food. Thus, there are things that have been created to assist you in producing the items that are of use to you.

For example, Allah the Exalted has made lawful the meat you obtain from lambs, goats, camels, and cows. However, He has made it illegal for you to eat pork. Some people ask, 'Why did Allah create pigs?' He has created them for purposes other than feeding us. For instance, pigs help gather up waste and ingest it. This is a form of indirect sustenance. Therefore, let it carry out the purpose for which Allah Glorified is He created it.

Some people have made unlawful for themselves things which Allah the Almighty has made lawful. In that way, they are confining themselves in a way that Allah the Almighty has not obliged them with.

Other people seem to think that, by making lawful that which Allah has made unlawful, they are increasing their well-being. To this, Allah Glorified is He ordered Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to say: 'Say, 'Have you ever considered all the means of sustenance which Allah has bestowed upon you (from above),'' (Yunus: 59). If all the sustenance they draw benefit from, directly or indirectly, was bestowed by Allah Glorified is He how do they fabricate pronouncements as to what is lawful and what is unlawful, contrary to Divine Commandments?

The Arabic word anzala [bestowed upon you (from above)] denotes that all of the sustenance has originated from Allah the Almighty. All that you see around you is sustenance from which you draw direct and indirect benefits. The currency, for example, with which most merchandise is purchased, cannot itself be ingested, but it can be used to purchase food. The word anzala means to bring an item into being. As long as everything in this universe has been brought into being by the Will of He Who transcends all creation, then everything in existence serves your well-being either directly or through intermediaries.

Do not perceive the word anzala in the material sense that these blessings have descended from a higher ground, rather, think of it in the metaphorical sense. Rain, for example, falls from the clouds above in the material sense. The rainwater mixes with the soil so that plants can draw nourishment from it. Thus, Allah's sustenance is present in both rain descending from the sky and the nutrients rising from the earth. Both have been predestined by the Creator Who is the Most High.

Allah Glorified is He said: 'Indeed, we did send forth Our prophets with all evidence of (this) truth; through them We bestowed revelation from above, and (thus gave you) a balance (wherewith to weigh right and wrong), so that men might behave with equity. We bestowed (upon you) from above, iron, in which there is awesome power as well as (a source of) benefits for man,' (al-Hadid: 25).

Indeed, Allah the Exalted has conveyed His commandments to the messengers peace be upon them so that the lives of man might be rectified. He has also brought down iron which is a mineral that we extract from mountains and deep ores beneath the earth's surface. Thus, the word anzalna in this verse could denote the process of showering the iron into the earth, by Him Who is greater than you are, for your benefit, O, human being. Since Allah the Exalted Who has bestowed His sustenance from above, had specified what is lawful and what is unlawful to eat and use, why, then, do you seek to interfere in these matters of jurisprudence? Why is it that you declare the lawful to be unlawful, or declare illegal items to be legal? Why did you not leave these decisions to the Creator? Allah Glorified is He is surely more knowledgeable about what is best for you.

'Ask (them O, Muhammad), "has Allah given you permission (to do this)?'" (Yunus: 59) In other words, has Allah the Exalted given you permission to render illegal that which is legal and to render legal that which is illegal? Allah Glorified is He says: 'Or do you, perchance, claim your own guesswork is a ruling by Allah?' (Yunus: 59) Why do you wilfully fabricate lies about Allah's rulings? Allah the Almighty has set up these two categories to show us the hideousness of their fabrications.

In the overall message of this verse, Allah Glorified is He is referring to other verses, wherein certain items are described as lawful or unlawful. We have previously reflected on such verses, such as Allah's Words: 'It is not of Allah's ordaining that al-bahira, As-sa'iba, al-waseela and al-ham (certain kinds of camels) should be marked out by superstition and set aside from the use of man; yet those who are bent on denying the truth attribute their own lying inventions to Allah. And most of them never use their reason' (al-Ma'ida: 103).

Al-bahira, as we have noted before, is the she-camel that had given birth to five baby camels, the last of which is male. The Arabs used to cleave the ear (of this she-camel) and announce that it had performed her duty in life. Then, they would leave it to graze freely, unbound by ownership to any particular individual. No one would ride the camel, place burdens upon it, milk it, or shear its wool. Then, the idolaters would slaughter it for the idols which they used to worship. They called it al-bahira because they used to cleave its ear as a sign that it had done its duty. As-sa'iba (the freely roaming) is the camel which is left to graze freely. Tying up the camels would imply that they are owned. When one of the pagans recovered from an illness or had a desire for a particular wish, they would donate one of their camels to the servants of the idols. The camel would thus become known as As-sa'iba. This camel would, similarly, not be ridden, milked, charged to carry any loads, or obstructed from roaming freely. Al-waseela (the connected one) is the female camel calf that is born alongside a twin male calf. On this occasion, (the people of that time) would claim that it is connected to its brother. They would therefore not slaughter the male camel for the sake of its sister. Al-ham is a male camel that has earned protection for itself after having conceived ten calves. Thereafter, it was not to be ridden or loaded with any burdens and was left to an idol caretaker.

These types of camels are legal to consume by Divine religious law, but the common people of that time made them illegal for themselves, leaving them to be consumed freely by idol caretakers! It was thus a mercy for them that the Quran did not make these types of camels unlawful for feeding.

There are also the following Words of Allah Glorified is He: '(His followers would have it that, in certain cases, any of these) four kinds of cattle of either sex (is unlawful to man): either of the two sexes of sheep and of goats. Ask (them), "Is it the two males that He has forbidden, or the two females, or that which the wombs of the two females may contain? Tell me what you know in this respect, if what you say is true." And (likewise they declare as unlawful) either of the two sexes of camels and of bovine cattle. Ask (them), "Is it the two males that He has forbidden, or the two females, or that which the wombs of the two females may contain? Is it, perchance, that you (yourselves) were witnesses when Allah enjoined (all) this upon you?" And who could be wicked than he who, without any (real) knowledge, attributes his own lying inventions to Allah, and thus leads people astray? Behold, Allah does not grace (such) evildoing folk with His guidance.' (al-An'am: 143-144)

Thus, they had made illegal some of that which Allah the Exalted has made legal. The Quran said about their false rulings: 'And out of whatever He (Allah) has created of the fruits of the field and the cattle, they (the disbelievers) assign unto Allah a portion, saying, "This belongs to Allah" – or so they (falsely) claim – "and this is for those beings who, we are convinced, have a share in Allah’s Divinity." But that which is assigned to the beings associated in their minds with Allah does not bring (them) closer to Allah – whereas that which is assigned to Allah brings (them but) closer to those beings to whom they ascribe a share in His divinity. Bad, indeed, is their judgment!' (al-An‘am: 136)

Allah the Almighty has summarised all of this in His Words: 'Say, "Have you ever considered all the means of sustenance which Allah has bestowed upon you (from above), and which you, thereupon, divide into ‘forbidden’ and ‘lawful’?" Ask, "Has Allah given you permission (to do this) – or do you, perchance, claim your own guesswork is a ruling by Allah?"' (Yunus: 59) Thus, they interfered with the proscription of certain legal items, while consuming certain unlawful items as lawful. In so doing they committed an ill-advised infringement, because Allah the Most High is their Creator and the Creator of their sustenance. Their statements amount to intentional falsehoods about Allah’s rulings.

Then Allah Glorified is He says:

وَمَا ظَنُّ ٱلَّذِينَ يَفۡتَرُونَ عَلَى ٱللَّهِ ٱلۡكَذِبَ يَوۡمَ ٱلۡقِيَٰمَةِۗ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ
لَذُو فَضۡلٍ عَلَى ٱلنَّاسِ وَلَٰكِنَّ أَكۡثَرَهُمۡ لَا يَشۡكُرُونَ ٦٠

What will those people who invent lies about Him think on the Day of Resurrection? God is bountiful towards people, but most of them do not give thanks [60] (The Quran, Yunus: 60)

This verse explains that everything is reckoned. Those who calumniate and invent falsehoods about Allah shall find a terrible requital on the Day of Judgment. Allah Glorified is He is not susceptible to forgetfulness. If they thought that there was no such thing as the Hereafter or the final reckoning, then they are sorely mistaken. Were they to behold the suffering and punishment that Allah the Almighty has in store for them on the Day of Judgment, they would not have done what they had done. However, they thought that Allah the Exalted was oblivious of their actions, and that their actions shall be of no consequences as if there was no recording or overseer who takes note of them.

Then Allah Glorified is He reminds us that He is full of bounty to the people, but most of them are not grateful (Yunus: 60). This means that Allah is truly magnanimous towards His creation including us. He bestows manifold gifts. So, why do you deprive yourselves of these gifts? If you thank Allah for His Generosity, He will increase His bounty. However, you neglect to exhibit gratitude. Then Allah Glorified is He says:

وَمَا تَكُونُ فِي شَأۡنٖ وَمَا تَتۡلُواْ مِنۡهُ مِن قُرۡءَانٖ وَلَا تَعۡمَلُونَ مِنۡ عَمَلٍ إِلَّا كُنَّا
عَلَيۡكُمۡ شُهُودًا إِذۡ تُفِيضُونَ فِيهِۚ وَمَا يَعۡزُبُ عَن رَّبِّكَ مِن مِّثۡقَالِ ذَرَّةٖ فِي ٱلۡأَرۡضِ
وَلَا فِي ٱلسَّمَآءِ وَلَآ أَصۡغَرَ مِن ذَٰلِكَ وَلَآ أَكۡبَرَ إِلَّا فِي كِتَٰبٖ مُّبِينٍ ٦١

In whatever matter you [Prophet] may be engaged and whatever part of the Quran you are reciting, whatever work you [people] are doing, We witness you when you are engaged in it. Not even the weight of a speck of dust in the earth or sky escapes your Lord, nor anything lesser or greater: it is all written in a clear record [61] (The Quran, Yunus: 61)

The speech in this verse is directed to Prophet Muhammad, peace and blessings be upon Him. It means 'whatever affair you might be engaged in O, Muhammad'. The word Ash-sha'n refers to a great, eminent state that occurs to a matter. In our daily lives, we ask one another about our affairs and current state. At this point the addressed person states that important matter that has occurred or what he has done, while overlooking the more trivial matters of the day. This is why Allah Glorified is He describes Himself saying that 'every moment He is in a state [of glory].' (ar-Rahman: 29) This requires us not to think that Allah the Almighty has created the perennial laws and rules of creation and ordered it to function on its own. On the contrary, He brings about a matter every day. Thus, when one of the scholars was asked what was the state of Allah the Exalted at a given moment since it was true that the pen has dried up, he answered, 'They are tasks which He lets continue and not tasks which He begins every day anew.' This means that He has drawn out plans for everything and has set a particular time at which it will manifest. He is All Sustaining; in other words, this means that He is eminently capable of looking after your affairs. This is why Allah the Exalted reassures us that since He has created the night for us to sleep and rest, He is the One Who is All Sustaining, Whom no slumber nor any sleep ever overtakes Him and Who is the guard over us.

Thus, the discourse in the verse which we are currently examining is addressed to the Prophet peace and blessings be upon Him. However, the affairs of the Prophet of Allah that had him preoccupied were not food and drinks; rather, it was conveying the message that contains the doctrine of 'dos' and 'don'ts' that were important to him. Allah uses the Arabic word min (of this) to indicate the reason of the recitation, which is meant to immortalise a particular affair.

Similarly, on another occasion Allah Glorified is He uses the word min referring to a reason. Allah the Exalted says: 'Because of their wrongs they were drowned.' (Nuh: 25) This means they were drowned because of their sins.

In the verse which we are examining, we understand that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was preoccupied with given matters and the verses of the Quran were recited for the sake of these matters. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was in the midst of a momentous affair, which was the delivering of the message. He, thereby, recited the Quran as a way to sublimate this affair.

One thing that is involved in this duty of the Prophet concerns the authority with which he has been delegated. Allah Glorified is He says: 'whatever the Prophet gives you, accept it, and from whatever he forbids you, keep back.' (al-Hashr: 7) An example of this is the specification of the proper way of praying and the number of units of prayer that to be performed for every prayer in addition to allocating the amount of alms-giving. These are matters which the Quran has not specified in detail; instead they are laid out in the Prophet’s sayings. Therefore, there is a delegation of power from Allah the Almighty to the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him so that His doctrine be conveyed thoroughly through the Divine writ, along with His delegating the Prophet to legislate.

Thus, the affair of the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him was either conveying the message of Allah through the Divine writ or applying the Divine writ through prophetic sayings and the example that he has left us in his Sunnah. The textual evidence regarding any religious ruling is contained in the Quran, and if these rulings are not provided from Allah in the Quran, it suffices that they are provided by the Messenger of Allah as per the power of legislation with which He has delegated to him. Thus, we can answer the hypocrites who say when they hear the traditions of the Prophet that the Divine writ of Allah shall be the judge. Their goal is to invalidate oral, observed and approved traditions of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him.

Then Allah the Almighty switches the discourse from singular to plural mode. He the Most High says: ‘nor do you do any work but We are witnesses over you.' (Yunus: 61). At this juncture, the verse shifts to address the audience who listens to the Quran and to whom the doctrine is addressed. Every action is witnessed by Allah the Almighty. The term 'work' includes the totality of events that emanate from human beings. Every single event that emanates from man, even if it consists of a subtle intention, is called work. The work of the heart, after all, is the intention. However, if the work emanates from the tongue it is called speech, and if it emanates from any of the other organs, it is called action. Therefore, work falls into one of two categories: speech and action. The work of the tongue has been designated as speech because the records documenting the religious directives are all oral.

Then, Allah Glorified is He speaks about undertaking these actions. He speaks about the vigour and enthusiasm with which you set about the work. It indicates a pious eagerness to respond to the directives as soon as these are communicated by the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him. Approaching work that is mandated by the religious directives with such eagerness, alacrity, and willingness, as well as performing it with such sincerity, are all connotations contained in the Words of Allah Glorified is He 'when you enter into it.' (Yunus: 61) As water eagerly pours to the ground from an overflowing vessel, you proceed to do the work mandated by the religious directives swiftly and in a surging and overflowing manner. Allah Glorified is He says 'so when you hasten on from Arafat.' (al-Baqara: 198), which means you have set about leaving in a hurry because you have performed one phase of the ritual of pilgrimage, you have drawn energy from it and are carrying over to the next phase of the ritual of pilgrimage.

Therefore, Allah witnesses the actions of every one of you, so what about intentions and secret thoughts? Allah Glorified is He informs us that everything is known by Him and will be reckoned no matter how small or imperceptible. He, the Mots High, says: 'there does not lie concealed from Allah the weight of an atom in the earth or in the heaven nor anything less than that nor greater, but it is in a clear book (Yunus: 61). This means that everything about you and everything about creation is known to Allah, along with being recorded in a clear decree. Nobody can secrete the subtlest intention of the heart, nor even the subtlest internal thoughts. The word ya'zub means to escape and disappear.

Allah Glorified is He is informing us that He will never fail to reward the slightest good work or the slightest intention, no matter how small they might be. For Arabs, there existed no object that could be used to denote extreme lightness of weight save the word Adh-dharra (an atom's weight). It refers to a very small minuscule ant. Then, the word was designated for the fine particles of dust floating in space. You can see these fine particles when you sit in a dark room, and a ray of light is allowed to penetrate into the room. You can see this light as it passes through the hole as if it were an arrow, composed of these small moving particles of dust that exist in the air. These are the particles which you would not be able to see if you were in regular light or regular darkness; however, the contrast between light and dark reveals them.

You might not perceive things due to either its infinite smallness or largeness because your intellect cannot encompass it. When applied sciences became more advanced, the microscope was invented and enabled very small objects to be magnified thousands, and even millions, of times. If you were to put your own skin under the lens of a microscope, you would see crevices as deep as wells, which you never saw or felt before because they are so fine and small that your eye cannot perceive them. In addition to crevices, you would see folds, highs, and lows, no matter how soft the same skin feels not under a microscope.

Similarly, you are unable to perceive infinitely large objects. You perceive large objects smaller than its real size due to some distance separating you from it. The farther it is, the smaller it becomes. For example, when you see a tall man from afar, he would appear to you as though he was a small child, yet, the closer you get to him the taller he would become in your eyes. Thus, great size, great distance, nor extreme minuteness can prevent the knowledge of Allah from knowing anything.

Allah Glorified is He addressed Arabs by that which was the smallest thing they knew, namely Adh-dharra, which is a very small ant. If you were to step on an ant on sandy ground, it would not die as it would be pushed into the crevices of the sand and would find its way out to the surface once again. Allah the Almighty has explained this issue when He narrated the story of Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him in the valley of the ants. Allah Glorified is He says: 'One ant said, "O, ants, enter your houses, so that Sulaiman (Solomon) and his hosts may not crush you while they do not know' (an-Naml: 18). They cannot see them because of their incredible small sizes. Thus, Allah the Exalted gives us a clear account of every living community on earth and reminds us that amongst them are soldiers who stand vigilant guard like the ant that had warned its community of the coming of Sulaiman (Solomon) and his troops since they would not be able to see the small ants.

Therefore, Adh-dharra can refer either to small ants or to small dust specks. Allah the Almighty coins a similitude regarding the all-encompassing nature of His knowledge such that not even the slightest particles elude His awareness. The word ya'zub means to disappear. One could say, for instance, that the water in this is well is 'azib, which means that it originates from deep underground and its extraction requires an extensive pulley system. A man who is far away from his family can also be called 'azab.

When Allah Glorified is He says that nothing escapes or eludes Him, not even the smallest nor the largest of things, He wants to reassure us that man’s every passing thought is beheld and known to Him, and it is He Who will judge us and reward us for them. A man might be able to get away with his actions from the law, but he will not be able to conceal his actions from the law of heaven.

Regarding the issue of an atom and all that which is generally minuscule, Allah Glorified is He says: 'so, he who has done an atom's weight of good shall see it. And he who has done an atom's weight of evil shall see it.' (az-Zalzala: 7-8)

This pertains to that which is equivalent in weight to an atom, whereas if it is smaller than an atom, Allah Glorified is He mentions in the verse which we are currently examining, that that anything less than that or greater is in a clear book. At the time of the revelation of the Holy Quran, nobody knew that there existed that which was smaller than an atom. Nobody knew that there existed that which was smaller than an atom even up until the First World War. Scientists used to believe that an atom was that which cannot be further divided because it is the smallest thing that an eye could ever perceive. However, Allah struck a simile in the Quran with that which was even smaller than the atom.

After the First World War, science made a great progress, and Germany invented a machine for smashing the atom. It was said that such a machine could pulverise a single particle, which was impossible to be physically subdivided any further. This machine was composed of two cylinders like one used to press sugar cane. The space between the two cylinders could barely be seen. When Germany smashed that which was known as a single particle, it broke into even smaller pieces.

Allah Glorified is He has defined an atom as the scale of measurement of all minuscule particles. Thus, when Germany invented that machine, religious people were afraid that others would say that Allah has not spoken of that which is smaller than an atom, However, they turned to the verse which we are now studying and read the words of Allah that anything less than an atom or greater than it is in a clear book.

The expression ma ya'zub means that there is nothing that can elude or escape. The term 'an rabbik means from His knowledge, while 'min mithqal dharra' means an atom's weight. We said before that some people say that the particle min could be superfluous. We say, for example, ma ja'ani min rajul (I have seen no man); the word min is considered a superfluous preposition, whilst rajul (man) is a nominative subject marked with an explicit damma, which not apparent due to the letter lam at the end of the word rajul that has a kasra on it due to the governing action of the preposition min. However, in the Words of Allah Glorified is He there are no superfluous letters. The word min in the verse denotes a start from the weight of an atom.

Allah Glorified is He says in another verse 'And those who disbelieve say, "The hour shall not come upon us." Say, "Yea! By my Lord, the Knower of the unseen, it shall certainly come upon you. Not the weight of an atom becomes absent from Him in the heavens or in the earth.' (Saba': 3)

The words wa rabbi (by my Lord) indicates an oath, and the letter waw is a preposition. There is no mention here of the testament. However, there is mention of the unseen. In the verse which we are currently examining, there is no mention of the unseen. The term 'alim ash-shahada means that He witnesses all that can be witnessed, even that which humans believe cannot be encompassed due its greatness or due to Allah being of the unseen, so therefore, He only sees the unseen. Allah, however, sees not only the unseen but also that which can be seen.

Allah Glorified is He has mentioned the expression weight of atom three times. One time occurs when He the Most High says: 'so, he who has done an atom's weight.' (az-Zalzala: 7) The second time is in the verse we are examining (Yunus: 61), where He mentions the word min to show that there is nothing that eludes His knowledge beginning from the weight of an atom. Allah Glorified is He says in yet another verse: 'it shall certainly come upon you. Not the weight of an atom becomes absent from Him in the heavens or in the earth.' (Saba': 3) In this verse, the heavens are mentioned first, while in the verse which we are currently examining, the earth is mentioned first. Allah speaks about His Knowledge of the unseen in both verses. In the former verse, He mentions only, without using min that indicates the beginning, the weight of an atom and cites heaven first using the plural mode. However, it is the latter verse where He mentions that which is smaller than an atom and cites the earth.

All of this is part of the miracles of the style of the Quran which some orientalists wanted to criticise. All of their criticisms were the result of their inability to grasp the eloquent locution of the Quranic style. If we were to respond to this issue, we will find that Allah the Almighty has cited the earth first in the verse which we are now examining because He is speaking about its inhabitants and the things that they do, likewise he cites the heavens. Heavens, which is the sky which is seen by the inhabitants of earth, is meant in this verse.

In this aforementioned verse, Allah the Almighty discusses the topic of the Hour whose timing is known to Him the Almighty only; in other words, He Glorified is He did not tell any creature whatsoever about this timing.

This is why, in this instance, it is the heavens that are mentioned first because the knowledge of the final hour lies with Allah and shall only occur by His Leave.

Thus, every expression conveys its message, not through the overall meaning, but through the subtlety of its parts. Allah the Exalted has spoken in the verse that we are currently examining and in a verse from the chapter of Saba' about science, atoms, the heavens and the earth with words placed either in the beginning or in the end depending on their appropriate context.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says: 'but it is in a clear book.' We must pay attention to the fact that the exceptive mode in this sentence does not cancel out that which preceded it. Everything is recorded in that clear book. In this world, we find that if a man owes a debt to another man, he safeguards the written documents wherein is recorded what others owe him and what he owes others. What about Allah? Does He keep a written record of our actions and our intentions as evidence for Him or for us? In spite of the fact that Allah knows everything pre-eternity, He also takes an explicit record of these actions and intentions in order to make us realise what we did. Thus, when he who has done wrong is punished, the evidence against him will be available. Allah Glorified is He says afterwards:

أَلَآ إِنَّ أَوۡلِيَآءَ ٱللَّهِ لَا خَوۡفٌ عَلَيۡهِمۡ وَلَا هُمۡ يَحۡزَنُونَ ﴿٦٢﴾

But for those who are on God's side there is no fear, nor shall they grieve [62] (The Quran, Yunus: 62)

This verse occurs after Allah Glorified is He describes Himself as One Who knows the unseen. He made it clear that nothing eludes His knowledge. He wants to teach us that He can bestow special graces upon some of His created beings who perform spiritual practices. When Allah the Almighty grants you a special gift, be aware not to think that it is from you, rather, it is from Allah Who knows the unseen and from Whom nothing on earth or in the heaven can elude. Accordingly, it should not be said that so-and-so has glimpsed the unseen because he is close to Allah. We have to say that he has been given knowledge of the unseen. The reason behind this is that the unseen is hidden from people, and that which is hidden from you but not from someone else is not unseen in the absolute sense. For example, a man who has been robbed of something does not know the location of the thing that was stolen from him; the robber, however, knows as does the one who offered the robber shelter and helped him hide the stolen goods, in addition to jinns who happened to be present at the crime scene. Thus, the location of the stolen goods is not unseen in the absolute sense.

The secrets of the universe which were temporarily unseen, like the gravity of the earth, the positive and negative poles of electricity and the manner which winds stimulate the clouds to produce rain were all unseen at a particular time. Allah Glorified is He specified a time when each would be discovered, and such things became widely known. Allah the Almighty has willed that so that man might work and discover the secrets of the universe. A researcher could be working on one thing and stumbles on a completely different discovery because Allah has allowed that unseen thing to be discovered, even if the inhabitants of the earth were not searching for it. The person who discovered penicillin, for instance, observed green material around organic matter, and then began researching that phenomenon, thus discovering penicillin. Archimedes who discovered the law of floatation that helped making ships and submarines travel discovered it by accident.

Thus, there are unseen elements which might become witnessed, either through the initiatives made by men or by a coincidence while doing another research. For example, the age of steam power all started when a man saw a covered pot with water boiling inside. The lid of the pot kept rising periodically to get rid of some of the steam. The man took note of the fact that the steam could be transformed into power, which could be used to pull wheel-based carriages, and thus, the age of steam power was born. Therefore, the birth date of certain secrets of the universe was due to some notes taken of a phenomenon by a servant whom Allah wanted to contemplate and discover one of the secrets of the universe. Most of the secrets of the universe have been discovered by chance so that we might come to understand that the instances when Allah has allowed something to be discovered, without any effort on the part of created beings, are more frequent than the instances when discoveries were made thanks to the efforts of created beings. This is why the manner in which the Quran speaks about the different types of unseen is a very precise so that we might come to understand that there are some unseen things which are hidden from all of creation and for which no amount of effort on our part could reveal since Allah the Exalted has not willed a date of birth for them and has kept their knowledge solely to Himself. Allah Glorified is He says: 'He knows what is before them and what is behind them, and they cannot comprehend anything out of His knowledge except what He pleases.' (al-Baqara: 255) This is the unseen which Allah reveals to them, either due to effort or by chance. He has attributed the Will to Himself, and He has attributed the act of attaining some of that knowledge to human beings, which means that some of the unseen can be unlocked through scientific innovation. In regards to the other category of the unseen that none knows but Him and that which only revealed to the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him manifests itself as Allah Glorified is He says: 'The Knower of the unseen! Thus, He does not reveal His secrets to any, except to him whom He chooses as a messenger, for surely He makes a guard march before him and after him.' (al-Jinn: 26-27)

Thus, Allah Glorified is He imparts some of His esoteric knowledge to His select few from His creation. The Holy Quran itself contains much unseen knowledge, which Allah Glorified is He imparted to His Prophet and that which came to pass exactly as it had been predicted in the Quran. So, Allah bestows special gifts upon some of His created beings like Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as the above-mentioned verse (al-Jinn: 27) indicates. This knowledge, however, is not to be enclosed to the Prophet because he was a model and an example: 'Verily, you have in the Prophet of Allah an excellent model, for him who hopes to meet Allah and the Last Day and who remembers Allah much.' (al-'Ahzab: 21) He who emulates the actions of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and takes him as a model, Allah the Almighty shall bestow him a gift that other people can see; likewise, come to know that he who takes the Prophet as a model, Allah shall bestow illuminating gifts. However, these gifts are not of a functioning nature, per se, nor are they a source of knowledge of the unseen; rather, they are amongst the graces bestowed by Allah the Almighty. The Quranic way of referring to the unseen is precise. Allah Glorified is He says, 'and with Him are the keys of the unseen treasures, none knows them but He.' (al-An'am: 59) This verse means that Allah the Most High has not given the keys of the unseen to anyone, while those who are close to Him are the only ones to receive gifts from Him. The key to the knowledge of the unseen, however, is solely with Allah.

When we contemplate the verse which we are examining, we find that Allah uses the word waliyy. To take someone as your waliyy means to be close to him so that he is the first refuge you seek when you are in need of help from another person, along with implying that this person is the one whom you seek his aid at times of need. He who gets close to a scholar will receive some knowledge. He who gets close to a strong person will receive some strength, and he who gets close to a rich person will receive money (if needed) from him, even if it is in the form of a loan. Thus, the waliyy is the intimate, the grantor of victory, the helper, the protector, and the supporter. The term has been used to describe Allah Glorified is He: 'Have they taken for themselves protectors other than Him? But it is Allah Who is the real Protector, and He gives life to the dead, and He has power over all things.' (ash-Shura: 9) This is because Allah Glorified is He is close to all of His creation, unlike the created beings who either get closer or distance themselves from one another depending on their means. He is the absolute Protector Whom nearness to some created beings does not prevent Him from being close to other created beings. His work on one thing does not preclude Him from working simultaneously on another thing. He is the Protector, the True: 'In such a case protection comes only from Allah, the True. He is best in rewarding and the best in respect of the final outcome.' (al-Kahf: 44) Thus, he who is in need of true guardianship, let him seek it from Allah for He grants protection to those who are steadfast in His Doctrine: 'Allah is the Friend of those who believe; He brings them out of all kinds of darkness into light.' (al-Baqara: 257) Allah draws near to His faithful servants just as the believers draw near to Him.

When we look at the verse being explained, we find that the absolute guardianship rests with Allah even if it is in relation to someone else. Sometimes it is attached to believers, who draw near to Allah, and at other times, it is attached to Allah Glorified is He Who draws near to believers. Allah the Exalted is not bound by laws. Thus, by virtue of His absolute Power, He perceives a virtuous attribute in a person and ennobles this person, then; as a result, this person becomes a loyal servant. You might hear people say that so-and-so has been made impervious to sin which means that this person used to be a sinner. However, Allah the Almighty came to appreciate some virtuous attribute of his and guided him from then on. To clarify this is, the man who gave water to a dog is a good example. The man, in fact, went out of his way to give water to the dog. He filled his shoe with well water to quench the dog's thirst; thereby Allah forgave this man's previous sins. This man did not give water to the dog in order to show off; rather, the man did so because he felt sympathy for the living creature. Things are not, however, always fixed to a systematic or mechanical way in terms of Allah by virtue of His absolute Power; He considers every situation independently as He considers the varieties of men. Allah Glorified is He says: 'And one of His signs is the creation of the heavens and the earth and the diversity of your tongues and colours; most surely there are signs in this for the learned.' (ar-Rum: 22)

Allah the Most High does not create the entire creation from a singular mould, instead, he creates the tall and the short, the fat and the thin, the blond and the dark, and this is corollary of His absolute Power. By His Mercy, He has brought the faithful from among His servants closer first, then, by virtue of His nearness to them: 'Allah is the Friend of those who believe; He brings them out of all kinds of darkness into light.' (al-Baqara: 257) Thus, he who follows the Path gleans the light, and when Allah learns about a servant's steadfast effort on the Path, He brings the servant even closer to Himself and bestows special graces upon him, which others around him might perceive and to which they might look up.

Allah the Almighty wants from a believer to show respect towards His creation. If one learns of a sin committed by another person, one must keep the sin secret since Allah the Exalted loves secrecy and loves those who keep certain things secrets. One could hate a person because of his indulgence in a given sin and, thereby, hates all his good deeds. Allah Glorified is He does not want to forbid you from being the recipient of the good deeds of that sinful person, thus Allah conceals a given sin from you so that you might benefit from some of this person’s good deeds. Allah the Exalted commands you not look down upon such a sinner since he might be endowed with a virtue, and He ennobles such person first and then this servant comes to obey Allah.

Allah Glorified is He says in the Qudsi Hadith: 'O, son of Adam, I love you, thus by virtue of My Right over you, love me as well.' He also says in another Divine Hadith: 'I am as My slave thinks of Me, and I am with him when he remembers Me. If he remembers Me to himself, I remember him to Myself, and if he remembers Me in a gathering, I remember him in a gathering better than that.' These words put the responsibility of drawing closer to Allah in the hands of a created being. Allah Glorified is He adds: 'If he seeks to draw nearer to Me by a hand span, I draw nearer to him by a forearm’s length, and if he comes to Me by a forearm’s length, I draw nearer to him by an arm’s length. Likewise, if he comes to Me walking, I come to him quickly.' Whosoever wishes that Allah the Almighty comes to him swiftly may travel to Him at pace. Thus, faith in Allah Glorified is He is the key to closeness to Him.

Whosoever is amongst those who exhibit steadfastness to the Doctrine, Allah will cause him to draw ever nearer. Therefore, there are those who arrive at the realm of Munificence of Allah the Almighty through obeying Him Glorified is He first and then knocking on His Door until it is opened for them.

However, there are those whose path takes them through Munificence first and obedience second. For example, and to Allah belongs the highest similitude, you as a human being might meet someone who came to your door in need of a charity, whereupon you gave to him. However, there are also people whom you may be charitable to of your own accord. When you give charity to such person, he becomes deferential towards you as a matter of gratitude. Imagine, then, how Allah, gives to His servants!

Thus, there are those who become obedient to Allah due to the Munificence virtue of Allah. Still there are some who arrive at the realm of His Munificence through their obedience towards Allah. When a person draws near unto Allah the Exalted He draws near unto that servant. The servant, then, enters into the intimate company of Allah that affects him profoundly.

Abu al-'Ala' al-Ma'rri once said to his beloved that she was his beloved, but he did not want to become a lover to someone who did not return his love.

This means that he seeks refuge in Allah from the prospect of being a lover of someone who refuses to acknowledge his affections. However, the love of Allah the Most High differs from the love of human beings. He does not treat His beloved in the same manner. When you love Allah, He draws you closer and closer to Himself, and this is what is known as the condition of being elected. Thus, if Allah bestows certain graces on some of His elected servants, the latter must exhibit deferential behaviour vis-à-vis Allah. None should therefore be boastful of the blessings which Allah the Exalted has bestowed upon him. Boasting about bestowed graces is tantamount to giving them up. Allah Glorified is He withdraws such graces from the person who boasts and brags about them. Thus, whosoever boasts of the graces bestowed upon him enjoys, in reality, no graces at all. Allah wishes for His servant to be near. It is He Who has taken the initiative, demonstrating clearly in the verse that He is the Guardian of the believers, and this is why He shall take them out of the deep darkness and into the light: 'Allah is the Friend of those who believe; He brings them out of all kinds of darkness into light.' (al-Baqara: 257) We know that Allah often mentions concrete images so as to elucidate abstract ideas. This is due to human beings being habituated with perceiving sensory reality first, and it is the most effective means of conveying a desired message. Thus, when Allah Glorified is He strikes a simile of the twin concepts of disbelief and faith, He describes disbelief using the image of darkness and describes faith using the image of light. Allah intends to render the message clearly and more easily understandable by doing so.

Does it not also make sense to avoid the perils of metaphorical darkness since we naturally try to avoid the perils of sensory darkness? Sensory darkness can obscure our vision of things so that we might stumble into a fragile object thus destroying it or else we might stumble into a sturdier object that could hurt us. Therefore, obscured vision causes accidents. However, when light dawns, it has the effect of revealing the outlines of objects, and making us go forth confidently on an illuminated path. Suppose that you were in a dark place and there was some object standing in another lit-up area. You can see that which stands in the lit-up area while you are in the dark area. The pre-Islamic scientists did not have the correct explication for such a phenomenon. They used to think that vision occurred as a result of a ray of light cast from the eye of the beholder onto the beheld object. This was until the Muslim scientist al-Hasan Ibn al-Haytham arrived at the scene and discovered the laws of light refraction. He demonstrated the error of previous scientists in the field of optics and pointed out that it was the beheld object which emits a ray of light in the direction of the beholder. If the beheld object happens to be in a dark place, it will not be seen by anyone. If there really did exist a ray of light emitted by the beholder, the latter would be able to see objects in total darkness.

Thus, the first kind of Guardianship of Allah to believers is His bringing them out of darkness and into light. Figurative darkness is a much graver matter than physical darkness, and figurative light is stronger than physical one. For on a material plane, it is possible to successfully navigate a perilous or labyrinthine landscape. However, on the immaterial plane of values, such a feat is a lot more arduous. This is why a poet has said that battle wounds would eventually scar although such is not the case of the injurious word.

Allah Glorified is He says in the verse which we are currently examining: 'Now surely the friends of Allah-- they shall have no fear nor shall they grieve.' (Yunus: 62) As we have previously explained, the word 'ala is a rhetoric used to draw the attention of the audience so as to be sure that it retains every word. Allah the Almighty says that they shall have no fear from others nor shall they grieve. This is due to fear coming as a result of the anticipation of some harm which has not occurred yet; however, it could happen in the future.

In our daily lives, we find that a father hold hands with his son in a crowded place out of fear. However, you might also find one of those who are close to Allah in a state of serene resignation when his son is in an accident or dying. This is because he understands the wisdom of the actions of Allah, and so should you. Thus, fear arises in relation to the future of some anticipated event. As for sorrow, it is a feeling that arises as a result of some event in the past. Allah Glorified is He says: 'So that you may not grieve for what has escaped you' (al-Hadid: 23).

It is futile to despair over what has happened as it is impossible to change the past. For those who are close to Allah Glorified is He; no fear shall visit them, as they are always aware of Allah's hidden wisdom. However, those who are unaware of it might feel sympathy for them because they do not know what the reality of what is happening to them. Sorrow is one of the feelings of the heart which Allah the Almighty does not want a believer to dwell upon unduly. Upon losing his son, the Prophet Peace and blessings be upon Him said, 'The eye weeps and the heart grieves, but we say only what our Lord is pleased with, and we are grieved for you, Ibrahim.'

Then, Allah Glorified is He specifies the requirements for man's closeness to Him and says:

ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ وَكَانُوا۟ يَتَّقُونَ ﴿٦٣﴾

For those who believe and are conscious of God [against evil] [63] (The Quran, Yunus: 63)

Now faith is that primary creed upon which all action is subsequently built. Faith requires obeying the Doctrine of Allah, including its commandments, its proscriptions, and its prescriptions. Fearing of Allah, as we have come to know, is the attitude of fearing the attributes of Allah's Majesty. It is also the attitude of fearing Hellfire. The Prophet of Allah peace and blessings be upon him has listed related attributes that result from attitude of fearing Allah. This is due to these attributes being considered as stages. He described the pious saying, 'They are people who love one another for the spirit of Allah (i.e. the Quran), without having any mutual kinship and giving property to one. I swear by Allah, their faces will glow and they will be (sitting) in (pulpits of) light.'

'Umar Allah be pleased with him was asked about the pious people, and he said, 'The looking at one of them causes you to draw closer to Allah.' It is as though he were commenting upon the Words of Allah: 'their marks are in their faces because of the effect of prostration.' (al-Fath: 29) When you see a pious person, you become happy and rejoice in his presence. You only become aware of the source of this happy feeling when someone tells you that particular person is pious. This happiness prompts you to emulate him because the very sight of him reminds you of the attributes of reverence, submissiveness, serenity, gentleness of appearance and gaiety of complexion.

Such a person looks at the universe and perceives in it no fault. Rather, he finds that everything is in its proper place, and he does not perceive any evil in existence. Even when he does come across evil, he would say that evil serves to make the good even clearer, and if error and all its concomitant pains were not there, man would not long for the truth. It is thus that error itself comes to fight alongside the legions of truth. The existence of evil pushes people towards good. This is why it is said, 'Be beautiful in the practice of your faith, and you will see beauty in the universe.' The reason for this is because when you contemplate the universe while acknowledging the might of Allah over it, He, thereby, bestows upon you the highest of gifts. The closer you draw to Allah, the more He draws closer to you and grants you even more wisdom and knowledge of the universal secrets.

Take the virtuous servant whom Allah taught sciences from his bounty, for example. This virtuous servant went on to teach Musa (Moses) peace be upon him. The latter considered why the virtuous servant damaged a perfectly good ship, without knowing that there was a tyrannical ruler who seized all passing ships; he was angry and spoke to the virtuous servant wondering why he damaged a perfectly good ship, whereupon the virtuous servant explained that the tyrannical ruler would not seize a ship if it were damaged and that this particular ship was owned by poor people.

Then, the virtuous servant killed a youth. This was a crime in the estimation of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him. What Musa (Moses) did not know is that this youth would have wronged his parents, and thus Allah the Almighty ordered the virtuous servant to kill the youth before he reached maturity so as not to tyrannise his parents. Thus, the youth would enter paradise like all the other children who die at a young age. It is said that those who die before reaching the age of puberty do not have a specific spot reserved for them in Paradise. However, they are allowed to roam wherever they wish like a young infant who enters a castle and is unable to stay in one spot, rather, he moves to and fro. Therefore, such children can go and see our Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him Abu Bakr or any of the blessed companions.

In addition, when Musa (Moses) peace be upon him entered the village with the virtuous servant, they both asked to be fed. The inhabitants of the village refused even though asking for food is one of the most humble forms of solicitation. Nevertheless, the inhabitants of the village refused to feed them.

This was a sign of ignobility, worthy of reproach. However, the virtuous servant redressed a particular wall in that village that was teetering on the verge of collapse.

Musa (Moses) peace be upon him was not aware of that which the virtuous servant informed him later, namely, that a righteous man had bequeathed a treasure for his sons under the wall before his death. This man had built the wall in such a way that it would crumble at the same time that his sons would reach puberty. When the wall would fall, his sons would be able to find the treasure which their father had left for them, and by that time the inhabitants of the village would not dare usurp it.

These are the blessings which Allah the Almighty bestows upon His virtuous servants. He has placed such servants as signposts erected to guide people or as lighthouses which guide ships in the darkness.

Allah Glorified is He says:

لَهُمُ ٱلۡبُشۡرَىٰ فِي ٱلۡحَيَوٰةِ ٱلدُّنۡيَا وَفِي ٱلۡأٓخِرَةِۚ لَا تَبۡدِيلَ
لِكَلِمَٰتِ ٱللَّهِۚ ذَٰلِكَ هُوَ ٱلۡفَوۡزُ ٱلۡعَظِيمُ ﴿٦٤﴾

For them there is good news in this life and in the Hereafter – there is no changing the promises of God – that is truly the supreme triumph [64] (The Quran, Yunus: 64)

The word al-bushra (good news) and other words are derived from the term al-bashra which means skin. This is because every reaction within the human psyche is reflected in the skin. If you come to a person with happy news, you will see this happiness reflected in his complexion. If you come to a person with bad news, you will see distress reflected on his skin. Thus, the skin is the first to react to events, be they happy or painful. When it is said bushra, this denotes news which if heard by a listener causes his skin to produce a happy glow because they are words of good tidings. When the Prophet of Allah peace and blessings be upon him was asked about good tidings, he said, 'It was the pure vision of a believer which he either sees or which is shown to him.' He further added, 'It represents one part from forty-six parts of prophethood.'

The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him received revelation through visions for a period of six months. He, likewise, received revelation in a state of wakefulness for a period of twenty-three years. Therefore, if you compare the period of six months to the period of twenty-three years, you will find that six months represents one of forty-six parts. A vision is not the same as a dream because a vision is not the product of your conscious mental activity during daytime. Thus, a vision is not influenced by Satan. The popular aphorism goes as follows, 'The starving person dreams of the bread market.' Therefore, if what a person sees during his sleep can be directly related to that which preoccupies him during the day, then that is considered a dream and not a vision. Furthermore, if what a person sees during his sleep involves that which runs counter to Allah's Doctrine, then that is the direct influence of Satan. Thus, there is a difference between visions, dreams, and confused dreams. Al-bushra, thereby, refers to a clear vision or it is that which is glimpsed in those who are close to Allah and which causes people to turn to them. You might find one whom Allah Glorified is He loves in heaven, whereby He tells Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him ‘Verily, I love so-and-so. You should also love him', and then Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him begins to love him. Then he (Jibril) makes an announcement in heaven saying that Allah loves so-and-so, and you should also love him. Therefore, the inhabitants of Heaven also being to love him and then affinity is conferred upon him, upon the earth.

When you see that a man has gained the approval of heaven, then all the people come to agree that the presence of such a man, who is loved by heaven, is a good omen. This is what is known as al-bushra. It can also come about at the moment when the angel of death peace be upon him visits a person and greets him. Such a person comes to understand that death is in the nature of things, as per the Words of Allah Glorified is He 'Those whom the angels cause to die in a good state by saying, "Peace be on you. Enter the garden for what you did.' (an-Nahl: 32)

It can be at the moment when the face lightens up as a person takes his book of deeds by his right hand. This is a glad tiding in this world and the next. Allah Glorified is He says: 'those who say, 'Our Lord is Allah', then continue in the right way. The angels descend upon them by saying, "Fear not, nor be grieved and receive good news of the garden which you were promised. We are your guardians in this world's life and in the Hereafter, and you shall have therein what your souls desire and you shall have therein what you ask for' (Fussilat: 30-31) Thus, those who are close to Allah the Exalted receive the gifts of Allah via the angels and are distinguished from their fellow created beings. The reason for this is that they most likely imposed upon themselves supererogatory acts of obedience that go above and beyond the basic obligation. Obligations are the bare minimum of the religious directives. Such people might feel that performing the basic religious obligations does not befit his love of Allah; thus, he increases the quantity of such mandated religious rites. Instead of praying only the five obligatory daily prayers, he prays ten other supererogatory prayers or he fasts another month or two in addition to the month of Ramadan. He might fast on Monday and Thursday of every week.

This indicates that he finds the basic religious obligations to be too little compared to his immense of Allah and that He deserves more. What this means is that this servant has entered into the station of love with Allah the Almighty whereby He bestows upon him all that he wishes. Such a person becomes so full of what he wants due to the satisfaction of Allah on his part. He becomes the beneficiary of that which is mentioned in the following Divine Hadith where Allah says, 'I will declare war against him who shows hostility to a pious worshipper of mine. Furthermore, the most beloved thing with which My slave comes nearer to Me is what I have enjoined upon him, and My slave keeps on coming closer to Me through performing Nawafil (prayer or doing extra deeds besides what is obligatory) till I love him. When I love him, I become his hearing with which he hears, his seeing with which he sees, his hand with which he strikes and his leg with which he walks. If he asks (something) from Me, I give him, and if he asks My Protection (refuge), I protect him.'

Allah concludes the verse we are examining by saying that His Words do not change, and this is what the great attainment is. As long as Allah said that, you will not find someone who is capable of altering His Words. In addition, all of creation shall be subjugated to Him on the Day of Judgment, and whomever Allah has permitted worldly ownership of something shall own nothing on that Day. All shall hear the Words of Allah, 'to whom belongs the kingdom this day? To Allah, the One, the Subduer [of all]' (Ghafir: 16).

Since Allah Glorified is He has promised glad tidings in this world and in the Hereafter, nothing can reverse the decree of Allah in the matter. There is nothing that can refuse the judgment of Allah. Promises of glad tidings in this world and the next are, most assuredly, a great victory. Then Allah Glorified is He says:

وَلَا يَحْزُنكَ قَوْلُهُمْ إِنَّ ٱلْعِزَّةَ لِلَّهِ جَمِيعًا هُوَ ٱلسَّمِيعُ ٱلْعَلِيمُ ﴿٦٥﴾

Do not let their words grieve you [Prophet]. Power belongs entirely to God; He hears all and knows all [65] (The Quran, Yunus: 65)

This verse comes after Allah had shown us what the objections of disbelievers were, their persecution to the Prophet of Allah peace and blessings be upon him along with their disavowal of his message and all that they had said in that regard. Much of what they had said had saddened the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him which is why Allah the Almighty asks him not to react dejectedly to what they had said. They had accused him of being a sorcerer, a liar, a fabricator, and a madman. However, Allah the Almighty has abrogated all that they had said. If Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was a sorcerer, why did he not put a spell over his naysayers as well? Can the hypnotised subject have a will vis-à-vis of the hypnotiser?!

Thus, what they claimed that the Prophet cast a spell on the disbelievers' slaves and children has been refuted. They also claimed that he was demented. However, the comportment of the Prophet evinced not the least sign of dementia. Allah refuted such accusations by saying: 'Noon. I swear by the pen and what the angels write, By the grace of your Lord you are not mad. And most surely you shall have a reward never to be cut off. And most surely you conform [yourself] to sublime morality.' (al-Qalam: 1-4)

Indeed, a madman could never exhibit such excellent comportment as did the Prophet. When they accused him that he had fabricated the Quran, Allah the Most High challenged them to come up with a chapter worth of text similar to it. They failed to do so even though they had a natural gift for poetry, literary arts, and eloquent speech. Allah Glorified is He orders the Prophet to 'let not their speech grieve you (him)' because their sayings do not stand a chance of interfering with the message. This is because all Might and Glory belong solely to Allah the Exalted. The word Al'izza means might and predominance. It is said, for instance, that such-and-such a thing is 'aziz, which mean that there is nothing like it. Allah Glorified is He is the Absolutely Powerful, and there is no god, but He. He cannot be vanquished or subjugated. On reading this verse from the Quran, you will notice a small letter M on top of the word qawluhum. This means that one must make a mandatory pause.

One might ask, 'How can it be mandatory to pause at this juncture when the Holy Quran is built upon the principle of wasl (connectedness). The last letter of every chapter has a tanwin (punctuation), and there is nothing in the Quran which obligates the reader to stop?' My answer to this question is that when the scholars noticed how most people do not have a deep grasp of the Arabic language, they instituted such mandatory pauses so that the reader, who has but little knowledge of the Arabic language, can understand how to read such verses. Imagine, for instance, a person who does not possess linguistic acumen; relating both phrases together, he would thus mistakenly understand that, Allah forbid, the Might of Allah is a cause for the Prophet's sadness. This is why scholars have instituted a mandatory pause at this particular juncture so that we might read carefully and understand correctly.

This is why we must read 'and let not their speech grieve you' and then pause before going on to read 'surely, Might is wholly Allah's.' Thus we come to understand the meaning of the order not to grieve, which is because their sayings shall not in the least interfere with your destined, imminent victory over them. Allah the Almighty wishes to reassure His Prophet regarding the very issue of mission and that his mission is merely to convey the message and that he is not obligated to force them to believe or agree to his doctrine.

The Lord the Most High inspires His Prophet not to be grieved by their denial of the Divine Message and their calumnies against it. Their calumnies are groundless and have no evidence to substantiate. In respect of those deniers, Allah Glorified is He says, 'In their wickedness and self-exaltation, they rejected them, although their minds were convinced of their truth' (an-Naml: 14). Their calumnies shall not hinder the way of your message; Allah sees to it that the light of the Divine Message shines to its fullest extent. No one is more powerful than Allah the Exalted. No one can overcome Allah—He the Most High is the Predominant, the Protector from Whom no one can escape or take refuge. His Might may clearly manifest in overcoming all obstacles and subduing all enemies or in the possession of wisdom. Everyone from Allah's creation may enjoy might in a certain domain or the other. However, only Allah the Almighty enjoys the Absolute Might in all domains; His Might encompasses all things entirely.

Why did the Lord the Most High not use the rhetorical restrictive style in this verse, e.g. 'Might is wholly Allah's? The restrictive style restricts a specific attribute to a specific person and precludes others from sharing it, e.g. ‘So-and-so is owned by Zayd alone.’ In Arabic, mentioning the possessed object first 'so-and-so' indicates that no one else possesses such a thing. However, when we say, ‘So-and-so has such-and-such’, it means that many others have similar possessions or qualities. Here, the Lord the Most High says, ‘surely, Might is wholly Allah's’ (Yunus: 65). It is a case of emphasis; the quality of might is restricted solely to Allah the Almighty through the affirmed predicate. Simply, no one challenges this fact; it does not need to use the restrictive verbal style 'only'. It is Allah Glorified is He—the Creator of the Creation— who says that none can gainsay this fact. If there were—Allah forbid—any challenge to it, the verse would be false. This has not happened, nor will it ever happen when it comes to the Divine verses. He is the Creator of the universe, who reveals its signs. It is impossible that there could be any dissonance between the universe and Allah's Word, as He the Most High is the Creator of the universe.

It so happened that some claimed might and glory for themselves by saying, ‘Indeed, when we return to the City, we—the ones most worthy of honour—will surely drive out from it those most contemptible ones!’ (al-Munafiqun: 8) The crux of their saying was to claim might and glory for themselves and attribute lowliness and disgrace to believers. Therefore, might and glory have been claimed, so why has the restrictive style not been used? In response, Allah Glorified is He simply says: ‘However, all Might [Honour] belongs to Allah and [thus] to His Messenger and those who believe [in Allah]’ (al-Munafiqun: 8). Thus, Glory and Might belong to Allah alone.

However, Allah the Exalted wishes His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him and believers to share that honour. In this instance, the Words of the Lord the Most High ‘surely, Might is wholly Allah's’ (Yunus: 65) declare that all forms of might and glory belong to Allah. If it is the might and glory of wisdom and control, then He is the All-Wise and the Controller. Likewise, if it is the might and glory of clemency, He is the Clement. However, when it comes to the Might of anger and retribution, He is the Almighty and All-Compelling. Eventually, all forms of might and glory belong solely to Allah the Most High ‘He is the All-Hearing, the All-Knowing’ (Yunus: 65).

Might implies dominance and ability to destroy; Allah the Most High 'hears' those who are worthy of destruction. When it comes to speech, He concludes the verse with 'All Hearing', and since He knows their actions, He concludes it with 'All Knowing'. He 'hears' everything said and 'knows' everything done. Finally, all forms of Might belong solely to Allah: ‘And let not their speech grieve you; surely, Might is wholly Allah's. He is the All Hearing’ (Yunus: 65). The Lord the Most High wills to prove this universal fact by means of the cosmic signs, for there is nothing in existence or in the universe that stands against Allah's Way. In this verse, observe that the Law of 'Might is wholly Allah's’ (Yunus: 65) firmly affirms that to Allah belongs everything in the heavens and the earth.

indeed, all who are in the heavens and on the earth belong to Him. Those who call upon others beside God are not really following partner-gods; they are only following assumptions and telling lies [66] (The Quran, Yunus: 66)

The entire creation is under His Dominion. When Allah the Exalted explains a given thing through its opposite, He will mention the principle and the overall framework: ‘Unto Allah belongs all that is in the heavens and all that is on earth’ (al-Baqara: 284). For example, when Pharaoh's legions pursued Musa (Moses) peace be upon him and his people, Musa's (Moses') people cried out: ‘Behold, we shall certainly be overtaken [and defeated]!’ (ash-Shu'ara': 61)

They said as such when they saw the sea in front of them. The Lord the Most High willed to show them that the sea will not hinder His Will, nor elude the Divine Power. Simply, unto Allah belongs all that is in the heavens and the earth, including the sea. The sea was split asunder, and each part appeared as if it were an immense mount. Nothing can escape His Dominion. Allah the Almighty then shows the opposite sense; the sea remains parted until Pharaoh's legions entered into it, then the All Powerful tells Musa (Moses) peace be upon him: 'Leave the sea becalmed [between you and Pharaoh's men]. Verily, they are a host destined to be drowned!' (ad-Dukhan: 24) Allah the Exalted orders the sea to resume its natural state, whereby He drowns Pharaoh's legions and saved Musa (Moses) peace be upon him and his followers. Thus, the thing—by Allah's Leave—may lead to salvation or to destruction; unto Him belongs all that is in the heavens and the earth, and nothing can ever stand up to His Might and Glory.

Again, when Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him told his son, 'O, my son! Embark with us' (Hud: 42), but his son replied, 'I shall betake myself to a mountain that will protect me from the waters' (Hud: 43). Now, the idea is correct—the mountain rises above the level of the waters. However, Nuh's (Noah's) son forgot that Allah had other means; namely, the waves. He was destined to be drowned. It is true that Nuh's (Noah's) son thought that the ark may come to rest on Mount al-Judey*,* and all those who boarded it would be saved as would those who sought refuge in high mountains. However, he did not think of the waves that stood between him and the mountain. Eventually, he met his doom. To sum up, every living being is subject to the Divine Orders. Since all Might and Glory belong to Allah, then unto Him belongs everything in the heavens and the earth, and no one can challenge the Lord's Power. The entire creation may be used by the Lord as a means for destruction and for salvation.

The word ala ('Oh,') is a rhetorical device that has the purpose of alerting listeners so as not to be taken by surprise. Then, they do not miss the wisdom of the forthcoming words and focus their mental powers on perceiving the content of these words. The Lord the Most High says, 'Oh, verily, unto Allah belongs whoever is in the heavens and whoever is on earth' (Yunus: 66). It may be said that many unreasonable beings do exist. When Allah the Almighty says 'whoever', does it mean the reasonable beings only? In response, is there anything in the universe that fails to perceive Allah? Of course there is not! Allah Glorified is He says, ‘On that Day will she [the earth] recount all her tidings, as Your Lord will have inspired her to do’ (az-Zalzala: 4-5). All living beings—mankind and other kingdoms in the universe—perceive and know the signs and existence of Allah. Note that He at times uses the following phrasing, ‘It is unto Him that whatever is in the heavens and on earth surrenders itself, willingly or unwillingly’ (Al-‘Imran: 83). Other times, Allah Glorified is He says, ‘Verily, unto Allah belongs whoever is in the heavens and whoever is on earth’ (Yunus: 66). Such is the case of the verse in question.

For example, the angels do exist in the heavens and in the earth as the executors of orders. The phrase ‘unto Allah belongs whoever is in the heavens and whoever is on earth’ refers to them. Allah the Most High also has other living beings in the heavens alone—the enraptured angels on high; they do not exist on earth. Similarly, Allah the Exalted has other hosts on the earth alone. Observe that the following verse, ‘Unto Allah belongs all that is in the heavens and all that is on earth’ (al-Baqara: 284) fits the angels who are the executors of orders. For the enraptured angels in the heavens and those on the earth, who are unconnected with the heavens, the following verse is most appropriate, ‘Oh, verily, unto Allah belongs whoever is in the heavens and whoever is on earth’ (Yunus: 66).

Since everything in the universe lies under the Dominion of Allah the Almighty nothing therefore can escape His Will or His Divine Plan. In caves, for example, He can lock all means to salvation and can equally create all means to salvation. He the Most High will render blind anyone who approaches the cave. Nothing takes place without the Will of Allah the Exalted. The Divine Might and Glory remains His, and none can ever defile them. The Lord the Most High says, ‘Hence, what is it that they follow–those who invoke, beside Allah, beings to whom they ascribe a share in His Divinity’ (Yunus: 66). This verse is phrased as if there are partners to Him in Divinity, even though in truth there are none who share His Divinity. They follow nothing. The evidence is found in the heart of the matter, for they worship objects other than Allah the Most High. In essence, worship is to follow the command and refrain from the proscriptions. The idols, which they worshipped, had neither commands nor proscriptions. They had no doctrine to bring forth. They do not have any deities.

In reality, there is no partner who has the least share in Divinity. If there did exist partners who share in His Divinity, they would have revealed their message and/or issued commands and proscription. He who says, 'worship me' is effectively indicating a manner of worship. Show me one of these deities, which you worship and claim they have messages! But you cannot do so. Allah Glorified is He says, 'Say: "If there were–as some people assert–[other] deities side-by-side with Him, surely [even] they would have to strive to find a way unto Him who is enthroned on His Almightiness"' (al-Isra': 42). In other words, if we suppose that other deities with a form of power do exist, e.g. the shining sun, the reflecting moon, the falling rains, the obeying angels, then they will search for the One Unique Lord to receive power which you have thought is inherently their own, from Him. Evidently, the Lord the Most High says: 'Nor has there ever been any deity side-by-side with Him. Had there been any, each deity would surely have stood apart [from the others] in whatever it had created and they would surely have [tried to] overcome one another! Limitless in His glory is Allah, [far] above anything that men may devise by way of definition' (al-Mu'minun: 91).

Had it been true, there would have been various spheres of influences controlled by each different deity. Allah Glorified is He says, 'those [saintly beings] whom they invoke are themselves striving to obtain their Lord's favour' (al-Isra': 57). They said that they worshipped the angels, but they did not know that the angels themselves worship Allah the Most High. As there are no partners, who share Divinity, to worship, so they just follow mere conjectures. Allah Glorified is He delivers the following Words: 'They follow but the conjectures [of others] and themselves do nothing but guess' (Yunus: 66). We find that those, who endeavoured to find contraries in the Quran and undermine it, said that this verse has an example of antinomy as follows:

The beginning of the verse denies any partners to Allah, 'Hence, what is it that they follow–those who invoke, beside Allah, beings to whom they ascribe a share in His Divinity' (Yunus: 66). The concluding part of the verse states that they follow conjecture and guesswork. Thus, the beginning of the verse denies that they follow anything whereas the conclusion of the verse asserts that they do.

Really, this objection reflects the ignorance of those who claimed it. For Allah the Exalted rejects the existence of these deities whom the idolaters claim to have a share in Allah's Dominion; He owns all that are in the heavens and all that are on the earth. However, He asserts that they follow mere zann (conjectures) and khars (guesswork). As previously explained, the zann designates a most likely judgment. The degree of certainty as regards to a judgment's verity is either likely or unlikely on equal footing. When a certain idea is balanced evenly between likelihood and unlikelihood, it is a case of 'doubt'. If you incline towards likelihood, it becomes a conjecture, or else, it designates, if improbability is more likely, illusion. To sum it up, zann is an opinion or judgment based on inconclusive evidence, whereas khars (guesswork) refers to a groundless statement.

In this case, the Lord the Most High says; 'They follow but the conjectures [of others] and themselves do nothing but guess' (Yunus: 66). The Quranic statements express a wide range of possibilities. In this verse, Allah the Exalted asserts that they follow nothing but their opinions and falsehoods. The disbelievers, as known, have two categories: some who have the knowledge of reality, but they alter it into a lie and falsehood, and others who do not have knowledge of reality, but they lend their ear to those who think they know. Thus, there is a follower and a leader. The latter knows that the words he speaks are mere prattle to distort and sully the truth. As for the follower, he believes that he follows the words of conscientiously trustworthy people and takes their words to heart. Thus, the follower just follows mere opinions. As for leaders, they create baseless assertions, lies, and fabrications. Allah Glorified is He hereby tells us: 'There are among them unlettered people who have no real knowledge of the Book, [following] only wishful beliefs and depending on nothing but conjecture' (al-Baqara: 78).

The unlettered, or followers, therefore, believes in that which is said to them; they are illiterate and what is said to them seems probable. However, if they had a moment of reflection, they would conclude that such words are not probable. Regarding what is said about the following, or sometimes leaders, Allah Glorified is He says, 'Woe, then, unto those who write down the Book, with their own hands, and then say, "This is from Allah", in order to acquire a trifling gain thereby' (al-Baqara: 79). The verse refers to the baselessly created statements, lies, fabrications, and falsehoods. If disbelievers are illiterate, they can be considered the folk of opinion and, then, fall under the present judgment, ‘They follow but the conjectures [of others]’ (Yunus: 66), whereas if they are of the elite class of leaders, the following Words of the Lord the Most High fit them, ‘and themselves do nothing but guess’ (Yunus: 66).

مُبۡصِرًاۚ إِنَّ فِى ذَٰلِكَ لَأٓيَٰتٖ لِّقَوۡمٖ يَسۡمَعُونَ ٦٧

It is He who made the night so that you can rest in it and the daylight so that you can see – there truly are signs in this for those who hear [67] (The Quran, Yunus: 67)

In the wake of explaining the meaning of faith and faithful believers and discussing the disbelievers' possible slanders against the Prophet and his Message, the Lord presently wishes to steer the discussion towards His signs of the universe to prove faith by reference to the facts of the cosmos. We are required to believe in the Prophet who communicates the Divine Message for our benefits. If anyone asks for evidence in support of this fact, let him contemplate the signs of the universe brought forth for man's benefits before the religious responsibilities are even imposed; do they work in human favour or not? Since the universal signs—created in order to serve mankind—benefit them throughout their life, why does man not thank the One Who bestows such blessings upon them? Indeed, Allah the Almighty graces mankind with many bounties even before the age of maturity, when man shall immediately perform the religious duties. Allah the Most High does not expect a person to pay forth the religious duties until after He has bestowed upon that person a flood of beneficial blessings, which man freely admits and to which reality undoubtedly witnesses.

When you reach the age of maturity and the religious duties become incumbent upon you, compare your duties to your blessings. If you believe that the universal signs have benefited you over your life until the moment when you are charged with the Divine Commands and proscriptions, then take it in good faith that what is now being asked of you is true and beneficial. Just as He has benefited you with that series of initial blessings, the Lord shall continue to bestow upon on you beneficial blessings. Just follow religious commands. Let all your actions in life be informed by the light of religious commands to win happiness. We know that it is in the nature of man to rest and ready himself for work, and then he tires and rests again. This is why we find that religious duties given to us in accordance with this same pattern. The Lord the Most High allows you rest until you reach the age of maturity—this was a time when you received the blessings of Allah the Almighty enjoying them until you reached the age of maturity. During this time, you had free choices and could follow your desires. Then came the Divine Commands 'you shall' and 'you shall not' by which you must abide to set your affairs right. While your religious duties are bound to exact a certain measure of effort on your part, there is nevertheless a resting period. In your daily life, there is a time for rest and a time for work. The time of rest helps you approach your work with vigour, whereas work tires you and makes you look forward to resting afterwards. Thus, work requires a time for rest, and rest requires being followed by work. The Lord the Most High mentions the time period called 'day' and shows that He has separated man's life into two periods: One preceding maturation when a person is not obligated to perform religious duties; The other follows maturation when a person has to perform the religious duties. Allah the Exalted divides the 'day' into a period of rest and a period of work. He the Most High says, 'It is He Who has made the night for you, so that you might have rest therein, and the day, to make [you] see' (Yunus: 67). Just as Allah the Almighty has created the day with two distinct periods for rest and work, He thas legislated the religious duties for the order of life to be maintained. Man, a divinely trusted steward residing on earth necessarily requires action. His action must submit to the commands and prohibitions. Any action left without a direct command and prohibition is permissible, so one may or may not do it. Acts and proscriptions require actions. Do not think that a proscription requires no action; while acting in a certain way you receive the order to desist. You may think that suspension requires no action since it strips you of the capacity to carry out an action. However, you forget that there is an internal action involved. It is related to the motives urging you to carry out your desires to that which is not in line with Allah's Law. Thus, you are forced to stifle those urges and rein them in since Allah has ordered you to do so.

Since there exists such a thing as work/action, there consequently also exists such a thing as fatigue. This is why Allah the Almighty has given us the right to rest. The same goes true for the human life. Allah does not make religious duties incumbent upon a person until they reach the age of maturity. He leaves them free of—and unaccountable for—religious duties, at the beginning of their life. However, in this early period of life Allah the Exalted does not free a person entirely from duties as man is left to the simple discipline of parents, who may tell him ‘do not lie’ and may reward/punish him properly for good and bad deeds, respectively. However, man is not accountable for the commands and proscriptions. The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him elucidates this matter for us when he says, 'Order your children to pray at the age of seven and punish them for neglecting prayers at the age of ten.'(1) Thus, a father shall command his son to pray and may punish him for neglecting prayers or rewarding if he wishes to endear prayers to his heart. When a father charges his son with the duty of prayer, his son obeys. Simply, a father takes care of his son's needs and looks after his best interests. His son knows that the father will only charge him with those obligations, which are ultimately in his best interest out of his love to his son. As such, the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him instructed those in charge of children to guide them, as children will be willing to obey them. Once a person is mature, the commands and prohibitions come from Allah, and so are the rewards and punishments. Pre-maturity commands or proscriptions only intend to rear and habituate children to become accustomed to the Divine commands and prohibitions.

If the lifestyle following the Divine example requires action as per the commands and proscriptions, human beings must also require a period of rest and pause. This is why Allah the Exalted divides the ‘day’ into 'night' and 'daytime'. Beware, therefore, of using any of these periods for wrong purposes, to maintain the natural order of life. However, circumstances may force you to do so, for there are those who stay up at night keeping watch. Others may stay up working in bakeries or preparing breakfast for others. There is a certain measure of providential allowance. The Lord the Most High says, ‘Among His wonders is your sleep, at night or in daytime, as well as your [ability to go about in] quest of some of His bounties’ (ar-Rum: 23) for He knows since pre-eternity that there are certain bounties to be sought at night and whosoever works by night certainly rests by day. If the aforementioned verse has a general application, we will say to he who sleeps by day, 'Do not do it. It is not the time for peace and rest.' However, Allah the Almighty wishes to put in place a measure of providential allowance, so that those who work by night might also rest. Presently, Allah Glorified is He says, ‘It is He Who has made the night for you, so that you might have rest therein’ (Yunus: 67). It is known that there is a difference between the acts of ‘creating’, ‘making’, and ‘owning’. For example, Allah the Most High creates time and makes it into night and daytime. Thus, ‘making’ is the act of charging a created thing with a specific task. You, for instance, find the maker of pottery taking clay so as to create a pitcher out of it. The maker of pottery first creates the clay by mixing water with soil and kneading them together into a paste. Then he takes the clay and makes a pitcher, a flowerpot, or a flower vase out of it. Therefore, he effectively transforms an existing element into something functioning. Likewise, time belongs to Allah Glorified is He; He divides it into night and daytime. In the same way, He creates man and makes his organs: eyes, ears, brains, lungs, etc. All parts are created out of that which the Lord the Most High created. In other words, He dedicates portions of the original created matter to perform various functions in the service of the creature.

(1) Ahmad, Musnad, 2:187; Abu Dawud, Sunnan, (Hadith: 490) on the authority of ‘Abdullah Ibn ‘Amr Ibn al-‘As.

In our own lives—and Allah knows best—we find a person who spins threads out of cotton, another who weaves a fabric out of the threads and a third who tailors the texture into garments, pairs of pants, shirts or quilts. Thus, the act of ‘making’ is to shape a created thing so that it performs a specific function. Consequently, the act of ‘creation’ results in ‘ownership’; he who creates a certain amount of clay owns it, while he who makes a pitcher out of clay owns it. We find that the acts of ‘creating’ and ‘making’ can bring about a form of ‘ownership’. However, ownership withdrawn after ‘creation’ and ‘making’ results in you benefiting from things while not necessarily owning them; that is we find the following words of Allah Glorified is He: ‘Who is it that has full power over [your] hearing and sight?’ (Yunus: 31) Allah the Exalted creates beasts of burden for us; He makes them subservient to us, giving us ownership over them. If the Lord the Most High says, 'ownership', His ownership never ends for anyone, 'created' or 'made'; rather, the object in question eternally belongs to Allah.

In other words, when living beings use and control their organs, these organs are in reality not 'owned' by the living beings; rather, it is the Creator the Most High Who owns them. Allah Glorified is He mentions night and daytime by saying: 'It is He Who has made the night for you, so that you might have rest therein, and the day, to make [you] see' (Yunus: 67). The gist of these words can be summarised as follows:

He has made the night for you to rest therein and the day for work. Allah the Exalted wishes to use that miraculous Quranic style, so He says, 'And the day, to make [you] see' (Yunus: 67). Is it the day that sees or is it we that see? Evidently, the day has no capacity to see; rather, it is the faculty of sight that is clear during daytime. In earlier times, people had not yet attained the scientific discoveries we currently have. They believed that light emanated from eyes towards the beheld object, making it visible. Then, the Arab Muslim scientist Al-Hasan Ibn al-Haytham used the scientific methods to prove that light is actually reflected off the beheld object and then perceived by the eyes. The evidence to this fact is that you can perceive an object if it is standing in the light, even when you stand in darkness. However, if it is the other way around, you cannot see it. Thus, the Quranic miraculous fact preceded the science of optics. The Quran hereby explains that it is the light of the day which when it is reflected off objects in existence, enables eyes to perceive the seen objects.

To summarise, it is during daytime that we can better see as it brings forth the light that reflects off objects, which is necessary for human eyes to see. Notice that when the Quran broaches the issue of night and daytime, it says, 'Now among His signs are the night and the daytime' (Fussilat: 37). And in another verse is mentioned: 'We have established the night and the daytime as two symbols, and thereupon we have effaced the symbol of night and set up [in its place] the light-giving symbol of daytime' (al-Isra': 12).

As Al-Hasan Ibn Al-Haytham pointed out, the daytime (light) facilitates sight even if appearances suggest that during the day people can see. The Lord the Most High gives us a live example from the experience of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him; He the Exalted tells Musa (Moses) peace be upon him ‘"Now, what is this in your right hand, O, Musa (Moses)?" He answered, "It is my staff. I lean on it, and with it I beat down leaves for my sheep, and many other uses have I for it." Said He, "Throw it down, O, Musa (Moses)!" So he threw it – and lo! it was a snake, moving rapidly’ (Ta Ha: 17-20). The Lord willed that Musa (Moses) peace be upon him might acquire experiential knowledge of what shall happen to his staff when he faces Pharaoh and sorcerers. When Musa (Moses) peace be upon him sees his staff, for the first time, transforming into a snake, he would be—Allah knows—frightened; so Allah the Almighty reassures him with His Words, ‘Take hold of it and fear not. We shall restore it to its former state’ (Ta Ha: 21). The first time it became a snake as a preparatory experience for Musa (Moses) peace be upon him to free him from worries or fears when he would actually use it. The intention or purpose was to instil Musa (Moses) with firm confidence, as he prepared to deliver a miraculous feat to Pharaoh. Allah Glorified is He told Musa (Moses) peace be upon him ‘Now place your hand into your bosom’ (an-Naml: 12). Now, the word al-jayb refers to the collar area. Let no one think that al-jayb refers to the pocket where one keeps money. During earlier times, the pocket was located inside one's garments, like the pockets of vests worn by farmers. Therefore, the pocket where we put our money is called al-jayb since the hand only can reach the pocket through that aperture. Allah Glorified is He tells Musa (Moses) peace be upon him ‘Now place your hand into your bosom. It will come forth [shining] white without blemish’ (an-Naml: 12). The Lord the Most High also informs him, ‘[You shall go] with nine [of My] messages unto Pharaoh and his people. Verily, they are people depraved! But when our light-giving messages came unto them, they said, "This is clearly [but] spellbinding deception!"’ (an-Naml: 12-13) Signs help mankind see; they are 'light-giving' signs.

Likewise, Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says, ‘[Whereas] it is He Who has made the night for you, so that you might have rest therein, and the day, to make [you] see’ (Yunus: 67). He did not say: 'so that you might work therein'; rather, He cites that which ensures safety during work operations. He the Most High says, ‘to make [you] see’ (Yunus: 67). The light reflects off objects and ensures human beings’ safety as they go about their work. However, some contemporaries abuse the blessing of electricity and stay up late at night. When night comes, they stay up until morning in front of the television, videocassette, or other means of entertainment. Then, they sleep during the day and forget that night was made for us to rest in and that day was made for work. It has been proved that light affects the human body. Indeed, the light affects living beings. The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him anticipated such a discovery long before its time; He said, 'Turn off your lamps when you retire [sleep] for rest at night.'(1)

This way the body would not be affected by light rays, which bring about chemical reactions within the body. This is why I have advised to enjoy the benefits of civilisation using the basic rules for creating it; we shall allow farmers to go to their fields and workers to head to factories. Staying up late at night is harmful. If a man claims that he has become civilised, he must respect the value of work, which leads to the building of civilisations. The machine a person stays up at night watching is a product of hard work by those who abide by the basic principles of progress and civilisation. This includes a respect for the value of hard work during the day as well as for the value of entertainment when it is allotted an appropriately specific period. We tend to abuse the fruits of civilisation. An example of this is the time that a wife saves by owning a fridge, which helps her save cooked food for three days storing food in it. She also uses the electric washing machine to do the laundry in a mere hour. However, the time saved is wasted in front of the television. She neglects other duties, e.g. educating children. Likewise, some may misuse the products of modern technology. Such misuse is indeed a form of backwardness. It is only when we make rational use of the fruits of modern civilisation that we are truly civilised. For example, I tell car drivers, 'Do not drive so fast if you are driving on a dirt road, otherwise, you will kick up clouds of dust which could then enter into people's lungs causing allergic reactions. Beware of neglecting the regular maintenance of your car, or else, your engine will quickly fall into disrepair and produce harmful exhaust to human health and environment.'

(1) Al-Bukhari, Saheeh, (5624) and Ahmad, Musnad, (3/388) on the authority of Jabir Ibn ‘Abdullah. The wording is that of Al-Bukhari.

One should not travel on dirt roads or use a poorly maintained vehicle; otherwise one may cause respiratory illnesses for other people and negatively affect the crops and pollute the atmosphere. Nor must we misuse modern technology for the purposes of spying on others. Rather, we must elevate ourselves to the civilised heights by respecting the principles of civilisation; whoever utilises the products of civilisation without applying these principles remains primitive, despite the sophisticated machines he uses. The machine, in fact, becomes more sophisticated than he is. Thus, when we use things in their proper function, we thereby afford ourselves as well as others a measure of comfort. This is why we have stated in our commentary on the Words of the Lord, 'Consider the sun and its radiant brightness and the moon as it reflects the sun!' (al-Layl: 1-2) If someone perceives a contradiction between the veiling of night (concealing the visible world) and the light of daytime (revealing the visible world), it is in reality no contradiction. Rather, it is a case of complete integration.

The movement of the day only follows the rest of the night. Then, Allah Glorified is He says, 'Consider the creation of the male and the female!' (al-Layl: 3) The creation of male and female is an act of integration, not contradiction. Allah the Exalted is the creator of night and day as well as males and females. The Lord the Most High says, 'Verily, [O, mankind,] you aim at most divergent ends!' (al-Layl: 4) In other words, human actions lead to their goals. There are various actions at night and daytime for males or females. If we jumble our actions and tinker with the order of life, then life becomes disrupted, and we suffer from bitter experiences until matters become so entangled that we start looking for solutions. We have called women to work part-time, so they can dedicate some time for the household or take care of their home on a full-time basis when their sufficient enough income is guaranteed or if the husband earns enough to support the family. However, nobody pays attention to solutions until problems become so difficult. To further illustrate, some people say that nighttime in advanced countries never ends; people stay up until morning. Now, when I hear claims like this, I say that this is not in the interest of those people. The night must be for rest and the day for productive work. The problem occurs when the function of one thing is transposed onto the function of another, be it in time or human beings. Read the following Quranic Words: ‘Verily, [O, mankind,] you aim at most divergent ends!’ (al-Layl: 4) For every single entity in this universe has a function; every single entity goes about this function through means that differ from the means used by others. Thus, the Lord the Most High concludes the verse in question by saying, ‘In this, behold, there are messages indeed for people who [are willing to] listen’ (Yunus: 67). He did not say, ‘in this, behold, there are messages for people who are able to see!’ Why is that? In response, observe that when Allah the Almighty speaks about a given time, He points out the function of this time. He says in the beginning and in the middle of the verse, ‘It is He Who has made the night for you, so that you might have rest therein, and the day, to make [you] see’ (Yunus: 67).

The point in the verse is the calmness of night, not the action of daytime. During the night, the eye is not performing its function; rather, it is the sense of hearing that is performing its function. Allah Glorified is He says, ‘Say: "Have you ever considered [this]: If Allah had willed that there should always be night about you, without break, until the Day of Resurrection–is there any deity other than Allah that could bring you light? Will you not, then, listen [to the truth]?"’ (al-Qasas: 71) In other words, no one can move or travel in darkness if night were perpetual, nor could anyone see anything clearly. The Lord the Most High says, ‘Say: "Have you ever considered [this]: If Allah had willed that there should always be daylight about you, without break, until the Day of Resurrection – is there any deity other than Allah that could bring you [the darkness of] night, wherein you might rest? Will you not, then, see [the truth]?"’ (al-Qasas: 72) Thus, in the verse that places emphasis on the night Allah the Exalted mentions the sense of hearing. Then, in the verse where the emphasis is on the day, He mentions the sense of sight. After Allah the Almighty spoke about the domain of work in daytime and rest at night, He continues by speaking about the source from which work and rest come forth. It is necessary to abide by the orders of the One Lord to have your actions be in harmony. Just as you work in daytime and rest at night, your actions must follow the orders of the One God; namely Allah the Exalted Whom you worship to the exclusion of all partners. Anyone who tells you otherwise is disrupting the rhythm of life. Allah Glorified is He says, ‘Lo! Each deity would surely have stood apart [from the others] in whatever it had created’ (al-Mu’minun: 91).

Allah says:

ٱلۡأَرۡضِۚ إِنۡ عِندَكُم مِّن سُلۡطَٰنِۭ بِهَٰذَآۚ أَتَقُولُونَ عَلَى ٱللَّهِ مَا لَا تَعۡلَمُونَ ﴿٦٨﴾

They say, ‘God has children!’ May He be exalted! He is the Self-Sufficient One; everything in the heavens and the earth belongs to Him. You have no authority to say this. How dare you say things about God without any knowledge? [68] (The Quran, Yunus: 68)

The same verse rebuts their claims. For example, when you say, ‘So-and-so has taken possession of a house’, it means that so-and-so has an independent identity that ontologically precedes the taking possession of that house. It is by virtue of this independent identity that the person is even able to take possession of the house. If it is said, ‘Allah has taken unto Himself a son’ (Yunus: 68), such is an admission of the Divine Perfection and Independent Identity, which ontologically precedes taking a son. Now, they also have held conflicting opinions about the son. Some said that the angels are the daughters of Allah, but Allah the Almighty has refuted their claim. Others, namely Jews, said that Ezra peace be upon him is the son of Allah, but Allah the Almighty also refuted their claim. A group of Christians said that Jesus, the Messiah(1) peace be upon him is the son of Allah, but the Lord the Most High has refuted their claim as well.(2) Furthermore, what motive would Allah have for taking unto Himself a son? Did His Power run out such that He stands in need of a son for help?! Is it possible for the Lord to be weak—Allah forbid—such that He needs to draw on the power of a son?! Take the example of an old man who faces a young man, and the young man annoys him. It may be said to the youth, 'Be careful! This old man has a son, who is stronger than you.' This may be said to deter the young man. The old man might say, 'My sons are stronger than you.' This is the case of an old man backed up by his sons. Allah the Exalted pays no attention to all these claims. Only the order of life must be maintained without conflict. This is why the One Who makes orders must be the One, Unique Lord, Who is the source of all orders. There should be no contradiction among the given orders. If orders come from various sources, the rhythm of life would fall into conflict, dissipating energy and causing its spoil. Therefore, the source of orders must be the Only Lord to Whose Will all submit. He is far above everything in identity, transcendence and attributes. Transcendent, moreover, are His actions, for no other action resembles His. To absolutely ensure this fact, there must be only one God. However, some people set up associates with Allah in Divinity, while others attribute to Him a son. In response, we say that His statement, ‘Allah has taken unto Himself a son’ (Yunus: 68) nullifies itself. The act of taking a son implies that 'Divinity' has an ontologically independent existence. By virtue of this Divinity, a son was taken. Some idolaters said that the angels are the daughters of Allah. In response, Allah Glorified is He says, ‘Why for yourselves [you would choose only] male offspring, whereas to Him [you assign] female. That, lo and behold, is an unfair division!’ (an-Najm: 21-22) Perfection belongs to Allah the Exalted in its entirety; He is inherently Perfect. He the Most High says in the middle of the verse: ‘Limitless is He in His Glory! Self-sufficient is He’ (Yunus: 68).

(1) Allah the Most High says: ‘While the Christians say, "The Messiah is Allah's son."…’ (at-Tawba: 30).

(2) Allah the Most High says: ‘Such are the sayings which they utter with their mouths, following in spirit assertions made in earlier times by people who denied the truth! [They deserve the imprecation:] "May Allah destroy them!" How perverted are their minds!’ (at-Tawba: 30)

S*ubhanahu,* i.e. infinite/limitless in His Glory and Transcendence. Wa huwa al-ghani, i.e. He stands in no need of anyone; you rely on your children but He is the Eternal, the Everlasting. He is in no need of sons as human beings do. The life of children is finite; that is why they like to have children as the poet sings: After I expire, I live on through my son!

It is said that a childless person has no further memory. Since man will surely die, he wishes to live further through his son. This is why when an Arab man has a son, he feels overjoyed and happy. Only the ignorant person feels sad when his wife gives birth to a daughter, for—they think—the daughter will not pass on the family name to her progeny, whereas sons and grandsons carry on the name of grandfathers, who feel their legacy is ensured through two generations. In conclusion, taking a son is an act that is done either as a means of support or a means of self-defense. Allah the Almighty is far above the need for support just as He is far above the need for self-defence. Indeed, for self-defence one would look to someone who is stronger than one is, but no one is stronger than Allah the Most High. Nor does He the Exalted stand in need of support; He is the First and the Last.

The idea of attributing a son to the Creator is indefinitely false from all perspectives. In respect of this idea, Allah Glorified is He says, ‘Limitless is He in His Glory’ (Yunus: 68). Such a statement abrogates all preceding probabilities. It is followed with His Words: ‘Self-sufficient is He’ (Yunus: 68); He neither needs a son nor anything else. His Words ‘Limitless is He in His Glory!’ (Yunus: 68) tell of His transcendence—the Transcendent Being Who has no partners in Divinity or Acts. Sometime, the same attribute is used to describe Allah as well as His living beings. Thus, beware of thinking that their attribute is similar. If you come across a self-sufficient man, for example, know that the sufficiency of human beings is outward. However, the Divine Sufficiency is inherent. You are living, and Allah the Almighty is the Living. However, your life is not akin to His. His life is not preceded by the state of non-existence, whereas your life follows a state of non-existence. His life is not followed by non-existence, whereas your life will be followed by non-existence. Allah does exist, and you also exist. However, His Existence is inherent, independent, and eternal, whereas your existence is dependent and temporal. If the Lord the Most High says that He t has a hand ‘the hand of Allah is over their hands’ (al-Fath: 10), Allah's hand is not like your own. His identity is not like yours, and His Attributes are not like yours. He is the All-Capable, Most-High. Hence, when Allah the Exalted manifests Himself to His creation, He does so through a form of manifestation entirely different from anything that a servant can imagine. Human beings form different imageries; if the image through which Allah the Most High manifests himself is grasped, this would mean that there exists a human mind capable of grasping it. Whatever comes to your mind, Allah the Almighty is far above that. What comes to your mind is possible to grasp since it is a necessary mental process. Allah, however, never succumbs to those who are subservient to Him.

When you have a maths or geometry problem, for example, you give it to one who can solve. If one gives a geometry problem from a university-level curriculum to a primary school student, his mind is incapable of tackling it. Therefore, if a person apprehends something about Allah, which He has not already declared, it would imply that Allah yields to the will of those who are subservient to Him. However, Allah the Exalted is far above such a prospect; He is the All-Capable, the Most-High, Who never succumbs to those who are subservient to Him. This is why the Lord the Most High instructs us to utter the following expression, as a means of asserting His Transcendence: 'Limitless is He in His Glory!' (Yunus: 68). Such transcendence necessarily applies to everything that comes to human mind with respect to the Lord. The Divine Glory or Absolute Transcendence is an Attribute of Allah; it proceeds before anything else and will continue after creating the universe. Thus, all living beings celebrate Divine Glories. From the moment living beings appeared they began glorifications and have not ceased it.

The proclamation of Divine Glory is a continuously ceaseless act reaffirmed by the arguments in the 'Transcendence' chapters of the Quran. The Lord the Most High says, 'Limitless in His Glory is He Who transported His servant by night from the Inviolable House of Worship [at Mecca] to the Remote House of Worship [at Jerusalem] – the environs of which we had blessed' (al-Isra': 1).

Never think that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him travelled to Jerusalem following his own will. Rather, it was the Lord Who transported him. Do not think that physical distance, space, or time can impede the Absolute Divine Will. The act is attributed to Allah the Almighty and we cannot judge an act attributed to Allah against the yardstick of time or space, or according to the law of relativity; Allah the Exalted enjoys Absolute Power. You are a human being, a mere accident limited in time and space. For example, if you walk from Cairo to Alexandria on foot, you would travel the distance in a matter of weeks. However, if you use a riding animal, you might arrive in Alexandria in days. If you ride a car, you will travel the distance in two hours. Finally, if you ride a rocket, you cover the distance in minutes. In other words, the more powerful the means of transport, the less time it takes to reach a certain destination.

This is a brief summary of the law of motion. If the One Who transported the Prophet is Allah the Most High the source of all power, consequently it is not possible to compare it with the will of any other power, nor is it possible to measure the matter in terms of near or distant places or time-scales familiar to you. Never think that Allah's act of transporting is anything similar to your act; the act draws its strength from the actor. Since the actor is Allah the Exalted nobody can circumscribe His Actions within a timescale. Allah the Almighty begins the chapter of al-Isra' with the the Glorification of Allah. The opening verses speak of the Prophet's account on his journey from Mecca to Jerusalem. He confirmed the truth about the heavenly ascension and that the natural laws had been suspended for him. The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him has spoken to us about that which we know, so that we might believe him regarding those matters which we do not, so that we might measure what we do not know against that which we do.

As such, we are convinced of the Prophet's sincerity when he speaks of that which we do not know. Therefore, the word subhanah serves to glorify Allah. It pertains to Allah, since the pre-eternal time before the creation of the universe. Allah Himself witnesses that He is the One God, and so do then the angels. All living beings then continue the celebration and glorifications of Allah the Most High. You find that the chapters of the Holy Quran celebrating the Divine Glorification in affirmation of the Divine Transcendence, and the glorification of His Name preceded the creation of the universe. Then, all living beings were created to glorify Him.

In the chapter of al-Hadid, Allah Glorified is He says, ‘All that is in the heavens and on earth extols Allah's limitless glory’ (al-Hadid: 1) and also in the chapter of al-Hashr, Allah Glorified is He says, ‘All that is in the heavens and all that is on earth extol Allah's limitless glory’ (al-Hashr: 1). Did the living beings of the universe extol Allah's Glory once and then cease? No, they do not. Allah the Most High says, ‘All that is in the heavens and all that is on earth extols the limitlss Glory of Allah, the Sovereign Supreme, the Holy.’ (al-Jumu‘a: 1)

In the chapter of al-Taghabun, Allah the Exalted says, ‘All that is in the heavens and all that is on earth extols Allah's Limitless Glory. His is all dominion and to Him all praise is due, and He has the power to will anything.' (at-Taghabun: 1)

Thus, limitless Glory belongs to Allah Glorified is He since pre-eternity, and after He had created them, all living beings, and all of existence has extolled and continues to extol His Glory. This includes the heavens and the earth and all the sentient and non-sentient beings that exist therein—all except you, O, human being. Extol, therefore, the Name of your Lord Most High. In the verse that we are currently examining, Allah Glorified is He says: '[And yet] they assert, "Allah has taken unto Himself a son!" Limitless is He in His Glory! Self-sufficient is He…' (Yunus: 68). Proclaiming Allah's infinite Glory and His Absolute Transcendence is asserted by the negation of wrongfully ascribing a son unto Him, in Allah's own Words: '… Self-sufficient is He …' (Yunus: 68). To take unto Him son implies a need for assistance, reliance, defence, or carrying on the family name—all of these do not apply in respect to Allah Glorified is He Who is the Most High. It is Allah the Exalted Who says in another verse: 'And they say, "Allah has taken to himself a son." Glory be to Him; rather, whatever is in the heavens and the earth is His; all are obedient to Him.' (al-Baqara: 116) Now 'obedience′ came in the Arabic form as Qunut which means to resolve oneself for the worship of Allah the Almighty to submit to His Will and to obey Him. In the verse which we are presently studying, Allah Glorified is He says: '… No evidence whatever has you for this [assertion]! Would you ascribe unto Allah something which you cannot know?' (Yunus: 68) This means you have no evidence which proves that Allah the Exalted has taken unto Himself a son. This is why Allah Glorified is He concludes the verse by saying: '… Would you ascribe unto Allah something which you cannot know?' (Yunus: 68) It means that you have not received any statement from Allah the Almighty to this effect, for there can be no statements made about Allah except by Him Himself. Nor is anyone in a position to make a statement about His Lord, for it is He Who makes statements about Himself. Then Allah Glorified is He says:

قُلْ إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ يَفْتَرُونَ عَلَى ٱللَّهِ ٱلْكَذِبَ لَا يُفْلِحُونَ ﴿٦٩﴾

Say [Prophet], ‘Those who invent lies about God will not prosper’ [69] (The Quran, Yunus: 69)

When Allah the Exalted speaks about faith, its (spiritual) fruits, and its denouement, He mentions success as an end result of such faith. Allah Glorified is He also says: "He will indeed be successful who purifies it,' (ash-Shams: 9).

He Glorified is He likewise says: 'Successful indeed are the believers’ (al-Mu’minun: 1). He also says: '…these it is that are the successful.' (al-A’raf: 157) All of these uses of the term are related to the word al-falah which is closely related to the physical (origins) of the life of a living organism. The elements that account for the existence of a living organism are the following: air, water and food.

Breathing draws upon the air that surrounds the earth. Water comes down from the sky or is sought from the (wells) deep in the earth where the rainfall has percolated. Food comes from the earth and (every resource) that originates from the earth is obtained through agriculture. This is why I say that agriculture (or farming) is at the core for the continuation of life. When a man farms land by ploughing, planting it with seeds, and then irrigating it, the seeds eventually germinate into plants which produce fruit. When one says, aflah, this means that his labor has produced a good harvest. Allah the Exalted wished to describe a good spiritual harvest with the word al-falah. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him has explained that the life of this world is the seedbed for the world of the Afterlife. Thus, if you want to reap fruit, then expend physical effort.

Beware of thinking that by taking something away from you in this world, religion is diminishing your net worth. Rather, it is religion that is increasing your net worth.

The example which I always give—and to Allah belongs the utmost example of perfection—is a farmer who plants a plot of land with wheat. Basically, he needs to take a certain amount of wheat from his reserves so as to use as seeds in the earth. Now if his wife were stubborn-minded and did not know the basic principles of agriculture, she might tell him, ‘How can you take the wheat and leave your family with less wheat to survive on?’ This woman does not know that although he gave up a certain amount of stored grain, this amount shall be returned to him ten or fifteen fold. Similarly, what Allah the Almighty demands of you here on earth might seem like a loss; however, He the Most High shall bestow upon you the fruits of the Afterlife many times over. Thus, the word fallh is related to falah, which means working on the land, ploughing and planting upon it so as to reap a harvest. Just as the harvest which you reap is in proportion to the work and toil that you put in, the same applies to your reward in the Afterlife and your work in this life. Take the example of a farmer who ploughs land and who carries fertiliser on the back of a camel then rises early in the morning for irrigating. You will find this farmer in a cheerful and happy state on harvest day. His state of mind will differ remarkably so from a farmer who neglected his land, who spent his time at the café and who stayed up late at night watching television. When harvest day is due, much to his chagrin, his produce will be poor due to his not tending to it properly.

The Words of Allah Glorified is He: 'Say, "Those who forge a lie against Allah shall not be successful."' (Yunus: 69) This means that those who attribute falsehoods to Allah the Almighty or make statements about Him which He has not Himself declared are the ones who shall never attain success. I have previously explained that everything that is related to Allah Glorified is He cannot be known except through Him. Yet what drives them to spin such falsehoods anyway? Every action in life must be motivated by that which is beneficial. The idea of what is beneficial and what its consequences are differs from one person to the other. The lazy student, who roams through the streets, refusing to study flunks, and he sets himself up to be unsuccessful in his future career. As for the diligent student, he is the one who achieves a respectable status in society. The first student was shortsighted and did not realise the great extent of the benefits (of studying hard); rather, his view of what was beneficial was confined to short-term pleasures at the expense of the greater good in the future.

Now what caused these people to peddle lies about Allah the Exalted is the collapse of the sense of self, for every self has presence and status; once the status collapses, a man feels as if he is a worthless member of society. The example I have previously given was that of a village quack who used to tend to everyone's medical needs. Then one of the young men of the village graduated from medical school and opened up a clinic. If the village quack were wise enough, he would go to the doctor and seek a position as a nurse in his clinic. However, if his pride were to get the better of him, he will contend stubbornly (against the village's new healthcare provider); however, he will be unable to argue against the doctor's knowledge concerning medical science. Similarly, the groups of disbelievers and the leaders of misguidance were surprised at the coming of a messenger from Allah.. They thought that a messenger would be intent on consolidating political sovereignty for himself, even though every one of Allah's messengers always attributed power and sovereignty to the true owner—Allah the Most High. When they were stripped of their authority—by virtue of which they enjoyed status, notability, grandeur, and greatness—they became agitated and tried to escalate resistance against Prophet Muhammad so as to preserve their assumed temporal authority.

One example of such a scenario is the coming of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to Medina. At the time, there were some who were trying to nominate 'Abdullah ibn Ubai to be a king. This is why this man resisted Islam, and then when he could no longer continue resisting, he converted to Islam (disingenuously) and remained hostile to the religion inwardly. However, if he had become a good Muslim and gotten close to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him he would have achieved an even higher status than that which he had previously aiming for. Thus, the leaders of misguidance and the chiefs of disbelievers are the types of people who feel sorry for themselves and fear the loss of temporal power, for when a messenger comes upon the scene, one of his objectives is to establish social equality. This is why there are those who, fearing the loss of temporal power, take a rebellious stand against the message. This is also why, regarding the reasons for their fabrication of lies, Allah Glorified is He says:

ٱلشَّدِيدَ بِمَا كَانُواْ يَكۡفُرُونَ ٧٠

They may have a little enjoyment in this world, but then they will return to Us. Then We shall make them taste severe punishment for persisting in blasphemy [70] (The Quran, Yunus: 70)

It was thus painful for the leaders of disbelief and the chiefs of misguidance to see their power taken away from them by a new messenger who summoned the people to Allah the Exalted. Furthermore, they were afraid that this new messenger who summoned people to Allah Glorified is He would strip them all of their authority, claiming it not for himself but rather turning it over to the will of his Lord. Were the messenger who summoned people to Allah, is the Exalted to usurp temporal power for himself, we would say that it is a case of one ego overriding another. However, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him insisted that he return everything—even his personal matters—to Allah the Almighty. Allah Glorified is He lays bare the negligible gains which these people defended, describing them as: 'It is only a provision in this world …' (Yunus: 70); every one of them loved to convince himself of the fanciful idea that such transient gains were truly of value. The word Ad-dunya must encapsulate the reality of an object to which it refers, namely ‘the world’ or ‘the life of this world’. All names, as we know, are words that designate objects. When you say, 'So-and-so is tall', you are thereby attributing the quality of tallness to him. When you say Ad-dunya, this word comes from Ad-dunuw or Ad-dana’a which means being either at the lowest point or rather lowly in rank.

Take into consideration Ad-dunuw or being in the lowest point near ground. What this really means is to be on the way that leads to a summit, and then this is an acceptable point of view since the first stage in one’s journey to a summit must begin with the lowest point (Ad-dunuw). Then, by remaining steadfast to the doctrine of Allah, you gradually climb higher towards the Hereafter. Thus, concerning he who describes the life of this world as being completely synonymous with Ad-dana’a, meaning general lowliness, we say that this is not that case, entirely; rather, it is in one sense, but on the condition that it is considered to be a path leading upward. Whosoever considers this world to be lowly is he whose status is indeed lowly. However, whosoever takes it as a path leading upward is such a person who has indeed achieved victory by following Allah's Methodology. Therefore, the world is not synonymous with Ad-dana’a, for the immediate purview of religion is not the Hereafter; rather, its concern is the course of life in this world. In this world, religious doctrine commands you through the directives of ‘Do’ and ‘Do not do’. It is in the Hereafter that one’s rewards are reaped. Thus, the reward for correct action is not the immediate concern of religion. You can still make good use of your life in this world if you take it as the seedbed of the Hereafter. Be aware not to live your life based on the idea that the world is millions of years old; whether the life of the earth is long or short is of no importance to you as a living being. What matters to you is the length of your own journey on earth. How long you will live is unknown. In fact, how long the world itself shall survive is unknown. There are those who die at the age of six months, and there are those who die at the age of a hundred. Each enjoys the world in proportion to the time he spends in it, but all returns to Allah; Glorified is He, in the end. Those people who went astray and made up lies about Allah the Almighty will not go unpunished by Him; for like all of His creation, they shall return to Him. These people who are wont to lead themselves and others astray did not pay attention to the consequences of their actions, nor did they pay attention to the One Who oversees the consequences, nor did they prepare themselves properly. However, he who takes the consequences of his actions into account and who leads a virtuous life in this world will have his ultimate destiny to be the happy reward of paradise. He who does not take the consequences of his actions into account and who makes up lies about Allah the Exalted will have his ultimate destiny to be suffering, as per the Words of Allah Glorified is He: 'It is only a provision in this world, then to Us shall be their return; then, We shall make them taste severe punishment because they disbelieved.' (Yunus: 70). Now the degree of suffering depends on the one who is dispensing it. If the one who is dispensing suffering is weak, the suffering will be light. If the one who is dispensing suffering is of average strength, the suffering will be of medium intensity. However, if the one who is dispensing suffering is strong, then the suffering will inevitably be severe. It is Allah; Glorified is He, Who says: '…Verily, His punishing grasp is grievous, severe!' (Hud: 102) Thus, after Allah the Almighty spoke about the principle of Divine transcendence—which precludes the need for Allah Glorified is He to take unto Himself a son, for He is, after all, the One Free of Need, to Whom belongs all that is in the heavens and the earth—and after He the Exalted explained the need for us to take the doctrine from a single source, namely the Messengers who transmit (the doctrine) on His behalf—(after all of this) He now wishes to speak to us about the succession of messages (from heaven). When the address that is spoken is purely theoretical and ungrounded in any concrete reality, its abstract nature can undermine the argument, whereas if the words that are spoken are grounded in a concrete reality, such that the latter complements and supports the theoretical aspects, this then becomes the evidence that proves the truth of the theoretical aspect. This is why, for example, when seeking to bolster an argument concerning some social matter, we try offer a supposition concerning a real life scenario. What this means is that we try to describe an event that has not happened in reality, but which we assume is real (for the sake of the argument). This allows us to elucidate our abstract idea by means of a hypothetical scenario. In the Quran, Allah Glorified is He narrates the stories of the succession of various messengers down the centuries. The purpose of this is to tell the disbelievers that they will not be able to stand in the way of this message; they should witness the historical record and the events that occurred involving the messengers and their people. These messengers were supported by believers and were at the same time resisted by stubborn, ever so intransigent, disbelievers. If previous disbelievers had been victorious over their messengers, then disbelievers (of Prophet Muhammad's time) could rightfully hope that they will also be victorious over the Messenger of Allah. These words must be directed at people who are aware of some of the events that occurred in the context of the succession of messengers throughout history. This knowledge, however, may have faded since such events occurred in a distant past. Allah Glorified is He hereby, says:

وَٱتْلُ عَلَيْهِمْ نَبَأَ نُوحٍ إِذْ قَالَ لِقَوْمِهِۦ يَٰقَوْمِ إِن كَانَ كَبُرَ عَلَيْكُم مَّقَامِى
وَتَذْكِيرِى بِـَٔايَٰتِ ٱللَّهِ فَعَلَى ٱللَّهِ تَوَكَّلْتُ فَأَجْمِعُوٓا۟ أَمْرَكُمْ وَشُرَكَآءَكُمْ ثُمَّ
لَا يَكُنْ أَمْرُكُمْ عَلَيْكُمْ غُمَّةً ثُمَّ ٱقْضُوٓا۟ إِلَىَّ وَلَا تُنظِرُونِ ﴿٧١﴾

Tell them the story of Noah. He said to his people, 'My people, if my presence among you and my reminding you of God's signs is too much for you, then I put my trust in God. Agree on your course of action, you and your partner-gods – do not be hesitant or secretive about it – then carry out your decision on me and give me no respite [71] (The Quran, Yunus: 71)

One might ask why Allah mentions the story of Prophet Nuh (Noah) and not the story of Adam peace be upon him or Enoch peace be upon him who were the two messengers who preceded Prophet Nuh (Noah). This is what has given rise to the suspicion that Adam was not a messenger; for some people think that a messenger is one who, by necessity, brings forth a message to an established community of human beings. These people do not realise, however, that a messenger is one who, in the first instance, is sent to guide himself. If Adam peace be upon him was the first created being, then he was sent forth to guide himself, and thereafter to convey (the message) to his children who would come after him. Allah the Exalted had given Adam peace be upon him an experience in paradise whereby there was a prescription and also a proscription, namely: 'And We said, "O, Adam, dwell, you and your wife, in paradise and eat therefrom in [ease and] abundance from wherever you will. But do not approach this tree, lest you be among the wrongdoers."' (al-Baqara: 35) He also warned him of Satan (Iblis), but then Adam peace be upon him fell prey to the temptation of Iblis (Satan), and Allah Glorified is He sent him down to earth and gave him distinction and forgave him. Adam was armed with the experience that he had gained in heaven. Thus, if he transgressed the command of his Lord, punishment would befall him. Allah Glorified is He warned him of succumbing to the influence of Satan (Iblis) so as not to deviate from the state of obedience to Allah the Almighty. Thus, Allah the Most High had given him the doctrine and ordered him to undertake his mission on earth—beginning with himself and thereafter conveying it to those who would follow him. Just as Allah Glorified is He taught Adam peace be upon him the names of all things, so did Adam peace be upon him teach his children; thus, they learned how to speak. Just as Adam peace be upon him transmitted to them the names of all things, he also transmitted to them the doctrine. Allah Glorified is He has taught Adam the names of all things, so that he might populate the earth. He taught him the doctrine that he might do virtuous works in the world, and in the Hereafter, he would receive pleasurable rewards. Read the Words of Allah Glorified is He: '… And Adam disobeyed his Lord and erred.' (Ta Ha: 121)

These are followed by the words of Allah Glorified is He ‘and then his Lord chose him and turned to him in forgiveness and guided [him] …' (Ta Ha: 122). Allah Glorified is He says: '… there shall, nonetheless, most certainly come unto you guidance from me …' (al-Baqara: 38). The word al-huda in this instance refers to the doctrine that was given to Adam peace be upon him from above. The message is nothing other than the transmission of the doctrine and guidance from Allah the Almighty to His creation. Thus, Allah Glorified is He says the following Words: '…Moreover, We would never chastise [any community for the wrong they may do] ere we have sent a prophet [to them].' (al-Isra': 15) Thus, the predecessors of Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him are those to whom Adam peace be upon him had conveyed (the message). The proof lies in the story of Adam's two sons; in the words of Allah Glorified is He: 'and convey unto them, setting forth the truth, the story of the two sons of Adam – how each offered a sacrifice…' (al-Ma'ida: 27). They both had offered sacrifices to Allah the Exalted.

Thus, the message of Allah's Divinity had reached Adam's sons, as per the Words of Allah Glorified is He: '… how each offered a sacrifice, and it was accepted from one of them whereas it was not accepted from the other? [And Cain] said, 'I will surely slay you!" [Abel] replied, "Behold, Allah accepts only from those who are conscious of Him."' (al-Ma'ida: 27) Thus, they had established the existence of Allah Glorified is He while they also came to know (the existence) of proscription. In one of the two verses, he says: 'If you should raise your hand against me to kill me - I shall not raise my hand against you to kill you. Indeed, I fear Allah, Lord of the worlds.' (al-Ma'ida: 28) Therefore, those who followed after Adam peace be upon him knew of the One, Unique God, and also knew of the doctrine. Thus, to those who say that Adam peace be upon him was not a messenger, we would say to them to understand Allah's Words correctly. What they should have said is that they do not understand this issue. They should have asked the knowledgeable people, so that they might understand from them that Adam peace be upon him was indeed a messenger, that he had sons named Cain and Abel and that they were both conversant in matters of faith. As to the question of why Allah the Exalted mentions the story of Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him we should note that Adam peace be upon him was the first human being, and that he had transmitted to his sons the doctrine that had been conveyed to him. Furthermore, he had taught them that which was beneficial. Then time passed and forgetfulness set in, whereby Idris (Enoch) peace be upon him came forth, and forgetfulness set in once again after he was gone. Thus, it was until the coming of Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him. In this instance Allah Glorified and Exalted is He narrates the story of Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him He says: 'And convey unto them the story of Nuh (Noah) – when he said unto his people …' (Yunus: 71).

The Arabic word An-naba' means conveying a piece of news that refers to an important piece of one that grabs one's attention, for it concerns a matter that is clearly manifest. Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says: 'About what do they [most often] ask one another? About the awesome tiding [of resurrection], on which they [so utterly] disagree.' (an-Naba': 1-3) Thus, An-naba' refers to a piece of news that is important and that grabs one's attention. Therefore, we read about the story of Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him who addresses his people, even as he had declared, himself to be a messenger delivering a doctrine. The word qawm is used to refer to men only. This is explained in the Quran when Allah Glorified is He says: '…O, you who believe, let not a people ridicule (another] people. Perhaps they may be better than them. Nor let women ridicule [other] women; perhaps they may be better than them. And do not insult one another and do not call each other by [offensive] nicknames. Wretched is the name of disobedience after [one's] faith. And whoever does not repent - then it is those who are the wrongdoers." …' (al-Hujurat: 11) Thus, the Arabic word qawm refers to men, whereas women's role ought to be more discreet. Work and action in this world is the purview of men. We have explained this matter in our discussion of Allah's address to Adam peace be upon him regarding Satan (Iblis). Allah Glorified is He says: 'So We said, "O, Adam, indeed this is an enemy to you and to your wife. Then let him not remove you from Paradise so you would suffer.'" (Ta Ha: 117) Since these words are addressed to Adam peace be upon him Allah Glorified is He says: 'so you would suffer' (Ta Ha: 117). In this verse, Allah the Exalted addressed Adam only, this indicates that the woman has no business in the work that takes place outside of the household and which requires hardship. Thus, the woman stays at home to rear the children and to maintain the household for the man. Her task is to imbue the household with love, care and peace. As for the act of getting up and working in the outside world, that is the man's task. Allah Glorified is He says: '…Then let him not remove you from Paradise so you would suffer ...' (Ta Ha: 117). Thus, the man's job is to exert effort, so he is required to go out into the world and not to stay behind at home. Then, Allah Glorified is He quotes Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him as saying: '…' And recite to them the news of Nuh (Noah), when he said to his people, "O, my people, if my residence and my reminding of the signs of Allah has become burdensome upon you - then I have relied upon Allah. …"' (Yunus: 71). In this instance, Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him uses terms of endearment which imply that he is one of them and that they are dear to him. This also means that he has no right to cheat or delude them, for they are his family. These words are echoed by the words spoken by elected officials when they are addressing the members of the community which elected him: 'O, my people, my family, my voters'. These are all terms of endearment. These words are also similar to the words Luqman peace be upon him told his son: '…And [mention, O, Muhammad], when Luqman said to his son while he was instructing him, "O, my dear son, do not associate [anything] with Allah. Indeed, association [with him] is great injustice!" (Luqman: 13)

He also says: '[And Luqman said:] "O, my dear son, indeed if wrong should be the weight of a mustard seed and should be within a rock or [anywhere] in the heavens or in the earth, Allah will bring it forth. Indeed, Allah is Subtle and Acquainted."' (Luqman: 16) Also, He says that Luqman said: '… "O, my son, establish prayer"' (Luqman: 17).

When proclaiming something to be great means that, in reality, the object in question is arduous and difficult for a person to tackle. Allah the Almighty says, for instance: '…. Grave is the word that comes out of their mouths; they speak not except a lie.' (al-Kahf: 5) It means that the saying that came out of their mouths was a difficult, arduous matter. What they said was: 'And to warn those who say, "Allah has taken a son"' (al-Kahf: 4). For a believer, such an assertion is grave indeed because it is a problematic matter which cannot be accepted. There is no believer who is capable of accepting the claim made by one of Allah's created beings that He the Exalted has taken unto Himself a son. Sometimes the 'gravity' of a matter can be of a different kind such as when Allah Glorified is He says: '… Difficult for those who associate others with Allah is that to which you invite them. Allah chooses for Himself whom He wills and guides to Himself whoever turns back [to Him] …' (ash-Shura: 13). This means that your calls to them that there is but One, Unique God and that all Kingship belongs to Him Glorified and Exalted is He are claims of yours that have grown oppressive, unbearable, and onerous from the point of view of disbelievers. Similarly, if a word is contrary to faith, it then becomes oppressive from the point of view of believers. If a word calls disbelievers to faith, it then becomes oppressive and arduous from their point of view. In this instance, Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him is quoted as saying: '…, "O, my people, if my residence and my reminding of the signs of Allah has become burdensome upon you - then I have relied upon Allah'" (Yunus: 71). Now we know that Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him lived with his people for nine hundred and fifty years. In other words, he lived a long life amongst his people. Moreover, his condemnation of disbelievers had made his presence among them oppressive. It might also be that the Words, '… O, my people, if my residence and my reminding of the signs of Allah has become burdensome upon you …' (Yunus: 71) mean that he demanded from them that which they could not tolerate since Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him wanted them to desist from their old practices of idol worship, and this might have been too difficult for them. Thus, the principle of worshipping a single deity proved to be a hard task for them.

Furthermore, Prophet Nuh (Noah) exerted much effort to preach to them while standing, while the crowd to whom he was preaching to was sitting. Prophet 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him used to speak to his disciples from a standing position. Thus, this standing position is the sign that the effort that is required to exhort people to the right path falls squarely on the shoulders of Prophet 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him; in the meantime, his disciples listened to him while comfortably seated. Therefore, the Words of Allah Glorified is He '… O, my people, if my residence and my reminding of the signs of Allah have become burdensome upon you …' (Yunus: 71) can be paraphrased as if that which I exhort you to is too difficult for you.

We can rightly interpret this expression in the connection with the long period of time during which this preaching took place — nine hundred and fifty years. Or, the expression could also be understood to mean that we have become two separate groups since the doctrine which I exhort you to is not to your liking, and I would have preferred that we remain united as a single entity.

When ‘Umar Ibn al-Khattab Allah be pleased with him realised that the task of governing the Islamic state required a leader must name a successor, some told him, 'Why did not you nominate ‘Abdullah ibn ‘Umar as the person to govern us (after you)?' Ibn al-Khattab said, ‘It is enough for the family of Khattab to have but one man who is questioned with regards to the (leadership of the) Ummah of Muhammad.' ‘Umar also added, ‘I know that you have become weary of my rule, for I am harsh with you.’ Thus, Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him felt that he and his people had parted ways: he had taken the side of Allah Glorified is He by exhorting people to worship Him, while they took the side of the idols which they had worshipped in a habituated way. This is why Allah the Exalted quotes Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him as saying: '… then I have relied upon Allah …' (Yunus: 71). You, thereby, limit the depository of your trust solely to Allah Glorified is He. Thus did Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him do likewise? He faced his people, armed with nothing but his complete trust in He Who had sent him. He tried to guide his people, but they did not comply (with his calls). He said to them: ‘So resolve upon your plan and [call upon] your associates. Then let not your plan be obscure to you. Then carry it out upon me and do not give me respite. …'" (Yunus: 71). He asks them to consolidate all of the various opinions into one. In other words, it is as he said, 'O, people, decides on a single opinion, for you will not, however, be able to harm me.' To consolidate the various opinions of all the generations which Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him had tried to guide requires a great deal of effort since every twenty years a new generation with new ideas comes forth.

Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him preached to each new generation of his people, that is, over the course of nine hundred and fifty years. How many generations, then, did Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him spend reforming? Indeed, the number of generations was large, and still Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him was only able to win over a small number of believers who would accompany him in the lone ark. With them there were also animals, but not Nuh's (Noah) son who joined the disbelieving folk. Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him called out to him to join him on the arc and become a believer, but he refused, electing to remain on the side of disbelief, despite the destruction that awaited the disbelievers. He thought that he would be able to find refuge in a mountain that would keep him safe from the flood. However, Prophet Nuh's (Noah) son did not take into account another one of Allah’s agents, one that would prevent him from reaching the mountain, namely, the waves. Thus, the words of Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him: '… then I have relied upon Allah …' (Yunus: 71) reveal a deep, underlying faith. There exists no living being of Allah’s that can get the better of Him, for all of Allah’s, created beings—whether inanimate, vegetal or animal—complied with Allah's order that Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him should be victorious; thus, none of Allah’s created beings would ever disobey. Such was Prophet Nuh's (Noah) reliance on Allah Glorified is He and such was his deep, underlying faith (in Him). This much can be gleaned from the Words: "To Allah belongs the dominion of the heavens and the earth and whatever is within them. And He is over all things competent' (al-Ma‘ida: 120). Also, He says: 'To Allah belongs whatever is in the heavens and whatever is in the earth …' (al-Baqara: 284). Nothing will ever stray outside His Dominion.

What is truly remarkable is that, when Allah Glorified is He uttered the word ‘Be!’ (thus creating the universe), the only created being to have remained outside of Allah’s Will was man, endowed as he is with free will. Of course, man is not inherently independent from Allah Glorified is He; however, Allah the Almighty endowed him with free will. If He did not endow man with free will, the latter would simply be unable to stand on his two feet, and all human beings would be Allah's agents (without any possibility of rebellion). Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him said, 'so resolve upon your plan and [call upon] your associates. Then let not your plan be obscure to you. Then carry it out upon me and do not give me respite …' (Yunus: 71). When a person is faced with a difficult issue, he feels at loss before a variety of options. One tries to evaluate the pros and cons of each option so as to make the best choice. When a person can corral his various options into one, this indicates that the person is set on one option and has resolved himself to carry through with it.

However, if a group of people are contemplating an issue, every one of them will have a different opinion. If after negotiating the matter amongst themselves, they would decide on one position, in other words, to come to an agreement regarding a particular issue, which is dependent upon the temperament of the group. If they are a group of good people, they will disapprove of that which is evil. If they are a group of bad people, they will endorse that which is evil. One example of this is the story of Prophet Ya'qub's (Jacob's) sons, when they begrudged their brother Yusuf's (Joseph's) eminent status. Allah Glorified is He quotes them as saying: '[Said one of them:] "Slay Yusuf (Joseph) or else drive him away to some [faraway] land, so that your father's regard may be for you alone …"' (Yusuf: 9). This means that the objective of their suggested plot—to kill Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him—was so that Ya'qub's affection would be directed solely towards them. They followed up their suggestion of killing Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him with plans of repentance. They told one another: '… and after this is done, you will be [free to repent and to live once again as] righteous people!"' (Yusuf: 9) They thought that by repenting, their act of murder would be accepted. Now, at first, some of them would not stand for such evil as was inherent in their conspiracy. After all, they were of Prophetic lineage; indeed, they were of the Asbat who were supposed to eschew evil rather than promote it. One of them, therefore, said for them not to kill him; rather, 'drive him away to some [faraway] land' (Yusuf: 9). This means that he mitigated the matter from the level of murder to exile. This was indeed the first step that this (morally superior group) took towards mitigating the sin since they were clearly choosing a lesser evil from a greater one, which was a plain indication that good was still ingrained into them. They would also decline the second sin, which was to exile Yusuf (Joseph), fearing that he might be eaten by wild beasts. Then came the suggestion: 'if you must do something – cast him into the dark depths of this well, [whence] some caravan may pick him up' (Yusuf: 10). Then they came to an agreement, and evil was eschewed once again when they realised the possibility of deliverance.

Thus, when morally superior people (those who clearly have some moral conscious) contemplate an evil course of action, they invariably eschew evil. Take the example of a good man who saw his son being beaten up by another boy. In the heat of the moment, he envisages shooting his son's assailant with a rifle, but then he rejects this idea, thinking that he ought to content himself with hitting (the boy) severely with a stick. Then he backs down from this idea, thinking that he ought to give (the boy) two good slaps on the face. Then he backs down from the idea and contemplates chiding the boy. Finally, he backs down from that idea and contents himself with complaining to his father. Thus, this is how evil thoughts are eschewed by morally excellent people. However, if the father, herein, is of a villain, he would begin with the idea of complaining to the parents of his son's assailant. Then he will reject the idea, upping the degree of sin to the prospect of slapping the child himself. Not satisfied with this idea, he would contemplate giving him a severe beating. This idea would also fail to quench his anger, and so he would finally say to himself, 'I am going to shoot him.' Thus, with sinful people, the degree of sin rises ever higher. In this case, Allah Glorified is He states Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him as saying: '… "So resolve upon your plan and [call upon] your associates. …"' (Yunus: 71) This means for them to get together amongst themselves and come to an agreement upon a single course of action, then once they do so, they should execute it faithfully—with help from their allies. He is thereby advising them even though they are his enemies. What he should have done is to sow discord amongst them. However, so firm is he in his trust of his Lord that he knows that, whatever they may do, they will not get the better of him, nor will they be victorious in their attempt to suppress his message—except if they kill themselves. To put it in vernacular terms, they should 'mount the highest of their horses' which means that he is intimidating them. No one would ever dare say such a thing unless he is strengthened by an unshakable trust in Allah Glorified is He. Not content to stop there, he continues to say: '… "Then let not your plan be obscure to you. Then carry it out upon me and do not give me respite."' (Yunus: 71) What Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him told them was for them not to bother exchanging furtive whispers amongst themselves, rather, have them do as they wish, without trying to conceal their actions. What they have to do is to get together and agree upon a single course of action, both they and their partners upon which they rely and whom they worship or their fellow disbelievers. Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him did not seek to kindle any tribal tensions amongst them, so as to play them against each other, for he was completely reliant upon Allah the Almighty. That is why Allah quotes him as saying: '…Then carry it out upon me and do not give me respite ' (Yunus: 71). This means that he is encouraging them to settle on a single course of action with their partners—either the idols which they worship or their fellow disbelievers—and to resolve themselves to carry out whatever it is that they (eventually) agree upon. A judgment might be pronounced upon a person, but no action ever be taken. However, his words '…Then carry it out upon me …' (Yunus: 71) means to pronounce a judgment on the matter and proceed to carry out whatever judgment you have pronounced. Then, he said, '… do not give me respite!' (Yunus: 71) which means for them not to give Prophet Nuh (Noah) any pity as they go forth to carry out the plans that they have devised against him.

Anyone who contemplates this verse will note the attitude that greatly challenges therein, for, in the first order, he is asking that they get together—along with their partners—so as to come to an agreement upon a single course of action. Then, he asks that their plans to be fully disclosed and that they should execute whatever plans they had come up with without delay. Can there be any fiercer defiance in the face of a foe than this? They, for their part, were indeed stubborn, intransigent foes. Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him had, for nine hundred and fifty years showed them lenience and kindness. He was patient with them during all of this time; therefore, decisive action was now called for. This is why his defiant attitude was as intense as it was. He called for them to decide upon a course of action with their partners. Thereafter, he encourages them to execute their plans against him without delay. Such was his challenge to them—a challenge which he kept upping until it was agreed to carry out the judgment. The Arab temperament, for instance, can forgive, forbear and pardon regarding a matter which has nothing to do with Allah’s Doctrine—a matter which, in fact, concerns a worldly dispute. One finds an Arab poet speaking of Bani Dhuhl. Although this tribe persecuted the poet’s people to a great extent, his people forgave them. The poet said:

We forgave Bani Dhuhl,
We said: they are our brothers
O that they would become the people they used to be
When they professed evil ways,
They showed their true selves
There remains naught but enmity,

We have disdained them as they have us
We have paced to and fro,
Like a lion, livid
Such vituperation, butchery
And wounds gaping like and stabbing like
The mouth of a brim-full vessel
In wickedness there is salvation
if kindness is to no avail
To the ignorant, tolerance is seen as an invitation to subjugation

Thus, the contention between Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him and his people called for a hard stance. For in this lied the only hope that their wickedness would abate, that their arrogance would diminish and that they would proclaim their faith in Allah Glorified is He. However, they did not renounce their old, deviant faith. This is why, quoting Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him Allah Glorified is He later says:

فَإِن تَوَلَّيۡتُمۡ فَمَا سَأَلۡتُكُم مِّنۡ أَجۡرٍۖ إِنۡ أَجۡرِيَ إِلَّا
عَلَى ٱللَّهِۖ وَأُمِرۡتُ أَنۡ أَكُونَ مِنَ ٱلۡمُسۡلِمِينَ ﴿٧٢﴾

But if you turn away, I have asked no reward from you; my reward is with God alone, and I am commanded to be one of those who devote themselves to Him' [72] (The Quran, Yunus: 72)

This means that if they rejected his message—to worship the True God—let it then be known that he did not call upon them to worship him, a fellow human being; rather, he called upon them to worship the One Who is above both them and him. He was not seeking to usurp temporal authority by which he might rule over them, nor was he seeking high rank, for all high rank belongs to Allah the Exalted.

Now Allah Glorified is He does not need high rank from you because He the Most High is innately High Ranked. The objective of Prophet Nuh's (Noah) message from Allah was to hold their arrogance in check; its goal was that they lead their lives in the light of the True Methodology, so that their lives might be imbued with virtue—this was all in their interest. 'And if you turn away [from my advice] then no payment have I asked of you. My reward is only from Allah, and I have been commanded to be of the Muslims.' (Yunus: 72). Was Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him hereby helping his enemies? One sympathises with his enemy if he senses an impending danger. However, Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him was not afraid of them because he solely relies upon Allah the Exalted. Rather, what Prophet Nuh (Noah) was doing was pointing out their strong points, even though he knew that their power was limited and that their wickedness would remain without efficacy no matter how evil it were to become. Perhaps they harbour no wickedness whatsoever. The point is there any benefit that Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him would reap? Was there any benefit of which Nuh (Noah) would be deprived? No, there would not be, since he was hereby announcing that he would be accepting no reward for his proselytizing efforts. Therefore, they could not hurt him, nor could they benefit him in any way, nor does he want any reward from them. Basically, Prophet Nuh's faith in Allah who had sent him forth was strong. He was not asking them for any reward, a recompense that is reward given in exchange for a service. Such earmarked values are usually used in commutative contracts that are based on the principal of reciprocity; in such cases, these values stand either for material goods—such as produce or commodities—or they represent the cost of a service. Consider the example of when a person wishes to buy a room in a house, he goes to the man who owns the house and asks to purchase a number of shares corresponding to the value of the room.

Another person wants to rent a room and so he goes to see the owner of the house; he offers to pay him the value of renting a room in the house. In other words, he will pay him a sum that is equivalent to the value of using the room. Recompense is paid forth only if it is in exchange for an urgent benefit (or need). Now Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him should have asked them for compensation, for he was engaged in guiding them to the truth; this would have been an objective assessment of the value of that essential service that he had been providing them with. However, he declared that he was seeking no compensation, as if to say that his efforts should be rewarded with compensation, since it was they who were ultimately benefitting. Thus, under normal circumstances, he should have exacted payment for his services.

Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him however, declined any compensation from them, for he was seeking the greater compensation (from above). If he had taken compensation from them, it would, by necessity, be in proportion with their means. However, compensation from Allah Glorified is He is in proportion with Allah's means. There is an infinite difference between man, a created being whose capacity to remunerate is limited, and Allah whose capacity to remunerate is unlimited. In this instance, he says: ''and if you turn away [from my advice] …' (Yunus: 72). This turning away, or shunning of his message, neither harms nor benefits him; they do not possess the capacity to harm nor benefit him, for he would not be accepting any compensation from them. It is worth noting that all the messengers who have succeeded one another through the millennia have addressed their people thus: '…"No reward whatever do I ask of you for this [message] …"' (Sad: 86). The only exceptions to be found are in the stories of both Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him and Musa (Moses) peace be upon him. Regarding the story of Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him Allah Glorified is He says: 'And convey unto them the story of Ibrahim (Abraham). [How it was] When he asked his father and his people, "What is it that you worship?" They answered, "We worship idols, and we remain ever devoted to them." He said, "Do [you really think that] they hear you when you invoke them, or benefit you or do you harm?" They exclaimed, "But we found our forefathers doing the same!"' (ash-Shu'ara': 69-74). In this instance, Allah the Almighty does not mention anything about not asking for compensation. Furthermore, in the story of Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him Allah Glorified is He says: 'He answered, "O, my Sustainer! Behold, I fear that they will give me the lie, and then my breast will be straightened and my tongue will not be free. Send, then, [this Your command] to Harun (Aaron). Moreover, they keep a grave charge [pending] against me, and I fear that they will slay me." He said, "Not so, indeed! Go forth, then, both of you, with our messages. Verily, we shall be with you, listening [to your call]! And go, both of you, unto Pharaoh and say, ‘Behold, we bear a message from the Sustainer of all the worlds. Let the Children of Israel go with us!’" (ash-Shu'ara': 12-17) In this verse, we also do not find Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him speaking about the fact that he was not asking for compensation. However, in the story of Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him we find the following Words of Allah, Glorified and Exalted is He: "And if you turn away (from my advice] then no payment have I asked of you. My reward is only from Allah, and I have been commanded to be of the Muslims' (Yunus: 72). The same situation can be found in the story of Prophet Hud (Eber) peace be upon him whereupon Allah Glorified is He says: '[And the tribe of] ’Ad lied to [one of Allah’s] message-bearers when their brother Hud (Eber) said unto them, "Will you not be conscious of Allah? Behold, I am a prophet [sent by Him] to you, [and therefore] worthy of your trust. Be, then, conscious of Allah and pay heed unto me! And no reward whatever do I ask of you for it. My reward rests with none but the Sustainer of all the worlds.”' (ash-Shu'ara': 123-127) A similar situation can also be found in the story of the tribe of Thamud, whereby Allah Glorified is He says: '(And the tribe of] Thamud gave the lie to [one of Allah’s] message-bearers. When their brother Saleh (Shelah) said unto them, "Will you not be conscious of Allah? Behold, I am a prophet [sent by Him] to you, [and therefore] worthy of your trust. Be, then, conscious of Allah, and pay heed unto me! And no reward whatever do I ask of you for it. My reward rests with none but the Sustainer of all the worlds."' (ash-Shu'ara': 141-145) Basically, the same wording was put in the mouth of Prophet Lut (Lot) peace be upon him when Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says: '[And] the people of Lut (Lot) lied to [one of Allah’s] message-bearers. When their brother Lut (Lot) said unto them, "Will you not be conscious of Allah? Behold, I am a prophet [sent by Him] to you, [and therefore] worthy of your trust. Be, then, conscious of Allah and pay heed unto me! And no reward whatever do I ask of you for it. My reward rests with none but the Sustainer of all the worlds.”' (ash-Shu'ara': 160-164) The same wording was put in the mouth of Prophet Shu'aib (Jethro) peace be upon him when Allah Glorified is He says: '[And] the dwellers of the wooded dales [of Midyan] lied to [one of Allah’s] message-bearers/ Ehen their brother Shu'aib said unto them, "Will you not be conscious of Allah? Behold, I am a prophet [sent by Him] to you, [and therefore] worthy of your trust. Be, then, conscious of Allah and pay heed unto me! And no reward whatever do I ask of you for it. My reward rests with none but the Sustainer of all the worlds.'" (ash-Shu'ara': 176-180) Thus, most of the messengers down the ages have touched upon the issue of compensation: 'And no reward whatever do I ask of you for it …' (ash-Shu'ara': 164). It is as though the messengers peace be upon them were telling human beings that they had been sent to give the message and that if they were to think about it, the truth of the matter is that they (the messengers) deserve to be compensated for the service they were rendering to them. However, messengers do not want any compensation from others; rather, they shall take their reward from the Lord of the worlds, for the value of the service which messengers perform for others cannot be appraised by any mere human. The only one who can appraise its value is the Giver of the Methodology; the One Who has revealed the doctrine to His Messengers. In the Holy Quran, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is quoted as saying: '… Say [O, Prophet], "No reward do I ask of you for this [message] other than [that you should] love your fellow-men…'" (ash-Shura: 23). Regarding the issue of compensation and why it was not brought with up Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him is that we know that the first person that Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him proselytized was his uncle. (1) Now the uncle was fortunate to have been responsible for Ibrahim's (Abraham's) upbringing. The uncle, therefore, had the same rights over Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him as would a father. Similarly, we notice that Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him had proselytized the pharaoh. Now the latter is the one responsible for Musa's (Moses') upbringing, and his wife(2) wanted Musa (Moses) peace be upon him to be their dear son. To be sure, the pharaoh later reminded Musa (Moses) of this fact by saying: '… [Pharaoh] said, "Did we not raise you amongst us as a child, and you remained among us for years of your life?'" (ash-Shu'ara': 18) Whereas in the case of Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him and his mission, the Quranic narrative describes the way in which he put the matter to his people: 'If you turn away (rejecting my message), neither sorrow nor angst shall overcome me, for neither can you harm me, nor can you profit me. It was not you who asked me to come to you with true guidance—that I might earn a reward from you—rather, it was Allah Who sent me, and it is He Who shall give me my reward.'

(2) Asiya

Allah Glorified is He has ordered Prophet Nuh (Noah) to be amongst those who have sincerely surrendered themselves to Him. Take an example from daily life of when a person sends a worker over to his friend's house to fix something. This worker will be compensated by the one who sent him, not by the one he was sent to. This is merely in the nature of things.

Then, Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says:

فَكَذَّبُوهُ فَنَجَّيۡنَٰهُ وَمَن مَّعَهُۥ فِي ٱلۡفُلۡكِ وَجَعَلۡنَٰهُمۡ خَلَٰٓئِفَ
وَأَغۡرَقۡنَا ٱلَّذِينَ كَذَّبُواْ بِـَٔايَٰتِنَاۖ فَٱنظُرۡ كَيۡفَ كَانَ عَٰقِبَةُ ٱلۡمُنذَرِينَ ﴿٧٣﴾

But they rejected him. We saved him and those with him on the Ark and let them survive; and We drowned those who denied Our revelations – see what was the end of those who were forewarned! [73] (The Quran, Yunus: 73)

It is as though this catastrophe—brought about by Allah Glorified and Exalted is He as a result of their hostility to the true faith—could have easily engulfed Prophet Nuh (Noah) and his companions. To say, 'I saved you from such-and-such (a catastrophe)' means that you were close to succumbing to that from which I saved you. In effect, this was the case with the flood. Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says: 'And so We caused the gates of heaven to open with water pouring down in torrents and caused the earth to burst forth with springs' (al-Qamar: 11-12). Under normal circumstances, one would expect the earth to absorb the rainwater. In fact, what happened was that water not only came falling from the sky but also gushed forth from the earth. This is why Allah the Almighty says: 'and caused the earth to burst forth with springs, so that the waters met for a purpose pre-ordained' (al-Qamar: 12). What this means is that such an event was pre-ordained, so that nobody should ever say that it was naturally occurring phenomenon. No, it is a pre-preordained event. Also, the ark built by Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him was in place and ready to be launched, for Allah the Exalted had ordered him to build it as we can conclude Allah's Words in the chapter of Hud: 'And construct the ship under Our observation and Our inspiration and do not address Me concerning those who have wronged. Indeed, they are [to be] drowned …' (Hud: 37). In the next verse, Allah Glorified is He says: "And [so Nuh (Noah)] set himself to building the ark, and every time the great ones of his people passed by him, they scoffed at him. [Thereupon] he said, "If you are scoffing at us – behold, we are scoffing at you [and your ignorance], just as you are scoffing at us."" (Hud: 38) Then, Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him boards the ark and joining him are those who had attained to faith in Allah; there was pair of every species of bird and animal which they carried on board with them, a male and a female. The Words of Allah Glorified is He are '… And so We saved him and all who stood by him …" (Yunus: 73). It has been revealed that those who boarded the ark were the conscientious human beings. How can we, therefore, understand the issue of animals and birds boarding the ark?

The answer is the following: the (raison d'être) of these animals and birds is to serve human beings, and so they must have been present on board the ark. After all, they are subservient creatures that proclaim Allah's Glory and worship Him. Therefore, how can they possess knowledge that surpasses that of thoughtful beings, some of whom have disbelieved? Furthermore, are there not certain subservient creatures such as the raven which taught Cain how to bury his brother's (1) corpse?! Even as a bird, it knew that which a human being did not! Allah Glorified is He says: 'Allah sent a raven to scratch up the ground and show him how to cover his brother's corpse...' (al-Ma'ida: 31).

In the verse which we are presently examining, Allah Glorified is He says: 'And yet they lied to him! And so We saved him and all who stood by him, in the ark and made them inherit [the earth], the while we caused those who belied our messages to drown. Behold, then, what happened in the end to those people who had been warned [in vain]!' (Yunus: 73) The word al-Fulk (the ark) is one of those words that can be used for both singular and plural modes. In Allah's Words '…We saved him…' (Yunus: 73), we know that the action is attributed to Allah the Almighty. When He speaks of any of His actions, He does so in a manner similar to the following: ‘We have sent down the Quran Ourselves, and We Ourselves will guard it.’ (al-Hijr: 9) However, when He speaks about Himself, He utilises a word that emphasises His Oneness; He uses the personal pronoun as in His saying: ‘I am God...’ (Ta Ha: 14).

(1) Abel

In the verse we are examining, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘And yet they lied to him! And so We saved him and all who stood by him, in the ark...’ (Yunus: 73). The word anja (saved) is a transitive verb. The word najja, indicates that there is a dire need for salvation and also that the act of saving recurs.

Allah's Words ‘... made them inherit [the earth]...’ (Yunus: 73) give the following meaning: that al-Khalifa is the one who succeeds someone came before him. The term al-Khalifa sometimes designates that which is of higher rank. This is the case in this verse, where virtuous men succeeded those who were also virtuous men. Thus, after Allah the Exalted had saved the believers in the ark, He drowned the rest. Therefore, the virtuous men on board of the ark later begot virtuous men who succeeded them. Sometimes the term al-Khalifa denotes that which is lower in rank, such as in Allah's following Words: ‘But there came after them generations who neglected prayer and were driven by their own desires...’ (Maryam: 59). In this example, the word khalifa denotes a lower status. There exists a criterion established by Allah Glorified is He to assess the successor (Khalifa); this criterion can be found in His following Words: ‘Later We made you their successors in the land, to see how you would behave.’ (Yunus: 14) Since man is free to choose between belief and disbelief, he will, therefore, be ranked based on his choices. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Allah has made a promise to those amongst you who believe and do good deeds: He will make them successors to the land, as He did those who came before them; He will empower the religion He has chosen for them; He will grant them security to replace their fear...’ (an-Nur: 55). Thus, there are two possibilities when it comes to al-Khalifa (The successor): either a virtuous Khlifa succeeding a virtuous one; or a corrupt kahlifa succeeding a corrupt one. In this instance, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘... made them inherit [the earth], the while we caused those who belied our messages to drown...’ (Yunus: 73). Now these signs are those that induce contemplation and lead human beings to embrace faith in the Creative Power—these represent the totality of the cosmic signs, for everything in the universe offers evidence that the universe was created by design and for a purpose. As proof of this, the things in the universe are wisely organised and intricately structured. If you wanted to verify the degree of the universe's precise creation, look at the things in which man intervenes, and that which he does not. You will find that everything in which man intervenes is characterised by an extraordinary level of integrity. Allah Glorified is He says: 'The sun cannot overtake the moon, nor can the night outrun the day; each floats in [its own] orbit.' (Ya Sin: 40)

As for those things in which man intervenes, they might become corrupted as a consequence of the choices which we make. Thus, we have seen how the cosmic signs point to the existence of the Creator the Most High. These signs are the object of intellectual reflection by means of which the existence of Allah Glorified is He is verified. The Arabic word 'Ayat (signs) can also denote the miraculous phenomenon that the messengers peace be upon them have performed in order to convince people of their truthfulness regarding the messages they conveyed on behalf of Allah the Almighty. Moreover, there are the 'Ayat (verses) of the Holy Quran about which Allah Glorified is He says: 'It is He who has sent this Scripture down to you [Prophet]. Some of its verses are definite in meaning—these are the cornerstone of the Scripture....' (Al-'Imran: 7) These are the verses which contain the Doctrine.

When Allah Glorified is He says: '... the while we caused those who belied our messages to drown...' (Yunus: 73), He informs us that He has drowned those who rejected the cosmic signs and failed to pay heed to the splendour of His creation and to the wisdom behind the creation of these cosmic signs and their flawless arrangement. They had also rejected the miraculous signs as well as the directive verses which were conveyed by their messengers.

Allah Glorified is He concludes this verse with His Words: '... Behold, then, what happened in the end to those people who had been warned [in vain]!' (Yunus: 73). These Words are addressed to those who can reflect, the foremost among whom is our master Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who is the Quran's primary addressee. When you utter the word undhur (see), you thereby draw attention to a sensational object. If you turn your gaze toward this object, the light rays reflected off the object will reach you, and it thereby outlines the dimensions of the object in question. This, in effect, enables you to see the object. The object referred to in this verse is about past events which had occurred once, and they lived on as stories. Thus, if someone were to inform you of these stories, your faith in them would be in proportion to the trust that you have in the narrator. Thus, whosoever witnessed the staff of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him—as it devoured the ropes thrown down by the sorcerers—thereby believed in it. Similarly, anyone who witnessed the fire's inability to burn Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him thereby believed in it. Likewise, whosoever saw 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him as he healed the blind and the lepers, along with bringing the dead back to life by Allah's Leave—thereby believed in what he saw. As for those who did not witness these miracles first-hand, their belief in them goes only as far as the trust they have in the informer. Therefore, as Allah the Almighty informs us about these miracles in the Holy Quran, our belief in these miracles is inevitable because we have complete trust in the probity of he who communicates on Allah's behalf. We understand that the prophetic messages which proceeded that of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him were destined for a specific time and place. However, the objective of Islam is to set the order of all people beginning from the moment when Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him received revelation until the Day of Judgment. This is why the Quran consists of a collection of verses which are destined to remain relevant until Day of Judgment. This is the reason why the Quran represents a perennial intellectual miracle, thanks to which anyone who calls to Islam on behalf of Prophet Muhammad can say: Muhammad is a Messenger from Allah Glorified is He and the Quran is his miracle.

So, when Allah Glorified is He says: '... Behold, then, what happened in the end to those people who had been warned [in vain]!' (Yunus: 73), this is similar to His Saying to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: 'Do you [Prophet] not see how your Lord dealt with the army of the elephant?' (al-Fil: 1) The coming of the army of the elephant occurred in the very same year in which Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was born. Naturally, he did not witness the event himself. However, those who were alive at the time of this incident did witness it. Now this fact should pay our attention to the different levels of perception; for your eyes might perceive something, your ears might hear an account; however, it is possible that your senses deceive you. However, the account coming from Allah (Glorified is He), even if you are currently unable to either see or hear it, consider it as being a source of knowledge even more trustworthy than your sense of vision.

One might ask, 'why does Allah Glorified is He not say: "Do you not know?" instead of His saying: "Do you [Prophet] not see?"' The answer is that Allah the Most High wishes to inform us that we should accept such accounts of the unseen events that we obtain from Him as being more truthful than those accounts of events which we witness with our own eyes. Thus, the Words: '...Behold, then, what happened in the end to those people who had been warned [in vain]!' (Yunus: 73) can be rephrased as the following: realise the matter as though you could see it in front of you since you have such faith in Allah Glorified is He that it is as though you could see Him. The person who is communicating the account on behalf of Allah Glorified is He is the Messenger—in whose message you believe, No doubt should ever infiltrate your mind regarding any of the accounts coming from Allah Glorified is He and Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as doubt can never affect the truthful Messenger.

One might ask, 'Why does Allah Glorified is He not say: "See what happened in the end to the disbelievers" instead of saying "... Behold, then, what happened in the end to those people who had been warned [in vain]!"?' In this case, we would say that Allah the Exalted has demonstrated how He will never punish before giving due warning. Thus, He has first given warning, and He has not seized the people while they were ignorant about this warning. The word 'see', as we know, is addressed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and any words addressed to him include his Ummah (followers of Islam). The purpose of this account is to provide a measure of reassurance to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. If your people, O, Muhammad, behave like the people of Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him rest assured that their fate shall also be the same as the people of Nuh (Noah). Herein lies a warning and a threat for the adversaries of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him

Afterwards, Allah Glorified is He says:

ثُمَّ بَعَثْنَا مِنۢ بَعْدِهِۦ رُسُلًا إِلَىٰ قَوْمِهِمْ فَجَآءُوهُم بِٱلْبَيِّنَٰتِ فَمَا كَانُوا۟
لِيُؤْمِنُوا۟ بِمَا كَذَّبُوا۟ بِهِۦ مِن قَبْلُ ۚ كَذَٰلِكَ نَطْبَعُ عَلَىٰ قُلُوبِ ٱلْمُعْتَدِينَ ﴿٧٤﴾

Then, after him, We sent messengers to their peoples bringing them clear signs. But they would not believe in anything they had already rejected: in this way We seal the hearts of those who are full of hostility [74] (The Quran, Yunus: 74)

The word ba'atha (to send) in this verse is worth discussing since the act of 'sending forth' pertains to that which once existed then came to an end, whereby Allah Glorified is He sent it forth once again. The Words '...We sent...' (Yunus: 74) draw our attention to the fact that when Allah the Almighty has created the universe, He has given the Doctrine to Adam peace be upon him and the latter thereafter conveyed it to his children. Every distortion or alteration of the Doctrine on the part of human beings amounts to a destruction of the Doctrine. When Allah Glorified is He sends forth a messenger, He does not thereby create a new Doctrine, rather, He resends forth that which had already existed, so as to remind human being about his pure, primordial nature. This is the difference between the connotations of the words al-ba'th and al-I'rsal (to send). In effect, the word al-ba'th gives you the feeling that something had already existed and then came to an end, and afterwards it was sent forth once again. This aspect of the word is akin to al-ba'th of the Day of Resurrection: human beings used to live out their lives; they will continue to reproduce themselves as the cycle of life and death continues until the Day of Resurrection (Al-ba'th). On that Day, all created beings will die and then be resurrected for the Reckoning.

It would not be conceivable that Allah the Almighty creates human beings, gives them vicegerency on earth, and then leaves them without a Doctrine. Now since forgetfulness had set in amongst human beings after the initial revelation of the Doctrine to Adam peace be upon him the Doctrine has been sent forth once again through the messengers who communicate it on behalf of Allah the Exalted.

Thus, after Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him Allah Glorified is He has sent forth messengers. In this instance, He says: 'Then, after him, We sent messengers...'

(Yunus: 74). What this means is that messengers came after Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him. His issue, therefore, implies the inception of a series of prophetic missions, as it has been said that Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him was a messenger sent for all of humanity, like Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. However, Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him was not a messenger who was sent forth for all of humanity. Rather, it was his embarking upon the ark that made him into a messenger for all of humanity, as the inhabitants of the earth back in those days were few. Allah Glorified is He punished the disbelievers for their sins while rescuing the believers from the flood. There were two kinds of people: believers and disbelievers. The believers had boarded the ark, while Allah the Almighty caused the disbelievers to drown. Thus, Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him became a universal messenger with respect to those who survived. They were, in effect, the recipients of a message that was specific to a particular time and place.

In this verse, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Then, after him, We sent messengers to their people...’ (Yunus: 74). Has Allah Glorified is He narrated the accounts of all the messengers peace be upon them? No, He has not, for He has said: ‘We have sent other messengers before you— some We have mentioned to you and some We have not...’ (Ghafir: 78). Allah the Almighty mentions only the accounts of foremost of the messengers peace be upon them for He says: ‘We has sent him to a hundred thousand people or more.’ (as-Saffat: 147) Therefore, there might be no mention made of those messengers whom Allah Glorified is He has sent forth to a people numbering less than a hundred thousand. We also know that a messenger would come to an isolated community; for the communities of world at that time were isolated from one another. A thousand years ago, for instance, we did not know of the existence of the American continent. In fact, we did not gain any definitive knowledge about all the continents until the aerial survey techniques of the modern age. There might be regions in the world which we know only through aerial photographs and not experientially.

We know that Adam’s progeny dwelled on earth and spread out later. The reason for this was that the sustenance—on which Adam’s progeny subsisted initially—became too little after the population began to grow. Therefore, as their livelihoods in that spot on earth began shrinking, some of them spread out to settle in the rest of the world. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Anyone who migrates for Allah’s Cause will find many a refuge and great plenty in the earth…’ (an-Nisa’: 100). Thus, some of Adam’s offspring moved to areas of abundant rainfall since emigration of this kind always looks towards places where water is plentiful, as water is the source of life. Historians who study ancient civilisations have observed that some civilisations were born on the banks of rivers and streams. The Bedouin people, on the other hand, would disperse throughout the desert; they are similar to the Arabs in this respect. Originally, they used to live around the dam of Ma’reb. After the dam collapsed, flooding the earth, people were afraid of the flood, for the two enemies against which man is powerless are fire and water. When the people saw the rising waters, they headed into the desert. There, they would dig wells and extract enough water to satisfy their needs for they knew that they were no match for the power of water. Therefore, the isolated Arab tribes came to be. Such was also the case elsewhere in the world. This is why each community suffered a different spiritual disease, so Allah the Exalted has sent forth for each community a warner. He says: ‘... Every community has been sent a warner.’ (Fatir: 24) Allah the Most High tells us the stories of some of these warners, but there are others whose stories He has not told. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘…We have sent other messengers before you— some We have mentioned to you and some We have not — and no messenger could bring about a sign except with Allah’s permission...’ (Ghafir: 78).

Allah Glorified is He hereby says: ‘Then, after him, We sent messengers to their peoples bringing them clear signs...’ (Yunus: 74). Is this a reference to the messengers whom Allah Glorified is He has not explicitly spoken of? No, this is not since He later sent forth Hud (Eber) peace be upon him to the tribe of ‘Ad, Saleh (Shelah) peace be upon him to the people of Thamud, and Shu'aib (Jethro) peace be upon him to, the people of Midyan. However, Allah Glorified is He does not mention of these messengers here. Rather, following the story of Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him Allah Glorified is He narrates the story of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him. It would seem that Allah’s intention is to speak to us of the most significant messages.

Since Allah Glorified is He sent forth a messenger to their communities, then every community has been sent a messenger, and every messenger has been sent forth to his people. In the aforementioned verse, both the word qawm (community) and rusul (messengers) are in the plural form. When two plurals are combined, one must break every element down to the singular form. For example, we might say: ‘All of you get into your cars’. This sentence is addressed to a plurality, and the implication is that every individual should get into his car. Every messenger came to his people bearing evidence of the truth. In other words, they came with clear signs which testify to their authenticity as messengers sent by Allah the Almighty.

Then, in the same verse, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Then, after him, We sent messengers to their peoples bringing them clear signs. But they would not believe in anything they already rejected. In this way, We seal the hearts of those who are full of hostility.’ (Yunus: 74) That is to say that even if all the people were to attain to faith, the continuous procession of messengers would have stopped. Not all people continued to hold firm to their faith, and as time progressed, forgetfulness set in, thus Allah Glorified is He sealed the hearts of the transgressors. The word At-Tab', as we know, denotes the act of ‘sealing’. This means that nothing can ever come out of the sealed heart, nor can anything ever come into it; so long as some people cherish disbelief, Allah the Almighty has therefore sealed their hearts such that no faith can ever enter into them, nor disbelief can ever exit. The act of ‘sealing’ is attributed to Allah Glorified is He. There are some people who, in their desire to point out inconsistencies in Allah’s Doctrine, say that their disbelief was caused by Allah's sealing of their hearts. Our response would be the following: notice that Allah the Exalted illustrates that He seals the hearts of the transgressors. Thus, they initially committed the act of transgression. In other words, they have taken no heed of the signs of Allah Glorified is He and disbelieved in Doctrine that has been revealed to them. Therefore, it is they who, through their transgression and their rejection of the Doctrine, have caused Allah's sealing of their hearts. Such an act of sealing their hearts was due to their clinging to that which they loved and that to which they had grown accustomed. Allah Glorified is He says in a Sacred Hadith: ‘I am so self-sufficient that I am in no need of having an associate.’(1) Allah the Almighty knows the best of examples, but for instance, you would say to one who is deeply indulged in his vice: ‘Since you love such a vice so much, then go ahead and wallow in it to your heart’s content.’ Those whose hearts have been sealed by Allah the Almighty are similar to those before them who denied the message and were transgressors, Then Allah Glorified is He says:

(1) [narrated by Muslim]

ثُمَّ بَعَثْنَا مِنۢ بَعْدِهِم مُّوسَىٰ وَهَٰرُونَ إِلَىٰ فِرْعَوْنَ وَمَلَإِيْهِۦ
بِـَٔايَٰتِنَا فَٱسْتَكْبَرُوا۟ وَكَانُوا۟ قَوْمًا مُّجْرِمِينَ ﴿٧٥﴾

After them We sent Moses and Aaron with Our signs to Pharaoh and his leading supporters, but they acted arrogantly they were wicked people [75] (The Quran, Yunus: 75)

Both Musa (Moses) and Harun (Aaron) peace be upon them were messengers. Their prophetic mission took some stages. Originally, Allah Glorified is He told Musa (Moses) peace be upon him: ‘I have chosen you, so listen to what is being revealed.’ (Ta Ha: 13) Allah Glorified is He also told him: ‘Go, both of you, to Pharaoh, for he has exceeded all bounds.’ (Ta Ha: 43) Then Musa (Moses) peace be upon him asked his Lord to allow him to bring along his brother so that the latter could strengthen him, whereby Allah Glorified is He said: ‘Musa (Moses), your request is granted.’ (Ta Ha: 36) Furthermore, Musa (Moses) peace be upon him wished that his words would be understood so he addressed the following supplication to his Lord Glorified is He: ‘Untie my tongue, so that they may understand my words.’ (Ta Ha: 27, 28) Later, Harun (Aaron) peace be upon him was sent forth with a message along with Musa (Moses) peace be upon him. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Go to Pharaoh, for he has truly become a tyrant.’ (Ta Ha: 24)

Therefore, it all began with the message of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him. Then, at Musa's (Moses’) request, Allah the Most High paired Harun (Aaron) peace be upon them with Musa (Moses) peace be upon him. The proof of this is that all of the miracles—which (by Allah’s leave) occurred in the course of that message—were carried out by Musa (Moses) peace be upon him. Thus, if Musa (Moses) peace be upon him is a messenger, and if he is then joined by Harun (Aaron) peace be upon them this necessarily means that the latter, in turn, became a messenger. This is what the Quran expresses in the following verse: '... We are your Lord's Messengers...' (Ta Ha: 47). In other words, they are both messengers from Allah the Exalted.

In another verse, Allah Glorified is He says: 'Go, both of you, to Pharaoh and say, "We bring a Message from the Lord of the Worlds."' (ash-Shu'ara': 16) Thus, they were both sent forth in order to carry the same mission. Neither did each have his own particular message, rather, their message was one, not multiple, even if there were two Messengers— Musa (Moses) and Harun (Aaron) peace be upon them. To give an example—and Allah Glorified is He knows the best of examples—consider when a king or a president sends forth a delegation to another king. The members of this delegation would say, 'We are the messengers sent by king so-and-so.' Now, when it comes to the mission of Musa (Moses) and Harun (Aaron) peace be upon them—the former clearly played the prominent role of performing the various miracles. However, Harun (Aaron) peace be upon him also had a role to play in the overall mission; this is why Allah Glorified is He says: '... We are your Lord's messengers...' (Ta Ha: 47).

This was due to Pharaoh having been a haughty, repulsive, and despicable person. Thus, if Harun (Aaron) peace be upon him were to say anything in support of his brother, Pharaoh might say, 'Who are you to have any say in this?' However, if they were to approach Pharaoh as a pair, and they have declared that they are both messengers, then any response Pharaoh were to direct at Harun (Aaron) peace be upon him was tantamount to a response directed at Musa (Moses) peace be upon him. I have said that in order to shut the door on those who seek to find fault in the Quran by asking, 'Why does the Quran at time use the word rasul (a messenger), while at other times it uses the word rasula (The two messengers)? What I have said in this matter is a sufficing rebuttal of the claims made by these trying to find faults in the Quran.

In the verse that we are presently examining, Allah Glorified is He says: 'After them We sent Musa (Moses) and Harun (Aaron) with Our signs to Pharaoh and his leading supporters, but they acted arrogantly...' (Yunus: 75). The word al-Mala' (leading supporters) refers to the leaders of the communities, their representatives, their masters and those who are close to the supreme leader. They are known as al-Mala' because it they who fill the eyes; in other words, the eyes look up to none but them. Pharaoh, as we know, did not become a pharaoh except with the help of al-Mala', for it is the latter who nominated him as their leader. Haman, for instance, used to promote the idea of the pharaoh and the priesthood used to support the idea that the pharaoh was a god.

Every pharaoh is supported by a group of powerful men who make him who he is. A popular Egyptian saying proceeds forth, ‘They asked Pharaoh, "How did you become like a pharaoh?" He said, "I have not found anyone to rebuff me."’ What this means is that he has not found anyone who would tell him: ‘Be reasonable.’ Were he to find somebody to tell him so, he would not exhibit the haughty arrogance of the pharaoh.

Now the signs that Allah Glorified is He sent forth to Pharaoh and his men through Musa (Moses) and Harun (Aaron) peace be upon them represent the miracles that affirm their truthfulness as prophets. In effect, these signs indicate that their message is truly conveyed on behalf of Allah Glorified is He. The signs could also amount to the Doctrine which affirms the existence of the Creator the Most High. However, Pharaoh and his men acted arrogantly by rejecting the signs. The word al-Istikbar means to ask for greatness; the word is similar in structure to the word istikhraj which means to ask for extraction and also to the word istafham which means to ask for understanding. He who asks for greatness is thereby artificially forcing it upon himself since he knows that his own abilities cannot afford him such greatness.

Allah Glorified is He concludes this verse with His Words: ‘... they were wicked people.’ (Yunus: 75) The gravest kind of criminality is that directed to oneself, for it might be acceptable for a person to harm his enemies. However, to commit a crime against oneself is unpardonable. The crimes of Pharaoh and his men earned them entry into hellfire where they will forever abide in disgrace. This is a great and degrading punishment.

Afterwards, Allah Glorified is He says:

فَلَمَّا جَآءَهُمُ ٱلْحَقُّ مِنْ عِندِنَا قَالُوٓا۟ إِنَّ هَٰذَا لَسِحْرٌ مُّبِينٌ ﴿٧٦﴾

When the truth came to them from Us, they said,
'This is blatant sorcery'[76] (The Quran, Yunus: 76)

The truth came to them through the messengers peace be upon them. Every human being must understand that the message of truth he receives at the hands of a messenger has nothing to do with a messenger's own ideas. Rather, a messenger merely communicates this message on behalf of Allah, the Creator Glorified is He. Thus, one who rejects a messenger is not thereby rejecting the opinion of his peer, for a messenger is the conveyer of a message from Allah the Almighty Who has sent him forth. One must realise the importance of any message coming from Allah, the True Lord; it is He Who is the True Lord and the Most High, and it is He Who has created all things properly: the sky has been created properly, the earth has been created properly, the sun runs its course properly, the rain falls from the sky properly, and all things—whether standstill or in motion—are governed by the laws willed by Allah Glorified is He. If man—unbridled by the Doctrine—were to acquire control over the laws which govern the natural phenomena, he would corrupt them since corruption affects those things which human beings have control over when they approach those beings in the absence of Allah's Doctrine. Corruption happens as a result of human beings choosing to engage in activities while being heedless of the Doctrine of Allah the Exalted. So, if you want your lives to enjoy that quality of uprightness which characterises the life of higher created beings—created beings which you have no control over—then, in that case, obey the Allah's Doctrine and abide by the balance which He has set, for He the Most High says: 'He has raised up the sky. He has set the balance so that you may not exceed in the balance.' (ar-Rahman: 7- 8) That is to say that if you want your life to become upright, if you want it to become as upright as the life of the other creatures—then be sure to submit that free will which you have been created with to the order mandated by the Doctrine of Allah Glorified is He. Direct your free will such that it operates within the framework of the Divine Doctrine.

Now when we contemplate Allah's Words: 'When the truth came to them from Us...' (Yunus: 76), you find these Words inform us that truth did not come from messengers themselves, for their personal opinion has nothing to do with the matter. Furthermore, beware of rejecting a true message just because it has being conveyed to by someone whom you do not love. Rather, you should consider the truth inherent in the message itself. You should not engage in the labyrinthine search for the one who has brought forth this. Look at those who rejected Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him when they said: ‘Why was this Quran not sent down to a distinguished man, from either of the two cities?’ (az-Zukhruf: 31) They had thereby involved the person upon whom the Quran was bestowed into their assessment of the truth. The reasonable thinking would have been to consider the Quran itself and to receive the wisdom regardless of its source.

You must learn from this incident: you must be receptive to wisdom regardless of who said it, paying no attention to the one who has brought forth the piece of wisdom. You should not refuse to accept any wisdom only because you do not love the one who issued it, and you should not accept it only because you love him. Rather, you should be receptive to wisdom so long as it is true since if you do not heed the wisdom, then you will merely harm yourself.

The truth is the one thing which is fixed and enduring. Even if the truth appears, at times, to be undermined, and error seems to prevail, this denotes the appearance of corruptive elements, whereby people cry out for the truth to be restored. The prevalence of the corruptive elements is the reason why people call for the truth to be restored and become excited at the prospect of its return. Therefore, when people feel the harmful effects of falsehood, they thereby turn towards the truth so as to cling to it. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘He sends water from the sky that fills riverbeds to overflowing, each according to its measure. The stream carries on its surface a growing layer of froth, like the froth that appears when people melt metals in the fire to make ornaments and tools. In this way, Allah illustrates truth and falsehood–the froth disappears, but what is of benefit to man stays behind–this is how Allah makes illustrations.’ (az-Zukhruf: 31) Allah the Almighty gives an example of the descending with the flow of water down the face of mountains, whereby every stream at the foot of the mountain absorbs as much water it can take.

Thus, the people drink their fill of water, and the earth becomes saturated with water as well. However, as the water is streaming down the face of the mountain, it picks up certain kinds of debris like silt and straw. This silt then settles as sediment on the riverbeds; this sediment benefits the earth. As for the debris like straw and impurities, they rise to the surface of the water. That floating debris is called zabad (froth). When you put this kind of debris in the fire, it produces crackling sounds. For example, when we light a fire so as to smelt iron ore, we find that the impure elements rise to surface, while the unalloyed iron remains on the bottom. This debris that is found on the surface of the water is later dumped on the banks. Look, for example, at the scene on the beach when the ocean waves dump their debris on the beach. This is the debris that was produced by ships which is then carried forth by the waves, whereby it passes away uselessly, whereas that which is useful to human beings stays in the earth; this is why Allah Glorified is He says: '... In this way Allah illustrates truth and falsehood.' (az-Zukhruf: 31) Therefore, Allah the Exalted allows some free rein for falsehood; however, He does not allow truth to succumb to it. Rather, He allows falsehood to exist so as to encourage people to turn to the truth. If they do not rally passionately around the truth, the truth will rally passionately around them. In this verse, Allah Glorified is He says: 'When the truth came to them from Us, they said, "This is blatant sorcery."' (Yunus: 76) Since they were famous for sorcery, they believed that the miraculous signs brought forth by Musa (Moses) peace be upon him were nothing more than blatant sorcery. In other words, they were quite clearly acts of sorcery.

Afterwards, Allah Glorified is He says:

قَالَ مُوسَىٰٓ أَتَقُولُونَ لِلۡحَقِّ لَمَّا جَآءَكُمۡۖ أَسِحۡرٌ
هَٰذَا وَلَا يُفۡلِحُ ٱلسَّٰحِرُونَ ﴿٧٧﴾

Moses said, 'Is this what you say about the Truth when it comes to you? Is this sorcery? Sorcerers never prosper' [77] (The Quran, Yunus: 77)

This verse sheds light on the response of master Musa (Moses) peace be upon him: 'Is this what you say about the truth when it comes to you? Is this sorcery?' (Yunus: 77). Those who criticise the Quran would say, 'How can the Quran assert that they said, "This is blatant sorcery." Then, in the next verse, it states that they asked, "Is this sorcery?"' These people who seek to find faults in the Quran have mistakenly believed the words: 'Is this sorcery?' (Yunus: 77) refer to the words uttered by Pharaoh and his people. However, these are the words uttered by Musa (Moses) peace be upon him. Thus, it is as though Musa (Moses) peace be upon him had uttered such a question so that they might reconsider their judgment: could that which he had brought forth really be sorcery? This is a rhetorical question whose purpose is to assert that it is not sorcery. It is thus an assertion that is formulated as a question since Musa (Moses) peace be upon him is certain that the honest response to such a question will confirm that that he has brought forth is no sorcery. Now if he expressed his words in the form of a simple statement, this could have entailed the possibility of either truth or falsehood. However, he chose to employ the interrogatory form, since his deniers would then be forced to answer hesitantly. To give an example—and Allah Glorified is He knows the best of examples—consider when you go to purchase fabric, the merchant tells you that it is pure, unadulterated wool; so you take a match and light one of the threads on fire. If the material burns as would plastic or some artificial fabric, you would then tell the merchant: 'How can this be pure wool?' At this point, the only option left for the merchant is to agree with you, otherwise he will remain silent, unable to conceal the truth any longer. Therefore, employing the rhetorical question in this instance will have a deeper impact than if you were to simply put your words in a form of a statement since your listener must respond.

Thus, the Words of Allah Glorified is He wherein He states Musa (Moses) peace be upon him as saying 'Is this what you say about the truth when it comes to you?' (Yunus: 77) highlight the necessity of taking cognisance of the truth regardless of the one who brought it. This is why Musa (Moses) peace be upon him did not say, 'Do you say about the truth when it comes to you that it is blatant sorcery?' The Words of wisdom contained in this holy verse affirm the necessity of considering the truth independently of the messenger who came bearing it.

Allah Glorified is He concludes the verse by saying: '...Is this sorcery? Sorcerers never prosper.' (Yunus: 77) Thus, our master Musa (Moses) peace be upon him proclaimed that sorcery is ultimately of no avail. However, the miraculous signs which he delivered on behalf of Allah Glorified is He were effective. After turning into a snake, Musa's (Moses') staff devoured every rope that the sorcerers threw at it; it outdid every one of their magic tricks.

Allah the Exalted wished that Musa's (Moses') staff would be the vehicle for the miraculous signs of the same kind as that at which his people excelled. Thus, when Allah the Almighty delivers a miracle to a given community, He makes the miracle of the same type as that which that community excels at, so that the miracle might represent a challenge for them in the very same area where they have the most expertise and knowledge. For example, you would not challenge someone who has no knowledge of architecture to build you an apartment house. However, you might challenge an architect to build you a pyramid. In effect, modern science has still not uncovered certain discoveries of the ancients—knowledge which they might not have formally recorded in any manuscripts. Modern science has not also come across any discoveries which would explain how the ancients created a vacuum between every rock such that all the rocks were held together in perfect cohesion. In this instance Allah's Words, '... Sorcerers never prosper.' (Yunus: 77) reveal that the idea of al-Falah (prosper) is related to the physical work performed by a farmer—blowing the earth, sowing the seeds, irrigating the earth and thereafter waiting for his efforts to bear fruit. The term al-Falah is also derived of 'cleaving iron' into large masses or small pieces. Such an operation is only successful if the iron takes on a form that is suitable for use.

Allah's Words, '... Sorcerers never prosper.' (Yunus: 77), alert us to the fact that sorcery is a kind of illusion; it is not real. This is why Allah Glorified is He says elsewhere in the Quran: '…they cast a spell upon the people's eyes…' (al-A'raf: 116). He also says: '…and—lo and behold!—through their sorcery, their ropes and staffs seemed to him to be moving.' (Ta Ha: 66) Thus, sorcery is nothing but illusion; it does not actually alter reality. Now due to Musa's (Moses') miracle surpassing the abilities of all Pharaoh's sorcerers, Pharaoh therefore mobilised everyone who was connected with sorcery, including those who excelled at it and even those who had only a modest understanding of it. Now, since sorcery is mere illusion, we find that when the sorcerers gathered together and threw down their ropes and staffs, and Musa (Moses) peace be upon him threw down his staff—the latter transformed into a snake that devoured their every artifice. What did the sorcerers do at this point? Allah Glorified is He says in the chapter of Ta Ha: ‘[So it was, and] the sorcerers threw themselves down in submission. "We believe," they said, "in the Lord of Harun (Aaron) and Musa (Moses)."’ (Ta Ha: 70) This was due to the sorcerer perceiving his trick for what it really was. Even if they had cast a spell over other people’s eyes, the sorcerers themselves perceived their ropes as mere ropes and their staffs as mere staffs.

As for Musa's (Moses’) staff, it was no illusion. The sorcerers perceived it as a real, living snake which, in effect, snapped up all of their tricks. This is why they fell into prostration and proclaimed their faith in the Lord of Musa (Moses) and Harun (Aaron) peace be upon them. Thus, they did not proclaim their faith in Musa (Moses) and Harun (Aaron) peace be upon them rather, they proclaimed their faith: ‘... in the Lord of Harun (Aaron) and Musa (Moses).’ (Ta Ha: 70) for they had realised from experience that what Musa (Moses) peace be upon him had performed was no act of sorcery, rather, it was the act of the Creator the Most High.

Musa's (Moses’) composure during this episode stemmed from the training that he had undergone by his Lord. Allah Glorified is He Who had asked him: ‘Musa (Moses), what is that in your right hand?’ ‘It is my staff,’ he said, ‘I lean on it; restrain my sheep with it...’ (Ta Ha: 17-18). Musa (Moses) peace be upon him replied to Allah the Almighty in a detailed and elaborate fashion, for he was happy to speak with Allah Glorified is He at his leisure and be in His Company. However, when he felt that he had prolonged the conversation long enough; he wrapped it up and respectfully said: ‘...I also have other uses for it.’ (Ta Ha: 18) Thus, at first, he was revelling in the company of Allah the Exalted then he realised the need for propriety when speaking with Him. Allah Glorified is He has coached him with respect to the staff when He commanded him to, first, throw it on the ground. It thereby transformed into a moving snake. If this action were merely a form of sorcery, Musa (Moses) peace be upon him would not have winced in fear, for he would have seen it for what it really was, a simple staff. Thus, the difference between the miracle of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him and the works of Pharaoh's sorcerers is that the latter cast a spell over people's eyes. Due to their sorcery, the people fell under the illusion that their staffs and ropes were moving. However, with Musa's (Moses') miracle—whereby he cast his staff—the sorcerers realised through direct experience that the innate nature of the staff had been altered.

A staff, as we know, comes from the branch of a tree. Now Allah the Almighty could have transformed it into a fruit-bearing tree. In that case, however, it would still have remained a vegetal being. So Allah the Most High willed to elevate it to a higher station than that of plants, namely that of animals. Thus, it turned into a snake, snatching up everything that the sorcerers had thrown.

Afterwards, Allah Glorified is He says:

قَالُوٓاْ أَجِئۡتَنَا لِتَلۡفِتَنَا عَمَّا وَجَدۡنَا عَلَيۡهِ ءَابَآءَنَا وَتَكُونَ لَكُمَا
ٱلۡكِبۡرِيَآءُ فِي ٱلۡأَرۡضِ وَمَا نَحۡنُ لَكُمَا بِمُؤۡمِنِينَ ﴿٧٨﴾

They said, 'Have you come to turn us away from the faith we found our fathers following, so that you and your brother can gain greatness in this land? We will never believe in you' [78] (The Quran, Yunus: 78)

In this verse, we see that Pharaoh's sorcerers were attributing the miracle—of the staff transforming into a snake—to Musa (Moses) peace be upon him even though the latter attributed the miracle to Allah Glorified is He.

The recipients of the message—namely Pharaoh and his people—ought to have concentrated on the content of the messenger's message and not on the personality of the messenger. If Pharaoh had asked Musa (Moses) peace be upon him 'Have you been sent to us?' this would mean that Pharaoh was proclaiming his faith in the existence of the Most High God. However, Pharaoh did not attain to faith at that moment; that is why he says: 'Have you come to us ...?' (Yunus: 78) Thus, Pharaoh is quoted as attributing the act of coming to Musa (Moses) peace be upon him.

Now why did Musa (Moses) peace be upon him come? Allah Glorified is He mentions what Pharaoh and his peoplesaid: 'Have you come to turn us away from the faith we found our fathers following?...' (Yunus: 78) Now the word al-Iltifat means the act of turning the face away from the object that it is facing. So long as a person is facing something, his vision and his orientation is focused upon that thing. Now the people of Pharaoh were indulged in corruption and aberrance. So, there was nothing in front of them except for that corruption and aberrance. When Musa (Moses) peace be upon him came to them in order to turn them away from such corruption and aberrance, whereby they said: ‘Have you come to turn us away from the faith we found our fathers following...’ (Yunus: 78). Thus, they revealed their true position, for they had been imitating their forefathers. Such blind imitation gives the imitator comfort since he does not have to use his brain or his intellect in order to believe in a particular creed nor to model his behaviour accordingly.

The following popular aphorism captures the essence of this situation: ‘like a deaf person at a wedding procession'. In other words, a deaf person does not hear what is being said no matter which party it is coming from. He simply walks with the crowd wherever it goes and completely lacks any sense of direction. An imitator, in effect, underutilises his intellectual capacity. He does not use it to choose between the various alternatives. Thus, he does not take cognisance of what is right so that he might act on it, nor does he take cognisance of what is wrong, so that he might avoid it.

Now, Pharaoh and his leading supporters were indulged in same aberrance of their forefathers. Aberrance does not require any mental effort of a person, nor does it entail making difficult choices. In fact, it satisfies his fleeting desires. As for discerning right from wrong and following the Doctrine of heaven, they help to curb the base desires and prevent a person from erring. Aberrance, on the contrary, only increases the intensity of human desire.

Thus, a person who blindly imitates is in one of the two following situations. The first situation is that he does not use his brain; rather, he just does what those before him have done or what those around him are doing. The second situation is that he realises that by doing what others are doing, he would not by bridled by any Doctrine. However, the messenger who arrives requires that he adheres to a doctrine. By following this doctrine, he could only earn profits in a legal manner; for example, he could not commit any sinful acts, nor could he act iniquitously towards anyone. Thus, the doctrine bridles his actions. However, if he were to follow the actions of his aberrant forefathers, his range of movement would expand such that it would encompass more of his baser desires.

This is why I have always said that this issue of blind imitation must direct our attention to the principle of moral education. You will notice that, as along as a child has not yet reached puberty, he will remain without an independent core self and will simply imitate his parents. However, as soon as he acquires an independent identity, he will start to rebel. He might tell his parents, ‘You follow old, outdate traditions which have no place in today’s world.’ However, if at an early age the child imbibes the proper religious values, he will abide by the principle of the truth and will abstain from indulging his base desires. We find that the families who do not follow Allah’s Doctrine will suffer in the upbringing of their children from the behaviour of them when the latter comes under the influence of bad peers. Thus, they turn towards that which extends the range of desires, like addiction and other such perversions. On the contrary, the children of families who are committed to the Doctrine of Allah Glorified is He do not emulate any of the wayward people, for their consciences have learned how to discern right from wrong. Furthermore, blind imitation of parents might turn children into carbon copies of their parents. However, to coach and educate children on the importance of using one’s mind in everything is the kind of upbringing whereby societies progress towards what is best, provided that parents follow Allah’s Doctrine. Therefore, a child’s identity will develop in the light of Allah’s Doctrine. Accordingly, a child does not rebel and take wayward ways. In fact, he might rebel and take that which is virtuous so as to render it even more virtuous. Therefore, imitating someone needs deep research since a person whom you are planning on imitating cannot be held responsible for your actions. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘People, be mindful of your Lord and fear a day when no parent will take the place of their child, nor a child take the place of their parent, in any way...’ (Luqman: 33). Thus, a child’s actions must emanate from the conscience within, as should the actions of parents. Every human being must use his mind to choose between right and wrong. This is why you find that the Holy Quran mentions those who blindly imitated their forefathers as saying: ‘But when it is said to them, "Follow the message that Allah has sent down" they answer, "We follow the ways of our fathers…"' (al-Baqara: 170). Then Allah Glorified is He answers them: 'What! Even though their fathers understood nothing and were not guided?' (al-Baqara: 170) Therefore, if a matter is of blind imitation, then why does the child bother to learn? Why did not children just sleep on the ground? Why bother buying mattresses? Why are they attracted towards developing things and tools which make life easier? Thus, blind imitation is the suspension of all brain function and intellectual abilities. To abandon these two things amounts to abandoning the project of development and progressing towards a better life.

Therefore, the Quran insists that we use our brains in order to discern right from wrong. If the Doctrine has come from Heaven, then follow that which has come to you from above. This guidance amounts to marching towards the virtuous life. Allah Glorified is He says: 'When it is said to them, "Come to what Allah has sent down, and to the messenger." They say, "What we inherited from our forefathers is good enough for us…"' (al-Ma'ida: 104). What this means is that they declared that they had no need for the Doctrine of Heaven, whereby the Quran replies: 'Even though their forefathers knew nothing and were not guided.' (al-Ma'ida: 104)

Thus, we see that, in two separate places, the Quran describes two situations pertaining to the imitators. The first is wherein Allah Glorified is He says: '…"We follow the ways of our fathers." What! Even though their fathers understood nothing and were not guided?' (al-Baqara: 170) The second is wherein Allah Glorified is He says: '…They say, "What we inherited from our forefathers is good enough for us", even though their forefathers knew nothing and were not guided.' (al-Ma'ida: 104)

In this verse they announced that it was enough for them to continue following what their forefathers had done. There is a difference between the two verses. The word al-'Aqil (one who understands*)* is different from one who does not know since al-'Aqil is capable of making rational judgments. However, a person who does not have knowledge merely relies on the rational judgments arrived at by others. Thus, those who were content to follow the ways of their forefathers said: 'What we inherited from our forefathers is good enough for us…' (al-Ma'ida: 104). These are the people who took extreme pride in the ways of their forefathers; this is why the Quran says that their forefathers knew nothing. This means that their forefathers could not think straight and that they did not have knowledge of anything. They lived in the deep darkness of ignorance.

In the verse we are presently examining, Allah Glorified is He mentions Pharaoh and his people as saying: 'Have you come to turn us away from the faith we found our fathers following, so that you and your brother can gain greatness in this land?...' (Yunus: 78) What this means is that you have come to turn us away, to orient us away from our way which is that of our forefathers whom we imitate, so that you and your brother might gain greatness in this land. Thus, it becomes apparent that they believed that the greatness they enjoyed in the land is due to their emulation of their forefathers. They wished to hold on to this greatness.

There are two points to consider here: the first is abandoning that which they found their forefathers believing in and doing, while the second is relinquishing the political power that they possess in the land. An example of this is when one warrior tells another: 'Throw down your sword'. This is different from the command: 'Give me your sword' since throwing down a sword amounts to a stripping of power. However, taking a sword means adding another sword to the collection of weapons which the first warrior already possesses. For Pharaoh and his people, the message of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him represented a compound disaster. The first was abandoning the doctrine of the forefathers. The second was the stripping away of supremacy, namely temporal power, rank, authority, greatness, consultation and the advantages that come with all of these, for every member of Pharaoh's entourage derived his share of benefit depending upon his closeness to Pharaoh. That is why they declared their disbelief and said that with which Allah Glorified is He concluded the noble verse which we are currently examining: '...We will never believe in you.' (Yunus: 78) This means that the leading supporters of Pharaoh and his entourage declared their determination to hold on to their worldly gains and their temporal authority. They refused to believe in the message of Musa (Moses) and Harun (Aaron) peace be upon them.

Then Allah Glorified is He says:

وَقَالَ فِرۡعَوۡنُ ٱئۡتُونِي بِكُلِّ سَٰحِرٍ عَلِيمٖ ٧٩

And Pharaoh said, ‘Bring me every learned sorcerer’ [79] (The Quran, Yunus: 79)

Pharaoh was well aware of the highly skilled sorcerers in his kingdom. It is enough that he himself succeeded in deluding people into thinking that he was a god. He then gave his aides the order to rally every sorcerer. As soon as he issued the order, the sorcerers were brought to him.

In the following verse Allah Glorified is He adds:

فَلَمَّا جَآءَ ٱلسَّحَرَةُ قَالَ لَهُم مُّوسَىٰٓ أَلۡقُواْ مَآ أَنتُم مُّلۡقُونَ ٨٠

When the sorcerers came, Moses said to them, ‘Throw down whatever you have’ [80] (The Quran, Yunus: 80)

The period between Pharaoh's issuing of the order and carrying it out was as short as possible. Thus, we should understand that an order issued by a man of great authority does not tolerate any procrastination or delaying on the part of those who execute it. When the Quran treats some issue or other, it always provides a detailed account of reality. The Quran does not refer to anything that could spoil the image of this reality. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘And when the sorcerers came, Musa (Moses) said to them, "Throw down whatever you have."' (Yunus: 80)

This verse effectively summarises the entire situation. When the sorcerers knew that Pharaoh needed their help in a predicament regarding the authority of the state, they knew that this issue was a tough and difficult one. Thus, they knew that they must hurry to his aid. In these verses, Allah the Exalted does not give a comprehensive account of the situation since there are other incidents of this story which are found in other passages of the Quran, and every verse sheds light on the incident with which it is concerned. This is why, in this instance, Allah Glorified is He does not say that Pharaoh’s aides sent out a call to all of the cities that the sorcerers should come forth. This part of the story can be seen in other passages of the Quran.

Allah Glorified is He does not tell us here that the sorcerers wanted to take advantage from the situation as they told Pharaoh: ‘Shall we be rewarded if we win?’ (al-A’raf: 113) The stipulation of such clause reveals the nature of human relationships in that society; asking for a reward means that, in their previous work with Pharaoh, they did not receive any recompense. Thus, when the opportunity presented itself, and they saw that Pharaoh was in a bind, they asked for a reward. Pharaoh promised to reward the sorcerers and to let them join his inner court because if their sorcery was able to defeat the miracle of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him such a feat would preserve Pharaoh's status as king. Therefore, they would have to be included among the royal entourage who benefitted the most from the royal graces. Pharaoh promised them all of this in order to encourage them to do their best to nullify Moses's miracle so that Pharaoh's throne might be consolidated. In the verse which we are presently reflecting on, Allah Glorified is He wishes to give a summary account of the events; the rest of them are mentioned in other passages of the Quran. Thus, Allah Glorified is He presently says: 'When the sorcerers came, Moses said to them, "Throw down whatever you have."' (Yunus: 80) The sorcerers thereby threw down their staffs and their ropes.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

فَلَمَّآ أَلْقَوْا۟ قَالَ مُوسَىٰ مَا جِئْتُم بِهِ ٱلسِّحْرُ ۖ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ
سَيُبْطِلُهُۥٓ ۖ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ لَا يُصْلِحُ عَمَلَ ٱلْمُفْسِدِينَ ﴿٨١﴾

When they did so, Moses said, 'Everything you have brought is sorcery and God will show it to be false. God does not make the work of mischief-makers right [81]

We know that, in this instance, Allah Glorified is He wishes to give a brief account of the situation. However, in another verse, He describes the events in detail. Allah Glorified is He says in that verse regarding the sorcerers: 'So they said, "Moses, will you throw first or shall we?"' (al-A'raf: 115) We know that in any showdown between two opponents, every side needs to taunt the other so as to lower the other side's morale. In this instance, Musa (Moses) peace be upon him explains to them that what they had contrived is sorcery, amounting to mere illusion. Allah Glorified is He has informed His Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him that his staff would turn into a real snake, while the transformation of their staffs and ropes would consist of mere optical illusion. Musa (Moses) peace be upon him conveyed to them Allah's verdict regarding such illusions: '…Everything you have brought is sorcery and Allah will show it to be false. Allah does not make the work of mischief-makers right.' (Yunus: 81)

Thus came the decisive statement which settled the matter; it was the judgment issued regarding the works of Pharaoh, his entourage and the sorcerers. All of their works were causing mischief on earth. Were it not for this fact, Allah Glorified is He would not have sent them a Messenger supported by a miracle which coincided with their own area of expertise. Indeed, they excelled at sorcery, so Allah Glorified is He sent forth a real miracle which devoured what they had contrived. If they excelled at creating illusions, Allah Glorified is He has created the universe with His utterance of the Word 'Be'. Allah creates realities, not illusions. That is why Allah Glorified is He says in the following verse

وَيُحِقُّ ٱللَّهُ ٱلْحَقَّ بِكَلِمَٰتِهِۦ وَلَوْ كَرِهَ ٱلْمُجْرِمُونَ ﴿٨٢﴾

He will uphold the Truth with His words, even if the evildoers hate it' [82] (The Quran, Yunus: 82)

Thus, Allah's every wish is brought about by the word 'Be'. As soon as He utters this word, His wish is brought into being. Allah Glorified is He says: 'When He wills something to be, His way is to say, "Be," and it is.' (Ya Sin: 82)

Now, the expression kun fa-yakun ('Be,' and it is) is a quite lengthy expression considering that it allegedly represents the amount of time that it takes for Allah's Command to be carried out. However, no shorter expression than this exists in the human language. Uttering the Arabic letters Kaf (K) and Nun (N) requires a certain amount of time. Nevertheless, doing what Allah Glorified is He wills does not require the passage of any time. In other words, the command kun (be) signifies that a thing is brought into existence even before the word kun has been spoken. Every existing thing is brought into existence and made manifest with the Will of Allah Glorified is He. Hence, He wills to show us here that the truth is conveyed through the words of the Messengers and that the miracles performed by them are evidence attesting to the authenticity of their Message, so that Allah Glorified is He punishes and humiliates the evildoers, while providing the world with relief from their aberrant and corrupt ways.

Afterwards, Allah Glorified is He says:

فَمَآ ءَامَنَ لِمُوسَىٰٓ إِلَّا ذُرِّيَّةٌ مِّن قَوْمِهِۦ عَلَىٰ خَوْفٍ مِّن فِرْعَوْنَ وَمَلَإِيْهِمْ
أَن يَفْتِنَهُمْ ۚ وَإِنَّ فِرْعَوْنَ لَعَالٍ فِى ٱلْأَرْضِ وَإِنَّهُۥ لَمِنَ ٱلْمُسْرِفِينَ ﴿٨٣﴾

But no one believed in Moses except a few of his own people, for fear that Pharaoh and their leaders would persecute them: Pharaoh was domineering in the land and prone to excess [83] (The Quran, Yunus: 83)

Now, since the sorcerers—who were the aides of Pharaoh and his primary agents in the showdown with Musa (Moses) peace be upon him—proclaimed their faith in Moses's Lord, Pharaoh therefore punished them, saying: ‘How dare you believe in him before I have given you permission?’ (Ta Ha: 71) This indicates that the idea of his own divinity still dominated his thinking; that is why the people were afraid to proclaim their faith, as Allah Glorified is He says: ‘But no one believed in Moses except a few of his own people...’ (Yunus: 83) The word dhurriyya refers to the young children who were untouched by the widespread corruption in the land. In addition, young children enjoy the quality of purity, living in a complete detachment from the problems of the world. They have not yet reached the age when a person begins to covet power. They believed, even though they feared that Pharaoh and their leaders would persecute them. “For fear of Pharaoh and his establishment that they would persecute them”. (Yunus: 83)

The phrase ‘ala khawf (for fear) denotes a form of superiority similar to when we say ‘on the horse’ or ‘on the chair’. In this situation, the elevated subject is in a position of superiority compared to what he towers over. The one who rises over something is one who takes possession of that which he rises over; the latter, on the other hand, bears all the weight. However, one of the other uses of the preposition ‘ala (literally ‘on’) is when it serves to mean ma‘a (in spite of). An example of this can be found Allah's Words: ‘They give food to the poor, the orphan, and the captive, though they love it themselves...’ (al-Insan: 8), meaning that they give away food in spite of their own love for it. When Allah Glorified is He uses one letter instead of another, there is always a reason for that. An example can be found in Allah's Words quoting Pharaoh: ‘I shall certainly cut off your alternate hands and feet, then crucify you fi (‘on’, but literally ‘in’) the trunks of palm trees...’ (Ta Ha: 71) In this case, Allah Glorified is He employs the preposition fi (in) instead of the word ‘Ala (on) in order to indicate that the act of crucifixion shall be severe—so severe, in fact, that the parts of the crucified body shall be firmly fastened to the crucifixion object.

Likewise, witness the Words of Allah Glorified is He: ‘They give food to the poor, the orphan, and the captive, though they love it themselves...’ (al-Insan: 8). It is as though they were the ones who had mastery over the love, and such love could take them anywhere they wished. Also, witness Allah's Words in the verse we are examining: ‘... 'ala (for) fear...’ (Yunus: 83). That is, they are on top of fear which means that fear is leading them to the corridors of anticipation of pain. In this case, they had attained faith for ‘fear that Pharaoh and their leaders would persecute them.’ (Yunus: 83)

These words of Allah Glorified is He indicate that such fear is not fear of Pharaoh, because Pharaoh wages campaigns of terror through his agents and entourage. They are like the secret police in those countries which have no regard for human dignity. Due to his position and his status, Pharaoh does not torture in person; rather, this is done by his agents. In this instance, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘...for fear that Pharaoh and their leaders would yaftinahum (literally, Pharaoh would persecute them).’ (Yunus: 83) Allah Glorified is He does not say, ‘…for fear that they (both Pharaoh and their leaders) persecute them.’ This indicates that the agents do not torture the believers because they take pleasure in it; rather, the agents do this because it is Pharaoh who takes pleasure in it.

Thus, the personal pronoun is mentioned in its plural form on one occasion and in its singular form on another occasion. This is so to ensure that every pronouncement in the Quran conveys its meaning in the clearest manner. When the exegetes wanted to shed light on the meaning of the word dhurriyya, they said, ‘This word refers to Pharaoh's wife ‘Asiya, Pharaoh's stockist, the wife of the stockist, Pharaoh’s coiffeuse, and all from among Moses’s people who attained faith but kept it a secret. All those people abstained from publicly proclaiming their faith in the Message of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him out of fear of Pharaoh’s punishment. Pharaoh was a tyrant in the land and claimed that he was divine, so, if Pharaoh suspected that someone was threatening his claim to divinity, he would inevitably submit him to the harshest of punishments. This was why they feared such punishment; previously, Pharaoh had, through his agents, slaughtered the newborn children of the Israelites while allowing their women to live. Thus, they lived in perpetual fear of Pharaoh’s agents who carried out his every command. That is why the personal pronoun is employed to denote the plural form—as in the words of Allah Glorified is He ‘... and their leaders...’ (Yunus: 83). The personal pronoun has also beenemployed to denote the singular form. In the following words of Allah Glorified is He the personal pronoun refers to Pharaoh as the giver of orders: ‘... for fear that he would....’ (Yunus: 83). Therefore, they feared that Pharaoh persecute and torture them through his agents.

Allah Glorified is He says: ‘... Pharaoh was domineering in the land and prone to excess.’ (Yunus: 83) The word al-musrif denotes exceeding proper bounds. In his excesses, Pharaoh had gone beyond all the limits, especially when he claimed to be a god. Allah Glorified is He quotes Pharaoh as saying: ‘…I am your supreme lord.’ (an-Nazi‘at: 24) Allah Glorified is He also says: ‘Pharaoh said, “Counsellors, you have no other god that I know of except me”...’ (al-Qasas: 38). Pharaoh rose to such great heights of arrogance that he routinely oppressed and terrorised other weak and helpless human beings. Allah Glorified is He also quotes Pharaoh as saying: ‘Pharaoh said, “My people, is the Kingdom of Egypt not mine? And these rivers that flow at my feet, are they not mine?”...’ (az-Zukhruf: 51) Thus, Pharaoh was guilty of the worst kind of excess.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

Moses said, ‘My people, if you have faith in God and are devoted to Him, put your trust in Him’ [84]
(The Quran, Yunus: 84)

There are two stipulations involved in this verse. The first one is in Allah's Words: ‘if you have faith in Allah’ (Yunus: 84). The response to this stipulation can be found in Allah’s Words: ‘put your trust in Him.’ (Yunus: 84) Then, He mentions another stipulation: ‘If you are devoted to Him.’ (Yunus: 84) Thus, the first stipulation and its response are mentioned. Then, another stipulation comes—the latter is identical with the former; that is, the act of devotion to Allah because having faith in Allah Glorified is He entails their submission to Him and requires that they surrender to Him. From our own lives, we can give the example of the school principal who wants to punish a student who has violated the rules and regulations. The student tries to appeal to the principal’s mercy, whereby the principal responds to his pleas by saying, ‘If you show up to school on Saturday with your legal guardian, I will admit you’; the presence of the legal guardian is related to the appointment specified by the principal, if the pupil is to be readmitted into the classroom. Thus, we find that the second stipulation is connected to the first stipulation. It is this principle that is at work in the following Words of Allah Glorified is He: ‘...if you have faith in Allah and are devoted to Him, put your trust in Him.’ (Yunus: 84)

Faith, as we know, is the inner work performed by the heart. Surrender to Allah Glorified is He is an external work. Sometimes, a person does perform the teachings of Islam. At other times, a person might abstain from performing the teachings even though he continues to cling to his faith in Allah Glorified is He. Likewise, you might find a person performing the teachings of Islam while lacking the inner faith. That is why we find Allah Glorified is He saying: ‘...those who believe and do righteous deeds.’ (Yunus: 84). We find that Allah Glorified is He elucidates this matter by pointing to that pivotal statement in His Words: ‘The desert Arabs say, “We have faith.”’ (al-Hujurat: 14) Faith is work of the heart; that is why the Divine Command follows: ‘…[Prophet], tell them, “You do not have faith. What you should say instead is, ‘We have submitted’”, for faith has not yet entered your hearts.”’ (al-Hujurat: 14) It means that, indeed, you perform the outward obligatory rites of Islam, however, faith has not yet entered your hearts.

In this instance, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘... if you have faith in Allah and are devoted to Him, put your trust in Him.’ (Yunus: 84) Thus, we see that trust in Allah Glorified is He is one of the requirements of faith: in every situation, a person must surrender his will to Allah Glorified is He in whom he has faith. This is why faith is only efficacious when it is accompanied with total surrender to Allah Glorified is He. Thus, if you surrender to Allah Glorified is He along with your faith in Him, then place your trust in Him. However, if you have merely adopted the creedal aspect of faith and have not surrendered your will to Allah's directives— of 'Do' and 'Do not'—this type of trust in Allah Glorified is He is of no use. Thus, what we have said previously is being confirmed: if you come across a formulation such that it contains an initial stipulation, followed by a response and then followed by another stipulation—know that the latter stipulation is the one that is in the forefront because it is a stipulation concerning the first stipulation. In the present example, this means that the ability to place one's trust in Allah Glorified is He can only be achieved when the outer condition of surrender and the inner condition of faith are both present.

Allah Glorified is He says:

فَقَالُواْ عَلَى ٱللَّهِ تَوَكَّلۡنَا رَبَّنَا لَا تَجۡعَلۡنَا فِتۡنَةٗ لِّلۡقَوۡمِ ٱلظَّٰلِمِينَ ﴿٨٥﴾

They said, 'We have put our trust in God. Lord! Do not make us an object of persecution for the oppressors [85] (The Quran, Yunus: 85)

In other words, they responded positively to the Message of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him simply because they had said: 'We have put our trust in Allah.' (Yunus: 85). If the preposition is placed before its object, this implies that the matter is exclusive to the object. In this case, the act of placing one's trust is restricted to Allah Glorified is He; no one other than Him is a worthy recipient of our trust. Then, their supplication follows: 'Lord! Do not make us an object of persecution for the oppressors.' (Yunus: 85) The word al-fitna means trial. As we have said before, such trial is not bad in itself. However, what is bad is the end result of the trial if it proves to be disadvantageous for the tested subject. One could also use the word fitna as in fatant adh-dhahab, meaning 'I smelted gold; I refined it from all impurities'. We also know that goldsmiths mix it with other elements to make it stronger because gold that is not admixed with other elements can be brittle.

However, the word al-fitna used in the verse ‘Lord! Do not make us an object of persecution for the oppressors,’ (Yunus: 85) denotes the fear of renouncing their faith if Pharaoh were to seize and torture them. It is as if they were saying, ‘O Lord, do not allow Pharaoh to subjugate us through his harsh torture.’ This is if they are the ones being subjected to temptation, but what if they happen to be the tempters? In this case, if they do not follow the religion faithfully, Pharaoh and his people would not know that the people who proclaimed their faith have truly surrendered to Allah Glorified is He. If they deviate from the religion, the people of Pharaoh would say, ‘They are not true believers.’ We find Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him—who is the father of the Prophets and enjoys great pre-eminence as a Prophet—saying: ‘Lord, do not expose us to mistreatment [at the hands of] the disbelievers.’ (al-Mumtahana: 5) This supplication of Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him teaches us the importance of adhering to the teachings of the religion; thus, no one should ever look at a Muslim or a believer and say, ‘This is a person who proclaims his faith and yet his behaviour is contrary to the teachings of his religion.’ That is why Ibrahim (Abraham) used to go above and beyond the call of duty when carrying out orders. Allah Glorified is He about him: ‘When Abraham’s Lord tested him with certain commandments, which he fulfilled...’ (al-Baqara: 124) That is, he used to fulfil every task faithfully and perfectly; he was a role model and did not perform his religious duties in a superficial manner. Therefore, if they happen to be the ones subjected to temptation, they ought to resist against these temptations. But if they happen to be the tempters, they must hold steadfast to the teachings of the religion, so that no one should ever accuse them of falling short regarding their religious obligations; otherwise, the disbelievers would fall even deeper into the darkness of disbelief and aberrance. Allah's Words, ‘Lord! Do not make us an object of persecution for the oppressors,’ (Yunus: 85) indicate that they are preoccupied with matters of religion, whether they are the ones subjected to temptation or they are the tempters.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَنَجِّنَا بِرَحْمَتِكَ مِنَ ٱلْقَوْمِ ٱلْكَٰفِرِينَ ﴿٨٦﴾

Save us, in Your mercy, from those who reject
[Your message] [86] (The Quran, Yunus: 86)

This noble verse clarifies that they were concerned with the state of the disbelievers; this means that they were hoping for the enemy to attain faith so that this enemy might come under the influence of the guidance of faith. Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: ‘No one of you becomes a true believer until he likes for his brother what he likes for himself.’(1) They wished for their enemies to attain faith in spite of the latter’s iniquity. Thus, Allah Glorified is He teaches His creatures that it is the foolishness of enmity to wish for the misfortune of one’s enemies because it is your enemy’s evil side that makes you suffer, and it is in your advantage to pray for his wellbeing, because the benefit of his wellbeing will also reach you.

The believer must pray that his enemy will be guided to the truth; in becoming guided, you will in turn reap some of the benefit. One of the characteristics of faith is that its benefits extend over to others. When they prayed that Allah Glorified is He does not make them an object of persecution for the oppressors, this shows that there are various degrees of oppression and that Pharaoh and his people were guilty of the worst kind of oppression. Allah Glorified is He Himself says: ‘...attributing partners to Allah is a terrible wrong.’ (Luqman: 13) The climax of iniquity lies in stripping away the rights of one person and handing it to someone other than its rightful owner. Pharaoh and his people had attributed partners to Allah Glorified is He. Pharaoh thought of himself as a god, and those around him believed him. Therefore, the climax of iniquity consists of attributing partners to Allah Glorified is He. Below this grave act of iniquity, there are the major sins, and below them are the minor sins.

They prayed to Allah Glorified is He saying: ‘Save us, in Your Mercy, from those who reject Your Message.’ (Yunus: 86) Their words can be rephrased as ‘render us immune from the oppression of those people’. One of the biggest fears of the ancients was the gushing forth of floodwater in a way that only those standing on high ground would be saved. The term an-najwa means an elevated area of the land; this is in fact the origin of the term an-najah (safety). Now in this instance, Allah Glorified is He quotes them as saying, ‘Save us, in Your Mercy, from those who reject [Your Message].’ (Yunus: 86) Mercy is tantamount to that ‘protection’ which prevents the coming of an illness. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘We send down the Quran as healing and mercy to those who believe...’ (al-Isra’: 82). The healing is required only if an illness is already present. Mercy, on the other hand, is that which safeguards against the coming of an illness.

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari (13) and Muslim (45)

Thereafter, Allah Glorified is He has wished to honour Musa (Moses) peace be upon him and his people, so He says:

وَأَوْحَيْنَآ إِلَىٰ مُوسَىٰ وَأَخِيهِ أَن تَبَوَّءَا لِقَوْمِكُمَا بِمِصْرَ بُيُوتًا وَٱجْعَلُوا۟
بُيُوتَكُمْ قِبْلَةً وَأَقِيمُوا۟ ٱلصَّلَوٰةَ ۗ وَبَشِّرِ ٱلْمُؤْمِنِينَ ﴿٨٧﴾

We revealed to Moses and his brother: ‘House your people in Egypt and make these houses places of worship; keep up the prayer; give good news to the believers!’ [87] (The Quran, Yunus: 87)

We have previously explained that Musa (Moses) and Harun (Aaron) peace be upon them were two Messengers bearing a single Message(1); a revelation had descended upon the two of them in the form of a single Message. When Allah Glorified is He selects a Prophet or a Messenger, He does so based on certain excellent qualities of character and purity of soul. These virtues are what render a person qualified to bear a Message from heaven and to communicate what Allah Glorified is He wills.

Now, if Allah’s creatures have successfully crafted automated machines out of inanimate materials, which do not possess the capacity to think and to reflect—machines such as the clock which can make the call to prayer or the radio which broadcasts at specific times—if human beings have created such things, what should we suppose that Allah Glorified is He is capable of creating, given that He is the Creator of all the creatures and the universe and the One Who sends forth Messengers? Allah Glorified is He selects His Messengers in a way that the inner strength of their character allows them to fulfil their assigned mission regardless of the external conditions.

(1) Proofreader’s Note: This is the sheikh’s interpretation.

In this instance, Allah's Words, ‘We has revealed to Moses and his brother...’ (Yunus: 87) indicate that the revelation was inspired to both Musa (Moses) and Harun (Aaron) peace be upon them. Thus, if there arose a situation which required Musa (Moses) peace be upon him to speak, Harun (Aaron) peace be upon him would also be able to speak on the same subject, because their core faith and doctrine were the same. The events referred to in the verse took place after Pharaoh and his troops were drowned; thus, after the stifling atmosphere had been lifted, they were ordered to settle in the land of Egypt and to establish their homes therein.

However, we must ask a question here: has Pharaoh been drowned and perished forever? No, he has not because ‘Pharaoh’ is not the name of a person; rather, it is the name given to a particular function. All of the kings of ancient Egypt were known by the title ‘Pharaoh’, so, we need not speculate whether Pharaoh in question was Thutmose the first, Ramses or any of the other kings. Suppose that Pharaoh mentioned in the Quran had drowned, does this not imply that a new Pharaoh would have taken his place? We know from the history books that the ruling families succeeded one another; we know that there were Pharaohs, and that some of them used to persecute the believers. Thus, whoever succeeded the drowned Pharaoh must have been even more ruthless and hostile towards the believers.

Allah Glorified is He says in the holy verse which we are presently examining: ‘We revealed to Moses and his brother: “House your people in Egypt...”’ (Yunus: 87) We come across the word Misr (Egypt*)*—a term which, when used, is understood to mean a region. We, who live in this country, have employed the term Misr as a proper noun denoting the region that extends from the Mediterranean Sea to the border of Sudan. In other words, it is the region of the Nile valley. We have also employed the term Misr as a proper noun designating the capital of the Nile valley. We also call the train station in Cairo the Misr station.

From Allah's Words, ‘House your people in Egypt’ (Yunus: 87), we can deduce that the term at-tabawwu’ means the act of consecrating a space for residential purposes. Such a space will, henceforth, be considered maba’a, that is, a place to which people return. Therefore, the word at-tabawwu' means to settle down at a particular place. Thus, when a person establishes a place as his homeland, he then returns to it after a period of travel through other lands.

Leaving one's homeland is considered to be a mere journey that requires a person to eventually come back. The home plays a similar role for human beings. We might roam through the fields for an entire day, or we might spend it at the factory or at the office, but when the day comes to an end a person always returns home to sleep.

There was a condition concerning the houses which Allah Glorified is He has ordered Musa (Moses) and Harun (Aaron) peace be upon them to establish. As Allah Glorified is He says: '... and make these houses places of worship (Qibla)...' (Yunus: 87). The word Qibla denotes the direction towards which we pray. For example, the mosque is the direction marker for those who stand outside of it. When the mue'ghghin gives the call to prayer, the mosque effectively becomes the direction to which we head. When we are inside the mosque, we then orient ourselves towards the prayer direction. It is our orientation towards the prayer direction which determines our position within the linear arrangement of people inside the mosque. In this instance, the Commandment issued by Allah Glorified is He is as follows: '... and make these houses places of worship (Qibla); keep up the prayer...' (Yunus: 87). In this case, the establishing of houses is stipulated that they turn the houses into places of worship far removed from the eyes of their persecuting enemies. Their situation is akin to that of the early Muslims of Mecca at a time when Islam, still in its early stages, was weak. During that time, the Muslims used to pray inside the houses. This was the underlying reason that prevented their acts of prayer from being disclosed during the daytime. This secrecy helped keep the enemy unaware of the location of those offering prayer. As for the prayers which were conducted openly at night and at dawn, the purpose of these prayers was that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him could teach them how to recite the Quran properly.

Allah Glorified is He hereby commands them: 'House your people in Egypt and make these houses places of worship...' (Yunus: 87). One possible interpretation is that the houses must be facing one another. To this day, if you look at the Jewish quarters of any city in the world, you will see that they all reside in the same neighbourhood, refusing to integrate into the surrounding neighbourhoods. Thus, in every country they have a neighbourhood where they reside—this is known as the 'Jewish quarter'. In Egypt, they had ghettos; each was called the 'Jewish ghetto'. Allah Glorified is He has willed that, and He says in His noble Book: 'They were struck with humiliation and wretchedness...' (al-Baqara: 61). By living closely to each other, they can protect themselves, and they can easily get together if a troublesome issue comes up.

Allah's Words, '... and make these houses places of worship...' (Yunus: 87) can mean that the plan which determines the position of the streets and the houses should be such that they face the direction of prayer. An error in urban design such as the one in the plaza where the mosque of Imam Al-Hussain is built in Cairo—which makes people slightly skew to the right in order to face the proper direction of prayer—causes some confusion among the worshipers because this slight skewing to the right during the prayer means that every row must be shortened relative to the row in front of it.

Furthermore, when we pray in the sacred Mosque of Mecca, we find that some worshipers want to straighten the lines; their wish is that the rows be straight. Thus, we find some people alerting the others that a straightened line should extend for the length of one of the sides Ka'ba; then, the line should be curved.

The same applies to the rows of worshipers praying on the upper levels of the sacred Mosque: we find curved rows facing the direction of the Ka'ba. That is why I have always said, when I pray in the sacred Mosque, that when the leader of the prayer says, 'straighten your lines,' this means that you stand shoulder to shoulder. On the other hand, when we are outside the sacred Mosque where the Ka'ba is, it is sufficient for us to face the direction of the Ka'ba in prayer. When praying outside the Sacred Mosque, we do not face Ka'ba itself, we merely pray towards its direction. If we were to pray towards the Ka'ba itself, the length of the rows in any given mosque would not extend beyond twelve meters and a quarter—which is the extent of the longest side of the Ka'ba.

Here, Allah Glorified is He says: '...and make these houses places of worship...' (Yunus: 87). This means, in other words, that we should design houses in such a way that they are aligned with the direction of prayer.

Although some people endeavour to apply this principle, the layout of the streets and the neighbourhoods do not often help them. Then, Allah Glorified is He says: '... and keep up prayer...' (Yunus: 87). We should understand from this command that prayer represents a renewal of our allegiance to Allah Glorified is He. For we proclaim the testament—that there is no god but Allah—once in our lifetime; we give the obligatory alms—if we have enough property—once a year and we fast—if we are not sick—during a single month of the year, namely, Ramadan. Furthermore, we perform the pilgrimage—if we are so able—once in a lifetime. Of all the five pillars of Islam, what we are left with is the prayer; a rite which is repeated five times every day—a person can offer more if he wishes. It is as though Allah Glorified is He underscores this critical pillar of the religion: prayer.

Who is it that chose the place of the houses mentioned in the verse which we are presently reflecting on? Is it Musa (Moses) and Harun (Aaron) peace be upon them? Or are the words of the verse addressed to the community as whole? We may note that the order of housing the people is directed to Musa (Moses) and Harun (Aaron) peace be upon them. As for the order to make the houses places of worship, it is directed not only to Musa (Moses) and Harun (Aaron) peace be upon them but also to their followers; that is why the latter order is formulated in the plural mode.

Allah Glorified is He concludes this holy verse with the words: '... and give good news to the believers!' (Yunus: 87) This is a sign confirming that Musa (Moses) peace be upon him was the original recipient of the Message; that is why he is commanded to give glad tiding to the believers. One might note that Allah employs the dual mode in this verse when it comes to the command of 'housing the people'. He then employs the plural mode when it comes to the command to make the houses places of worship. Afterwards, He employs the singular mode at the end of the verse as to alert us to the fact that Musa (Moses) peace be upon him was the original recipient of Allah's Message to the children of Israel.

Giving glad tidings as a result of a person's righteous actions amounts to giving the glad tidings that the person will enter paradise.

Allah Glorified is He says:

وَقَالَ مُوسَىٰ رَبَّنَآ إِنَّكَ ءَاتَيۡتَ فِرۡعَوۡنَ وَمَلَأَهُۥ زِينَةٗ وَأَمۡوَٰلٗا فِي
ٱلۡحَيَوٰةِ ٱلدُّنۡيَا رَبَّنَا لِيُضِلُّواْ عَن سَبِيلِكَۖ رَبَّنَا ٱطۡمِسۡ عَلَىٰٓ أَمۡوَٰلِهِمۡ
وَٱشۡدُدۡ عَلَىٰ قُلُوبِهِمۡ فَلَا يُؤۡمِنُواْ حَتَّىٰ يَرَوُاْ ٱلۡعَذَابَ ٱلۡأَلِيمَ ﴿٨٨﴾

And Moses said, 'Our Lord, You have given Pharaoh and his chiefs splendour and wealth in this present life and here they are, Lord, leading others astray from Your path. Our Lord, obliterate their wealth and harden their hearts so that they do not believe until they see the agonizing torment' [88]
(The Quran, Yunus: 88)

The word az-zina denotes any superfluous luxuries that exceed the basic necessities which sustain life. The sustaining life requires eating any food that satisfies hunger and drinking water that quenches thirst. If there are a variety of foods, this amounts to opulence. Other luxuries of life include clothes which do more than just covering the private parts of the body; in other words, we are talking about those fashionable clothes that are characterised by high quality textile, stitching, and design. Other luxuries of life include the place where a human sleeps; that is, the bed which might be furnished with the most luxurious of feathers. However, the basic requirement for a sleeping place consists of a place on the ground—any bed that protects from the cold or the heat of the floor. Thus, what is superfluous with respect to the basic necessities of life can be considered a luxury. Luxuries are brought about by having wealth, and the original standard value of money is gold, with silver occupying the second place.

One of the principles of the economy is that the balance of gold is considered to be the standard for assessing the richness of any country in the world; this is in spite of the fact that they have discovered precious stones to be more valuable than gold. If those precious stones—like diamonds, for example—are broken or scratched, their value diminishes. However, with gold, no matter how much it might break up, you simply melt it down again to create a nugget. Pharaohs of ancient times used to rule over Egypt all the way down to the source of the Nile. They used to put people to work on various tasks, including gold mining—in actual mines or through the process of sifting the sands of certain mountains to extract it.

You could extract gold yourself from certain places. However, the bottom line is always the economic cost of extracting the gold. When a particular mine is plentiful, containing numerous gold veins, in such a case, the extraction of gold becomes a matter of making an overall profit. However, when the cost of extracting the gold exceeds the market value of the gold, then nobody attempts to extract it.

If you contemplate the luxurious lifestyles of Pharaohs, you will see that the mask of Tutankhamen, for example, is a paragon of beauty. Likewise, their palaces reflect the peak of luxury. It would be enough for you to witness the colour pigments out of which the wall paints were made in those days—you would come to realise the refined craftsmanship involved and the extent of opulence the rulers enjoyed. Such luxuries far exceeded the basic necessities of life.

In this holy verse, Allah Glorified is He says: 'And Moses said, "Our Lord, You have given Pharaoh and his chiefs splendour and wealth in this present life and here they are, Lord, leading others astray from Your Path..."' (Yunus: 88). Not only were Pharaoh and his chiefs aberrant, but they also wanted to lead others astray as well. That is why they carried not only the burden of their own aberrance but also the burden of leading others astray. Has Allah Glorified is He bestowed splendour and riches upon them so that they might go astray and lead others astray as well? No, this was not the reason why they were given splendour and riches. The proposition lam (to) is not used to give the reason for giving them splendour and riches; rather, it is used to show the end result of that. Just as, for example, you give your son ten pounds and tell him: 'Do with this money what you please; however, I would prefer it if you used this money for profitable ends.' The child might go out and buy something useless; he might not purchase, for instance, books that could be beneficial. In this example, you gave your son a degree of purchasing power; however, he did not make good use of it. He used his freedom of choice to purchase toys. This is a situation where the son is blameworthy, not because he was free to act as he wished, but because of the consequences of his actions.

When Allah Glorified is He has wished to save Moses's life during his childhood, He has inspired the mother of Moses by saying: '... and then, when you fear for his safety, put him in the river: do not be afraid, and do not grieve.' (al-Qasas: 7) There is no mother in the world that would ever accede to such a command, because it would amount to certain death for her son. If the son were to be kidnapped or if he were to go missing, this would amount to probable death. However, if he were to be thrown in the river, this would not amount to probable death; rather, it would amount to certain death—unless he is saved by Allah Glorified is He. However, by virtue of her unshakable faith in Allah Glorified is He the mother Moses carried out what Allah Glorified is He had inspired her to do—because what comes from Allah Glorified is He meets no opposition within the pure and sincere soul. As for the whisperings of the devil, they are met with stiff opposition from within the soul; such is also the case with the thoughts of the lower self. That is why the mother of Moses peace be upon him carried out that which Allah Glorified is He had inspired her to do, even though it ran contrary to all logic and rational thought. When Pharaoh's family picked up Moses out of the water—and despite their continuous slaughter of children—Allah Glorified is He has instilled love for Moses in their hearts. Allah Glorified is He says: '... for I showered you with My love...' (Ta Ha: 39). The moment they saw the young Musa (Moses) peace be upon him they loved him and they did not kill him. Thus, Allah's Will and Promise to the mother of Moses were fulfilled: '... for we shall return him to you and make him a Messenger.' (al-Qasas: 7) That is, Musa (Moses) peace be upon him was destined for a mission which Allah Glorified is He had pre-ordained for him.

This is why we find a series of Commands which the Quran describes with respect to the mother of Moses placing him in the river. Allah Glorified is He says: 'We inspired your mother, saying, "Put your child into the chest, then place him in the river. Let the river wash him on to its bank..."' (Ta Ha: 38-39). These are all the Orders of Allah Glorified is He. Thereupon, Pharaoh's wife saw him and said to her husband: 'Here is a joy to behold for me and for you!' (al-Qasas: 9) Now did Pharaoh know that this child whom his wife had picked up would grow up to be his enemy? No, Pharaoh had taken him out of the river, and they both gave the child a life of luxury, so that he would grow up to be a source of joy for him. This was the reason behind picking up Moses from the river. However, the end result was that Musa (Moses) peace be upon him grew up to be Pharaoh's enemy; had the enmity between Moses and Pharaoh existed when the former was a child, Pharaoh would not have picked up Moses from the river, or he might have even killed him on the spot. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He places certain things in His universe which undermine the guile of human beings. Thus, Pharaoh took him in and raised him, but the end result turned out to be different from what Pharaoh had expected.

When, in the verse which we are currently examining, Allah Glorified is He says, '... They are leading others astray,' (Yunus: 88) we should realise that Allah Glorified is He has not given them wealth so that they go astray. Rather, they chose to go astray. Many a people whom Allah Glorified is He has given wealth and power have used it towards good ends. Thus, we see that it is all up to the choices that human beings make—whether they chose to go astray or to follow the right Path. Thus, Musa (Moses) peace be upon him said: 'Our Lord, You have given Pharaoh and his chiefs splendour and wealth in this present life and here they are, Lord, leading others astray from Your path. Our Lord, obliterate their wealth and harden their hearts...' (Yunus: 88).

The word (at-tams) refers to the act of hiding the distinguishing marks. For example, Allah Glorified is He says: '... before We wipe out [your sense of] direction, turning you back...' (an-Nisa': 47). In this case, the word at-tams means the act of hiding the lineaments of those faces in a way that they become a single whole, devoid of forehead, eyebrows, eyes, ears, lips and chin. Thus, the word (at-tams) denotes the act of obliterating the form that a particular thing possesses. So, Moses's supplication in this verse, '... Our Lord, obliterate their wealth,' (Yunus: 88) means to spoil their riches. Some authors of books narrating this story have said that their riches were indeed spoiled. Thus, those who owned pieces of gold saw their wealth turn into stone; those who owned precious gems saw their wealth turn into glass. The words, '... Our Lord, obliterate their wealth,' (Yunus: 88) could also mean to obliterate their riches for their wealth was the means that enabled them to lead people astray.

Thereafter, Musa (Moses) peace be upon him says: '... and harden their hearts so that they do not believe until they see the agonizing torment.' (Yunus: 88) This means: O Lord, set a seal over their hearts, such that the disbelief contained therein can never get out, and such that no glimmer of faith can ever enter into them from the outside. For, indeed, they have forged a most blasphemous lie. Thus, may those seals remain forever grafted onto their hearts until they see the agonizing torment? Why did Musa (Moses) peace be upon him utter such a supplication against the people of Pharaoh? Why did he not utter a supplication similar to that uttered by our Messenger Muhammad peace be upon him: 'O Lord, guide my people for they comprehend not'? The answer is that Allah Glorified is He must have informed Musa (Moses) peace be upon him that calling such people to faith would be of no avail. Moses's main fear was not that the people of Pharaoh would persist in their aberrant ways, but rather that they would continue to lead others astray. Therefore, Musa (Moses) peace be upon him uttered the following supplication against them: '... Our Lord, obliterate their wealth and harden their hearts so that they do not believe until they see the agonizing torment.' (Yunus: 88) Elsewhere in the Holy Quran, Allah Glorified is He says: '... but believing after seeing Our Punishment did not benefit them at all…' (Ghafir: 85). Thus, we can distinguish between faith that has been attained as a result of coercion and that which has been attained as a result of freewill. Therefore, when a Messenger comes forth to call people to faith, the audience has the right either to believe the Message or to reject it; for, Allah Glorified is He has created human beings, and He has given them freewill. However, faith attained by coercion can be of no benefit to a person. Pharaoh is a case in point: when the time of suffering came upon him, he proclaimed to have attained faith. Thus, Allah Glorified is He says: '…But as he was drowning he cried, "I believe there is no God except the one the Children of Israel believe in. I submit to Him."' (Yunus: 90) Moses' supplication against the people of Pharaoh is echoed by that of Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him. The latter is cited in the Quran as saying: 'Lord, do not leave any of the disbelievers on the earth [26]—if you leave them they will lead Your servants astray and beget only sinners and disbelievers.[27]' (Nuh: 26-27)

Allah Glorified is He has accepted Moses's supplication as He says:

قَالَ قَدْ أُجِيبَت دَّعْوَتُكُمَا فَٱسْتَقِيمَا وَلَا تَتَّبِعَآنِّ سَبِيلَ ٱلَّذِينَ لَا يَعْلَمُونَ ﴿٨٩﴾

God said, 'Your prayers are answered, so stay on the right course, and do not follow the path of those who do not know' [89] (The Quran, Yunus: 89)

Note that the person who uttered the supplication was Musa (Moses) peace be upon him; however, when Allah Glorified is He says: 'Your prayers are answered...' (Yunus: 89), this indicates that Harun (Aaron) peace be upon him had joined Musa (Moses) peace be upon him in uttering the supplication. We have previously said that if we looked at the original recipient of the Message, we would conclude that it is none other than Musa (Moses) peace be upon him. Harun (Aaron) peace be upon him was send to provide Musa (Moses) peace be upon him with support. Looking at the nature of these two figures, we would have to consider both as being Messengers bearing the same Message.

Since Allah Glorified is He has sent forth the two Messengers to carry out a common objective; then, if one of them reacts to something, the other must be expected to react to the same thing. Therefore, it is conceivable that when Harun (Aaron) peace be upon him heard his brother uttering such a supplication, he also made such a supplication, or he might have made it silently.

Ad-du'a (supplication) means that you seek recourse with someone who has the power to carry out what you cannot. Thus, you would only utter a supplication with respect to a matter whose circumstances you are powerless to tackle on your own. Thus, you would say, 'I have my Lord in whom I believe, and He is Capable of overcoming any circumstances, for He is the Creator of the circumstances. Moreover, He can bestow bounties without any causes or means.' The true believer takes on the events of his life, not with the secondary causes in mind; rather, he tackles them while being mindful of the Omnipotence of the One in Whom he believes and He is the Ultimate Originator.

That is why when Musa (Moses) and his people reached the sea, and Pharaoh and his legions were pursuing them, Moses's people said: 'We shall definitely be caught.' (ash-Shu'ara': 61). Whereupon Musa (Moses) replied: 'No, my Lord is with me: He will guide me,' (ash-Shu'ara': 62). In other words, do not assess the situation according to human criteria, for with me is the Lord of human beings. Musa (Moses) thereby received the following words of deliverance: ‘We revealed to Moses: “Strike the sea with your staff.” It parted–each side like a mighty mountain.’ (ash-Shu'ara': 63)

Thus, a supplication consists of seeking the help of one who can overcome that which you cannot. The main issue which preoccupied the mind of Moses and Aaron peace be upon them was the persistence of the people of Pharaoh’s in their aberrant ways, as well as their insistence on leading others astray. Thus, it is only natural that the two Messengers would utter the same supplication. Similar instances of telepathy(1)—that is, when thoughts coincide simultaneously—can be found with other Messengers. In the history of Islam, one example of this phenomenon is when ‘Umar ibn al-Khattab Allah be pleased with him was preoccupied with thoughts of the Muslim army engaged in one of its battles. At the time, he was in Medina delivering a sermon from the pulpit. Suddenly, he uttered the words: ‘O Sariya, to the mountain.’ These words had nothing to do with the subject of the sermon. However, his thoughts were centred on the general who was engaged in combat. Despite being too far away, the general heard the order of ‘Umar and led his troops to the mountain. In such a situation, one could say that one mind telepathically made contact with another mind. This is as when you call someone on the telephone and the person whom you wish to speak to says, ‘I was just about to call you. ’ This means that the two thoughts occurred simultaneously. Now, if these things can happen in our daily lives, then what can we suppose happens on the subtle spiritual realm, which the highest level is prophethood?

It could also be the case that Musa (Moses) peace be upon him uttered the supplication, and Harun (Aaron) peace be upon him was merely the one who said ‘Amen’. In this case, Harun (Aaron) peace be upon him can be considered as someone who participated in the supplication. Since Allah Glorified is He has answered Moses’s supplication, He has also answered the prayer of the one who, after the supplication had been uttered, said ‘Amen’. Some people think that, when a prayer is answered, this means that whatever was prayed for is granted immediately. However, the truth is that when a prayer is answered, this means that Allah Glorified is He has agreed to grant for whatever was prayed. This, for example, is what happened with the supplication uttered by Musa (Moses) peace be upon him against Pharaoh and his leading supporters: when he uttered the prayer—and after Harun (Aaron) had said ‘Amen’—the answer would come forty years later: ‘Your prayers are answered...’ (Yunus: 89). It was then that Allah Glorified is He carried out their prayer that Pharaoh’s riches would be wiped out.

(1) Proofreader’s Note: This is the sheikh’s interpretation.

On the one hand, heaven is not subservient to the one who utters a supplication, nor is it obliged to accept any and all supplications. On the other hand, once a supplication is accepted, then the date of its execution must be specified. These are matters that are subject to Allah’s Will; He is not obliged to answer all prayers. However, He has control over everything, and when He agrees to answer a particular prayer, He will specify an appropriate date whereby the prayer is to be granted, because if the prayer is granted immediately, it might be detrimental to a person.

Allah Glorified is He says: ‘yet man prays for harm, just as he prays for good: man is ever hasty.’ (al-Isra’: 11) That is why Allah Glorified is He specifies the date when the prayer will be answered and carried out on the practical level. He says: ‘... I will show you my signs soon, so do not ask me to hasten them.’ (al-Anbiya’: 37) Man knows that he might have prayed for things which, when Allah Glorified is He granted them, turned out to be detrimental. There are many supplications which human beings have uttered, but Allah Glorified is He has not granted them—and this is often a blessing in disguise. Thus, there is a Higher Power which watches over us and knows what is in our best interest. This Higher Power is not a collection of deities whose function is to answer man’s every prayer. This Higher Power above us is none other than Allah Glorified is He—the All-Wise, Most High. That is why, in our explanation of Allah's Words: ‘If Allah were to hasten on for people the harm [they have earned] as they wish to hasten on the good, their time would already be up...’ (Yunus: 11) we say that the person might pray for what is detrimental. Is it not the case that a mother will sometimes utter a supplication against her son or her daughter, even though she loves them both? Were Allah Glorified is He to answer her supplication—which she has uttered against her children—would this not be detrimental for the mother? In a moment of anger, the son might tell his mother, ‘O Lord, I pray that I am stricken in an accident, that way you can finally get rid of me, mother.' Now imagine what would happen if Allah Glorified is He answered this prayer. Would this really please the son who supplicated against himself? Would it please his mother? Of course it would not; if Allah Glorified is He has abstained from answering a prayer for something bad, this is to your benefit. Similarly, if Allah Glorified is He delays answering a supplication for something good, you must assume that there is some good in this. That is why Allah Glorified is He has wished to tell Musa (Moses) and Harun (Aaron) peace be upon them: 'Your prayers are answered, so stay on the right course, and do not follow the path of those who do not know.' (Yunus: 89) In other words, remain steadfast on the Straight Path and do not concern yourselves with which you have no knowledge of. Allah Glorified is He says: 'Noah called out to his Lord, saying, "My Lord, my son was one of my family though your promise is true, and You are the most just of all judges." [45] Allah said, "Noah, he was not one of your families. What he did was not right. Do not ask me for things you know nothing about. I am warning you not to be foolish."' (Hud: 45-46) That is, be respectful when praying to your Lord and giving vent to your worries; leave the matter to the All-Wise, for He will decide whether or not to answer your prayer. Answering the prayer might be either granted immediately or delayed to a specific time —either way, it will be good for you.

Afterwards, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَجَٰوَزۡنَا بِبَنِيٓ إِسۡرَٰٓءِيلَ ٱلۡبَحۡرَ فَأَتۡبَعَهُمۡ فِرۡعَوۡنُ وَجُنُودُهُۥ بَغۡيٗا
وَعَدۡوًاۖ حَتَّىٰٓ إِذَآ أَدۡرَكَهُ ٱلۡغَرَقُ قَالَ ءَامَنتُ أَنَّهُۥ لَآ إِلَٰهَ إِلَّا ٱلَّذِيٓ
ءَامَنَتۡ بِهِۦ بَنُوٓاْ إِسۡرَٰٓءِيلَ وَأَنَا۠ مِنَ ٱلۡمُسۡلِمِينَ ﴿٩٠﴾

We took the Children of Israel across the sea. Pharaoh and his troops pursued them in arrogance and aggression. But as he was drowning he cried, 'I believe there is no God except the one the Children of Israel believe in. I submit to Him' [90]
(The Quran, Yunus: 90)

Allah Glorified is He says: 'We took the Children of Israel across the sea' (Yunus: 90); the act of crossing the sea was not accomplished thanks to human means; rather, this feat was due to the means that transcended those of human beings. If Musa (Moses) peace be upon him had dug a tunnel underneath the sea floor, or if he and his people had embarked on ships, then, in this case, one could say that they had a hand in the feat of crossing the sea. However, this crossing was due to reasons that are imperceptible to human beings. It is Allah Glorified is He Who has inspired Musa (Moses) peace be upon him '…to strike the sea with his staff…' (ash-Shu'ara': 63).

The water of the sea is like any other water—they are subject to the laws of liquids, or the hydraulic principles, where the water level tends to equalize throughout. This is in contrast to solid materials which do not tend towards equalization, even if they are in a state of inequality. The hydraulic principles are the basis for those techniques by which water is transported from water towers to residential buildings. Typically, the water towers stand higher than the residential buildings in the area. Water is pumped up into these water towers. The water is thereafter distributed to the houses depending upon the design of the plumbing systems in such houses. However, if there is a building which stands higher than the water tower, the residents of the building must install a pump to push the water up to the highest floors. Now, if the waters of the sea are governed by the laws of liquids and hydraulics, how were these laws suspended?

Allah Glorified is He says: "and it parted, and each portion was like a great towering mountain" (ash-Shu'ara': 63). How did the water transform into mountains with passages and walkways, and Moses and his people cutting through them; how could they go forth with such reassurance? Surely, it could only have been Allah's Company that protected them. This is the explanation of what Moses said: "No! Indeed, with me is my Lord; He will guide me" (ash-Shu'ara': 62).

However, Pharaoh and his legions pursued them in the hopes of catching up to them. As soon as Moses and his people had made it safely across, He wanted to strike the sea with his staff so that it might return to its original state of liquidity once again. Had he done so, he would not have allowed Pharaoh and his army to travel along the passageways across the mountains of water. Allah, however, had different plans. He wanted to both save Moses and his people as well as destroy Pharaoh and his army using the same tool. Therefore, He inspired Moses peace be upon him “And leave the sea in stillness. Indeed, they are an army to be drowned" (ad-Dukhan: 24) Allah ordered Moses to leave the sea in its current state so that Pharaoh and his legions might be tricked, and as soon as the last soldier gets to the passageway between the two mountains of water, the sea would return to its original liquid state, whereby Pharaoh and his army would be drowned while Moses and his people would be saved.

Allah Glorified is He says: “and Pharaoh and his soldiers pursued them” (Yunus: 90) did this pursuit prove that Pharaoh harboured malicious intent? Is it possible that Pharaoh’s intention was to invite Moses peace be upon him and his people to return to Egypt and settle therein? The reality is that it was not Pharaoh’s intention, and that is why, Allah Glorified is He has described his way of pursuing Moses as “in tyranny and enmity until” (Yunus: 90) this means that Pharaoh was pursuing them with the intention of taking his revenge and humiliating them. The Holy Quran depicts the scene of Pharaoh drowning in the following terms: 'until when drowning overtook him, he said: I believe.' (Yunus: 90) The word idrak denotes the intention of somebody to catch up to something. However, drowning is a verbal noun, so how can this verbal noun be something that is pursing Pharaoh? Actually, it is as though drowning was one of the soldiers of Allah who has an active intellect and is participating in events.

Pharaoh claimed that he had believed. Belief in a general and absolute sense refers to the faith in the Highest Power, as Allah Glorified is He says: 'the dwellers of the desert say: “We believe.” Say: “You do not believe but say, ‘We submit.’”' (al-Hujurat: 14) Belief requires the subjugation of the heart vis-à-vis Allah, while submitting in Islam requires that a person abide by the five pillars of the religion.

Regarding belief, the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Say: I believe in Allah, and then be steadfast.' These words affirm quite explicitly that true belief is having faith in none other than Allah Most-High. However, when I say, for example, that I have faith that you are a good man, this kind of faith pertains specifically to someone or something, while proclaiming belief or faith in the absolute sense, pertains to Allah; that is why Allah ordered the Bedouin to say that they have submitted. Here, in the verse which we are currently examining, Pharaoh is quoted as saying: 'I believe that there is no god, but He in whom the children of Israel believe, and I am of those who submit.' (Yunus: 90) The confrontation was between Pharaoh, who represented the side of disbelief, and Moses, Aaron and their people, who represented the side of faith.

Pharaoh proclaimed his belief in Allah and added that he was among those who submit. Nevertheless, Allah Glorified is He did not accept such a declaration of his and says:

ءَآلْـَٔـٰنَ وَقَدْ عَصَيْتَ قَبْلُ وَكُنتَ مِنَ ٱلْمُفْسِدِينَ ﴿٩١﴾

Now? When you had always been a rebel, and a troublemaker! [91] (The Quran, Yunus: 91)

This can be rephrased as an exclamation of what Pharaoh had said. It is as if Allah tells him that such a proclamation of his is unacceptable since he is saying it now that he has attained faith and that he is among those who surrender themselves to Allah when it is the wrong time. There is a major difference between the faith that has been attained through coercion, and the faith that has been attained through man's own freewill. Are you saying that now, while you have transgressed against us in the past and spread corruption on earth?

It was possible that Allah could have accepted his declaration of faith had he uttered it in some safe place away from the imminent peril that encompassed him. Allah Glorified is He does not accept the declaration of faith uttered by one who is on the verge of death because this faith is a coerced one and not one that has been attained out of freewill. If Allah wanted from us a coerced faith, He would have forced all His creatures to be believers, and no one would be able to disbelieve in Him. We see the whole universe is completely subjugated to the Will of Allah, and no one rebels against Allah. The Absolute Power of Allah Glorified is He is capable of forcing human beings to believe in Him. However, it is a testament to the Absoluteness of His Power, and it is not used to prove love on the part of a man. Real love for Allah can only be proved when you have a choice between believing and disbelieving. What Allah wants from you is that faith that has been attained through your own freewill.

Therefore, it was not Pharaoh's words that had been rejected; it was the timing of these words. It has been said: that the declaration of faith of Pharaoh had been rejected even though he uttered it three times, because the people of Moses peace be upon him had, at that time, began to distort the attributions of Allah's Essence. They were attributing corporeal attributes to Him and claimed, may Allah forbid, that He had sat down on a rock, lowered His feet into a pond of water and began playing with a fish and such falsehoods fabricated by the children of Israel. Thus, when Pharaoh announced that he had believed in the God as did the children of Israel, this implied that he had not attained faith in the True God.

Thereafter Allah Glorified is He says:

فَٱلْيَوْمَ نُنَجِّيكَ بِبَدَنِكَ لِتَكُونَ لِمَنْ خَلْفَكَ ءَايَةً ۚ
وَإِنَّ كَثِيرًا مِّنَ ٱلنَّاسِ عَنْ ءَايَٰتِنَا لَغَٰفِلُونَ ﴿٩٢﴾

Today We shall save only your corpse as a sign to all posterity. A great many people fail to heed
Our signs' [92] (The Quran, Yunus: 92)

We know that man is composed of a body which is that material structure that takes on the form we are all familiar with; and within the body, there is the soul. The latter is what provides life and make work possible. When we say badan (body), know that we mean the body to the exclusion of the soul. In other words, badan is synonymous with jasad. Similarly, when we say jasad, we mean that material structure considered in and of itself to the exclusion of the soul. Allah Glorified is He says: 'And certainly We tried Sulaiman, and We put on his throne a [mere] body.' Solomon peace be upon him enjoyed, thanks to what Allah bestowed upon him, such great dominion that no one would ever enjoy after him. Allah put the Jinn and the wind to his service. Allah taught Solomon all the languages and thereby, he possessed great authority. He issued commands and laid down proscriptions. One day, he found himself seated on his throne, unable to move, lacking his powerful spirit and subject to any challenge from his people. Then, Allah returned his powerful spirit to his body, thereupon he turned to Allah, regained consciousness and realized that everything he possesses is a gift imparted to him from Allah, and that none of it is innate. “And We certainly tried Solomon and placed on his throne a body; then he returned” (Sad: 34).

In the blessed verse which we are presently examining, Allah Glorified is He says that He would save only the body of Pharaoh so that it be a sign to those who would come after him. Now, if Allah had not ordered the sea to throw out the body of Pharaoh, would it have been possible for them to still believe that he is a god and shall return once again? However, Allah Glorified is He wished that the sea would spit out his corpse just as it spits out the corpse of any drowned animal in order to cut any doubt to his drowning. It was to let the survivors from among his people see him for what he was and know that he was merely human. Thereafter, his demise would act as warning to all after he was an iniquitous tyranny proclaiming divinity. “And Pharaoh said, "O eminent ones, I have not known you to have a god other than me” (al-Qasas: 38).

Some historians have said that the pharaoh in question is Thutmose, as they have conducted an autopsy on his mummified body and found traces of salt water. We contend, however, that Pharaoh is not the name of a particular person; rather, it is the description of a function. It is as if the mummified bodies of Pharaohs are telling us that the reason for the preservation of these corpses is to serve as warnings; let every human take a warning from their example and realize how civilizations collapse and how these corpses have endured so that we might learn a lesson from them.

Allah Glorified is He presented the issue of Pharaoh in the Quran and how tyrannical he was “And [with] Pharaoh, owner of the stakes?” (al-Fajr: 10) However, in the same chapter, He says “Indeed, your Lord is in observation” (al-Fajr: 14) We note that Allah Glorified is He includes in the chapter of al-Fajr, while mentioning the pharaonic civilizations, other civilizations of antiquity such as that of 'Ad and Thamud, for example. Allah Glorified is He has also spoken about the Pharaoh position during certain scenes from the story of Moses. However, the discourse differs when it comes to the story of Joseph peace be upon him; the position of Pharaoh is not being referenced. Allah rather speaks to us of other kinds of functions, namely, 'Aziz Misr, which means the prime minister of Egypt, and narrates the story of the king of Egypt not Pharaoh.

It was only with the coming of the French military campaign in Egypt that the difference between the function of pharaoh and that of king was discovered. When Champollion successfully deciphered the hieroglyphic language, thanks to the carvings etched onto the Rosetta Stone, we finally realized that the rulers of ancient Egypt were called pharaohs, except during a period which Egypt was ruled by the Hyksos. They had attacked Egypt, defeated its pharaonic rulers, and established their own rule over the land. Later, Pharaohs would regain their control over Egypt after having expelled the Hyksos. This is why the Quran does not refer to the pharaoh but to the king in the story of Joseph. This indicates that the knowledge contained in the Quran predates all discoveries. Every time a new discovery is made or a new invention is devised, we find that it corroborates the content of the Book of Allah.

Allah Glorified is He concludes the verse that we are presently studying with His words: 'and most surely the majority of the people are heedless to Our communications.' (Yunus: 92) This phrase illustrates that there are those who are heedless of the signs of Allah, and there are those who are cognizant of them. They contemplate and reflect on the signs. They wonder about the meaning of things and create new inventions that benefit humanity. They discover such inventions that Allah permitted to see the light of day while doing scientific research in order to manifest the wondrous work of Allah in the universe.

When a person thinks about those discoveries and inventions that humanity has produced over time, he will realize that they are the product of the minds of those who examined things closely and possessed the ability to grasp the fundamental concepts and conceiving innovative new ideas. If the majority of human beings were not so heedless of the signs of Allah in the universe, the heavens, and the earth, more innovations and inventions would see the light of day.

Allah Glorified is He Himself has said: 'And how many a sign in the heavens and the earth which they pass by, yet they turn aside from it.' (Yusuf: 105) Consider, for example, the law of gravity which was discovered by Newton.

He observed an apple falling from a tree. However, there have been tens of thousands or millions of people before him who witnessed the same scene of a fruit falling from a tree; Newton reflected on the dynamics of such an event, and this led him to discover the law of gravity; the scientists after him applied his principle of gravity as well as other principles to construct spaceships. Similarly, those who designed submarines, as well as huge ships that look like floating cities, relied on Archimedes' principle of buoyancy, which he discovered by noting that the level of a given liquid rises in proportion to the volume of the object immersed in that liquid.

All of these personalities discovered and did not create those secrets that had been deposited in the physical cosmos. They were only keen observers of phenomena. In addition, the scientist who discovered penicillin had noticed that a beaker holding organic matter was exuding drops of putrid water. He also noticed that any insect that came into contact with that water died. He, therefore, took a sample of this water and ran tests on it in his laboratory and discovered penicillin. Thus, the above mentioned verse (Yusuf: 105) suggests that that if men had not turned away heedlessly, they might have made numerous discoveries.

Similarly, the stories narrated in the Quran are to prompt people to consider carefully and to contemplate. When Allah sends forth a Messenger, imparting him with the ability to perform a miracle that humans are incapable of reproducing, people must submit to the message and believe. They must not keep repeating past experiences. Humanity has been progressing steadily on the material plane, and every new generation of scientists builds upon the knowledge accumulated by the previous generation. Hence, why does not this process occur when it comes to matters of doctrinal nature? If people were to start from where predecessors stopped, we would find that everyone would be a believer in Allah. If every new born built upon the sum of his father's knowledge, the excellent qualities of Adam would be transmitted to every new generation thereafter. Unfortunately, man is plagued by the desire to experience everything himself.

This is the case with respect to harmful things like alcohol, for example. It is detrimental to anyone who indulges in it, but when such substances are prohibited by religious laws, there are still those who wonder why it has been prohibited. The same is applicable to smoking; there are those who engage in the practice of smoking tobacco even though past experience has demonstrated its extremely detrimental effects. The reality is if every person was to imbibe the lessons learned of his predecessors, he would effectively reach their same level of experience and wisdom. Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَلَقَدۡ بَوَّأۡنَا بَنِيٓ إِسۡرَٰٓءِيلَ مُبَوَّأَ صِدۡقٖ وَرَزَقۡنَٰهُم مِّنَ ٱلطَّيِّبَٰتِ فَمَا ٱخۡتَلَفُواْ حَتَّىٰ
جَآءَهُمُ ٱلۡعِلۡمُۚ إِنَّ رَبَّكَ يَقۡضِي بَيۡنَهُمۡ يَوۡمَ ٱلۡقِيَٰمَةِ فِيمَا كَانُواْ فِيهِ يَخۡتَلِفُونَ ٩٣

We settled the Children of Israel in a good place and provided good things as sustenance for them. It was only after knowledge had come to them that they began to differ among them- selves. Your Lord will judge between them on the Day of Resurrection regarding their differences [93]
(The Quran, Yunus: 93)

The word tabawwa' in this verse means to establish a maba'a which is a private house. The absolute and general meaning of the word mubawwa' denotes a province or a country. The difference between a country and a private house is that you and anyone else can travel at leisure within a country, while a private house is someone's private quarter that is exclusive to him and his family. A rich man could have a private suite in his house reserved for himself, for his son and yet another for his daughter. However, most families reside in an apartment composed of one, two, or three rooms depending on the family's financial means. Thus, there is a difference between tabawwu' in terms of houses and tabawwu' in terms of countries. When it comes to countries it refers to citizen. Allah Glorified is He Says: "And We inspired to Moses and his brother, "Settle your people in Egypt in houses and make your houses [facing the] qibla and establish prayer and give good tidings to the believers" (Yunus: 87) This is the case it is pertaining to private houses. However, When it comes to tabawwu' pertaining to society at large, the agency of Allah Glorified is He is required. In the verse we are discussing, Allah Glorified is He enabled them to do so in the time of Moses. Allah allowed them to take up residence in the lands of Egypt and the Levant, as per His words: ‘Glory be to Him Who made His servant to go on a night from the Sacred Mosque to the remote mosque of which We have blessed the precincts, so that We may show to him some of Our signs; surely He is the Hearing, the Seeing.' (al-Isra’: 1) Since Allah Glorified is He has blessed the precincts of the House of Worship in Jerusalem, this means that much good is to be found there and that the lands in the vicinity represent a goodly abode.

The word as-sidq (truth) signifies the height of goodness and virtue. That is why when the Messenger of Allah was asked about the possibility of a believer being a liar, he said no. It is narrated that the Prophet was asked, 'Can the believer be a coward?' He said, 'Yes.' He was asked, 'Can the believer be a miser?' He said, 'Yes.' He was asked, 'Can the believer be a liar?' He said, 'No.'(1) That is why there is a punishment for adultery in the Islamic law just as there is a punishment to be carried out against the thief. Lying, on the other hand, is a characteristic in which a Muslim does not engage because he is required to be truthful. Every virtuous characteristic is a goodly abode. That is why Allah Glorified is He says: ‘And say: “My Lord! Make me to enter a goodly entering, and cause me to go forth a goodly going forth.”' (al-Isra’: 80) In another verse, Allah Glorified is He also says: ‘and give good news to those who believe that theirs is a footing of firmness with their Lord.’ (Yunus: 2) Allah Glorified is He also says: 'And ordain for me a goodly mention among posterity.' (ash-Shu'ara’: 84) This means that Abraham peace be upon him asks for a good reputation when people mention his name. Thus, they do so in a laudatory manner and do not say that so-and-so was a liar. As for the expression qadam sidq, it denotes those virtuous deeds which he seeks to perform. That is why the reward for the virtue of truthfulness is what Allah Glorified is He says: 'In the seat of honour with a most Powerful King.' (al-Qamar: 55)

Therefore, the honest person will be seated at a seat in the presence of a Lord, Who is no miser and with Whom are only those whom He loves. He is a Lord Who does not withhold His Bounty from those who are in His Presence. Such a seat of truth is the reward of one whose prayers Allah has answered and whereby, He caused him to enter a sound entrance and to exit a sound exit. Allah also granted such a person to a reputation of honour and granted him an elevated rank.

(1) Narrated by Imam Malik in his Muwatta’

Hence, Allah had allotted unto the Children of Israel a most goodly abode in the lands of Egypt and the Levant, and after He had answered their call, ordered them to go to a particular place, granted them different types of food. "O Moses, we can never endure one [kind of] food. So call upon your Lord to bring forth for us from the earth its green herbs and its cucumbers and its garlic and its lentils and its onions." (al-Baqara: 61) He had also saved them from Pharaoh, and it was presumed that their lives would go back to normal and that they would prosper. However, Allah Glorified is He says: 'but they did not disagree until the knowledge had come to them.' (Yunus: 93) These words refer to their knowledge of the signs of the coming final Messenger of Allah, Muhammad. Some among them eagerly awaited the coming of the Prophet in order to believe in him. There were others, however, who grew tyrannical, and that is why Allah caused them to disperse into splinter communities all across the earth. Looking at the Quranic precise portrayal, we find that it identifies this process of scattering. The Jewish community represents a distinct part in every community. In other words, Allah did not cause them to assimilate into other communities; rather, they represent a distinct social entity in whichever community they had settled, but they do not mingle with outsiders.

Thus, Allah Glorified is He says: 'And We said to the Israelites after him: “Dwell in the land.”' (al-Isra': 104) One of the literalists might wonder where else a human can dwell but on earth. Our response is that Allah Glorified is He did not specify which area of the earth in which they were to dwell. It would seem as if Allah manifests the ruling that He decreed on them to scatter into splinter communities. Allah Glorified is He has decreed his verdict; to be sure, Allah says: 'And We cut them up on the earth into parties.' (al-A'raf: 168)

We may note that they have acquired a nation for themselves in our own day and age. However, let us keep in mind the following words of Allah: 'And We had made known to the children of Israel in the Book: Most certainly you will make mischief in the land twice, and most certainly you will behave insolently with great insolence.' (al-Isra': 4) Towards the end of the chapter of al-Isra', Allah has also said: 'And We said to the Israelites after him: “Dwell in the land: and when the promise of the next life shall come to pass, we will bring you both together in judgment.”' (al-Isra': 104) The meaning of gathering them together into a single crowd is that Allah will cause them to amass into a single community, whereby the final blow shall befall them as per the following words of Allah: 'So when the second promise came [We raised another people] that they may bring you to grief and that they may enter the mosque as they entered it the first time, and that they might destroy whatever they gained ascendancy over with utter destruction.’ (al-Isra': 7) That is because we wo ill not fight them in all the countries where Allah has dispersed them. However, when they get together in single location, this paves the way for the coming of Allah’s judgment.

When we look at their journey, we find that Yathrib (Medina) was the place that welcomed them after they had been persecuted in the other communities where they had settled. When they gathered in Yathrib (Medina), they acquired a pre-eminent stature, because they were a people reputed for their knowledge and their skill in commerce and warfare. Now, they had gathered in the city of Medina because the faithful from among the people of the Book had informed them that this was the city to which an Arab Prophet and Messenger would emigrate during the end times. Thus, they stayed in Medina waiting for him. They used to tell the disbelievers of Quraysh that the time when a Prophet should appear was approaching, and we should follow him and smite you on his behalf just as the tribes of 'Ad and Aram had been smitten.

It was presumed that they would accept the message of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him; however, as soon as the Messenger of Allah came forth with the light of the message, they denied him, fearing for their political and economic stature. This much is confirmed in the verse which we are presently examining (10: 93). Their discord stems from the knowledge of the coming of the Messenger. Some among them had recognised the signs of his coming and believed in him, while others had not.

In the past, they did not hold divergent views and were all in agreement. They issued bold threats to the idolatrous tribe of Quraysh. As soon as the Messenger appeared on the scene, and the tribes of al-'Aws and al-Khazraj knew that a Messenger from Allah had come forth in Mecca, they said to themselves that he was the Prophet whom the Jews had been threatening them with, so they should go to him and become his followers before they the Jews got to him, whereupon they might indeed smite us. It is as though the Jews precipitated the Prophet’s migration to Medina because the tribes of Al-'Aws and Al-Khazraj had advanced them to him. Therefore, we might know how Allah grants victory to His cause using His enemies.

That is why 'Abdullah ibn Salam approaches the Messenger of Allah and informs him of their state of internal discord. He said that the Jews were a people who were quick to slander a person. He added that if he embraced Islam, they would advance libellous arguments against him. He asked the Prophet to ask them about him before he pronounces his conversion to Islam. In so doing, Ibn Salam Allah be pleased with him was following conduct that suited his Jewish identity. When the Jewish community got together, the Prophet asked them what their opinion of Ibn Salam was. They said he was their Rabbi, their spiritual leader and the most Allah fearing among them. After having paid such a laudatory tribute to him, Ibn Salam said, 'O Messenger of Allah, I testify that there is no god but Allah and that you are the Messenger of Allah.' At that point the Jews began hurling abuse against him, whereupon Ibn Salam said, 'Did I not tell you O Messenger of Allah that they are a people who are quick to slander?'

Therefore, when Allah Glorified is He says, 'they did not disagree until the knowledge had come to them' (Yunus: 93), this means that some people persisted in their error, while others believed in the True Messenger of Allah. After that, Allah Glorified is He concludes the verse by saying: 'surely your Lord will judge between them on the resurrection day concerning that in which they disagreed.' (Yunus: 93) This means that Allah shall judge between those who joined the ranks of the believers and those who remained devoted to Judaism that was intolerant to Muhammad’s message.

Let us note that the word baynahum (between them) signifies that the personal pronoun encompasses both parties. We might also add that Allah Glorified is He on the Day of Resurrection, shall judge between the believers and the disbelievers, and, moreover, judge between the disbelievers themselves because some among them wronged their fellow disbeliever, others were either embezzlers or accepted bribes and others had acted contrary to the directives of their faith; thus, Allah will judge between them. In addition, the verse above denotes generality regarding the judgment. It shall be passed on people at large whether those of past, present and future. Allah will judge between every believer and disbeliever and every repenter and recusant.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

فَإِن كُنتَ فِي شَكٍّ مِّمَّآ أَنزَلۡنَآ إِلَيۡكَ فَسۡـَٔلِ ٱلَّذِينَ يَقۡرَءُونَ ٱلۡكِتَٰبَ
مِن قَبۡلِكَۚ لَقَدۡ جَآءَكَ ٱلۡحَقُّ مِن رَّبِّكَ فَلَا تَكُونَنَّ مِنَ ٱلۡمُمۡتَرِينَ ﴿٩٤﴾

So if you [Prophet] are in doubt about what We have revealed to you, ask those who have been reading the scriptures before you. The Truth has come to you from your Lord, so be in no doubt and do not deny God's signs [94]
(The Quran, Yunus: 94)

These words are addressed to the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him. However, we know that the Prophet said, from the outset, that he harboured no doubts as to the authenticity of his message. When his people promised him a position of power in exchange for abandoning his message, He said, 'By Allah if they put the sun in my right hand and the moon in my left on the condition that I abandon this course, until Allah has made me victorious or I perish therein, I would not abandon it.' We might also point out that Allah implies an address to the Ummah (Islamic community) within the speech addressed to the Prophet. Thus, when the followers of the Prophet read or hear the words that are addressed to the Messenger in such manner, they will not abstain from carrying out any order that is issued to them.

A commander, for instance, issues orders to his two aides who are in charge of leading two groups of warriors. The supreme commander tells them both, 'Beware not to do such and such thing.' By issuing these instructions, the commander is not addressing his two aides; rather, he is addressing all those subordinates who are under their command. Therefore, the above verse contains an order addressed to the Prophet, so that his Ummah (Islamic community) might realize that the Messenger is not one to refuse an order issued by Allah and that he executes everything that he is ordered to do with accurate efficiency. Hence, that is a speech addressed to the Islamic community in the in the person of the Prophet.

When Allah Glorified is He addresses the Prophet to ask those who have been reading the Scripture before him in case of doubt, this indicates that those, who were familiar with the divine writs from before the coming of the Messenger of Allah, were aware of the self-evident truth of his message. Those who were intransigent and disbelieved in the Prophet of Allah and his message knew Him as they knew their own son. In fact, 'Abdullah ibn Salam Allah be pleased with him said, 'When I first saw Muhammad, I recognised him as I recognise my own son; nay, my acquaintance with Muhammad is even stronger.' Thus, the truth about his coming is plain written in the Torah as due to the glad tiding referring to him. This proves that your message, O Muhammad, is true with the testimony of the people of the Book themselves.

Allah Glorified is He says: “The truth has certainly come to you from your Lord, so never be among the doubters” (Yunus: 94). The truth that issues forth from Allah is immutable and unalterable. It does not change, for it is real, and that which is real does not take on multiple forms; it manifests as a single form. However, lying can take on a variety of forms. That is why the job of a diligent inspector is to investigate every angle of the testimonials that are presented to him at court in order to reach a final judgement which is of absolute accuracy and free from any conflicting evidence.

The words of Allah that declare that the truth has come unto Muhammad indicate that those who have read the divine writ have realized that he was indeed the Messenger of Allah. Thereafter, some of them have left the Jewish camp behind and come over to join the camp of believers in Muhammad, as the truth that has come is completely untainted by any human interference. It rather came from your Lord; thereby, do not be among the doubters.

Such a manner of speech presented in the verse we are discussing, as I have clarified before, indicates that they are addressed to the Ummah (Islamic community) as embodied by the person of the Prophet. Allah warns the Prophet in another chapter that if he were to associate [with Allah], his work would certainly come to naught. Such words were revealed to the Messenger of Allah, even though it is inconceivable that the Prophet should ever fall into idolatry. Therefore, all of the Quranic verses that contain directives regarding things from which the Messenger of Allah is ontologically immune are particularly addressed to his community.

Allah Glorified is He adds in the next verse:

Then you would become one of the losers [95]
(The Quran, Yunus: 95)

Allah Glorified is He when exhorting to that which is good, often cites the opposite of that good to elucidate things through juxtaposition. In our own daily lives, we find a father tells his son to work hard in his studies and pay close attention to his instructors so that he might succeed, and not to be like so and so, a person who dropped out. In this scenario, the father urges his son to work towards the good and, at the same time, brings up a reference to the counter of that good, which is warning against malfeasance. As one poet has composed, the face is like the morning white, and the hair is like the night black. Two opposites together are comely, and one counter reveals its counter beauty.

We know that the signs of Allah are numerous. Ayat (signs) could be the cosmic signs, which are the basis of the creed, positing that their creator is the Most-High Creator. These signs alert us to the splendour of His work, the finesse, and subtlety that are present in the formation of His creation and His All-Encompassing Power. Signs could be the miracles which have been given to the Messengers peace be upon them so that each might prove his verity as a communicator of a message on Allah’s behalf. Another type of ayat is the ayat of the Holy Quran which embody the Doctrine of Allah. However, the disbelievers were denying all of the signs.

Likewise, the present verse is addressed to the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and connected to the preceding verse, where Allah had ordered to ask those who have been reading the Scripture before him in case of doubt.

We must not deduce that the Messenger of Allah was having doubts or that he was among those who have disbelieved in the signs of Allah. The reason why such matters have been brought up is to reject the tendencies of humankind, wherever they may arise. Thus, even if the words of revelation are, by default, addressed to the Messenger of Allah, the ultimate purpose of such proscriptions is to balance the understanding of the Ummah (Islamic community) in order to teach and guide them. After all, the Doctrine has been revealed to the Prophet to communicate it to his community as he bears witness to the truth before all the communities.

If the previous verse gives the meaning that Allah asks the Prophet to ask if He is in doubt, Allah asks him whether or not he doubts what was revealed to him, so that He might hear the answer from the Prophet and let the whole Ummah hear the answer, ‘I do not doubt nor do I question. That is which Allah has revealed to me suffices me.’ The Holy Quran mentions how Allah Glorified is He shall ask the angels, on the Day of Judgment, with the presence of those who worshipped them 'Did these worship you?' (Saba’: 40) We know that the angels do not disobey Allah in whatever He has commanded them and that they do what they are bidden to do. Allah says “over which are [appointed] angels, harsh and severe; they do not disobey Allah in what He commands them but do what they are commanded” (at-Tahrim: 6).

Allah Glorified is He foreknows the response of the angels negating that they worshiped them “They will say, "Exalted are You! You, [O Allah], are our benefactor not them. Rather, they used to worship the jinn; most of them were believers in them" (Saba’: 41) However, Allah wishes to make all those who are gathered on that day hear the response of the angels as they denied being worshiped by other creatures and affirming that those people had worshipped the Jinn.

Thus, the question had been posed to demonstrate its answer. Similarly, when Jesus peace be upon him is worshiped by certain members of his community, Allah asks him: 'O Isa son of Maryam! Did you say to men, Take me and my mother for two gods besides Allah?' (al-Ma‘ida: 119) Then, the response comes, 'Glory be to Thee, it did not befit me that I should say what I had no right to [say].' (al-Ma‘ida: 119) Thus, the purpose of the question of Allah to his Prophet is that the Messenger might say, 'I do not doubt nor do I question.'

The word ash-shakk (doubt) means that the scale of denial and the scale of confirmation balance each other out. If one scale outweighs the other, this would be a case of dhann, where the heavier scale represents a belief and the lighter scale represents an illusion, a fabrication, and a lie. The word ash-shakk is actually related to something concrete. After fishermen make a catch, they attach each fish to a string called al-mishkak. In addition, those who make necklaces put a string though every piece; thus, it means to join one thing to another. Likewise, there comes the word ash-shaka'ik, which means those houses that stand next to each other in a neat pattern. Hence, the expression shak as-silah also means to put on armour. Therefore, the word ash-shak denotes joining one thing to another and also connotes denial and confirmation existing side by side, owing to the fact that one is unable to give priority to either one. All the above versions of meaning are invoked whenever one refers to ash-shakk.

The verse which we are currently examining speaks of signs, and we know that the Messenger himself represents one of these signs. Thus, the words of this verse are evidently addressed to the Prophet's Ummah. It is impossible that the Prophet be among those who are bent on lying about Allah's signs. To reject the signs of Allah is tantamount to turning truth into falsehood and reality into non-reality. Those who disbelieve in the signs of Allah either do not believe in God or believe in God but not in a Messenger. They could believe in both God and a Messenger, but do not believe in the Doctrine which has been revealed to the Messenger. This is corroborated by a verse at the end of the chapter Yunus, wherein Allah Glorified is He says: 'if you are in doubt as to my religion, then [know that] I do not serve those whom you serve besides Allah.' (Yunus: 104) Thus, it is as if the speech is addressed to the Ummah.

Thereafter, Allah Glorified is He says:

إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ حَقَّتْ عَلَيْهِمْ كَلِمَتُ رَبِّكَ لَا يُؤْمِنُونَ ﴿٩٦﴾

Those against whom your Lord's sentence is passed will not believe [96] (The Quran, Yunus: 96)

These words demonstrate that Allah Glorified is He has foreknown that they would not incline towards faith. This, however, does not preclude their responsibility in the act of choosing. He has foreknown the choice that they would end up making. When the time came, they made the choice that Allah had known they would make. His Judgment incorporates the element of human freewill; however, it is, at the same time, a providential judgment. Consider, for example, and Allah knows best, when the minister of agriculture comes forth and announces the forecasted quantity of cotton to be harvested during a given year. This estimate is based on the area of arable land dedicated to cotton production and the average per-acre output of cotton expected. The estimate might be accurate. It might not be off target due to the various factors that are involved in cotton production. It is possible that the year's crop might succumb to some disaster or other problems such as the cotton bollworm or the pink bollworm.

Thus, in the human domain, estimates may be accurate, or they may miss the mark as human estimates are based on knowledge that is relative and not absolute. However, the predictions of Allah are based on pre-eternal knowledge, and when He puts forth a prediction, it must necessarily come to pass. That is why we must discern between divine judgments that are destined, pre-ordained and in which man has no say, and predictions put forth by Allah, which humans carry out while exercising their freewill. Here the great mystery of the unseen is observed.

Take for instance, the behaviour of Abu Lahab. The Quran says about him: 'Perdition overtakes both hands of Abu Lahab, and he will perish. His wealth and what he earns will not avail him.' (al-Masad: 1-2) This chapter was revealed while Abu Lahab was still alive. Allah Glorified is He had foreknown that his disposition was such that he would never attain faith. Had Abu Lahab been marginally intelligent, he would have approached the Messenger of Allah and proclaimed, 'you have said that I will have to endure hellfire; however, I now testify that there is no God but Allah and that you are the Messenger of Allah.' Abu Lahab was not a man of such intelligence. Allah had foreknown that his disposition was such that he would never embrace Islam, unlike Hamzah ibn Abd al-Muttalib, the Prophet's uncle, 'Umar ibn Al-Khattab, Khalid ibn al-Walid or 'Amr ibn Al-'As Allah be pleased with them who have converted to Islam in spite of their initial opposition to the Prophet.

Thus, human beings can predict something, but such is based only on the information that is available to them. Man does not have access to universal, pre-temporal knowledge when making his predictions. Man has a limited knowledge. Therefore, it is conceivable that he errs in his calculations as he does not have dominion over what he predicts. Thus, let nobody say that Allah punishes human beings for acts which He has preordained. The predictions of Allah stem from His pre-temporal knowledge, and human beings have the right to choose. Allah has said: ‘And whenever a chapter is revealed, there are some of them who say: Which of you has it strengthened in faith? Then as for those who believe, it strengthens them in faith and they rejoice. And as for those in whose hearts is a disease, it adds uncleanness to their uncleanness and they die while they are unbelievers.' (at-Tawba: 124-125)

In the next verse Allah Glorified is He says:

even if every sign comes to them, until they see the agonizing torment [97] (The Quran, Yunus: 97)

Thus, the coming of the numerous signs will not help them move toward faith; Allah Glorified is He knows that they will use their freewill to choose disbelief. Allah Glorified is He quotes them as having said: ‘And they say: We will by no means believe in you until you cause a fountain to gush forth from the earth for us. Or you should have a garden of palms and grapes in the midst of which you should cause rivers to flow forth, gushing out. Or you should cause the heaven to come down upon us in pieces as you think, or bring Allah and the angels face to face [with us]. Or you should have a house of gold, or you should ascend into heaven, and we will not believe in your ascending until you bring down to us a book which we may read. Say: Glory be to my Lord; am I aught but a mortal messenger?' (al-Isra': 90-93)

It is as if Allah Glorified is He were ordering His Messenger to explain that he does not he reveal the signs; rather, these signs are from Allah. The Quran mentions the reason why those signs which they asked for were not revealed and Allah says: 'And nothing could have hindered Us that We should send signs except that the ancients rejected them.' (al-Isra': 59) Numerous signs have been revealed to previous generations of sceptics and deniers who oppose the prospect of faith with hearts filled with disbelief. If one is searching for faith, one should do so without any preconceptions. May the person contemplate the matter and let into his heart that which he accepts. This choice of the heart that is free from any previous conditions is the most excellent form of acceptance

Previously, Allah Glorified is He speaks about His Unity, His miraculous signs, the legitimacy of Prophethood and the Day of Resurrection. He also narrates the stories of some of the Messengers who succeeded one another through history, from Noah peace be upon him to a partial account of the story of Moses and Aaron peace be upon them and Allah tells the story of Jonah peace be upon him. We notice that Allah narrates the story of Noah in great detail and then He mentions the stories of Messengers of whom He does not say anything. He mentions the story of Moses and Aaron after that and later, He mentions the story of Jonah peace be upon him. The chapter therefore comprises three messages, which are that of Noah, Moses and Aaron and the message of Jonah peace be upon them. The latter is the Messenger after whom the chapter is named.

One might ask why Allah narrates the story of these three Prophets in this chapter. We with many exegetes have become very tired to grasp the wisdom behind including the stories of the three aforementioned Messengers and not the story of Hud, Thamud and Jethro. There must have been wisdom in this. As far as we have been allowed to understand, the wisdom is that Allah presents the succession of messages as well as the deniers of every Messenger. He also presents the fate that befell the enemies and what befell the Messenger and his followers. We find that those whom Allah has mentioned in this chapter have all been destroyed in a similar fashion. The destruction of the people of Noah was through drowning; likewise the destruction of the people of Pharaoh was also effected through drowning. The story of our Messenger Jonah was also related to the sea as he had been swallowed by a whale and had coursed throughout the sea.

Thus, all of the Messengers cited in this chapter have a connection with water unlike the rest of the Messengers. We know that water is both a source for life and for destruction. The One who gave life is capable of giving life by means of some element while also bringing about death by means of the same element. It would seem that Allah Glorified is He is imparting us with the following piece of wisdom that He has smitten by drowning in one instance, and He has saved from drowning in another instance. Thus, divine omnipotence is the theme that dominates this chapter; at the same time, Allah's Absolute Power also manifests itself in other domains and through other forms.

This chapter is known by the name Yunus (Jonah) because Allah Glorified is He had sent forth this Prophet to a community which was more than a hundred-thousand strong. This community is the only one which, in this context, Allah Glorified is He has spared from destruction. He caused the peoples of both Noah and Pharaoh to drown after denying and rejecting the Messengers. However, the people of Jonah saw the terrible fate that was on the verge of befalling them, attained faith, and Allah spared them from the suffering. Therefore, the chapter is named after the Messenger whose people had been saved from suffering for they had turned to Allah before they experienced suffering. In fact, they had witnessed only the early signs of an impending suffering, but that was dreadful enough that they moved to save themselves by attaining faith. Allah Glorified is He says:

فَلَوْلَا كَانَتْ قَرْيَةٌ ءَامَنَتْ فَنَفَعَهَآ إِيمَٰنُهَآ إِلَّا قَوْمَ يُونُسَ لَمَّآ ءَامَنُوا۟
كَشَفْنَا عَنْهُمْ عَذَابَ ٱلْخِزْىِ فِى ٱلْحَيَوٰةِ ٱلدُّنْيَا وَمَتَّعْنَٰهُمْ إِلَىٰ حِينٍ ﴿٩٨﴾

If only a single town had believed and benefited from its belief! Only Jonah's people did so, and when they believed, We relieved them of the punishment of disgrace in the life of this world, and let them enjoy life for a time [98] (The Quran, Yunus: 98)

Here, Allah Glorified is He shows us that there have been many communities which only attained faith at the moment when suffering was befalling them; however, such faith was of no avail to any one of them. The people of Jonah, on the other hand, proclaimed their faith before the coming of the terrible punishment and suffering. Thus, Allah Glorified is He accepted their faith, for He is not unjust towards His servants. He who reaches the very brink and proclaims his faith when the suffering is at hand, repentance will not be accepted from such a person; while for he who senses the early sings of suffering and proclaims his faith at that moment, Allah Glorified is He will accept his repentance.

When you hear the word lawla, know that it is synonymous with the word lawma. If the word lawla is used with a nominal sentence, its function is different than using it with a verbal sentence. When it is used within a nominal sentence, such as in lawla zayd 'indak la'tatytuk (was there not that Zayd is at your place, I would have come to you.) The term lawla here denotes the reason for not coming, which is the presence of Zayd. However, when it is used with a verbal sentence, it functions as a term of exhortation and forceful persuasion. For example, Allah Glorified is He says: 'why should not then a company from every party from among them go forth that they may apply themselves to obtain understanding in religion.' (at-Tawba: 122) It means that there was supposed to be, from every group, a few who would seclude themselves to study the religious matters.

In the verse we are studying, Allah Glorified is He says: 'wherefore was there not a town which should believe' (Yunus: 98). In other words, if there was a community who attained faith before the suffering befell them, We would spare it like We have spared the people of Jonah peace be upon him. Thus, the people of Jonah are the exception since they had attained faith before the suffering had befallen them. There is another verse related to this story wherein Allah Glorified is He says: But had it not been that he was of those who glorify [Us], He would certainly have tarried in its belly to the day when they are raised.' (as-Saffat: 143-144) It means that it was Jonah's prayers that saved him from remaining in the belly of the whale until the Day of Resurrection.

Allah Glorified is He points out the exception that was made with respect to the people of Jonah. This means that when the people of Jonah had believed before the suffering befell them, it had benefited them. That is why Allah Glorified is He says that He removed from them the punishment of disgrace in worldly life and gave them enjoyment for a time.

Now, we know that the word qarya means a furnished place whose population resides therein and where, if a visitor were to visit them, he would be offered qirya, which is a meal.

There are those who use the word balad to describe homelands with a large population who always have plentiful food at hand. Whereas those homelands with small populations often have meagre food reserves which are enough to feed themselves and a one-time visitor. Mecca is called um al-Qura (the mother of all villages) as the people of all of the other cities visit it. The Prophet has spoken about the town of the people of Jonah peace be upon him Nineveh, in the story of his travels to At-Ta'if. The latter is the town of the virtuous servant Jonah peace be upon him who was the son of Matta. The town is located in modern day Iraq near the city of Mosul. It is Jonah peace be upon him regarding whom Allah has said: 'And Yunus, when he went away in wrath.' (al-Anbiya': 87)

The phrase 'in anger' is different from the word 'angry', for the latter refers to one who gets angry without someone provoking him whereas the former refers to one who has been angered by someone. The True Lord Glorified is He says: 'And [mention] the man of the fish, when he went off in anger and thought that we would not decree [anything] upon him. And he called out within the darkness, "There is no deity except you; exalted are you. Indeed, I have been of the wrongdoers."' (al-Anbiya': 87)

Yunus (Jonah) peace be upon him has been called 'man of the fish' because his name is connected with the whale that swallowed him. We all know the story when he exhorted his people to faith and they rejected him at first. A Messenger always comes forth to reform a society's corrupt lifestyle. The Messenger is then persecuted by those who lead such degenerate lives because they want to hold on to the power that allows them to steal, embezzle, and satiate the desires of the lower self. Thus, when they acted in such manner with Jonah peace be upon him he became angry and left. In other words, they caused him to be angry.

After Jonah peace be upon him became angry and left, the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'and thought that we would not decree [anything] upon him.' Meaning, he believed that the True Lord Glorified is He would not restrict his movement in Allah's vast earth. He thought that Allah would assign him to some place other than the city—of a hundred-thousand and more—to where Allah Glorified is He had originally sent him. He was supposed to withstand the malice which they had directed at him. However, Jonah's wish to move elsewhere indicated that the resistance that was put against his message was strong. Indeed, it was cause for anger, and it filled his heart with pain and weariness. He ought to have braced himself for the inevitable hardships of his mission. Nineveh is the city that Jonah peace be upon him was sent to. This is the city that was mentioned in the conversation between Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the Christian young man ‘Addas, whom he had met during his return from At-Ta’if.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had travelled to At-Ta’if to ask its people for their assistance. This was after he had been persecuted by his people in Mecca and had not found anyone who would support his cause. The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him sat near the wall of a farm. When the owners of the farm— ‘Utaba and Shayba sons of Rabi‘a—saw him and realized what torment he had endured at the hands of the mob, they were moved to compassion. They summoned a Christian servant of theirs named ‘Addas and told him: ‘Take some of these grapes, place them on this tray, take it to that man and offer it to him.’ Thereupon, ‘Addas did what he was told, and when he had placed the grapes in the hand of the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him he said to him: ‘Eat.’ When the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him picked up the grapes, He said: ‘In the Name of Allah,’ and then he started to eat. ‘Addas looked at him and said: ‘These are words which the inhabitants of this land do not generally use.’ Then, the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him said to him: ‘Where do you come from ‘Addas, and what is your religion?’ Addas said: ‘I am a Christian, and I hail from the people of Nineveh.’ The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him said: ‘You belong to the city of the righteous Jonah, son of Matta.’ ‘Addas said: ‘What do you know about Jonah, son of Matta?’ The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him said: ‘He is my brother. He was a Prophet and so am I.’ ‘Addas paid homage to the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him and kissed his head, hands and feet. When the two owners of the farm inquired ‘Addas about the matter, he said to them: ‘This man informed me of that which only a Prophet would know.’

Now, we know that the righteous servant—Jonah peace be upon him —was distressed, sad and angry about his people’s lack of responsiveness to his message of faith. However, when they saw the signs of a gathering storm on the horizon, and Allah Glorified is He caused them to believe that this storm was the beginning of Allah's punishment for them, they hastened to the wise men of the community, whereupon the latter informed them that these were the initial signs of impending suffering. The elders told them: 'You must please Jonah peace be upon him for he has been sent by Allah Glorified is He. Thus, you should believe in his message so that he may [pray to Allah to] spare you from the coming affliction.'

Then, the people quickly proclaimed their faith in the All-Living Who never dies, He Who Lives when all else is dead—The All-Sustaining. The people went to their Messenger to seek his pleasure. After he was pleased with them, they began to look back at all the past injustices they had committed, to the point that one man among them began tearing apart the walls of his house because it contained a brick which he had stolen from his neighbour. Allah Glorified is He thereby spared them from the punishment. He Glorified is He hereby says: 'We removed from them the punishment of disgrace in worldly life and gave them enjoyment for a time.' (Yunus: 98) One related incident with the story of Jonah peace be upon him along with his anger incident is his encounter with the whale; after he had become angry and taken his leave of his people, he boarded a ship.

Once at sea, the ship was violently assailed by waves, and it appeared that its passengers were destined to drown. Thereupon, they threw their cargo overboard to lighten the ship's load. However, the turbulence continued unabated; so, they decided to hold a lottery whereby whosoever was selected would be thrown overboard. Lo and behold, the Prophet of Allah, Jonah peace be upon him was chosen. Similarly, when we ride an elevator, there is a red light which flashes to warn us that the machine is overloaded beyond capacity and that it will not operate. When this happens, one or two people need to step out so that only the allowable number of people remains in the elevator. Usually, it is the well-mannered people who volunteer to step out, because they want to make things easier for other people. It was a similar situation on the ship that Jonah peace be upon him had boarded. The vessel was on the verge of sinking, so they drew the lottery and Jonah peace be upon him was picked to jump overboard. The True Lord Glorified is He says: 'And then they cast lots, and he was the one who lost.' (as-Saffat: 141) Thus, Jonah peace be upon him threw himself into the sea, whereupon he was swallowed by the whale.

Regarding Jonah's stay inside the belly of the whale, the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'And had he not been of those who exalt Allah, He would have remained inside its belly until the Day they are resurrected.' (as-Saffat: 143-144) Here, in the verse which we a presently examining, the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'We removed from them the punishment of disgrace in worldly life.' In the life of this world, the 'suffering of disgrace' can be seen manifested in the person who is dishonest and arrogant with other people. Then, the people see him in a state of ignominy and abasement. Such is the 'suffering of disgrace' in the life of this world, and surely, the suffering in the life of the Hereafter is even more disgraceful and insurmountable.

The True Lord Glorified is He concludes the verse with His words: 'and gave them enjoyment for a time.' That is, they were spared from the suffering for the remainder of their lives and until they died a natural death.

Thereafter, the True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَلَوْ شَآءَ رَبُّكَ لَءَامَنَ مَن فِى ٱلْأَرْضِ كُلُّهُمْ جَمِيعًا ۚ
أَفَأَنتَ تُكْرِهُ ٱلنَّاسَ حَتَّىٰ يَكُونُوا۟ مُؤْمِنِينَ ﴿٩٩﴾

Had your Lord willed, all the people on earth would have believed. So can you [Prophet] compel people to believe? [99] (The Quran, Yunus: 99)

The True Lord Glorified is He explains that if a battle arises between a Prophet sent forth (from heaven) backed with his followers against those who disbelieved in him, the True Lord Glorified is He must, in the end, bring down suffering upon those who disbelieved.

Beware not to think the True Lord Glorified is He has any need for the acts of worship that His servants perform; Allah's Existence is pre-eternal in nature, and He possesses all the attributes of Perfection/Completeness even before He created the universe. Out of His attribute of Perfection, He brought His creation into existence. His Omnipotence is an innate feature of His Essence. He was the Creator before He created the universe, just as He was the All-Sustainer before He created either sustenance or the creatures that require sustentation. The created universe is a manifestation of His Attributes of Perfection/Completeness. It is He Who brought all things into existence.

That is why His Attributes are called the Attributes of Essence, for their existence antedates the existence of the created things that depend upon them. Thus, when you say: The ‘Ever-Living’ and the ‘One Who grants life’, this does not mean that Allah Glorified is He becomes characterized as ‘One Who grants life’ only after those to whom He grants life come to exist. Rather, He is the ‘One Who grants life’ and it is by virtue of this very attribute that He has brought creatures to life. Consider for example—and Allah knows best, being that He is far above the possibility of comparison—the photographer or the painter who has created a beautiful piece of art. This is a case where we are witnessing the manifested effects of the art which the artist (spent so many years) mastering. Thus, the painting or the photo is merely the manifestation of the artist’s innate talent. Therefore, the True Lord Glorified is He possesses all of the Attributes of Perfection even before He created the universe. Beware not to think that something new has been added to Allah’s Essence. There is nothing that is ever added unto what the True Lord Glorified is He already possesses. At the same time, Allah Glorified is He in no way derives benefit from His creatures; rather, it is He Who benefits them.

We know that faith is something that is required of us as human beings—human beings are the creatures that are visible. Faith is also required of another kind of creature which Allah Glorified is He and has informed us of, namely, the jinn.

As for the rest of the cosmos, it glorifies Allah forever. The universe is composed of numerous worlds which have no end, and unto each there is an order which it follows unswervingly. If Allah wanted to incorporate the two special beings—human beings and jinn—into the realm of subjugated creatures (which have no freewill), such a task would not be beyond His reach.

Doing so, however, would indeed reaffirm His Omnipotence, but it would not prove that His creatures love Him. That is why the True Lord Glorified is He has given human beings freewill, so that they may choose to either believe or disbelieve. If you turn to Him with a believing heart, this would prove that He is loved. Faith of this kind is different from the faith of the coerced. What is asked of both human beings and the jinn is the faith that has sprouted from the soil of their freewill. As for the kind of faith that is forced and compelled—this is demonstrated by everything else that exists in the universe: all are believers, and all proclaim His Glory. The True Lord Glorified is He says: 'And there is not a thing except that it exalts [Allah] by His praise.' (al-Isra': 44)

There is nothing symbolic about the statement put forth in the above verse—these creatures' extolment (of their Creator) is real. As Allah says: 'but you do not understand their [way of] exalting.' (al-Isra': 44) If Allah Glorified is He were to teach you their languages, you would come to know of the extolment of such creatures. To be sure, He had taught Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him the language of the birds. Solomon peace be upon him had also heard an ant saying: 'O ants, enter your dwellings that you not be crushed by Solomon and his soldiers while they perceive not.' (an-Naml: 18) In addition, the hoopoe bird communicated to Solomon peace be upon him the news which he had obtained regarding Bilqis—the Queen of Sheba: 'I found her and her people prostrating to the sun instead of Allah, and Satan has made their deeds pleasing to them and averted them from [His] way, so they are not guided.' (an-Naml: 24)

Thus, everything in the universe extols the Glory of Allah Glorified is He. All things conform to (their essential nature as dictated by Allah)—all except for the two special beings: human beings and the jinn. They both are endowed with a mind, and both have the freedom to choose between alternatives. It is a testament to the Greatness of the True Lord Glorified is He that He has endowed man with freewill—such that the believer turns to Allah voluntarily. If the True Lord Glorified is He so wished, He could compel all human beings to have faith. I say this so that nobody should ever ask: what is the need for creating the creation, sending messengers to them, the denial of some of them, and eventually damning those deniers? That is why the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'And had your Lord willed, those on earth would have believed - all of them entirely. Then, [O Muhammad], would you compel the people in order that they become believers?' (Yunus: 99) Thus, the True Lord Glorified is He has created man and has put all of the other creatures at man's service. At the same time, Allah did not force faith upon human beings, rather, as He Glorified is He says to Prophet Muhammad: ‘Perhaps, [O Muhammad], you would kill yourself with grief that they will not be believers.’ (ash-Shu'ara': 3)

The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him was loyal to his people and loved them very much. Having tasted the sweetness of faith himself, he was sad they did not. This is why the True Lord Glorified is He reminds him that his mission is to merely convey the Message. He should not be overly saddened (by their reaction to the Message). The True Lord Glorified is He bestowed upon human beings the freedom to choose. Allah has also put the universe at the service of human beings. There are some men who believe, and there are others who disbelieve. There are believers who at times obey Allah but at other times disobey Him. This has all been willed by the True Lord—so that the universe maintains balance. Every virtuous quality is all the more accentuated if there are people who would violate it. This is what Allah has willed for human beings; hence, do not be saddened, O Messenger of Allah—for it is all part of the True Lord’s Will. If someone were to become angry because other people refuse to acknowledge his beautiful attributes, we would tell him: the True Lord Glorified is He is the Creator of the Universe, and He is the All-Sustainer. They may have disbelieved in Him, digressed from the straight path and set up associates besides Him—but did they take on the attributes of Allah? That is why the True Lord Glorified is He says: ‘And had your Lord willed, those on earth would have believed - all of them entirely. Then, [O Muhammad], would you compel the people in order that they become believers?’ What Allah wants is faith that stems from love and man’s freewill. Thereafter, the True Lord Glorified is He says:

ٱلرِّجْسَ عَلَى ٱلَّذِينَ لَا يَعْقِلُونَ ١٠٠

No soul can believe except by God’s will, and He brings disgrace on those who do not use their reason [100]
(The Quran, Yunus: 100)

The True Lord Glorified is He shows us that none shall attain faith except by His leave. Attaining faith means that your faith must stem from the primordial and inalienable essence of the human soul. Such a faith should result from your contemplation of the heavens with its constellations, of the earth with its passes, of the surging seas and of the howling winds—all point to the existence of the Creator Glorified is He. However, has Allah left human beings (to search for the truth merely by means of) their original disposition? No, Allah Glorified is He has sent the messengers so that they remind them of the signs that exist in the universe hoping for the return of the negligent. Allah Glorified is He does not wish to judge people while they are in a state of forgetfulness. That is why the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'That is because your Lord would not destroy the cities for wrongdoing while their people were unaware.' (al-An'am: 131) This is why the True Lord Glorified is He alerts them to that fact that there are things which they need to be reminded of. It is as if the True Lord were telling us: beware not to think that a person can leave My dominion except with My permission. By creating him and endowing him with freewill, I have allowed him to either disbelieve or believe, to obey, or to disobey. The reason for all of this is that—by voluntarily submitting himself to me— man will prove my attribute as One Who is worthy of being loved. That is why nobody attains faith except by Allah's leave, neither does anyone disbelieve except by His leave. Allah has created man and endowed him with freewill, and He knows what kind of person each man shall be: the disbeliever was not forced to disbelieve, nor was the believer forced by Allah Glorified is He to believe.

When a Messenger comes forth to exhort people to faith, man remembers the faith that is part of his original disposition. He says: 'This Messenger has come forth with such a doctrine so that he might rectify my life affairs. I must, therefore, give him my full attention.' Once the servant turns to Allah, the Lord Glorified is He allows him to enter into the realm of faith. There are some servants among us who go to see another servant who enjoys power and prestige. With Allah's help, the prestigious servant realizes the reason why the other servant has come to see him, he tells his aids: do not let him in. He says this because Allah Glorified is He gave him a glimpse of what is in the other servant's heart: malevolence, jealousy, and hypocrisy. However, if some other servant knocks on his door, he will tell his aides to let him in and welcome him, because he is aware of the love, sincerity and friendship that is in his heart. Now, if this can happen between servants—who are, as human beings, at the mercy of their own passions and desires—then what can possibly happen when it comes to the True Lord Glorified is He?

Allah Himself says in a Qudsi Hadith: 'Whosoever makes mention of Me within himself, I shall make mention of him in an even better assembly.' How wonderful is it when a servant attains faith in Allah while being free of any other god save Allah? Thus, turn to Allah and invoke His Name, for if you make mention of Allah within yourself, Allah will make mention of you within Himself, and if you make mention of Allah in an assembly, Allah will make mention of you in an even greater and better assembly. The assembly in which you will make mention of Allah is predisposed to error, but when Allah Glorified is He makes mention of you, He will do so in an assembly that is pure. In the same Hadith (1), the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'If He draws near to me an arm's length, I draw near to Him by a fathom's length.' A fathom's length is longer than an arm's length. Allah also says: 'If he comes to me walking, I go to him at speed.' Since walking might tire the servant, the True Lord goes to him at speed. In spite of His Great Majesty, when the Lord witnesses that a servant has purified his heart from all animosity towards Him, He opens the doors of His Love for His servant. Allah makes all of his creatures love the servant. Allah also causes the servant to engage upon all activities with sincerity and to conclude all difficult activities with sincerity. The True Lord Himself says: 'And those who are guided - He increases them in guidance and gives them their righteousness.' (Muhammad: 17)

We notice that the verse under study, the True Lord Glorified is He emphasises the fact that, if He so wished, all the inhabitants of the earth would attain faith, even Satan —who contended with Allah—could attain faith if the True Lord Glorified is He so wished. The True Lord Glorified is He emphasises this point so as to affirm that He is in full control of all of His creation—none can ever act contrary to His Will.

(1) Agreed upon Hadith; it is related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (7405) and by Muslim (2675). The full Hadith is as follows: 'I am as My servant thinks I am. I am with him when he makes mention of Me. If he makes mention of me to himself, I make mention of him to myself; and if he makes mention of Me in an assembly, I make mention of him in an even greater assembly. If he draws near to me by an arm's length, I draw near to him by a fathom's length. If he comes to Me walking, I go to him at speed.'

In the same verse, the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'Then, [O Muhammad], would you compel the people in order that they become believers?' The True Lord Glorified is He wishes to alert Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and all of the believers to the fact that: 'There shall be no coercion in religion.' (al-Baqara: 256) To be sure, the requirements of faith are not limited to only those outward requirements, which are obvious. There are other requirements which are not apparent. Suppose you succeed in coercing someone outwardly, do you think you could force him inwardly to have a change of heart? What the True Lord Glorified is He wants is the sincere faith of the heart—not the faith (that is limited to) the outward conformity (with religious law). Thus, coercion is inappropriate when it comes to matters of faith. However, one must not misapply this principle, for you might find a Muslim who does not pray, and so his friend reprimands him. He then retorts: 'There shall be no coercion in matters of faith.' This is an inappropriate application of the principle, and it is a case of false reasoning.

Coercion in matters of faith is forbidden when it comes to the fundamental question of creed. However, if one proclaims to be a Muslim, and if he testifies that there is no god but Allah and that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah—such a proclamation binds him to all the decrees contained in Islamic law. He, thereby, becomes judged according to Islamic principles. If he violates any of the rules of Islamic law, he must be held accountable. The principle—that there shall be no coercion in matters of faith—applies to the fundamental choice that one has when it comes to choosing a creed. You are free to either embrace Islam or not. However, once you do embrace Islam, you become bound to the decrees of Islamic law—for you have come to believe in the religion of Islam and will, henceforth, be judged according to the principles of Islamic law. Therefore, abide by the legal limits of Islamic law and do not violate them. For example, if you steal, your hand shall be cut off; if you commit fornication, you will be stoned or whipped; if you drink alcohol, you will be whipped; for you have accepted the legal precepts of Islamic law the (Sharia).

Therefore, the principle that 'There shall be no coercion in religion,' means that it is forbidden to coerce someone when it comes to the fundamental question of creed. However, once you attain faith, you are obligated to abide by the stipulations of the faith, and you are to be punished if you violate the legal limits. Furthermore, the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him says: ‘The example of the person abiding by Allah’s orders and restrictions in comparison to those who violate them is like the example of those persons who drew lots for their seats on a boat. Some of them were seated in the upper deck while others in the lower deck; when the latter needed water, they had to go up to bring water. Seeing that this troubled the others, they said: ‘Let us make a hole in our section of the ship (and get water), saving those above us from the trouble we might cause them. So, if the people in the upper part left the others do what they had suggested, all the people of the ship would be drowned, but if they prevented them, both parties would be safe.’(1)

Thus, abiding by the provisions of faith is obligatory upon anyone who embraces the faith freely. If he violates any of the rules, he is to be punished. There are provisions that are even more severe than this, such as the punishment that is incumbent upon the person who abandons Islam, which is death (2). A person might say that such a punishment is rather barbaric. Our answer to him is that the person who has adopted a faith has known from the outset that, if he embraces the faith and then abandons it, he shall be killed. That is why he must not enter Islam except if he is in a state of absolute certainty. This stipulation serves to protect the religion. It is a credit to the religion and should not be held against the religion. You, therefore, embrace the faith only when you are certain of your ability to abide by its directives and keep your own desires in check. You also know that if you embrace the faith and thereafter abandon it, you will be killed. The result is that the decision to embrace the faith becomes a difficult (and serious) one. In principle, no one will embrace the religion except if they have a deep spiritual conviction. Such a stipulation (against abandoning the faith) is a credit to the religion and should not be held against it.

(1) This Hadith has been related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (2493), by Ahmad in his Musnad (4/268) and by At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan (2173). He qualifies this Hadith as being hasan-Sahih.

(2) It is narrated on the authority of Ibn ‘Abbas may Allah be pleased with him that the Messenger of Allah said: ‘If a person switches religions, kill him.’ – Related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (6922), by Ahmad in his (Musnad) (1/217, 282, 283, 323) and by Ibn Majah in his Sunnan (2535). The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him said in another Hadith, narrated on the authority of Ibn Mas‘ud: ‘It is not right to take the life of any Muslim who testifies that there is no god but Allah and that I am The Messenger of Allah except for these three [types]: he who takes another’s life (for reasons other than eye-for-an-eye retribution), he who commits adultery and he who abandons his faith and leaves the group.’ – Related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (6878) and by Muslim (1676)

The True Lord Glorified is He says: 'And it is not for a soul to believe except by permission of Allah, and He will place ruin upon those who will not use reason.'

The word 'ruin' means punishment and sin. The True Lord Glorified is He lays it upon those who do not use their reason, for if the concept of religion is ever presented to a mind free of desires, there can be no other outcome but that the mind accepts faith. That is why when world-class intellectuals study religion, they turn towards Islam because it is the religion that quenches people's spiritual thirst. As for those who treat religion as something bequeathed to them by their parents, they end up losing their spiritual bearings. Those world-class intellectuals who embraced Islam did not do so because they witnessed the conduct of Muslims; in our day and age, the conduct of many of those who are nominally attributed to Islam is far removed from the ideals of the religion. Nevertheless, such world-class intellectuals embraced Islam and studied the principles of Islam. In doing so, they distinguished between the principles of the religion and the adherents of the religion. Maintaining this distinction represents a kind of justice on the intellectual plane, for when the religion declares a particular act to be a crime, the decree does mean that the religion is sanctioning such an act. The proof of this is that the specified punishment is directly proportionate to the severity of the crime. To be sure, the True Lord Glorified is He says: '[As for] the thief, the male and the female, amputate their hands.' (al-Ma'ida: 38) This injunction implies the possibility that such a crime as stealing should be committed. This is also the case for the punishment pertaining to fornication and other wrongdoings to which the True Lord Glorified is He has specified punishments commensurate with the damage they cause to the soul and to society at large. Therefore, if you see a Muslim stealing, remember the punishment that Islam prescribes for the thief. If you see a Muslim committing fornication, remember the punishment that the True Lord Glorified is He has prescribed for the fornicator. Such is the case when it comes to all crimes. When those great intellectuals embrace Islam, they study the principles of the religion while disregarding the conduct of contemporary Muslims. The latter have strayed far from the principles of the true religion (of Islam).

Witness the French thinker René Guénon who said: 'Praise be to Allah who guided me to Islam before I had become acquainted with Muslims, for if I had come to know Muslims before my embracing of Islam, I would have likely suffered from such cognitive dissonance as to cause me to hesitate about embracing such a lofty religion.' Thus, the cogitation of the brilliant mind will always lead the person to Islam. Clear-headedness reflects that primordial state in which Allah created human beings, and Islam will only serve to grow the mind. Through Islam, the mind will soar to even loftier heights. Reason is the locus where man realizes his religious vocation and accepts his religious duties.

Sin and suffering is what befalls those who do not use their reason. To use the mind in a conscientious and virtuous way precludes the possibility of committing sin or being punished, for Allah Glorified is He will permit them to approach their religious duties in a way that they will use their reason. If someone were to ask me: What is the reason? What is the domain of religious duties?

Therefore, reason was given to us by Allah Glorified is He so that it might prevent us from seeking to fulfil our desires in an impulsive, wild manner; Allah Glorified is He has created the human soul, and He knows that the soul is inclined towards the immediate gratification of desires. Allah Glorified is He wants human beings to curb those impulses with the help of reason. When a person thinks about satisfying a particular desire, his mind will whisper to him: you might enjoy this particular pleasure momentarily; you might even have to steal it from someone else—that is, someone else's sacred property or someone else's wealth—however, would you ever let someone satisfy a particular desire of his at your expense? Therefore, you must realize that Allah Glorified is He has endowed you with reason so that it hinders your desires and prevents you from satisfying your desires at someone's expense—the consequences of acting on such impulses are always detrimental.

It would be a mistake to think that, in the name of freedom, the reason's function is to open the door to unbridled freedom. To anyone who is of this opinion, we say that the mind represents the centre which handles all issues related to religious duties. It is the mind which notifies you of your responsibilities when it comes to all manners of activities. It is by virtue of the True Lord's Justice that He has not charged the insane person with religious duties because his judgment of things and actions is unnatural since he lacks the faculty of discernment.

Moreover, Allah Glorified is He has not placed any religious duties upon the person who has not yet reached the age of puberty, because he has not fully developed his mental faculties yet, nor does he have the ability to reproduce. Previously, we have given the parable of the date. We do not consider a date to be ripe and palatable unless the seed that it contains is able to produce a new tree if planted in the ground. For example, if you cut open a watermelon and find its seeds to be white, you would not eat it. You will make sure to eat only those watermelons whose seeds have turned black, for that is a sign of the watermelon's ripeness. If you were to take the black seeds and plant them, a new watermelon plant would grow. Therefore, when a person reaches maturity, his mind becomes able to weigh various courses of action before proceeding with any of them. The religious duties are required of the person who is mature, in full possession of his mental faculties. They are not required of one who is compelled by some outside force to do what he knows is wrong.

When a person has not yet reached the age of puberty, Allah does not require him to perform any religious obligations. However, the person's family may do so, so as to prepare him for a life of religious obedience. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him tells us: 'Order your children to pray beginning from the age of seven, and punish them if they did not do so beginning from the age of ten, and separate their sleeping places.'(1) In this case, we find that the one who is giving orders is the father—and not Allah. Also, the one who doles out punishment is the father—and not Allah. Once the child reaches the age of puberty, Allah is the one who charges him with his religious duties. However, if someone were to use overwhelming force and compel him to commit a sin, such as if someone held up a gun to him and said: 'if you did not drink this alcohol, I will open fire'—in this case, the person is no longer bound by religious responsibility. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said in a Hadith: 'Allah forgives the members of my community if they fall into error or forgetfulness or if they are compelled against their will.'(1)

(1) Related by Ahmad in his Musnad (2/187) and by Abu Dawud in his Sunnan (490) – The Hadith is narrated on the authority of 'Abdullah ibn 'Amr Ibn Al-'As

Reason is the centre that deals with religious obligations. Its function is to choose between alternatives in all areas of life. When it comes to food, for example, there are those who prefer to sprinkle hot sauce over their food because it stimulates the appetite. After the person finishes his meal, we might find him screaming from heartburn and asking for antacids. In fact, the latter might not help to alleviate his pain: the protective layer of mucus on the inner walls of his stomach might already be damaged. Thus, the hot sauce that he used for one meal might prevent him from enjoying many meals to come. That is why we find his mind telling him: be wary of this kind of appetizing sauce, because it is detrimental to your health. We realize that the reason is the faculty which notifies the person of the consequences of his actions. It is also what prompts a person to deliberate before acting and to apply oneself during the execution of tasks, so that the results of the work might be consistently useful to him and to others. It is not reason's function to make error feel pleasurable.

In short, we realize that reason recognises and discerns the right course of action in all situations. To be sure, reason causes a person to incline towards faith even during the pre-pubescent stage. When a human being uses his reason to contemplate this universe, he will inevitably have to recognise the beauty of the Creator's work.

Then, the True Lord Glorified is He says:

(1) Related by Ibn Majah in his Sunnan (2040), Ad-Daraqutni in his Sunnan (4/170) and by Al-Hakim in his Mustadrak (2/198) – He revised it according to the criteria of the two Sheikhs. The Hadith is narrated on the authority of Ibn 'Abbas; however, Ibn Majah's chain of narrators (isnad) is discontinued.

قُلِ ٱنظُرُوا۟ مَاذَا فِى ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضِ ۚ وَمَا تُغْنِى ٱلْءَايَٰتُ وَٱلنُّذُرُ عَن قَوْمٍ لَّا يُؤْمِنُونَ ﴿١٠١﴾

Say, ‘Look at what is in the heavens and on the earth.’
But what use are signs and warnings to people who will not believe? [101] (The Quran, Yunus: 101)

In this verse, the True Lord Glorified is He speaks to us about the corporeal universe which is visible to you. Allah Glorified is He is not speaking about the subtle universe which is invisible to you. It is as though you were convinced of the corporeal universe, and said: ‘Behind this universe, there is an All-Capable, All-Powerful, Divine Creator,’ and you come to believe in Him. At this point, portions of knowledge of the unseen will descend upon you like a soft breeze, and you will reach the subtle realm, because you have discovered within yourself the promise that you owe yourself, and you declared your faith in the Creator, and you beheld the beauty of His work in the sky and the stars, and you were amazed by the precision of the stars’ orbital system.

You see the precise timing of the rising of the sun and the moon. You see the precise timing of the partial and total eclipses. You are astounded at the precision of the Creator Glorified is He. Furthermore, you will not find the planets passing by each other in tight spaces so that the moon or the earth is ever delayed, and no planet will ever come to a halt because it ran out of fuel. Allah says: ‘It is not allowable for the sun to reach the moon, nor does the night overtake the day, but each, in an orbit, is swimming.’ (Ya Sin: 40) In our daily lives, when we witness precise craftsmanship—in things not nearly, not in the slightest, as magnificent as the sky, the sun or the moon—we always honour the craftsman in question. Humanity has honoured the creator of the telegraph and the creator of the television set—should not we also honour the Creator Glorified is He of the universe? It is enough that we know that the sun is eight light-minutes away from earth—one light-second is equivalent to three-hundred-thousand kilometres. That is the one and only sun which you see—not the thousands of other suns in the other galaxies. Every galaxy contains millions of solar systems. It is enough for you to know that the True Lord Glorified is He has sworn by the sun. Also, Allah Glorified is He has said with respect to the star Sirius: ‘And that it is He who is the Lord of Sirius.’ (an-Najm: 49) For the star Sirius is bigger than the sun.

Now, when you contemplate the sky and the earth, you will find that the earth consists of high mountains. When you travel through these mountains, you will be amazed at their impeccable formation and their remarkable cohesion. Inside these mountains, you will find stones and minerals at various depths. You might find the surface of the mountains covered with fertile elements spread out in a crisp manner. When the rain falls upon it, it goes alongside it into the earth, because they are merely shreds that resemble iron fillings; thus, they percolate into the soil which has been cracked open by the heat of the sun. One evident example of this is all the silt which the river Nile used to carry to the delta region during the floods. During this time of annual flooding—before the construction of the High Dam—the water of the Nile used to resemble Tahini due to the high levels of silt that it contained. It is within this type of silt that one finds the rich, fertile elements that provide us with sustenance. If all mountains were composed of such crisp materials, the rain would erode them away all at once and, thereby, add half a metre depth to the surface of the earth. Fertile soil would disappear from the face of the earth in a few years. However, the True Lord Glorified is He wished to make the mountains firm. He created the mountains in such way that only their surfaces are delicate; then, every year, when the rains come, they carry some of the fertile silt to lower ground.

Anyone who studies Allah’s creative work in the field of life maintenance will find that the mountains are the storehouses of sustenance. To be sure, human beings require iron if they are to build the tools and machines that they need. Whether it is machines to plough the earth or other tools that help make life easier, you will find that iron (which goes in to their manufacture) is stored in the mountains. We also find other minerals like phosphate, manganese, marble, turquoise, etc., as well as various gases. Therefore, hidden within mountains is sustenance, the means of acquiring sustenance or the means of acquiring luxuries over and above basic sustenance.

Therefore, when rain falls on the sides of mountains, it takes the fertile topsoil on the mountain surfaces and leaves the remaining materials as resources for humankind to exploit. In Africa, for example, there are mines for coal and diamonds. In other countries, you will find agar wood which consists of the roots of trees. If you were to cut up the world as pieces from the circumference of the earth to its centre, you will find the earth to be fertile whether the surface happens to be desert, water, or mountain—all sections are equal to each other in the measure of their fertility.

The nature of sustenance might vary from region to region. If you counted, from the beginning of creation how much fertile silt from the mountains the rain has transported to the river Nile in Africa; and if you count how much crude oil Allah has placed in the deserts of the Arab Emirates, for example, you will find that the bounty of the Nile is equal to the bounty of the oil—even if oil has only been discovered recently.

Every amount of sustenance is accounted for from the storehouses. Furthermore, every part of sustenance has a set date for when it will be discovered. There is a set date for the discovery of coal, a set date for the discovery of oil—all of this according to a precise system laid down by Allah, the Infinitely-Wise, the Most Exalted.

Since the True Lord Glorified is He has used the expression: ‘use their reason?’ in reference to contemplating the heavens and the earth, this signifies an exhortation to reflect upon the wonders of the heavens and the earth. Among these wonders is the fact that the towering mountains have summits and bases, just like the pyramids. You will also find rivers existing in a manner contrary to that of the mountains because rivers run between two mountains. Also, you will find the riverhead at its bottom and the summit of the mountain at its top. When rain falls, it passes by the narrow head of the mountain; then it flows down to the bottom of the narrow river. The more rainfalls, the more sediment from the face of the mountain is eroded; this sediment fills the area of the wide river. The more people there are, the more Allah Glorified is He increases the volume of sustenance. You can find an example of this in the silt coming from the sources of the Nile. It flows down the Nile and arrives at the Nile Delta. Formerly, the delta region used to be a collection of salty swamps. The True Lord Glorified is He willed it to become a fertile land. When we reflect upon this fact, we realize that everything in the universe has been purposefully brought into existence by the True Lord Glorified is He. What destroys our wellbeing on earth is that we do not work proactively towards creating more sustenance and wealth; rather, we wait until the earth becomes overcrowded with all its inhabitants. Only then do we start thinking about acquiring more arable land, whereas we should have been doing this before the crisis began.

The more rainfalls upon the mountains, the more topsoil erodes away bringing hidden minerals to light. This is so that man might discover them and, thereafter, exploit them creatively. When the believer sees this, his faith increases; and as the believer continues to abide by the religious directives which are incumbent upon him, he will find the light of faith dawning in his heart.

Let every Muslim try the following experiment. For one week, let him try to live by the light of Allah's religion. Then, let him evaluate himself and note the difference between the state of his soul before and after. He will find that, during this week that he prayed his prayers on time, he applied himself diligently at work to gain lawful income; he will also find that he only spends his money on what is lawful. Evaluate yourself sincerely at the end of this week, and you will find that you have undergone a wonderful, healing transformation. You will find that the light of faith has begun to create a harmonious synergy between you and the universe in terms of the simplest of details as well as in more profound ways. For example, you might find a man—from among those who, from years of practicing Allah's religion, have been blessed with the virtue of 'limpidity'—if his wife asks him: what shall we cook today? He might say to her: 'let us make do with yesterday's leftovers.' Then a family member from the countryside pays him a surprise visit. The latter comes bearing food and drink. Such a man has reached such a degree of 'limpidity' that he has become completely integrated with the cosmos—Allah's bounty reaches him from an astounding variety of sources. This quality of 'limpidity' can also be found in the most complex of matters. Did Ya'qub (Jacob) peace be upon him not say: 'Indeed, I find the smell of Joseph'? (Yusuf: 94)

The brothers of Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him were still on their way back from Egypt to meet their father. They had Joseph's shirt, which the latter had instructed them to place over the face of his father so that he might regain his sight. Jacob peace be upon him felt the breath of his son in the air because Jacob peace be upon him had lived in harmony with the universe. There was no tension in his relationship with the rest of the universe. One patent example of this is the joy expressed by the universe when Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was born into the world. The universe rejoiced at his coming because the universe is as (a single organism) submitted to its Lord Glorified is He and full of praise for Him. Thus, when someone comes forth, exhorting people to recognise Allah's Uniqueness, the universe can only rejoice. Conversely, the universe loathes and scorns the person who disobeys Allah—the two parties are full of hate towards each other. The universe rejoiced at the coming of the Messenger destined to be the recipient of a Divine Message that would re-establish a balance in man's relationship with the universe.

In the present verse, the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'Say, "Observe what is in the heavens and earth.' The entire universe is in front of them, so why did they not contemplate upon it? They might indeed be able to physically see, but they do not possess the ability to grasp the significance of things. They are like the person who lets words go in one ear and out the other. That is why Allah says: 'But of no avail will be signs or warners to a people who do not believe.' Thus, their lack of faith caused them to lose their insight and their ability to contemplate. That is why the True Lord Glorified is He says:

فَهَلْ يَنتَظِرُونَ إِلَّا مِثْلَ أَيَّامِ ٱلَّذِينَ خَلَوْا۟ مِن قَبْلِهِمْ ۚ
قُلْ فَٱنتَظِرُوٓا۟ إِنِّى مَعَكُم مِّنَ ٱلْمُنتَظِرِينَ ﴿١٠٢﴾

What are they waiting for but the punishment that came to those before them? Say, 'Wait then, I am waiting too' [102]
(The Quran, Yunus: 102)

These people who do not believe remain mired and lost in their wicked ways. It is as though they are waiting to relive the events that befell previous generations of unbelievers who came before them. The Messenger had come forth to them with clear evidence like all previous generations of deniers. Now we know that the 'day' is a unit for measuring the duration of time. The next unit is the 'week', then after the week, there is the 'month', and then the 'year'. As a person matures, he looks upon every day as a number of hours, hours as minutes and minutes as seconds. As the events (of human history) become more complex, the measurements which keep track of time become more precise. The day—as we have said—has been created by Allah as a unit of measurement of time. It consists of one day and one night.

Sometimes, however, the word day might be used to denote some significant event that occurred during that day. For example, we might say: day of Dhi qarad(1), or day of Hunayn(2) or day of Uhud. Thus, when the word day is used, it might be in reference to the significant event that occurred during that day. When we look at history, we find a book by the name of ‘The History of Arab Days’; in it, we find references to day of Bu‘ath(3), for example, or day of awtas(4). Each day represents a particular battle. Thus, the word day (yawm) represents duration of time. Yet, it can also refer to an event that took place on a particular day. For example, you might find a contemporary of yours who has lived through some crisis in the past. When he looks back on earlier times, he might say: ‘Prices were lower back then, and everything was readily available.’ Then someone else adds: ‘Those were the days.’ In other words: those were times of plenty. In short, the word day might refer to the event that took place during that time.

In this verse, the True Lord Glorified is He says: ‘So do they wait except for like [what occurred in] the days of those who passed on before them?’ Among ‘those who passed on before them,’ we can cite the people of Noah peace be upon him whom Allah Glorified is He had caused to drown. We can also cite the people of the Pharaoh whom Allah Glorified is He had also caused to drown. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘So each We seized for his sin; and among them were those upon whom We sent a storm of stones, and among them were those who were seized by the blast [from the sky], and among them were those whom We caused the earth to swallow, and among them were those whom We drowned. And Allah would not have wronged them, but it was they who were wronging themselves.’ (al-’Ankabut: 40) They were aware of the events that occurred during that time; were they, then, waiting until times like these befall them? Of course, they ought not to have revelled in their state of disbelief; otherwise, they would incur upon themselves the same calamities that befell their disbelieving predecessors.

(1) Dhi qarad: a place in the region of Najd which has water. It is located about a day away from the city of Medina.

(2) It occurred in the year 8 AH after the liberation of Mecca.

(3) Yawm bu‘ath: this was the day when the tribes of ’Aws and Khazraj battled each other. On that day, victory went to the tribe of ‘Aws over that of Khazraj.

(4) Yawm ’awtas: this is another name for the aforementioned yawm Hunayn. It occurred in the year 8 AH after the liberation of Mecca. The name (’Awtas) refers to a river in Diyar Hawazin where the battle of Hunayn took place.

In our own vernacular, there is a local expression which expresses the innate faith. You might hear a person saying: ‘There will come a day of reckoning, O you unjust one.’ In other words, the day when Allah Glorified is He takes revenge upon the unjust person will become famous, for the unjust person oppresses Allah’s creatures. That is why the True Lord Glorified is He will bring upon this person a momentous event wherein Allah Glorified is He will get the best of him and make him taste all of the injustice he wrought on people. When the True Lord Glorified is He says: ‘Then wait; indeed, I am with you among those who wait.’ Allah’s words ‘then wait’ express a defiance, ‘indeed, I am with you among those who wait’ are a herald of good news, because the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him will await this day so that he can witness their punishment. For his part, the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him will have achieved victory on that day.

Then, the True Lord Glorified is He says:

ثُمَّ نُنَجِّى رُسُلَنَا وَٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ ۚ كَذَٰلِكَ حَقًّا عَلَيْنَا نُنجِ ٱلْمُؤْمِنِينَ ﴿١٠٣﴾

In the end We shall save Our messengers and the believers. We take it upon yourself to save the believers [103] (The Quran, Yunus: 103)

The True Lord has saved His Messengers and those who came to believe in them, so that they might remain on earth as beacons of truth and virtue. However, amid such beacons of truth and virtue, there must also remain certain elements of evil because were it not for the evil—which manifests itself in the calamitous events that befall people—mankind would not reach towards the good. As we always say: the pain that a patient suffers is actually a soldier fighting on the side of good health. Pain alerts a person to the fact that there is a deficiency which he must diagnose and cure with the help of a doctor. Now, pain is felt during the waking hours when a person is conscious. However, it recedes during the sleeping hours. Sleep is a natural painkiller. When the True Lord Glorified is He says: ‘Then We will save our messengers and those who have believed. Thus, it is an obligation upon Us that We save the believers.’ These words affirm that the elements of good shall endure in this world.

The deeper a community falls into disbelief, the more Allah Glorified is He holds out opportunities for salvation. In any land where faith is undermined, believers are persecuted, and iniquity abounds. You will find people who are completely devoted to Allah Glorified is He and who are dedicated to understanding (and embodying) the virtues; when the evil and iniquity of the world becomes unbearable, the people head towards these devotees of Allah and ask them for their prayers. The True Lord Glorified is He has committed Himself to deliver the believers when He says: ‘It is an obligation upon Us that We save the believers.’ Then, the True Lord Glorified is He says:

قُلْ يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلنَّاسُ إِن كُنتُمْ فِى شَكٍّ مِّن دِينِى فَلَآ أَعْبُدُ ٱلَّذِينَ تَعْبُدُونَ مِن دُونِ ٱللَّهِ
وَلَٰكِنْ أَعْبُدُ ٱللَّهَ ٱلَّذِى يَتَوَفَّىٰكُمْ ۖ وَأُمِرْتُ أَنْ أَكُونَ مِنَ ٱلْمُؤْمِنِينَ ﴿١٠٤﴾

[Prophet] say, ‘People, even if you are in doubt about my religion, I do not worship those you worship other than God, but I worship God who will cause you to die, and I am commanded to be a believer’ [104] (The Quran, Yunus: 104)

The word doubt is when you consider two possibilities to be equally plausible. In this instance, the True Lord Glorified is He orders His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him to present the issue of religion for the disbelievers so that they measure it against what they are currently want to worship. Then, the Prophet is ordered to let them make their decision in the matter. Thus, they are in a state of doubt: is this (new) religion true or false? If Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him has presented the issue of religion so that it might be judged, this means that the disbelievers are somewhat able to recognise the uniqueness of the new religion of Islam. In other words, when they experience occasional states of clarity, they can grasp its value. They are, therefore, in a state of doubt as to whether the religion revealed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is true, and whether the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him and his followers will be victorious or not.

When the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him presents the issue of Islam to them—leaving it up to them to decide—it demonstrates a confidence on his part that, if a person is left to make a judgement on the merits of the Islamic religion, the person cannot help but incline towards faith. The True Lord Glorified is He settles the issue of setting up false deities besides Him. Allah Glorified is He also orders the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him to say: 'I do not worship those which you worship besides Allah.' (Yunus: 104)

In other words, it is impossible that the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him should worship associates (beside Allah) while worshipping Allah at the same time; he only worships Allah: 'but I worship Allah.' Then, Allah Glorified is He puts forth the proof which can leave no doubt, the unassailable evidence, which is that the True Lord Glorified is He alone is worthy of being worshiped. It is He who 'causes your death.' There is nothing that can object to Allah when He causes them to die. There are two issues involved here: first, the issue of worship, as in when Allah says: 'I do not worship those which you worship besides Allah; but I worship Allah, who causes your death.'

These two issues can only be mentioned together: the issue of the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him not worshiping any other deity besides Allah, and the issue of singling out Allah Glorified is He alone for worship. The dichotomy here is unequivocal in that there is a complete and unbridgeable chasm between the army of the true faith and the army of idolatry. As the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'Say, "O disbelievers, I do not worship that which you worship, and neither do you worship that which I worship. Nor will I be a worshipper of what you worship. Nor will you be worshippers of what I worship. For you is your religion, and for me is my religion."' (al-Kafirun: 1-6) Those who say that chapter al-Kafirun contains repetition do not realize that such language serves to sever ties completely, so that the separation remains for all time. It is not a temporary severance of ties. This was the first instance of a severance of ties in Islam; and it was done in a definitive manner so that there was no opportunity for any compromise to be reached. Each camp remained entrenched in its position.

The True Lord Glorified is He says in the chapter of an-Nasr: ‘When the victory of Allah has come and the conquest. And you see the people entering into the religion of Allah in multitudes. Then exalt [Him] with praise of your Lord and ask forgiveness of Him. Indeed, He is ever accepting of repentance.’ (an-Nasr: 1-3) Here, the matter is confirmed, because after Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him severs all ties with the camp of idolatry, Allah’s succour and victory came, whereupon the people abandoned the camp of idolatry and hurried over to join the camp of faith.

Therefore, it is they who ended up embracing the true faith; this is the first issue. ‘Then I do not worship those which you worship besides Allah; but I worship Allah.’ They used to worship idols carved out of rock. Now, if you look at the various species of creatures in existence, you will find that the noblest of them is man since he is the creature to whom the True Lord Glorified is He has made all other creatures subservient. Below mankind, the next creature on the echelon is the animal. Then, there comes the next rank that is lower than man and animal, namely, plants. Finally, the lowest rank of creation consists of inanimate things. Thus, they had taken to worshiping idols made from the lowest form of creation. This is the ultimate instance of failure.

The second issue is mentioned in the following words of the True Lord Glorified is He: ‘And I have been commanded to be of the believers.’ If Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him refused to worship anything besides Allah Glorified is He, this meant that he worshiped Allah Glorified is He to the exclusion of all else. This does not represent a negative position, but rather the ultimate positive position. Worship requires a person to accept the path of Allah which is obedience to the directives contained therein as well as abide by the proscriptions. Thereafter, the True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَأَنۡ أَقِمۡ وَجۡهَكَ لِلدِّينِ حَنِيفٗا وَلَا تَكُونَنَّ مِنَ ٱلۡمُشۡرِكِينَ ﴿١٠٥﴾

[Prophet], set your face towards religion as a man of pure faith. Do not be one of those who join partners with God[105]
(The Quran, Yunus: 105)

Since these words are addressed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him it contains the same implications as the other instances when the True Lord Glorified is He has addressed him—such instructions apply to every believer. If the believer worships Allah Glorified is He; this means that he accepts Allah's Judgments. That is why, in this instance, the order is stated that a believer's face should be directed towards Allah. Thus, the True Lord Glorified is He says; 'Direct your face toward the religion, inclining to truth.' Thus, while worshipping, a person must turn neither right nor left. Since the believer worships Allah and none else, he should know that there is also a certain subtle polytheism. For example, a person might worship those who are stronger or more affluent than he is. These are but a few examples of the types of people which a believer might be tempted into worshipping or idolizing.

Previously, we have come to know the following words of the True Lord Glorified is He: 'And who is better in religion than one who submits himself to Allah while being a doer of good and follows the religion of Ibrahim (Abraham) hanifa? And Allah took Abraham as an intimate friend.' (an-Nisa': 125) The word hanifa means a state of disinclination from the path of error; in other words, a state of travelling on a straight path. Why is such an expression used? The answer is that religion does not come forth with a new Messenger and a new miracle unless corruption has become rampant. Only then is religion revealed from heaven with the objective of exhorting people to turn away—to disincline—from this corruption and perversion. If the people respond positively to such a message, this would amount to a recalibration of the behaviour of both individual and society.

Furthermore, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him warns us from falling into the subtle forms of polytheism—even if we have formally proclaimed our faith in the One True God Glorified is He. The reference to this form of polytheism is found in the following words of the True Lord Glorified is He: 'and never be of those who associate others with Allah.'

The secondary form of idolatry—which is less severe than the first— is creedal polytheism; it consists of believing that someone or something shares in Allah's Ability. For example, if you see that a doctor or a medicine has the ability of healing, then tell yourself: the doctor is merely the one who prescribes the medication; however, Allah Glorified is He is the One Who heals. To be sure, a doctor might make a mistake; he might prescribe a medication which ends up producing adverse side effects to the patient. The believer must not be seduced by any ‘secondary causes’. Let us put forth another example: some years ago, a country with vast agricultural lands announced that it had planted wheat over such a vast area that it would suffice the entire world population. The wheat spouted and matured—but then the crop was ruined by a storm. That country was then forced to import its wheat from other countries. The True Lord Glorified is He and then says:

وَلَا تَدْعُ مِن دُونِ ٱللَّهِ مَا لَا يَنفَعُكَ وَلَا يَضُرُّكَ ۖ فَإِن فَعَلْتَ فَإِنَّكَ إِذًا مِّنَ ٱلظَّٰلِمِينَ ١٠٦

Do not pray to any other [god] that can neither benefits nor harm you: if you do, you will be one of the evildoers [106] (The Quran, Yunus: 106)

When these idolaters took to worshipping idols and prayed to them instead of Allah, did the idols respond? When they worshiped these idols, did the latter say: ‘do this!’, or ‘did not do that’? The idols—which the idolaters had deified—had not put forth a doctrine. None of the idols were capable of either helping or harming their subjects. When a person experiences beneficial circumstances, idols know not how to prevent them, and when adversity befalls a person, idols know not how to repel it. Thus, anyone who prays to deities other than Allah Glorified is He is, in reality, offering prayers to that which can neither help nor harm. Whosoever does such a thing is, therefore, among the unjust, for injustice is to hand over rights to someone who is undeserving of them. Injustice can be committed at the highest levels and at the lower levels. Thereafter, the True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَإِن يَمْسَسْكَ ٱللَّهُ بِضُرٍّ فَلَا كَاشِفَ لَهُۥٓ إِلَّا هُوَ ۖ وَإِن يُرِدْكَ بِخَيْرٍ فَلَا
رَآدَّ لِفَضْلِهِۦ ۚ يُصِيبُ بِهِۦ مَن يَشَآءُ مِنْ عِبَادِهِۦ ۚ وَهُوَ ٱلْغَفُورُ ٱلرَّحِيمُ ١٠٧

If God inflicts harm on you, no one can remove it but Him, and if He intends good for you, no one can turn His bounty away; He grants His bounty to any of His servants He will. He is the Most Forgiving, the Most Merciful [107] (The Quran, Yunus: 107)

These are words spoken from a position of absolute lordship, self-sufficiency unto itself and having no need for creation. Indeed, Allah Glorified is He has brought human beings into existence. He has exhorted them to attain faith in Him and to love Him—because He loves them. He gives them and does not take away from them, for He has no need for His creation. In this verse, the reference to adversity features the use of the verb touch. In this instance, Allah's reference to adversity indicates that it is merely a light adversity. However, do not say: if the adversity is light, creatures will be able to bear it. Nobody is able to bear either misfortune or good fortune, whether this misfortune is light or burdensome, whether the good fortune is copious or sparse—save by Allah's permission.

None can remove those adversities save Allah Glorified is He. It is a testament to Allah's Greatness that, when He mentions the state of being touched with adversity, He also mentions the removal of it. This is truly a manifestation of His Mercy. Then, Allah Glorified is He mentions the counterpart of misfortune, which is the good. When Allah Glorified is He speaks of the good that happens to a person, He emphasizes that none can turn it away. Now, in describing the coming of good fortune to a person, we find the word intends. Thus, the True Lord Glorified is He causes it to come to whomsoever He wills of His servants. The True Lord Glorified is He concludes the verse with a beautiful conclusion. He Glorified is He says: 'And He is the Forgiving, the Merciful.' We see a clearer picture of the manner in which Allah's bounty reaches His servants. When it comes to adversity, Allah mentions that it is light, and that He removes it. When it comes to good fortune, Allah indicates that He causes it to come to His servants, and He does not prevent it. Furthermore, Allah Glorified is He is the All-Forgiving, the Dispenser of Mercy, for if He were to hold people—even the believers—accountable for what they do, He would surely punish them. However, He is the All-Forgiving, the Dispenser of Mercy; for His Mercy precedes His Wrath. That is why you find Him saying in the verses speaking of His blessings: 'And if you should count the blessing of Allah, you could not enumerate them.' (an-Nahl: 18)

The True Lord Glorified is He leaves the issue in doubt using 'if.' He does not say: 'Were you to count Allah's blessings,' because such a thing will never happen. The very act of starting to count makes it seem as if such thing is even possible. You might count money, and the principle might count the students in his school. However, nobody can count or compute the total number of grains of sand, for example. The True Lord Glorified is He says: ‘And if you should count the blessing of Allah, you could not enumerate them.’ This verse is phrased in such a way as to throw serious doubt on the possibility of tallying all of Allah’s blessings. What a curious thing it is, indeed, that counting implies the existence of multiple things that need to be counted. However, Allah Glorified is He uses the word blessing in its singular form. This would suggest that a single blessing contains within itself countless other blessings. Therefore, we will not even be able to count all the blessings that are contained in a single blessing. The True Lord Glorified is He speaks of this issue—counting Allah’s blessings—on two occasions in the Quran. In the first instance, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘And if you should count the blessing of Allah, you could not enumerate them. Indeed, mankind is [generally] most unjust and ungrateful.’ (Ibrahim: 34) In the second instance, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘And if you should count the blessing of Allah, you could not enumerate them. Indeed, Allah is Forgiving and Merciful.’ (an-Nahl: 18)

Both verses start identically but differ at the ending. Every blessing is given by a giver. Obviously, every blessing is received by a recipient. Now the recipient—with all his sins—is not deserving of the blessing, for he is most persistent in wrongdoing, and obstinately in denial of the blessing. However, the Giver of the blessing is All-Forgiving and a Dispenser of Mercy. Thus, one verse is about the Giver of the blessing, whereas in the other is about the recipient of the blessing. As far as the recipient of the blessing is concerned, he is in a state of severe iniquity and stubborn ingratitude, as he takes the blessing but shows no gratitude towards Allah for it. Has the sky not exclaimed: ‘O Lord! Give me permission to crash down upon the sons of Adam by way of reprimand. They have relished Your blessings, but have abstained themselves from giving thanks to You.’

The earth also exclaimed: ‘Give me permission to swallow up the sons of Adam, for they have relished Your blessings, but have abstained themselves from giving thanks to You.’

The mountains also said: ‘Give us permission to come crashing down upon the sons of Adam.’ The ocean, for its part, said: ‘Give me permission to drown the sons of Adam, for they have relished Your blessings but have not shown an inkling of gratitude towards You.' This was the reaction of the elements who, in their ardent love for Allah, wanted to rain down punishment upon mankind. However, Allah Glorified is He the Lord of all said: 'Leave Me to deal with My servants as I please, for if it was you who brought them into being, you would have mercy on them. Thus, if they repent and turn to Me, I will love them back, and if they do not repent, I will be their spiritual guide.' Then, the True Lord Glorified is He says:

قُلۡ يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلنَّاسُ قَدۡ جَآءَكُمُ ٱلۡحَقُّ مِن رَّبِّكُمۡۖ فَمَنِ ٱهۡتَدَىٰ فَإِنَّمَا يَهۡتَدِي
لِنَفۡسِهِۦۖ وَمَن ضَلَّ فَإِنَّمَا يَضِلُّ عَلَيۡهَاۖ وَمَآ أَنَا۠ عَلَيۡكُم بِوَكِيلٖ ١٠٨

Say, 'People, the Truth has come to you from your Lord. Whoever follows the right path follows it for his own good, and whoever strays does so to his own loss: I am not your guardian' [108] (The Quran, Yunus: 108)

Therefore, the True Lord Glorified is He has not failed His creatures. He has given them reason. Had you but used these reason, you would have attained faith, and there would not have been a reason for the coming of a Messenger. Reason ought to have contemplated upon the All-Powerful who created the entire universe. It is, in fact, this reason that asked the All-Powerful to send forth a Messenger so that he might communicate what Allah Glorified is He wanted of His servants. Thus, when the Messenger does come forth—when he informs them that he is a Messenger from Allah and that he bears Allah's Doctrine—at this point, they ought to have paid their full attention to what the Messenger was saying.

Allah's servants ought to have found guidance with their reason. That is why we find that, when the philosophers searched for knowledge, they said: 'there exists a 'material philosophy', which attempts to collect knowledge about the physical makeup of the universe; then, there is a 'metaphysical philosophy' which attempts to collect knowledge about that which lies beyond the corporeal universe. Who, therefore, informed the philosophers that there is anything behind the corporeal universe? When the uncorrupted reason beholds the meticulous order of the universe, it should realize there is a hidden power behind the visible, physical universe.

The philosophers would not have embarked upon a quest to discover what lay beyond the material universe had they not surmised that, behind the material universe, there was something hidden. What is hidden behind the material universe has a way of making itself known, for it is not something that human beings can ascertain through reason.

Previously, we have given the following example: imagine that we are sitting in a room and the doorbell rings. Thereupon, everyone in the room knows that there is someone at the door, and everyone in the room holds this fact to be true. This is what the philosophers said when they agreed that that there exists superior power behind the material universe. However, they went over and above their mission; they wanted to inform us of the essence, or the reality of this power. They did not take note of the obvious fact that this power is not susceptible to being known by reason. Thus, if we know that there is someone at the door, we should not presume to know his identity, nor should we leave the matter to opinion or conjecture. Rather, we should allow the person at the door to announce his own identity, to make known his wishes. In effect, it is up to the person at door to tell us about himself.

Therefore, let us ask him to reveal his name and to describe his qualities, for this is a matter which we cannot grasp through reason. Thus, the mistake of the philosophers is that, after ascertaining that there is a superior power behind the physical universe, they did not stop there. Seeking to go beyond being reasonable, they attempted visualization. However, visualizations are not borne of the mind. We may only be informed of them. The True Lord Glorified is He hereby says: 'Say, "O mankind, the truth has come to you from your Lord."' (Yunus: 108)

Truth, as we know, is that which is in stillness, never changing. We also know that the truth comes to us from the Lord—He who guides and instructs after having creating; He, who does not impose religious obligations upon us until we have reached the age of maturity; He, who created the whole universe and appointed us vicegerents therein. Therefore, He is our guardian. If the truth comes to us from Him, why should we not incorporate this doctrine into our education? Why have we accepted the education regarding the proper ways of eating, dressing and the proper gender roles? Therefore, we ought to have taken from Our Educator Glorified is He that doctrine which will govern every aspect of our lives so that our lifestyles do not become corrupted.

When the True Lord Glorified is He says: ‘truth has come to you from your Lord,’ this means that nobody can give the excuse: ‘I have not been informed of Allah’s obligations.’ The True Lord Glorified is He has given us reason so that we might comprehend—not so that we may try to visualize every detail. The actual details of Allah’s Message came to us when the True Lord Glorified is He sent forth a Messenger who said: ‘I am a Messenger from Allah; He is the Power that has created the universe.’ At his point, and after the Messenger’s miracle had proven itself true, we ought to have welcomed the Messenger and said: ‘you are exactly the man we were looking for.’ Therefore, tell us: what does the High Power want you to convey to us? Then, in the same verse, the True Lord Glorified is He says: ‘so whoever is guided is only guided for [the benefit of] his soul.’ This is because man’s reward for following the right path does not benefit He Who created and guided him. Rather, the reward benefits man himself in various aspects [including] living harmoniously with the universe, rehabilitation of the soul, inner tranquillity and attentiveness to what inhabits the universe, not what demolishes it. Such a state is the very opposite of what is experienced by the person who, disregarding Divine guidance, allows himself to go astray.

With respect to this type of human being, the True Lord Glorified is He says: ‘and whoever goes astray only goes astray [in violation] against it.’ The phrase going astray signifies that the person who went astray had been, at first, provided with guidance. However, he chose to shun such guidance. The True Lord Glorified is He concludes the verse with His words: ‘And I am not over you a manager.’

The only reason why you would put another person in charge of your affairs is if your own time is limited, or if your current capacity for work and action does not allow you to take charge yourself. Thus, Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings be upon him) informs the people: ‘I myself cannot prevent you from going astray, nor can I compel you to follow guidance, for I am not responsible for your actions. All that I am charged with is to convey the message on Allah's behalf. If you listen to this Message with pure hearts, you will surely be guided. Then, if you are rightly guided, the benefits shall rebound upon you, for the reward shall be everlasting bliss, and it shall be given to you in exchange for a life lived in accordance with the doctrine. Now, even if it has restricted the desires of your lower self, the doctrine guides you towards a life of bliss in the hereafter, where every conceivable pleasure can—and shall—be had.'

If a man is willing to exert effort such that he can learn a trade, a craft or a profession—that he might eventually master whatever he undertakes and thereby earn a living from it for the rest of his life—toiling in such a [voluntary] manner—should he not also be willing to exert himself in his religion? A life of worship will serve to rehabilitate his mind, expedite his goal of inward serenity and outward harmony with society. Religion will also serve to re-channel and refine the desires of the lower self; and after all of that, a person will earn an everlasting state of bliss in the Hereafter. When a person deems it to be too troublesome to exert himself for the sake of gaining knowledge, or learning a trade or a craft, such a person lives in a state of constriction and fails to develop himself, for he does not push himself to learn. We see that those who learn new things and apply themselves end up raising their own social and economic status. They might reach the doctorate level, for example, or became specialists in a lucrative field.

The more exalted a person's goals—the more worthwhile they are—the harder he needs to work to achieve them. Now, compare the work that you perform in your professional life to the blissful reward that awaits you in the Hereafter! You will find an enormous gap between the fruits for your professional efforts and the fruits of your religious efforts; the two are not even comparable. When the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'and whoever goes astray only goes astray [in violation] against it.' The word 'against' signifies that a person violates the rights of his soul in a tyrannical fashion and marches forth proudly in to the abyss. In contrast, you will find the words of the True Lord: 'so whoever is guided is only guided for [the benefit of] his soul,' where the phrase 'for his' signifies ownership.

Thereafter, in concluding chapter Yunus, the True Lord says:

وَٱتَّبِعۡ مَا يُوحَىٰٓ إِلَيۡكَ وَٱصۡبِرۡ حَتَّىٰ يَحۡكُمَ ٱللَّهُۚ وَهُوَ خَيۡرُ ٱلۡحَٰكِمِينَ ﴿١٠٩﴾

[Prophet], follow what is being revealed to you, and be steadfast until God gives His judgement, for He is the Best of Judges [109] (The Quran, Yunus: 109)

If the True Lord Glorified is He has quoted His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him as saying: 'O mankind, the truth has come to you from your Lord,' (Yunus: 108) This is a theoretical statement, referring to the Prophet's eventual completion of his mission of conveying Allah's doctrine. The people must believe in the doctrine. They must also know that the Messenger is the first one to practice the doctrine, for, Allah forbid, even if he were to cheat them all, he could not cheat himself. Thus, after communicating the Message on the True Lord's behalf, he explained to people that the rewards of right-guidance do not benefit the True Lord, but rather, they benefit humankind. Thus, man is in charge of his own destiny. He can go through life with peace of mind, confident that he will have earned bliss in the Hereafter. He may also be sure that delusion cannot haunt him ever again—save if a person does himself injustice and leads himself to perdition. The Messenger peace and blessings be upon him is not responsible for your conduct; he shows you the way to the good at a time when you do not practice the good. He cannot save you from evil if you cling stubbornly to evil ways. That is why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him ought to be a model: 'There has certainly been for you in the Messenger of Allah an excellent pattern for anyone whose hope is in Allah and the Last Day and [who] remembers Allah often' (al-'Ahzab: 21).

In this instance, the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'And follow what is revealed to you.' That is, you must be a model, and when you follow that which is being revealed to you, you will encounter resistance from those who live decadent lifestyles. They will not be pleased that someone exhorting moral reformation has come forth. Therefore, resolve yourself to follow what is being revealed to you and resolve yourself to be patient.

The Prophet being ordered to be patient implies that the there are numerous obstacles along the path. You must be patient and an example for others. You must also have confidence in the fact that if there was not any good to be had in following the doctrine, you would not be able to bear it until Allah’s judgment came—‘and be patient until Allah will judge.’ There is no one who is more just or wiser than Allah Glorified is He. The chapter of Yunus—which ends as it does on this blessed verse—has delved into the issue of faith in Allah, the height of the doctrine that Allah is Unique and that we must accept His Message. He is the Lord Who has created out of nothing, Who brought everything into existence, and Who did not charge us with religious obligations until we had lived through our childhood years and reached the age of maturity.

This is so that it might be verified beyond doubt that the one who is charged with religious obligations deserves to be charged, especially after having benefited from every conceivable blessing in existence, and after he has ascertained the truth of Allah’s Lordship. The Meaning of Lordship is education. In other words, the educator takes charge of the education of the disciple until he reaches the degree of perfection required of him. This issue has proved to be true in the universe. We listen to the Lord Who created when He explains to us what our purpose in life is and how we must follow the doctrine so that our lifestyles are rectified.

Moreover, a person becomes at peace with the purpose of his life—a purpose which he is aware of even before he takes his first step. It is unlikely that Allah Glorified is He would create a creature and then let him down. Rather, Allah must provide him with a set of principles with which a human being will preserve himself. Every created object has a set of rules and is assigned a purpose by its creator. Thus, if we go against our original vocation, we will effectively alter everything; and as a result, the world becomes an absurd tangle, where every person has his own purpose and doctrine, and every mind thinks differently. The world is then plunged into a state of discord: people’s desires will invariably clash with each other, and the power of the individual will decline. Conflict amongst fellow human beings will diminish the power of the individual to remedy what needs to be remedied. Thus, Allah Glorified is He wishes for unity of creed as well as unity of doctrine. In addition, the True Lord Glorified is He wishes to give us a practical example taken from the stories of the Messengers who succeeded one another.

In this chapter, He has mentioned the stories of Noah, Moses, and Aaron, as well as the stories of other Messengers. Then, Allah Glorified is He mentions the story of Jonah. Finally, He concludes the chapter with His words: ‘And follow what is revealed to you.’ Furthermore, convey—on Allah’s behalf—that which is being revealed to you to the world at large.

Since you are conveying the Message, your community has been given the honour of inheriting the Prophetic baton. It shall remain until the end of time, for you are, O Muhammad, the seal of the Prophets. The True Lord Glorified is He has willed that your community will propagate the doctrine which has been revealed to you.

Thus, the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him will bear witness that he has conveyed the Message, and his community must also bear witness that it has been conveyed. His community must also bear witness that it has conveyed Allah’s Message to the world at large—such is the distinguished mission that has been assigned to the community of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. No other community has been bestowed such an honour, for when it comes to the Messengers who preceded Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him their messages languished over time, the light of their religious directives faded(1), and the people became forgetful of them.

Allah Glorified is He would send forth a new Messenger. However, things changed after the Message of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. The chain of prophecy ended with him, and no more messages from heaven would follow. Henceforth, the Muslim community itself is to carry forth Allah’s doctrine. Why is the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him a paragon of excellence? Because it is he who conveys Allah’s doctrine, and he is the exemplar of the manner in which religious directives must be applied if they are to effectively safeguard the life of human beings in this world. He is a practical example such that human beings are not charged with that with which their human nature cannot put up. This is why the Prophet used to insistently remind people that he was human. The Quran also corroborates this fact in unambiguous fashion: ‘Say, O [Muhammad], "I am only a man like you."’ (Fussilat: 6)

(1) That is, with the passage of time, the religions of the previous Messengers became forgotten. The substance of these religions were altered and tampered with, and false innovations were added to them. This process occurred more frequently with the children of Israel.

This confirms that he is a true exemplar because if the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him were not human, but asked people to emulate him, they would answer: we cannot do so because you are not like us. That is why the Quran emphasizes Prophet Muhammad’s humanity. However, he is above other human beings by virtue of the distinction which Allah Glorified is He has conferred upon him, namely, that of being a Messenger who receives revelation from on high. Thus, his primary Prophetic Mission is to convey this revelation. His secondary mission as a Prophet is to demonstrate, through his exemplary behaviour, that he is fully convinced of the revealed religion and practices it himself. Then, the True Lord Glorified is He says: ‘There has certainly been for you in the Messenger of Allah an excellent pattern for anyone.’

In terms of wealth, the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him was one of the poorest people. He was not arrogant. He was a paragon of excellent behaviour—one in whom all the virtuous qualities came together in harmony. He never asked anything for himself. In fact, he refused to bestow privileges on the members of his own family, even while he bestowed these privileges on other Muslims. He forbade the members of his family from inheriting anything he owned after his death. This is so that any actions performed by the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him or by his kin would be purely for the sake of Allah. This kind of behaviour is the opposite of that exhibited by other powerful families or political authorities. The latter bestow wealth and privilege first and foremost upon themselves, then upon their circle of friends and allies—depending upon their relative proximity to the epicentre of power. Those who are closest are first in line and stand to profit greatly. Those who are in the outer circles benefit less, depending upon how distant they are.

However, the companions of the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him received what not even a poor person would receive in the community of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. It would seem that Allah Glorified is He was indicating to us that it is improper that the Prophet’s relatives or descendants should be in a position to receive alms. Thus, the obedience that Allah has ordered is that of following the revelation and propagating it. It is to follow the revelation by abiding by its principles and applying its directives. This will certainly entail numerous hardships. He will cross paths with the arrogant strongmen who stand to benefit from the world's corruption. The latter will inevitably resist his moral exhortations so as to maintain their temporal authority.

The True Lord Glorified is He orders His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him to be patient. Such a command—to exhibit patience—is an indication to the effect that the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him will encounter obstacles. He must therefore brace himself such that he endures these obstacles with fortitude. In another verse, the True Lord Glorified is He orders him and the believers to be patient, to vie with each other in patience. Allah Glorified is He says: 'persevere and endure and remain stationed.' (Al-'Imran: 200) In other words, if you are patient, your enemy might also exhibit patience. In this case, you must display more patience than them. The phrase 'be patient' indicates that spreading the True Lord's Doctrine will inevitably entail hardships. If there were no need for this Doctrine to be made known—if the world were already in harmony—then what demand would there be for such a Doctrine?

However, the Doctrine has been revealed from on High because corruption had become rampant in the universe. There was a dire need for reform and for confronting the spreaders of corruption. Herein lies the source of hardship for all those who exhort the people to Allah's cause. Since a person has chosen to go forth and exhort people to the Doctrine of the True Lord Glorified is He let him therefore brace himself for such trials.

Any exhorter in Allah's Cause who is touched by harm will not receive as much reward from the Prophetic inheritance because he who is harmed is the one who receives reward from the Prophetic inheritance. The amount of harm a person suffers is proportional to the danger that the exhorter in Allah's Cause is exposed to. This danger comes from the spreaders of corruption who join forces to persecute him.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him says: 'Allah bestows a radiating glow on the one who, upon hearing my sayings, imbibes them, safeguards them and conveys them to those who did not hear them, for many a transmitter (of knowledge) have conveyed knowledge to one who is more knowledgeable than him.'

As the community of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him we have inherited from him the task of spreading the religion. We have also inherited from him the paragon of excellence: ‘There has certainly been for you in the Messenger of Allah an excellent pattern for anyone whose hope is in Allah and the Last Day and [who] remembers Allah often.’

Thus, when the True Lord Glorified is He says: ‘And follow what is revealed to you,’ this means that the revelation is in the process of being revealed because the Quranic revelation was not brought down from heaven all at once. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him received revelation in stages, until the end of his life. The span of his life of represents the seat of receiving the revelation. When the True Lord Glorified is He says: ‘and be patient until Allah will judge,’ this indicates to us that Allah Glorified is He has specified a limit to the time that the Prophet needs to be patient. In other words, the matter shall be concluded soon when Allah gives His judgment. The verb judge indicates that there are two parties involved; each party claims to be right; then, there comes the person who shall pronounce a judgment in the matter. The proof can be either their admission or the testimony of a witness.

Of course, the disbelievers will not admit their disbelief, whereas the witnesses might abstain from speaking out, or they might be among those who want their wantonness to pass for justice. Now, if Allah Glorified is He is the Judge in the matter, He has no need for witnesses, because He is the best of witnesses. Furthermore, Allah Glorified is He does not pronounce a judgment without having the ability to carry out the said judgment. No, He is both the judge and the executor of the judgment. He has witnessed, pronounced a judgment, and carried out the judgment. There exists no power capable of either standing in the way of Allah’s Power or standing in the way of Allah’s judgment. In our own day, we see various forms of power. We find powerful nations that might dominate over weaker ones. Then, the weak nations resort to the United Nations and the Security Council. The latter then issues resolutions. Even if we assume that these resolutions are fair, where is the power that will enforce them? No such power exists.

However, the Power of the True Lord Glorified is He corresponds to the power of the most excellent of all judges; it is He Glorified is He Who witnesses, and

He has no need for witnesses who might, in any case, try to mislead Him with their testimony. If you succeed in misleading the judge in a court here on earth, you will not be able to mislead the Supreme Judge in heaven. Thereafter, the True Lord Glorified is He will pronounce a judgment free of sentimentality because the trouble with judgments pronounced by human beings is that they become tainted with sentimentality and thereby end up sympathizing with the guilty party. The True lord, however, has no such biases. He stands to gain nothing from His servants, being the Creator; Glorified is He that He is. He will not strip a creature of his rights. The True Lord Glorified is He reassures us that, for his part, His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him also does not act or speak out of desire. Allah Glorified is He says: 'Nor does he speak from [his own] inclination. It is not but a revelation revealed.' (an-Najm: 3-4)

In other words, be confident in his judgment, for he does not speak out of his own desire. He wishes to accomplish nothing other than exhorting people to worship the Creator properly. A person might say that the True Lord has corrected the Messenger on certain occasions. We would reply that, as a human being, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him used to try his best to arrive at a proper judgment regarding those issues for which Allah did not provide him with direction. When Allah did provide him with explicit directives, the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him would submit to Allah's judgment. Even when the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him articulated his own opinion on matters, he would not do so based on mere desire. Rather, he would pass judgments based on what he believed was fair. Then, if the True Lord Glorified is He issued a different judgment on the matter, he would promptly inform the Muslims and rectify the judgment. Therefore, the Prophet's amendment of judgment regarding certain issues is a testament to his fidelity as the conveyer of Allah's wishes. When the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him would formulate a judgment—regarding an issue for which Allah had not pronounced an explicit ruling—he would do so based on his personal opinion. Then, if a different judgment came to Him from Allah, he would communicate it to the community. In this case, he would amend his judgment at the behest—not of some fellow human being—but of his Creator.

In addition, it is the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him himself who informs us that Allah Glorified is He corrected his judgment. Would anyone else undermine his own credibility and admit that his own judgment has been corrected by another? The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him —the recipient of Divine revelation—was characterized by perfect fidelity in his transmission of Allah’s wishes.

The Prophet has even told us about the time he was admonished by his Lord. This is the ultimate proof of his fidelity as Allah’s Messenger. The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him would opine solely on those issues for which Allah had not issued a judgment. In doing so, he set an example for us that we might also have the courage to think for ourselves and strive to reach judicious opinions. The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him had sent Mu‘adh ibn Jabal Allah be pleased with him to Yemen. He asked him: ‘How would you proceed if a case was brought to your attention?’ He said: ‘I would apply the principles contained in the Quran.’ The Prophet then asked: ‘What if none of the principles mentioned in the Quran applied to the case?’ He said: ‘I would refer to the Sunna of Allah’s Messenger.’ The Prophet then asked: ‘What if none of the principles contained in the Sunna of Allah’s Messenger applied to the case?’ ‘He said: I will exercise my own judgment and will make every effort to arrive at a judicious ruling.’ Thereupon, the Prophet peace and blessing be upon him tapped the envoy’s chest and said: ‘All praise is due to Allah, the One Who made the messenger of the Messenger of Allah suitable.’(1)

The True Lord Glorified is He is the most excellent of all judges. He is the Witness Who is aware of the deceitful eye, Who is conscious of that which is secreted inside the hearts of men. From Him Glorified is He there is no secret that can be hidden, and neither is He ever the subject of desire. It is He Who, by His Grace, pronounces fully equitable judgments. He is also capable of carrying out the judgments which He pronounces. There exists no power that can dominate Him. There is no judge who is capable of all of this, except Allah Glorified is He. The True lord Glorified is He has wished to honour the believers whose function is to pronounce judgements in people’s affairs. Thus, Allah has tacitly inserted Himself in the process so that human judges tend toward benevolence.

(1) Related by Ahmad in his Musnad (5/230, 236, 242), Abu Dawud in his Sunnan (3592) and At-Tirmidhi (1327) – He said: ‘Its chain of transmitters is not continuous in my book.’ This is the only version of which we are aware.

The fact of the matter is that there are human beings who pronounce judgments in the case of other human beings. However, the True Lord Glorified is He has judged that He is the best of them. There are judges, for example, who might fall victim to fraud. In addition, desire might influence the decisions of these judges. With Allah, however, there is no secret that can hide from Him, nor can desire ever influence His decision. His judgments are carried out by virtue of His Absolute Power. That is why He is the absolute best of all judges.

When, in the Quran, Allah describes Himself and His creatures using the same noun in the plural, know that this is a sign for you to infer from those qualities that you see in this world, the Attributes of Allah Whom you do not see. The True Lord Glorified is He says: 'So blessed is Allah, the best of creators.' (al-Mu'minun: 14) Allah also says: 'And Allah is the best of providers!' (al-Jumu'a: 11) Allah also says: 'O My Lord, do not leave me alone [with no heir], while you are the best of inheritors.' (al-Anbiya': 89) Allah also says: 'Is not Allah the most just of judges?' (at-Tin: 8) Whenever you find a plural noun by which Allah describes both Himself and His servants, this indicates that those whom He describes are characterized by the aforementioned attributes. However, His attributes are pre-eternal and absolute. Their attributes, by contrast, are accidental—being the mortals that they are, their power wanes; they can succumb to vicissitudes, and become weak. You will find Allah Glorified is He describing Himself as: 'the best of creators!' We all know that Allah Glorified is He is the Creator of all things from nothingness. However, there are creatures that create things from existing things. That is why Allah Glorified is He is the best of all creators. The True Lord Glorified is He also describes Himself as: 'the best of providers!' (al-Jumu'a: 11) Sustenance is that from which we benefit. Your superior might bring you food, drink, and clothing. He might give you that from which you benefit. However, the True Lord Glorified is He is the Creator of all of the universe's sustenance.

In describing Himself, the True Lord Glorified is He also says: 'And the disbelievers planned, but Allah planned. And Allah is the best of planners.' (Al-'Imran: 54) When a human being schemes, he might study a situation and still neglect some aspect of it. Allah, however, neglects nothing. Benevolence in human judgments stems from Allah's Absolute Power. Now, we have learned that when the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him pronounced judgments upon certain things, Allah Glorified is He subsequently corrected him. It was because Allah had not pronounced a judgment upon such matters that forced the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him to opine on them.

One example of this is the story of Zayd ibn Haritha Allah be pleased with him owned by Khadija Bint Khuwaylid may Allah be pleased with her. She gifted him to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Then, his family who had been searching for him, learned that he was in Mecca. He had been abducted as a child and sold into slavery in Mecca—this was a common practice with the Arabs in pre-Islamic times. When they learned of this, they went to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to get their son back. He, thereupon, said to them: 'By Allah, I shall give him the choice: if it is you he chooses, take him, but if he chooses me, then he is mine.' Zayd Allah be pleased with him chose to stay with Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Following this incident, the Messenger of Allah no longer neglected Zayd. In fact, he bestowed upon him the honour of being his son and renamed him Zayd, son of Muhammad.

The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him saw that making him his son was a way of honouring him. However, Allah Glorified is He willed otherwise. He says: 'Muhammad is not the father of [any] one of your men, but [he is] the Messenger of Allah and last of the prophets. And ever is Allah, of all things, Knowing.' (al-'Ahzab: 40)

Making someone your son might create confusion in genealogy. Originally, such a son has the right to marry the daughter of the one who adopted him as a son. How could we deny him this right? Also, such a son could be denied the right to marry the wife of the one who adopted him, if the latter were to pass away or divorce her. For this reason, the True Lord Glorified is He preserved the integrity of genealogical relationships so as to preserve the rights and responsibilities of the people involved. Allah Glorified is He says: 'Muhammad is not the father of [any] one of your men, but [he is] the Messenger of Allah and last of the prophets.'

His Mission as a Messenger from Allah is far more important to you than his relationship as a father. The True Lord Glorified is He said when correcting the Prophet's decision to adopt a son: 'Call them by [the names of] their fathers; it is more just in the sight of Allah.' (al-'Ahzab: 5) This amounts to a refutation of the Messenger of Allah's decision; however, it is done in a manner that honours him. What Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him had done was just and equitable in human terms; however, Allah's judgment in the matter is even more just and equitable. Hence, his lineage as Zayd, son of Muhammad, came to end, and he went back to his original family name as Zayd, son of Haritha.

So as not to sadden Zayd, the True Lord Glorified is He conferred upon him honours the likes of which He conferred upon no other companion of the Prophet. He is the only companion who is mentioned by name in the Quran. The True Lord Glorified is He says: 'So when Zayd had no longer any need for her, We married her to you.' (al-'Ahzab: 37) Thus Zayd's name came to be featured in the Quran; it came to be recited and mentioned aloud in the prayer. Thus, even if Allah had forbidden him from being genealogically related to Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him He accorded him an eternal, honourable mention in the Noble Quran—which is a great honour.

When the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'and be patient in adversity, until Allah shall give His judgment: for He is the best of all judges,' these words imply that Allah's judgement is more than just a judgment in this world and in the next. Allah's judgment in this world represents a victory for Allah's religion; in addition, those believers or disbelievers who die shall have another judgment in the Hereafter.

Allah Glorified is He thus concludes the chapter of Yunus with this judgment, and Allah Glorified is He has guided every believer with the example of Jonah—as one of Allah's Prophets—when stormed off in anger. Regarding this incident, the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'and [mention] the man of the fish, when he went off in anger and thought that We would not decree [anything] upon him. And he called out within the darkness, 'There is no deity [worthy of worship] except You Exalted are You. Indeed, I have been of the wrongdoers.' (al-Anbiya': 87) The True Lord Glorified is He conferred an honour upon him with His words: 'So We responded to him and saved him from the distress.' (al-Anbiya': 88) The True Lord Glorified is He has included us in his honour with His words: 'And thus do We save the believers.' (al-Anbiya': 88) Prophet Yunus (Jonah) peace be upon him paid us a great favour when Allah Glorified is He inspired him to say: 'There is no deity [worthy of worship] except You Exalted are You. Indeed, I have been of the wrongdoers.' Allah Glorified is He answered his prayer and saved him from distress. The latter is the most aggressive of Allah's soldiers, because what distresses you is that which you cannot repulse. That is why it is said: ‘the smaller the enemy, the more aggressive it is,’ because if the enemy is massive in size, it is easier to deal with than the enemy who is small and agile. If the enemy is massive, a human being sees his massive size from afar. Then, a person either runs or hides. However, if the enemy happens to be a snake—for example—then a person might not see it; a person might not be able to run away from it either. If the enemy happens to be a microbe or a virus which cannot be seen with the naked eye, then it is even more aggressive and potent in the way it attacks a human being. You can guard yourself against almost every ill in this world save those who scheme against you quietly and subtly, as you do not know from whence such enemies will infiltrate you.

We hear, for example, that so-and-so has been affected by some illness because he caught some virus or another. This person does not know when the virus entered his system. However, he was stunned to see the symptoms of the illness manifesting themselves on his body, after the virus had been dormant for two weeks in his body.

Furthermore, distress is one of the most severe forms of suffering. We all know the story of the ‘Ali Allah be pleased with him who is famous for his ability to pronounce legal opinions. People used to consult him regarding issues for which they were unable to find a solution. Some people got together and said: ‘we want to identify certain difficult things and ask him about them so as to test him.’ When they gathered, they told ‘Ali Allah be pleased with him: ‘We want to inspect Allah’s universe, so we have sat together to figure out what is the strongest creature Allah has created. However, we each have different opinions on the matter and so each named the creature which, in his opinion, was the strongest. ‘Ali ibn Abu Taleb Allah be pleased with him did not deliberate, neither did he utter discontinuous sentences in a way that he paused at intervals, nor did anyone ask him for more clarification. Rather, in a single sentence he indicated the number of powers according to their ranking and their power. He did so to the effect that the number corresponded to the number of things counted. This is proof that he was capable of grasping the issue in a firm manner. He extended all ten fingers and said: ‘The strongest of Allah’s soldiers are the following ten: the firm mountains, iron which cuts through the mountains, fire that melts iron, water which extinguishes fire, the clouds that straddle the area between the sky and the earth which carries water, the wind that cuts up the clouds, mankind who defeats the wind—covering himself with some form of cloth, he goes on with his business. Then, there is drunkenness which gets the better of mankind, then sleep which conquers drunkenness, then distress which overpowers sleep. Thus, the fiercest of Allah's soldiers is distress.

Such were the words of ‘Ali ibn Abu Taleb Allah be pleased with him. Distress and anguish are ones of the fiercest soldiers of Allah. Jonah peace be upon him was the reason why Allah Glorified is He promised to deliver every believer until the end of time from distress and anguish through the supplication that He inspired Jonah to utter. Allah says: ‘There is no deity [worthy of worship] except You Exalted are You. Indeed, I have been of the wrongdoers. So We responded to him and saved him from the distress. And thus do We save the believers.’

Deliverance from distress went from the grace that is bestowed on a select few to a grace that is bestowed on all. Ja‘far As-Sadiq has taken this supplication and fashioned it into a spiritual reminder for the believer so that the latter might accept all of life's events—even the most frightening ones—in a state of content, for man is haunted by the fear of what he knows. As for anxiety, a person does not realize its danger, nor does a person know how others are deceiving him. A person does not know what guile they have prepared for him. It is man's preoccupation with his worldly life—his desire to live in comfort and luxury to the largest extent possible—that makes him susceptible to anxiety.

Ja‘far As-Sadiq(1) used to possess keen insight into the verses of the Quran and their implications. He once said: ‘I am amazed at those who experience fear and do not seek recourse in the words of the True Lord: ‘Sufficient for us is Allah, and [He is] the best Disposer of affairs.’ (Al-‘Imran: 173) No amazement is needed for the one who, after experiencing fear, finds a way to remove that fear.

A person who suffers from a headache can treat it with a painkiller. When it comes to fear, Ja‘far has prescribed the medicine that is contained in the following words of Allah Glorified is He: ‘Sufficient for us is Allah, and [He is] the best Disposer of affairs.' Therein is the cure for all manner of fears. Ja'far As-Sadiq then provides us with the reason because, subsequently, Allah Glorified is He says: 'So they returned with favour from Allah and bounty, no harm having touched them.' (Al-'Imran: 174) In other words, Ja'far located the justification for his interpretation from the same passage of the Quran. He also added: 'I am also amazed at those who experience anxiety—which is the affliction that we are currently examining—and do not seek refuge in the following words of Allah Glorified is He: 'There is no deity [worthy of worship] except You Exalted are You. Indeed, I have been of the wrongdoers.' Then, Allah Glorified is He mentions the following words: 'So We responded to him and saved him from the distress.' (al-Anbiya': 88)

(1) His full name was Ja‘far ibn Muhammad Ibn ‘Ali ibn AL-Hussin, Abu ‘Abdullah. He was too preoccupied with the worship of Allah to have any ambition for political power. The following individuals have narrated Hadith from him: Shu‘ba, Ath-Thawri and Malik. He died in Medina in 148 AH.

I have also been amazed at him who, after having been deceived, did not seek recourse in the following words of Allah Glorified is He: 'And you will remember what I [now] say to you, and I entrust my affair to Allah. Indeed, Allah is Seeing of [His] servants.' (Ghafir: 44) For I have heard Allah following these words with: 'So Allah protected him from the evils they plotted, and the people of Pharaoh were enveloped by the worst of punishment.' (Ghafir: 45)

I am also amazed at him who, seeking the pleasures of this world, has not sought recourse in the following words of Allah Glorified is He: 'Whatever Allah wills [shall come to pass, for] there is no power except in Allah!' (al-Kahf: 39) For I have heard Allah Glorified is He following these words with: 'It may be that my Lord will give me [something] better than your garden and will send upon it a calamity from the sky, and it will become a smooth, dusty ground.' (al-Kahf: 40) Ja'far As-Sadiq located in Allah's Holy Book four verses corresponding to four psychological states that affect human beings. Furthermore, for each situation he provides its corroborating evidence in the Quran. When the True Lord Glorified is He says at the very end in the chapter of Yunus. The words of Allah Glorified is He at the end of the chapter of Yunus that command the Prophet peace and blessings be upon Him to follow what is revealed to Him are related to the very first verse of the next chapter. Allah says, 'Alif Lam Ra [This is] a Book, whose verses are made decisive, then are they, made plain, from the Wise, All-aware.' (Hud: 1) For what is revealed is a Book composed, indeed, of verses that have been made truly clear.

Hud

In the Name of God, the Most Merciful, the Dispenser of Mercy

The chapter of Hud begins with the saying of Allah Glorified is He:

الٓر ۚ كِتَٰبٌ أُحۡكِمَتۡ ءَايَٰتُهُۥ ثُمَّ فُصِّلَتۡ مِن لَّدُنۡ حَكِيمٍ خَبِيرٍ ١

Alif Lam Ra* [This is] a Scripture whose verses are perfected, then set out clearly, from One who is all wise, All-Aware[1] (The Quran, Hud: 1)

The verse starts with the disjoined Arabic letters that some chapters of the Holy Quran start with. Each of these letters is pronounced separately as if you were reading them from the alphabet. Every letter, as we know, has a way of pronouncing that is different from the way a letter is pronounced in context. When we use a letter in writing or in speech, we are using the letter in context and we do not pronounce the title of the letter. Some of the Quranic chapters, however, begin with letters which we pronounce by their titles. With the exception of these special letters, all other letters are pronounced normally as elements of the word which they form.

To illustrate the difference between these two ways of pronouncing letters, consider the first verse of the chapter of al-Baqara. It reads, Alif Lam Mim even though it is written as one word. (al-Baqara: 1) So, we pronounce the title of each letter in contrast to the way we would pronounce the word alam (Have we not) in following verse where Allah says, ‘Have we not expanded for you your breast.’ (ash-Sharh: 1)

Why do we pronounce these letters in such a peculiar way? This is because Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him heard them pronounced in this way by Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him. The Quran is originally heard. You would not be able to read the Quran without having heard the Quran to recognise how to pronounce those disjointed letters by their titles while reading the rest of the letters of the Quran normally as they are uttered in words. Years ago, we used to have our teacher reading the Quran first before memorizing so as to teach us the correct way to read its verses. People, however, often want to read the Quran on their own, without sitting down with a teacher and without listening to someone reciting it properly.

We must put emphasis on the fact that the Quran is no ordinary book. It has unique characteristics. Its letters can take different forms as we sometimes pronounce them by their titles and at other times we read them as sounds forming a word.

We notice something wonderful when we read 'Alif Lam Mim' in the beginning of the chapter of Hud. We are reminded of how the Quran is always based on the principle of wasl (connectivity). That is when we pause at the end of verses, there are diacritical marks. Consider verses like (ar-Rahman: 64-66); despite having breaks between the individual verses, the principle of wasl is called for there. At the end of chapter Yunus, Allah says, 'and He is the best of the judges.' (Yunus: 109) The last letter has a diacritical mark. It would be pronounced differently if it does not have diacritics. You would pronounce it with sukoon (absence of a vowel sound) instead of being accusative by fath. That is because the last letter is connected to the basmalah after it.

It is remarkable that the disjoint letters at the beginning of chapters are paused on with no diacritical marks involved. We read every letter individually. We would not say 'Alifun Lamun Mimun', but rather, 'Alif Lam Mim'. Similarly, we read the beginning of the chapter of Maryam as 'Kaf Ha Ya `Ain Sad'. We would not read the letters with their inflection and this indicates that there is a hidden wisdom behind that. There are verses in the Quran that begin with only one letter as in the chapters of Sad, Qaf and al-Qalam. In addition, we notice that the special letters do not constitute whole verses on their own. However, they consist of a full verse in many chapters of ash-Shura, Maryam, Ta Ha, Ya Sin, al-A`raf, ar-Ra`d and an-Naml.

Therefore, there is no clear specific pattern for these letters. This means that at every pause and letter there is wisdom. We find wisdom when we contemplate the material world in which we live and thereby, discern the wonders of Allah Glorified is He in the sensible cosmos and the infinite wisdom of Allah. For example, when one checks into a luxury hotel, one finds that each room has an assigned key which opens no other room. However, the hotel manager holds a master key which can be used to unlock all the rooms of a particular floor. The manager has done so to let no guest opens any room but his. With the new technological advancements, every room now has its own electronic card which unlocks the door as soon as the card is inserted in a special slit. Similarly, for every floor, the hotel manager holds an electronic card which can open all the doors. Therefore, when you read the openings of chapters, know that each verse has a key and every letter of these opening verses might resemble the key. If you do not have the right key to open the door, then the chapter will not open itself up to you. So there are certain keys to the Book of Allah. At times the disjointed letters constitute independent verses and at other times the letters constitute only a part of a verse. Before you start reading you say, 'I seek refuge with Allah Glorified is He from Satan, the accursed' to rid yourself of malevolent influences that might compromise your reading of the Quran. Then you insert your special key, such as the words, 'Alif Lam. Mim.', (al-Baqara: 1) and the door opens.

Thus, we realize that there is a key and that there is someone who opens the door as well. Consider the openings of chapters as keys which are carved differently and has a particular shape that when you transpose the key of one chapter to another, it would fail to unlock it.

Allah Glorified is He begins the chapter of Hud with 'Alif Lam Ra' which are three letters just like in 'Alif Lam Mim'. The formula Alif Lam Ra is mentioned in five chapters of the Quran and is read as a part of a verse. These chapters are Yunus, Hud, Yusuf, Ibrahim and al-Hijr. The formula Alif Lam, however, is an independent verse although both are read in the same manner as the other formulae of the chapters of Yunus, Hud, Yusuf and Ibrahim. Likewise, the chapter of al-A`raf begins with a four-letter verse which is Alif Lam Mim Sad. However, the chapter of ar-Ra`d begins with four letters which are part of a verse.

Therefore, there is no standard set of rules that apply to these letters that appear in the beginning of the Quranic chapters. Every letter has a speciality that its hidden meaning has not yet been fully discovered. This has led some commentators of the Quran to say regarding these letters that, ‘Allah knows what He intends’.

Allah Glorified is He says in the verse we are studying, ‘Alif Lam Ra [This is] a Book, whose verses are made decisive, then are they made plain, from the Wise, All-aware.’ (Hud: 1). He sometimes qualifies the Quran as a kitab (book) and sometimes calls it Quran. We note that the word Quran is derived from the root word qara`a, which means to read, while *kita*b is that which is read. Allah Glorified is He has willed it this way to show you that preservation of the Quran happens in two places, i.e. the breasts of those who have memorized it and the copies of the written script of the Quran. And if the heart forgets, then there will always be the books.

Therefore, when the early Muslims wanted to compile the Quran conforming that what is memorized to that which is written, they laid down certain guidelines to be followed when performing this delicate operation. One of the most important stipulations was that for every verse it was imperative that at least two people could confirm its accuracy. However, the last two verses of the chapter of at-Tawba proved problematic as there was only one witness to attest to the accuracy of these verses, who was Khuzayma. They believed Khuzayma and wrote down those two verses because the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him had once commended his trustworthiness when he said of him, ‘whoever Khuzayma testify on his behalf, it suffices him.’(1) So, the reason for describing the Quran as *kita*b is because it is written and the reason for describing it as Quran is because it is recited. The act of writing was no simple matter in early Islamic history and thus, only the most precious works were written down. The reason for calling it a Quran could be due to its being engraved on the guarded tablet.

Allah Glorified is He describes the Quran as a Book whose verses are made decisive. He uses the word u`hkimat which is from the letters h k m (confirm). This word denotes perfection of a structure so that it precludes any possibility of corruption so there are no flaws, contradictions, discrepancy, or collision.

(1) Narrated by Al-Hakim and At-Tabarani

There is a need for architectural balance in the apertures of structures. They do not all fall parallel to each other lest cracks might appear in the walls or the entire structure might collapse. This is what it takes for precise engineering in the physical world.

Allah Glorified is He wills to qualify the Quran which is the summation of the Islamic Path as a book of decisive verses. So, use the perfection of the Quran as a shield against the corruption of you since the very structure of the Quran is such that it prevents corruption and promotes reform. In addition, considering that the Glorious Quran is preserved in the Guarded Tablet, conveyed all at once from the Guarded Tablet to the worldly realm, then sent down according to different situations where specific guidance was needed and Allah has scattered such rulings throughout the segmented structure of the Quran, you would see that the Quran was absolute and decisive in heaven then it was partitioned and presented in an ordered arrangement. That is why Allah Glorified is He says, '…a Book, whose verses are made decisive, then are they made plain.' (Hud: 1)

The meaning of the Quran being made plain could be that it was divided into large partitions which are the chapters and the small partitions are the verses. To encourage people to memorize the Quran, Muslims divided it into thirty equal parts which are called ajza'; they divided every juz` into two hizbs and every hizb into four fourths. The original units of the arrangement of the Quran are the chapters and every one of these being a collection of verses. The implication might very well be that the Quran was perfected then expounded, because it was brought down from Allah Glorified is He as a comprehensive guide for the ordering of the life of man.

When you look at the Quran, you find that its themes are widely varied. At times, the Quran discusses the highest summits of Islamic doctrine, other times it talks about prophethood, the succession of Divine Messages and miracles. Sometimes the Quran delves into the details of what is prescribed and what is proscribed and at other times it recounts the stories of other eras and other peoples. It sets down the laws of correct conduct or describes the various cosmic signs. Sometimes it talks about the rules and regulations governing inheritance.

Therefore, the Quran is partitioned both linguistically and contextually as it includes multiple meanings which are all necessary in decree. It is composed of everything from the supreme principle that there is no God but Allah, and Muhammad is His Messenger, to the finest detail. The meaning of the Quran being made plain, from another perceptive, could be that the Quran was brought down to the earthly realm all at once, and then it was revealed in parts, depending on what was needed at different times. It was intended to make the soul cherish the particular Quranic piece that descends precisely when it is needed.

For instance, when you prepare a personal pharmacy in your home, you might collect a variety of medicines, but if you get a headache, you might search in vain for aspirin pills. However, if you go to a real pharmaceutical store, you would find it when you need it. Likewise, when you get thirsty, you might open your fridge and not even realize that there is a bottle of water right under your nose due to your zeal for water. Thus, the reason for Allah revealing the Quran in parts is so that the human soul quenches its thirst as it receives the Quran. That is why Allah Glorified is He says, ‘And it is a Quran which We have revealed in portions so that you may read it to the people by slow degrees, and We have revealed it, revealing in portion.’ (al-Isra’: 106) In addition, Allah reports the disbelievers saying, ‘why has not the Quran been revealed to him all at once?’ (al-Furqan: 32) Allah Glorified is He responds saying, ‘Thus, that We may strengthen your heart by it and We have arranged it well in arranging.’ (al-Furqan: 32)

Had the Quran been disclosed to the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him all at once, no one would have paid close attention to all its details. Allah willed, however, that He would reveal the Quran bit by bit to His Messenger to make every piece of revelation a means of reinforcement to the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him during different situations. The Prophet, and the His ummah (followers), are indeed in need of such divine backups on many different encountered occasions. That is why Allah clarifies that it is meant to strengthen the heart of the Prophet therewith. (al-Furqan: 32) Thus, when some verses are revealed in a certain situation, the believers are most disposed to receiving them and more likely to internalise and apply the wisdom that they contain.

Allah Glorified is He did not reveal just one verse but many verses as evident in the fact that when they came across an issue requiring divine guidance, Allah Glorified is He would disclose a fully detailed ruling on the issue. Thus, He affirms, ‘And they shall not bring to you any argument, but We have brought to you [one] with truth and best in significance.’ (al-Furqan: 33)

Had the Quran not been piecemeal, how could it satisfy all the questions presented in the Quran under the expression ‘they ask you about’? Allah Glorified is He gives the example of a mosquito and they wonder contemptuously how Allah gives such an example. Thus, Allah Glorified is He says, ‘surely Allah is not ashamed to set forth any parable-- [that of] a gnat or anything above that.’ (al-Baqara: 26) If they were wiser, they would have wondered how Allah has assimilated in this miniscule creature all the necessary components that a living organism requires, including the digestive system and the respiratory system down to the circulatory system and nervous system. They ought to have realized that this creature is a testament to the greatness of The Creator. For the greatness of design can be perceived in two different ways which either are the sheer immensity of the object designed or its extreme minuteness to the point that it is imperceptible to the senses.

For example, and Allah is the Most High, when they designed the Big Ben clock, people marvelled at its size and its precise craftsmanship and when craftsmen in Switzerland began producing marvellously small and compact watches, people were even more baffled at the finesse of its design. Thus, true power lies in the ability to create something that is enormous or subtly miniscule in size. How powerful, then, is The Creator of the universe, from the largest of its contents to its smallest?

Allah Glorified is He also gives another example of a fly. He says, ‘surely those whom you call upon besides Allah cannot create fly, though they should all gather for it.’ (al-Hajj: 73) If the disbelieves or those arrogant were to gather together and beseech their idols to create a fly, or even if they themselves endeavoured on such a task, they would fail. Their impotence goes even further as Allah says, ‘should the fly snatch away anything from them, they could not take it back; weak are the invoker and the invoked.’ (al-Hajj: 73) If a fly were to land on some food and then take some of it, would anybody be able to retrieve what the fly ate? No, no one would. Hence, we see the impotence of the seeker and the sought.

Allah Glorified is He informs us that the verses of the Quran were decisive and then made plain. There is no contradiction between the acts of making something decisive and making it clear since it is none other than Allah Who has made the essence decisive as well as He is the one who elaborated upon it in detail. He is All-Wise when it comes to what is best expressed implicitly and All-Knowing when it comes to what is best spelled out in detail with infinite eloquence. He is wise such that He perfects that which He creates rendering it immune to corruption, moreover, He is All Knowing and has knowledge of the unseen. As Allah Glorified is He says, ‘Vision comprehends Him not, and He comprehends [all] vision; and He is the Knower of subtleties, the Aware.’ (al-An‘am: 103) No eye is able to perceive Allah Glorified is He and however, His eye perceives the slightest of things and the most concealed of intentions.

Therefore, the very first verse of the chapter of Hud shows us that the Quran is the Word of Allah the All-Powerful is flawless in its design. It was perfected and sent down as a whole, all at once to the earthly realm. Then certain events occurred on Earth and the corresponding appropriate Quranic verses was descended piecemeal to each event. The reason for the process mentioned above could not be more crucial. Its purpose is related to the entire religion of Islam and thereby, Allah indicates it in the following verse saying:

أَلَّا تَعْبُدُوٓا۟ إِلَّا ٱللَّهَ ۚ إِنَّنِى لَكُم مِّنْهُ نَذِيرٌ وَبَشِيرٌ ﴿٢﴾

[Say, Prophet], ‘Worship no one but God. I am sent to you from Him to warn and to give good news [2]
(The Quran, Hud: 2)

Thus, the reason for which the Quranic revelation was perfected and then expounded is that we shall worship none other than Allah. The act of worship entails that the worshiper conforms completely to the will of the worshipped as to what has been ordered and to what has been proscribed.

Evidently, the act of worship entails the presence of that which is worshiped and which have a set of commands and proscriptions. If the worshiped object has no such set of do’s and do nots, it is not worthy of worship, Have those who worshiped idols ever received an order or a prohibition from them? Do those sun-worshipers get guidance from the sun? Thus, the act of worship of anything other than Allah is futile because other objects of worship simply cannot issue decrees concerning what to do and what not to do. Moreover, they have no way of rewarding action that is either pleasing or displeasing to them. No religious worship is possible without clear directives for do’s and do nots, neither is any religious worship possible in the absence of recompense for action.

Here we must take note that Allah Glorified is He says, ‘you shall not serve [any] but Allah.’ As opposed to saying, ‘serve Allah.’ (al-Ma‘ida: 72) Had the prophets been sent to people who were not preoccupied with the worship and veneration of any kind of deity, they would have had told them ‘serve Allah.’ However, in the verse we are discussing Allah Glorified is He and says, ‘you shall not serve [any] but Allah.’ It is as if Allah was confronting a community whose worship is oriented towards an object that is undeserving of it. Thus, Allah wishes to put an end to this practice and redirect their worship to Him.

Therefore, here we have a negation combined with an affirmation. Just like the formula that we declare that ‘There is no God but Allah’. In this formula, we begin by negating any other deities save Allah and affirm that divinity belongs to Allah alone. So, to testify to the Oneness of Allah Glorified is He is necessary only if a people believe in another deity. We do not testify to this except because there are other people worshipping other than Allah. Had these people already accepted that divinity belongs to Allah Who is The One and Only, then uttering the formula of faith would have been redundant.

The words of Allah ordering us not to serve any but Him consist of an explicit refutation of error and an affirmation of the truth since error was refuted so that all rests on solid foundations. Thus, the known jurisprudential principle say eliminating error must advance bringing about truth. First, desist from the worship of false idols and then, orient worship towards Allah.

As long as the act of religious worship consists of obeying commandments and abiding by prohibitions, thus, it includes everything to be commanded or prohibited. On pondering over the commandments and prohibitions, you realize that they encompass all facets of life, from the supreme principle that is ‘There is no God but Allah'’ down to removing a harmful object from a path. Every action in life which has the effect of reinforcing goodness or even increasing it is part and parcel of worship. So, Islam does not recognise that there are some actions that are lowly and others that are elevated. However, it recognises that there is someone who is inferior and another superior. Every worker who performs a job which life requires, either to maintain that which is virtuous or to increase its goodness and prevent it from being corrupted, is a noble worker. The value of a man can be measured through that he perfects.

To recapitulate, the word worship encompasses all aspects of life. It contains prescriptions for that which is good and is meant to be as well as proscriptions against that which is not meant to be. An action which has no specific directive is left up to you whether to perform or not to perform it. In fact, when you consider all those actions which are either prescribed or proscribed, you find that they make up no more than five percent of all the possible actions you could perform in life. This five percent, however, is the basic guide for all other facets of life.

Accordingly, the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘Islam is raised on five (pillars), testifying (the fact) that there is no god but Allah and that Muhammad is His servant and messenger, the establishment of prayer, payment of zakat, Pilgrimage to the House (Ka`ba) and the fasting of Ramadan.’(1)

The enemies of Islam try to limit religion to these five basic pillars. However, these pillars are but the foundations upon which the structure of Islam rests. The pillars of Islam reaffirm devotion to Allah Glorified is He, however, even the smallest actions in life are part of the religion because they promote virtue. Thus, knowing the basics of one’s religion is obligatory to everyone on this earth. As for the other forms of knowledge, such as the physical sciences, it is incumbent on those who specialize in them and go further to benefit everyone. When it is a Muslim who excels in the sciences, it is a great boon to Islam as a whole.

Therefore, the common denominator in life is knowledge of religion. However, we must give everything what it deserves not to give a chance to someone ignorant of the basic principles of religion to discuss matters of religion since it is limited to the people of knowledge. If it be said that religion is for all, we would say, 'you are right in the sense that all can be religious, however, to know religion fully requires studying jurisprudence for years'.

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari and Muslim

The scientists of other disciplines also spend years of their lives studying fields of medicine, architecture and the like. Even blue-collar type work takes time and effort to master. So, imagine what it would take someone who establishes the foundation of every facet of people's lives. That is why Allah Glorified is He says, 'Why should then a company from every party from among them not go forth that they may apply themselves to obtain understanding in religion, and that they may warn their people when they come back to them that they may be cautious?' (at-Tawba: 122)

Thus, we would not expect every Muslim person to study the science of inheritance and to be knowledgeable in such things as al-`usba (1), ashab al-furud (2) and ulu al-arham (3), al-`awl (4) and ar-rad (5). That is because man could live all is life without a need to ask about an issue of inheritance or to know who should have a share and who should not and so on. In addition, when someone faces such an issue, we direct him to those who are specialised in such science among scholars of jurisprudence and legal ruling. Exactly as when you feel ill, you would go see a doctor, when you need an engineering issue, you would consult an engineer and when you are exposed to a mathematical equation, you would ask an accountant. Thus, it is exactly the same when it comes to religious issues, you would have to go to a scholar of religion.

(1) Al-`Usba are the sons of the man and his relatives on his father's side. In this science of jurisprudence, the term refers to those allotted what remains of the inheritance after the people to whom a statutory portion is owed have been given their share. Examples of them include the brother, the uncle, and the father. If anything remains after the allotment of the inheritance it is allotted to these members according to the principle of ta`ib (this is over and above what was already allotted to them by virtue of the statutory portion.

(2) Ashab al-furud are those who are entitled to a statutory portion or a lawful share. There are twelve types of people in this category: four of them are male, namely, the father, the grandfather regardless of his age, the brother of the mother and the husband. The other eight types are females, and they are: the wife, the daughter, the full sister, the sister of the father, the sister of the mother, the daughter of the son, the mother, the grandmother regardless of age. To each of these is due their statutory portion that is mentioned in the Holy Quran.

(3) Ulu al-arham are those relatives that belong neither to the category of (fard) nor to that of (`usbah).

(4) Al-`awl: the general linguistic meaning is: 'height'. In the domain of jurisprudence, it refers to the increase in the allotment of the recipients of inheritance, and a decrease in their share of the inheritance. This is an issue that comes up when calculating allotments, the judge who presides over this process is sometimes forced to increase one side and decrease another side.

(5) Ar-rad: allotting whatever is leftover of the inheritance to those who are lawfully entitled to it and according to their statutory portion, and when no other people are deserving of it. This happens according to the following three principles:
1 – The presence of the person who is entitled to his lawful share =

When you look at religion you will find that it requires and incorporates all the actions which we perform regularly in life. Previously, I had given the example of the man who prays. If he does nothing else but praying, how would he then purchase the garment which he needs to cover his private parts since he has no occupation other than prayer? In order to purchase clothes, he would need to work a regular job where he would get paid, and then he would need to buy his clothes from a retailer, who would have had to purchase them from a wholesaler. The latter would have had to buy them from the factory where it had been merely assembled. It was another factory that actually weaved the cotton or the wool. The cotton was a product of agriculture, and the wool was fleeced off the hides of sheep. Thus, just the act of standing to face your Creator in prayer requires that you be dressed appropriately by covering your private parts, at a minimum, from the belly button to just below the knees. This requires being involved in the world through practical hands-on work.

Just ask yourself this: “what did you have for breakfast today’? Even if a piece of bread was all you had, you must have made the trip to a grocery store to buy it and that store had had it delivered from a bakery which relies on a mill to supply it with flour. Obviously, the flour was produced by grinding the wheat from the fields. Even the grinding machines themselves are produced in special factories, most likely foreign ones.

Thus, the process of making bread required a long and complex production chain. For there is the farmer who tilled the soil, the designer of the grinding machine, who studied engineering, the geologist who surveyed the deep layers of earth so that the iron ore could be extracted, then there is the factory where the iron ore was smelted in so that it might become industrial-grade steel.

Therefore, you find that every action in life has, in some way or another, served you in your religious life and made it possible for you to face your Creator in prayer. So, do not think that you can withdraw from the world and consecrate your whole life to prayer alone because every action that is performed in one's daily life is, in fact, part and parcel of the act of worship. If you wanted to desist completely from all worldly work, abstain from the fruits of the labour of someone. This is impossible, because without the work that others perform you would not be able to pray or have the energy to pray. Thus, worship, in its general sense, comprises all the actions that life requires regarding do's and do nots. Here, Allah Glorified is He says, 'That you shall not serve [any] but Allah; surely I am a warner for you from Him and a giver of good news.' (Hud: 2)

A warner is someone who warns of an impending danger so that there would still be time and a chance to rectify that which is wrong, while a bearer of good news is someone who heralds the coming of blessings if man remains steadfast on the road that leads to that blessing. Thus, the act of warning and the act of delivering good tidings are both related to matters which have not come to pass yet.

Warning naturally implies a threat and a kind of lesson to be learned. When you want to make your child be better in school you tell him that if he does not do his homework he will end up like the son of so and so, a person who is a lazy bum and a failure in life. In effect, you warn your son so that he avoids, from now, that thing that led to his poor performance in school. Similarly, you give glad tiding to your son or any other person of the good that awaits him if he continues on the right path.

So, religious worship consists of all actions in life so long as man remains faithful to the directives of truth which take the form of thou shalt or thou shalt not, actions where there are no command of dos and do nots are allowed actions.

It is incumbent on every Muslim to make himself aware that performing an action that is labelled as ‘thou shalt’ is a must. Additionally, he should abstain from actions which are labelled as thou shalt not as long as Allah Glorified is He has proscribed the likes of these. The Muslim must apply utmost precision in determining the value of all actions. Although, we are well aware that the religious obligations can be a trial for the soul; it is necessary that we point out to man that the hardship which the soul undergoes will be greatly rewarded. For example, you see farmers carrying fertilizing manure, load it on to the back of his donkey to transport to his field and mix it in with the soil. They do all this work despite all hardships in anticipation of the harvest.

Allah Glorified is He emphasises, by way of His Messenger, that the command not to worship any other being except Allah is a command from Allah. Allah also stresses that the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him is a warner and a bearer of good tidings from Allah. The phrase ‘you shall not serve [any] but Allah’ contains a negation of worshipping that which is not Allah and an affirmation of worshipping of Allah. This is all congruent with the notion of forewarning and the notion of bringing good tidings as the worship of that which is other than Allah calls for a warner, while the worship of Allah in Islam calls for a bearer of good tidings.

Allah Glorified is He is the Creator of man Who is aware of man’s weaknesses. Since He knows that such weakness could make man decline to a short-term good, distract him from a longer-term good and make him slip into the forgetfulness of the self. He has made it clear that for he who falls into one form of forgetfulness or another of the self, he must ask for forgiveness from Allah, Who is not miserly with His Mercy and dispenses it freely to his creatures.

If a sinner, in a turnabout, asks for Allah’s forgiveness, the way back to Allah is always open, through giving up sins and doing good deeds. No servant of Allah ever falls into sinfulness but that he erred from the path of his Lord. When he repents and asks for forgiveness, he returns to the path of Allah and strives not to fall in sin anew.

Here Allah Glorified is He says:

وَأَنِ ٱسْتَغْفِرُوا۟ رَبَّكُمْ ثُمَّ تُوبُوٓا۟ إِلَيْهِ يُمَتِّعْكُم مَّتَـٰعًا حَسَنًا إِلَىٰٓ أَجَلٍ مُّسَمًّى وَيُؤْتِ
كُلَّ ذِى فَضْلٍ فَضْلَهُۥ ۖ وَإِن تَوَلَّوْا۟ فَإِنِّىٓ أَخَافُ عَلَيْكُمْ عَذَابَ يَوْمٍ كَبِيرٍ ٣

Ask your Lord for forgiveness, then turn back to Him. He will grant you wholesome enjoyment until an appointed time, and give His grace to everyone who has merit. But if you turn away, I fear you will have torment on a terrible Day [3]
(The Quran, Hud: 3)

Thus, Allah Glorified is He clarifies that a servant must ask for forgiveness of past sins, repent from now, and return to the path of Allah to earn grace from Allah. Therefore, what is demanded of a servant is to ask for forgiveness of Allah and turn back to Allah in repentance.

This is what Allah Glorified is He asks of the transgressor since eliminating bad advances obtaining good. When a servant turns to Allah in repentance, he knows and admits that he has fallen into sin in the past, thus, he must not postpone the act of repentance, for he does not know whether he will still be alive or not. That is why Allah Glorified is He says, ‘And that you ask forgiveness of your Lord, then turn to Him; He will provide you with a goodly provision to an appointed term.’ (Hud: 3)

Allah Glorified is He describes the blessings that await one when one follows His Path when He says, ‘then whoever follows My Guidance, he shall not go astray nor be unhappy.’ (Ta Ha: 123). Elsewhere He says, ‘Whoever does good whether male or female and he is a believer, We will most certainly make him live a happy life.’ (an-Nahl: 97). Thus, leading a good life here on earth and not going astray or living in misery depends on following the way of Allah.

Some scholars have thought that leading such a good life contradicts what the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him has said, namely, that ‘The world is the believer's prison and the disbeliever's janna.’(1) The Prophet has also said, ‘Those who are tried most severely are the prophets, then those nearest to them, then those nearest to them.’(2) Those scholars wonder how Allah says that He will provide such people with a goodly provision and enjoyment.

(1) Narrated by Muslim and Ibn Majah

(2) Narrated by Ahmad, At-Tirmidhi and Ibn Majah

To clarify what is meant by provision or enjoyment, it is that which you enjoy and receive with joy and elation. The believer knows that for every disaster that befalls him in his worldly life he will be compensated for, infinitely, in the afterlife. So, the believer accepts the will of Allah with resignation because such is his fate and because he will be rewarded for enduring such hardships. Thus, there are even some believers who might pray for such hardships.

Therefore, everything that the believer goes through is good. So, do not ever think that someone who has been struck by a catastrophe in life is stricken. The real catastrophe is to be denied any goodly reward.

We read in the Quran the story of the righteous servant who killed a youth whose parents were devout believers. The righteous servant had feared that this disobedient and rebellious youth would cause his parents grief and drive them to commit every conceivable sin and ultimately lead them to misery. Thus, a true believer is one who immediately remembers the compensating blessings of a catastrophe. Some of us will recall the story of the virtuous believer who was on the road from Medina to Damascus when he injured his foot and the wound became gangrenous. The doctors decided that the foot needed to be amputated. When they tried to administer a pain-killing substance which would render him unconscious and help him get through the painful ordeal, the righteous believer refused. He explained that he did not like to forget about his Lord for even a blink of an eye.

Allah Glorified is He bestows upon such faithful servants a super-human capacity for enduring pain. Since they remain ever conscious of the presence of Allah such believers are allowed to share in His infinite power. After the doctors performed the operation, the virtuous believer asked to see his severed limb before it was buried. He held it and said, ‘O Lord! Even if it may be that I have been tested by suffering the loss of a limb, indeed I have been absolved from such suffering in many other limbs.’

Thus, when a tested person recalls the reward he gets during a calamity, he is resuscitated in pleasure. Therefore, do not be surprised when people praise their Creator at times of a tragedy. Usually, one praises Allah for having bestowed blessings, however, even calamities could bring blessings that greatly compensate for what was lost.

Similarly, one hears of the story of the two mystics who competed with one another in piety. One of them asked the other, ‘How are you doing in your hometown, O fuqara’? The word fuqara’ refers to those servants of Allah who are particularly ascetic and who devote most of their time to the worship of Allah. So, the second one replied, ‘we give thanks when we are blessed with His bounty and when we are patient when denied.’ The first servant scoffed at him saying, ‘That is the disposition of the stray dogs of Balkh.’ In other words, a dog will wag its tail when fed otherwise he will wait patiently.

So the second servant asked the first, ‘how are you doing?’ ‘When Allah gives us anything we offer it to others and when He denies us anything we thank Him.’

Therefore, every believer following the way of Allah remembers that patience and perseverance in times of trial will be infinitely rewarded by Allah. That is why Allah Glorified is He says, ‘He will provide you with a goodly provision.’ (Hud: 3)

The amount of good acquired differs depending on the loftiness of the ultimate goal. When you gather the goal together with the action, the full significance of the word 'goodly' becomes apparent. An example of this is the student who never leaves his books. To be sure, even during meals he manages to eat while his eyes continue to browse a textbook. Such a student draws endless motivation from the thought of success: he enjoys the sweetness of his end-goal now even while he is still toiling in the hard work that is supposed to get him there.

Allah Glorified is He says in the same verse, ‘…and bestow His grace on everyone endowed with grace.’ (Hud: 3) This means that Allah disproportionately rewards extra things offered to those without it. It is as if Allah Glorified is He causes the good deeds of a servant to grow. An example of this is the farmer who takes a portion of his seed stock and scatters it over the land. Allah causes these seeds to multiply so that the resulting harvest produces fifteen-fold of what was originally planted, the word fadl (grace) in this verse indicates a reward that exceeds the effort expended. For example, you might have an excess of money which is superfluous money to your needs. While another person might not even have enough money to make ends meet. If you offer some of your excess money to him you are investing this gift in yourself through Allah.

Allah Glorified is He might also grant you physical strength. You can use some of your strength to help someone who is not so powerful. Allah might have blessed you with forbearance. You can share this blessing with someone who is brazen or impatient. Thus, if a man shares his goodly virtues with others then these qualities develop and mature further with Allah. However, if he withholds these gifts from others, they diminish. That is why Allah Glorified is He says, ‘And whatever you lay out as usury, so that it may increase in the property of men, it shall not increase with Allah; and whatever you give in charity, desiring Allah's pleasure – it is these [persons] that shall get manifold.’ (ar-Rum: 39)

Some of the scholars understand this clause of the verse we are currently examining that a person who shares what Allah has given him of gifts, Allah, will reward him with more than what he gave away make up what he lost. Or that Allah rewards every endower with gifts from Him and this is truly the ultimate gift.

Then Allah Glorified is He says, ‘and if you turn back, then surely I fear for you the chastisement of a great day’ (Hud: 3). If they turn away, then let them know that you dread the suffering that will befall them on the Day of Judgment. This suffering is sometimes described as grievous, great, and shameful punishment because it is an unending punishment which varies according to the sufferer. Worldly suffering is, on the one hand, tolerable because there is that intuition that it will inevitably come to an end one day. As for the suffering of the next world it is, on the other hand, unending and permanent for the disbelievers and idolaters.

Allah Glorified is He and then says:

إِلَى ٱللَّهِ مَرْجِعُكُمْ ۖ وَهُوَ عَلَىٰ كُلِّ شَيْءٍ قَدِيرٌ ﴿٤﴾

It is to God that you will all return, and He has power over everything’ [4]
(The Quran, Hud: 4)

This means that it is Allah to whom everything returns, including the creation and the sustentation throughout life and initiating and terminating and the initiation of the final return that never ends. Those who did good deeds will be rewarded and those who did bad deeds will be punished. Thus, every good deed performed is rewarded on earth and will be rewarded in the next life as well. He who has good deeds that outweigh his sins will enter paradise and he whose sins outweigh his good deeds will enter hell. In addition, there are those whose good deeds outnumber their sins and their lives alternate between depression and joy. Such states of depression and joy are the mark of those who seek repentance from Allah by confessing their sins and admission to sin is the beginning of repentance.

As for him whose sins outnumber his good deeds, he will feel constriction in life and his soul will suffer from angst. So, Allah duly gives every doer of favour his favour. Thereby, those who strove to win His favour, Allah bless them through letting them come to His realm of good deeds, whereas those who turned away face the frightening prospect of suffering on the Day of Judgment. ‘He has power over all things.’ (Hud: 4) For Allah Glorified is He is capable of creating and sustaining, of initiating and terminating and initiating the everlasting life which is either in heaven or in hell, according to the case. He is Omnipotent. Allah Glorified is He then says:

يَعۡلَمُ مَا يُسِرُّونَ وَمَا يُعۡلِنُونَۚ إِنَّهُۥ عَلِيمُۢ بِذَاتِ ٱلصُّدُورِ ﴿٥﴾

See how they [the disbelievers] wrap themselves up, to hide their feelings from Him. But even when they cover themselves with their clothes, He knows what they conceal and what they reveal: He knows well the innermost secrets of the heart [5] (The Quran, Hud: 5)

Obviously, when you find the particle ala in the beginning of a sentence, you know that its purpose is to demand special attentiveness to what is about to be said. If the listener is absent-minded this reminds him to concentrate so as not to miss anything. This rhetorical alarm is effective insofar as it succeeds in alerting the listener. Its role is to mentally prepare him so that he can receive what you are about to say. Speech is a veil between the speaker and his audience. The audience is ignorant of what the speaker will say. The speaker is in control of the situation. He arranges his thoughts in preparation for speaking, while the audience is yet oblivious to the subject matter. To not surprise the listener or make him miss the whole speech the speaker alerts with such a particle.

`Allah Glorified is He hereby says that the disbelievers try to turn away and hide from Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. They fold up their breasts. To fold something is to bend it in half so that one part of it lies on the other part. When a man folds his breast, he bends it forward towards his stomach, thus hiding the gestures of his face. The purpose of hiding one's face in this case is to conceal the facial features as it betrays the state of the human soul. They hated the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and felt envious of him, however they are reluctant to expose the spiteful state of their soul.

A similar disposition can be noted among the people of Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him. Allah Glorified is He says, 'And indeed, every time I invited them that you may forgive them, they put their fingers in their ears, covered themselves with their garments, persisted, and were arrogant with [great] arrogance.' (Nuh: 7)

Now obviously, it is impossible for an entire finger to be thrust into an ear. It is only the tips of the fingers that cover up the ear's aperture. This exaggeration shows the situation of Nuh (Noah). They all wanted to plug up their ears so as not to hear any message. This is ample proof of their odium and a testament against them. For they know that if they allowed themselves to hear the message, their hearts might be swayed by it. The Quran also mentions what the disbelievers of Mecca were saying amongst themselves. Allah says, '…And those who disbelieve say, "Do not listen to this Quran and make noise therein" ….' (Fussilat: 26)

It is as if they had conspired to make noise about the Quran because they knew that if its verses reached their ears it might affect their soul. For the human soul is in constant flux and might be drawn to the truth without the person being aware of it. If the Quran really was false, why were they afraid of hearing its verses? There is really an element of stupidity in their obstinate denial.

Here Allah Glorified is He describes how they had covered themselves with their garments so as to hide their faces and conceal the emotions that are written on them. These emotions were most likely, but not necessarily, hateful. A few of them might react positively to the words of the Quran, and this is also something worth masking. Thus, such positive reactions are sometime irrepressible. The disbelievers of Quraysh would often steal off to the Prophet's home to hear the Quran being recited, despite their outward hostility against the Prophet. When they would catch each other listening to the Prophet praying, they excused that they were just passing by his house by accident. On that topic, the poet composed lines reminding them how they sneaked away to the room of Muhammad, late at night after they went out of their assembly, to listen to the revelation and how they used lame excuses like claiming that they wanted to keep an eye on him.

Allah Glorified is He again employs the particle ala when He says, 'now surely, when they use their garments as a covering, He knows what they conceal and what they make public; surely He knows what is in the breasts.' (Hud: 5) Having deceived Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him are they really capable of hiding from his Lord? That which eludes the Prophet will not go unnoticed by Allah. Since Allah knows their innermost secrets, He, is clearly also aware of what they deliberately divulge. Allah Glorified is He is unseen, and thereby, someone might believe that something can hide from Him. However, Allah Glorified is He encompasses but is not encompassed. If someone thinks that Allah Glorified is He knows only the unseen; because He is unseen, then this idea is wrong as He knows that which is secret and that which is openly announced. He is the Knower of the innermost secrets of breasts. The word `alim is a term of hyperbole. It is an entity whose essence is knowledge.

Allah Glorified is He uses the word that which refers to that which accompanies. Therefore, that as-sudur means that which accompanies the breasts of men. As we know, the breast is the seat of the heart and lungs. The heart is the seat of those core beliefs and certainties which are firm therein and around which outward life revolves. Thus, what is meant by that as-sudur are those innermost thoughts which dwell permanently in the breasts. They are everlasting companions which never leave it be it spiteful and hateful thoughts or feelings and intentions, whether good or bad which do not come up to the surface in normal interactions. Allah Glorified is He is so intimately knowledgeable of the thoughts of the heart that it is as if the physical heart itself was known too.

Next, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَمَا مِن دَآبَّةٖ فِي ٱلۡأَرۡضِ إِلَّا عَلَى ٱللَّهِ رِزۡقُهَا وَيَعۡلَمُ مُسۡتَقَرَّهَا
وَمُسۡتَوۡدَعَهَاۚ كُلّٞ فِي كِتَٰبٖ مُّبِينٖ ٦

There is not a creature that moves on earth whose provision is not His concern. He knows where it lives and its [final] resting place: it is all [there] in a clear record [6] (The Quran, Hud: 6)

Here the Quran is further illustrating one of the qualities of Allah. When the Quran comes to an attribute of Allah, it mentions what is related to that attribute. While Allah Glorified is He has full knowledge of what is in the hearts: in this case, the hidden, negative elements; He also has full knowledge of the positive aspect of things. Therefore, He is also aware, for example, of the good intentions. However, these verses pertain to the group of people who fold their breasts.

Here, the word daaba (animal) denotes all those creatures which walk upon the earth. Traditionally, however, it excludes human beings. We can infer this from what Allah Glorified is He and says in another verse, ‘and there is no animal that walks upon neither the earth nor a bird that flies with its two wings but [they are] general like yourselves.’ (al-An‘am: 38)

It is mentioned that when Allah Glorified is He charged Musa (Moses) peace be upon him with carrying His message, He expressed concerns regarding his family and wondered how he could spread the message while his family is unattended. So Allah Glorified is He inspired Musa (Moses) to hurl a boulder. When he did, the boulder turned into a small rock. Allah ordered Musa (Moses) to hit that rock that split into two. When he did, inside the rock Musa was able to perceive a miniscule insect that appeared to be feeding off an even tinier morsel of food. Musa realised that Allah who provided for that insect that lived deep in the shadows of this rock, can surely provide for His family. Thus, Musa (Moses) turned his attention to his mission.

This is natural; for Allah Glorified is He is the Creator of all human beings, and He must guarantee to sustain their lives with provision and ensure the survival of their progeny by marriage and spousal affinity. Thus, among the arrangements required by creation is that Allah Glorified is He provides physical survival through sustenance, and that He ensures the survival of progeny through marriage.

That is why we have always emphasised the distinction between the bestowal of Divinity and that of Lordship. For, while Allah Glorified is He is the Lord of everyone, He is the God of those who believe in Him. Since Allah Glorified is He is the 'Lord' of all, He is responsible for everyone. The sun, for example, rises on both the believer and the disbeliever. The latter might benefit from the sun by extracting solar energy from it; so why should not the believer pursue the causes of this phenomenon? Air also is available to both the believer and the disbeliever, for it is a provision bestowed by the 'Lord'. So, if the disbeliever studies the composition of the atmosphere and learns to benefit from it, the believer should also strive and persevere in understanding these phenomena. Therefore, the bestowal of Lordship is shared by everyone, whereas the bestowal of Divinity is confined to the worshippers. And by worshipping Allah Glorified is He He directs you away from what your ego desires to what He wills. When your desires tempt you to do something wrong, Allah's law prevents you. In this way, you can control your desires and make better choices. However, as far as basic needs of life are concerned, the bestowal of Lordship is given to all living creatures in order to sustain themselves.

Here, Allah Glorified is He says, 'There is not a creature that moves on earth whose provision is not His concern….' (Hud: 6) The word `ala indicates that every creature has a right to such provision. However, they did not compel Allah Glorified is He to provide for them; rather, He has imposed this obligation on Himself.

Allah Glorified is He says, 'He knows where it lives and its [final] resting place….' (Hud: 6) Since He provides for all creatures, He knows where they rest and live so that He delivers this provision to them. The word al-mastaqar means the place of 'resting', whereas al-mustawdi is the place where 'trusts' are deposited. Hereby, Allah Glorified is He tells us this to reassure us that everyone's provision knows his place even though the person does not know where his provision is. The provision might come from unexpected sources; but seeking the provision is something different, for you may seek a provision destined for another person. Imagine, for example, that you planted wheat in your plot of land, but you were then forced to travel, leaving your wheat for someone else to eat. You then eat from another's wheat, and so forth.

Allah Glorified is He therefore, says, 'He knows where it lives and its [final] resting place: it is all [there] in a clear record.' (Hud: 6), meaning all is preordained. There is a difference between acting on the first impulse that comes to your mind and between carrying out a preconceived plan of action where you carry out your actions deliberately and according to what you had previously planned. The Greatness of the Creator Glorified is He manifests itself when everything in life happens according to what He has preordained.

The evidence, for example, is that Allah Glorified is He has revealed the chapters of the holy Quran to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. When the revelation departs him, he would recite the revealed chapter to his companions who would either write it down if they were able, or memorise it. Then, when Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would come to pray, he would recite every chapter exactly as Allah Glorified is He has ordained, with every verse in its proper place that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him has dictated to his companions. How could this happen? This happened because Allah Glorified is He says to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him 'We shall teach you [the Quran] and you will not forget.' (al-A'la: 6)

The chapter of Hud continues with Allah's saying:

وَهُوَ ٱلَّذِى خَلَقَ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضَ فِى سِتَّةِ أَيَّامٍ وَكَانَ عَرْشُهُۥ عَلَى
ٱلْمَآءِ لِيَبْلُوَكُمْ أَيُّكُمْ أَحْسَنُ عَمَلًا ۗ وَلَئِن قُلْتَ إِنَّكُم مَّبْعُوثُونَ مِنۢ بَعْدِ
ٱلْمَوْتِ لَيَقُولَنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوٓا۟ إِنْ هَٰذَآ إِلَّا سِحْرٌ مُّبِينٌ ٧

It is He who created the heavens and the earth in six Days — His rule extends over the waters too — so as to test which of you does best. Yet [Prophet], if you say to them, 'You will be resurrected after death,' the disbelievers are sure to answer, 'This is clearly nothing but sorcery' [7] (The Quran, Hud: 7)

The Quran has addressed the issue of creating the heavens and the earth more than once. We have pointed out previously that Allah Glorified is He has willed to create the heavens and the earth in six days. He could have, if He has wished, created the heavens and the earth in the blink of an eye by saying, ‘Be!’ We have also come to know that creating something is not the same as combining pre-existing elements into a new form.

An example of this - and Allah Glorified is He knows the best example - can be seen in the making of yoghurt: yeast is added proportionally to warm milk (this only takes a few minutes), then this mixture is left to sit for twenty-four hours during which time it transforms into actual yoghurt. A similar process occurs when it comes to human actions, for they require a passage of time. Divine actions, however, do not require the passage of time because they all happen when Allah Glorified is He says, ‘Be!’

As some Islamic scholars have said, Allah Glorified is He has willed that the heavens and the earth be created in six days. Some orientalists have taken this verse and other verses as an opportunity to criticise the Holy Quran by claiming that there is a contradiction therein, for Allah Glorified is He says here: ‘It is He who has created the heavens and the earth in six Days.’ (Hud: 7) The orientalists came to the detailed verses of creating the heavens and the earth and they counted the total number of days therein; they concluded that they are eight days. These detailed verses are Allah's Words, ‘Say, “How can you disregard the One who created the earth in two Days? How can you set up other gods as His equals? He is the Lord of all the worlds!” He placed solid mountains on it, blessed it, measured out its varied provisions for all who seek them—all in four Days. Then, He turned to the sky, which was smoke—He said to it and the earth, “Come into being, willingly or not”, and they said, “We come willingly” and in two Days He formed seven heavens, and assigned an order to each. We have made the nearest one beautifully illuminated and secure. Such is the design of the Almighty, the All Knowing.’ (Fussilat: 9-12)

Thereby, some orientalists said that if these detailed verses were the story of the creation of the heavens and earth, the general verse narrating the same story should be consistent with these detailed verses. One of these orientalists said, ‘Suppose I have ten measures of grain, and I gave away five measures to one person, three measures to another person and two to another person. I would have nothing left because the portions of grain I gave away to people amount to the total grain I had in the beginning.’

Similarly, some of the orientalists claimed that the six days mentioned in the chapter of Hud do not match the days they counted in the detailed verses of the chapter of Fussilat. However, they do not realise that the speaker here is Allah Glorified is He and that He is addressing people who are intelligent, articulate, and perceptive. These people understood that which the orientalists failed to grasp. Those people who mastered Arabic understood that Allah Glorified is He has created the earth in two days, and then He placed solid mountains on it, blessed it, and measured out its varied provisions. All this is a sort of continuation of the description of Allah's creation of the earth. For example, when travelling from Cairo to Alexandria, I know I will reach the city of Tanta is an hour, then Alexandria in two hours meaning the hour that it took me to reach the mid-way city of Tanta is part and parcel of the total of two hours that it took me to travel to Alexandria.

Likewise, creating the earth and the solid mountains and measuring out its varied provisions all took place in four days which include those two days during which the earth by itself was created. Then the heavens were created in two days.

Then Allah Glorified is He says, '...His rule extends over the waters.' (Hud: 7) From all these matters that deal with the unseen world, there is one essential thing that we must retain, namely it is Allah- the Truthful informer - Who tells us about such matters. For nobody doubts that the heavens and the earth were created and no one doubts that the creation of the heavens and the earth is grander than the creation ofman, and no one has ever claimed that it was he who created the earth or the heavens.

We know who the individuals behind human inventions are, like the light bulb, the telephone, the microphone, the television, the car and so forth. But when it comes to the heavens and the earth, no human being claims to have created them. Allah Glorified is He has informed us that He is their Creator and it stays as such until someone challenges this fact, and no one ever will.

And the purpose of Allah's creation is to test us, '...so as to test which of you does best.' (Hud: 7) meaning that He might test us to see which of us does the best actions; but who determines what action is best? It is Allah Glorified is He. But does He really need to test His creatures? No, since He has known pre-eternally all what creation does. However, the purpose of the testing is that His creatures' acts match what He knows pre-eternally, and (on the Day of Judgment) what they did in life will serve as evidence (either of their goodness or of their wickedness).

Then Allah Glorified is He says, 'Yet [Prophet], if you say to them, "You will be resurrected after death", the disbelievers are sure to answer, "This is clearly nothing but sorcery."' (Hud: 7) Here, Allah Glorified is He is demonstrating the accusation made by the disbelievers that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is lying. They pronounced words without giving them any thought. Had they paused to reflect on what Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was saying, they could not have logically answered him the way they did.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was merely reporting Allah's Message that they will be resurrected after death. He was just informing them that when they die - which will inevitably happen - Allah Glorified is He will resurrect them. All they could say in response was, 'This is clearly nothing but sorcery.' (Hud: 7) If Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is merely delivering to them a message, where does sorcery fit in here? They knew that what he was saying comes directly from the text of the Holy Quran. Therefore, as they labelled the entire Quran as 'sorcery', it is as if the content of the message itself is part of that sorcery.

Previously, we explained how logically their claim that the Holy Quran is sorcery has been refuted. They had claimed that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him— or simply 'Muhammad' as they used to call him—had put a spell on the community of his followers. The sorcerer has an effect over the one who is hypnotized, and the person who is hypnotized is powerless and has no say in the process of sorcery, so if Muhammad had indeed put a spell on those who had followed him, then why did he not also put a spell on those people who adamantly denied his Message? How could he have not put a spell on them in the same manner that he supposedly put on the others?

The fact that there were some people kept on their stubborn opposition to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and his Message proves that this is not a case of sorcery. If this was the case, he would have cast a spell on all of them.

The words of Allah, ‘This is clearly nothing but sorcery’ (Hud: 7), indicate that the alleged sorcery is of an ‘encompassing’ kind, not that whose effect is restricted to a particular group of people. Thus, the words, ‘This is clearly nothing but sorcery.’ (Hud: 7), mean that it is sorcery of the type that encompasses and affects all the people who are targeted. The remaining of even one single person in a state of disbelief in Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him proves that this is not a case of sorcery.

Afterwards, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَلَئِنۡ أَخَّرۡنَا عَنۡهُمُ ٱلۡعَذَابَ إِلَىٰٓ أُمَّةٖ مَّعۡدُودَةٖ لَّيَقُولُنَّ مَا يَحۡبِسُهُۥٓۗ أَلَا يَوۡمَ
يَأۡتِيهِمۡ لَيۡسَ مَصۡرُوفًا عَنۡهُمۡ وَحَاقَ بِهِم مَّا كَانُواْ بِهِۦ يَسۡتَهۡزِءُونَ ﴿٨﴾

If We defer their punishment for a determined time, they are sure to say, ‘What is holding it back?’ But on the Day it comes upon them, nothing will divert it from them; what they mocked will be all around them [8] (The Quran, Hud: 8)

In the word l`in, the letter ‘l’ indicates that there is a dropped affirming oath by Allah. So, taking an oath serves as an affirmation of a matter through what is sworn by. Taking an oath for a matter only happens because someone doubts this matter. For example, you would never tell someone you met, ‘I swear by Allah that I visited my friend yesterday’. The purpose of a swearing is to dispel the doubt of the listener, and that is why it is not used initially. The degree of an oath is in proportion with the degree of doubt.

The Holy Quran says, ‘If We defer their punishment for a determined time...’ (Hud: 8). So there is the letter (waw) which indicates that what follows is an oath. There is also a conditional clause. And they both require a response. When an oath and a clause are combined in a single expression, one response will eloquently suffice for both. As for example when one says, ‘By Allah if you do this, I will do such and such a thing with you’. The response of the oath suffices as a response to the clause. And whichever precedes the other, whether it is the oath or the clause, its response satisfies the response of the other. For instance, when we say, ‘By Allah, if so-and-so shows up, I will treat him with generosity’. The oath in this case comes first, and its response satisfies the response of the clause. And if you had said, ‘If so-and-so shows up, by Allah, I will treat him with generosity’; in this case, the clause comes first.

The two are united, and the purpose of this is that the oath is an affirmation and the clause is a foundation. If new information precedes both the clause and the oath, then we state the answer to the clause immediately, for example, we would say, ‘Zayd, by Allah if he shows up, treat him with generosity’ because the clause is, as we have said, a foundation and the oath is an affirmation. And in this last case the clause takes precedence since the foundation takes precedence over the affirmation.

And here Allah Glorified is He says, ‘If We defer their punishment for a determined time, they are sure to say, ‘What is holding it back?’ (Hud: 8) The answer here is to the oath, and it suffices as a response to the clause as well. This means that punishment will be deferred. Allah Glorified is He has promised to punish those who disbelieved in Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. The punishment of the previous people was that of eradication. Allah Glorified is He has stuck some of them with a violent storm; some were overcome by a sudden blast; some were drowned, and still others Allah Glorified is He has made the earth swallow.

It is indeed as if the mission of the previous prophets was to convey the Message, and then Allah Glorified is He takes over the job of punishing those who disbelieved in the Messages. However, Allah Glorified is He has favoured the ummah (The followers of Islam) of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him over previous peoples and willed that the disbelievers would be punished firstly on the battlefield. And when Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him promises that they will be punished, this punishment will come at a certain time. It might be postponed so that the error and the corruption of the disbelievers is brought to light, then when Allah's punishment finally befalls them, no one will mourn them. Thus, Allah Glorified is He wishes to postpone the punishment of the disbelievers and to give them respite. He lets the unjust have free rein such that his iniquity keeps increasing to the point when the community amongst which he lives begins to hate him. Then when a punishment befalls him, nobody feels any sympathy for him.

Now, as we know, the human soul is such that it is deeply affected by what is happening in the present moment. For example, when someone commits murder, and years go by before he is tried, and then he is sentenced to death, people tend to forget about the villainy of the murder that happened so long ago, and they feel sorry for the murderer when he is sentenced to death. That is why I have always maintained that one of the main reasons for the continuation of committing crimes is the slowness of the court system. That is why the public's feelings lean toward the criminal; because the scene of the dead victim has long since left their memories.

However, if people would only recall - when the sentence is pronounced - the circumstances of the crime, they would rejoice in the verdict. That is why, when Allah Glorified is He wills that someone should be punished, He says, '...and ensure that a group of believers witnesses the punishment.' (an-Nur: 2) So the punishment takes place in full view of the community that suffered from their corruption and injustice. Those who were most directly affected by the crime, by witnessing the punishment, will heal. Here Allah Glorified is He tells Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: you have promised them that they will suffer one day, and We are delaying that day and are, for the moment, giving them free rein. However, they have seized that as an opportunity for mockery and sarcastic ridicule, and they asked where the punishment was. In the Quran, we find that these same people also utter the following, 'They say, 'Our Lord! Advance us our share of punishment before the Day of Reckoning!' (Sad: 16) The word al-qatt means: the reward of one's work; it is derived from the word al-qat` which means: a cut or portion.

Now the degree of punishment is proportional to the crime. If the crime is serious, then the punishment is great, and if the crime is minor, then the punishment is also limited. Thus, the severity of the punishment always depends on the crime.

Strange indeed, that some of them could utter, 'Allah, if this really is the truth from You, then rain stones on us from the heavens, or send us some other painful punishment.' (al-Anfal: 32) The Quran also mentions them to have said, 'Or make the sky fall on us in pieces, as you claimed will happen....' (al-Isra': 92) Certainly, no man wishes that punishment would befall him; the disbelievers, nevertheless, said what they said in defiance and in sarcastic mockery. But Allah Glorified is He has willed not to punish the disbelievers who were the contemporaries of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in the same way that He has punished the disbelievers who were the contemporaries of previous prophets. As Allah Glorified is He says, 'But Allah will not send them punishment while you [Prophet] are in their midst....' (al-Anfal: 33) Moreover, there were some who concealed their faith simply because neither they were powerful enough to confront the disbelievers openly nor did they have the means of emigrating to Medina. Their circumstances forced them to live amongst the disbelievers.

This is made clear in the chapter of al-Fath where Allah Glorified is He says, 'They were the ones who disbelieved, who barred you from the Sacred Mosque, and who prevented the offering from reaching its place of sacrifice. If there had not been among them, unknown to you, believing men and women whom you would have trampled underfoot, inadvertently incurring guilt on their account – Allah brings whoever He will into His Mercy— if the [believers] had been clearly separated, We would have inflicted a painful punishment on the disbelievers.' (al-Fath: 25) meaning that had the disbelievers been distinguishable from the believers, Allah Glorified is He would have inflected an agonising punishment on the disbelievers. However, had the Muslims entered Mecca with their army (which was stationed nearby in Al-Hudaibya, and had a battle taken place, it would have affected all the residents of Mecca, amongst whom there were some believers who were spread out amongst the disbelievers, and were not concentrated in an area so that the Muslims would be able to deliver a blow to the side of the disbelievers only. Thus, had the Muslims attacked the city and stricken its fighters, they would have unwittingly stricken some believers and this is what Allah Glorified is He has wished to avert as in 'If We defer their punishment for a determined time....' (Hud: 8)

Al-ummah is a group of members of the same species, like a group of people, a group of Jinn, or a group of ants…and other creatures of Allah Glorified is He. Allah Glorified is He says, 'All the creatures that crawl on the earth and those that fly with their wings are communities like you are. We have missed nothing out of the Record— in the end they will be gathered to their Lord.' (al-An'am: 38) Thus, al-ummah is a group that is united by a singular law and system; its members are equal in everything. Al-ummah might also refer to a period of time, such as in Allah's Words, 'But the prisoner who had been freed at last remembered [Joseph]...' (Yusuf: 45) meaning he recalled even after a long time had passed; the period referred to as ummah might be the amount of time roughly equivalent to 'a generation'.

Ummah then, is a group that is united by the similarity of its members; these members might have distinctive qualities, but they generally share some common qualities. Human beings belong to an ummah that can be defined as animals who have the ability to speak and who can think rationally. Although there are common features shared by all humans, there are also differences in talents.

And there is no one human soul that possesses the aptitude for architecture, medicine, business, pharmacy, and accounting. All these kinds of work require years of serious study. And man does not have a long enough lifetime to specialise in all these fields; that is why everyone specialises in only one field; so that through his knowledge he can serve others, and so that others can specialise in other fields and serve the rest, and so on. In such a way, there develop symbiotic relationships in society, so that each member feels that he needs others, and that he is unable to survive independently from the rest of creation. Suppose that one person could have knowledge of all the different professions in the world - medicine, architecture, law, iron-works, carpentry, agriculture and others - then would he care about other people? That is why Allah Glorified is He has willed that societies come together out of practical necessity and not as a favour between one person and another. The person who sweeps the streets or the one who cleans the sewage does not perform this work out of graciousness; rather, he does it out of need. He needs to work and he needs money because his body requires food and clothing and because his children need food, shelter and clothing as well. Were it not for this, he would not work that job. And if he works hard at his job, Allah Glorified is He will make him love his work. And even if his situation improves, he remains steadfast to his profession because he loves to master and perfect his job.

I once saw a man who worked in this field, carrying loads of sewage on his shoulders. When Allah Glorified is He improved his financial situation, he bought a donkey-pulled carriage to carry extra loads. And when Allah Glorified is He improved his financial situation even further, he purchased a car which had a suction device so that he could remain seated, all while operating the machine which sucked up the sewage and sent it to a special storage unit in the back of the vehicle.

So, social relationships are born out of necessity, not out of favour. Because favour is not binding, it does not compel one to perform work. Necessity, however, forces one to perform work; it keeps the wheels of daily life moving.

Whosoever loves his work - whatever this work may be – Allah Glorified is He grants him more success in it; for such a person respected what Allah Glorified is He has destined for him, and was not conceited. And Allah Glorified is He grants him all kinds of gifts through this work, since he loves his work, and works sincerely at it. If you look at those who achieved greatness in their professions - however lowly - you will find that their stories start with acceptance of what Allah Glorified is He has chosen for them.

As we know, the value of a person lies in that which he perfects. Thus, you will find that society is composed of various talents which complement each other rather overlap with each other such that every man is in need of the expertise of others. That is why Allah Glorified is He says, 'We have raised some of them above others in rank, so that some may take others into service.' (az-Zukhruf: 32). One does not solicit another's services unless the one who is solicited is in need of compensation from the work. That is way you will find people knocking at your door asking, 'Do you need a driver? Do you need a servant'? The person in need is the one who offers his services, in the hopes of finding a job that he might perform well. Therefore, the family of a person must not conceive of his work - whatever this may be - as a means of serving the one served. No… he is serving his own needs. And thus, social bonds develop out of necessity, and not out of goodwill.

Allah Glorified is He says of Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him 'Abraham was truly an example...' (an-Nahl: 120) for he peace be upon him possessed many virtues which are usually found scattered amongst different people in society. The term ummah is used to describe a period of time, or a group of members of the same species and it can also be used to describe a man who combines within himself all the good qualities.

And here Allah Glorified is He says, 'If We defer their punishment for a determined time....' (Hud: 8) Normally, the word ma`duda (determined) describes a state of paucity as in Allah's Words, 'and then sold him for a small price, for a few (Ma`duda) pieces of silver: so little did they value him.' (Yusuf: 20) So long as the price was low, there must have been a limited amount of silver coins.

The reason for taking the word ma`duda as signifying scarcity is that we do not proceed to count something unless we are convinced that we will be able to do so, that is because the number is relatively small. We would not proceed to count that which we know is a lot. No one, for instance, has counted all the grains of sand in the world or all the stars in the universe. Hence, Allah Glorified is He says, 'If you tried to count Allah's favours you could never calculate them....' (Ibrahim: 34) The Arabic word in (if), as we know, serves to express doubt; and Allah's blessings are not conceivably countable.

Despite the progress that man has made in the science of statistics, has anyone devoted himself to count the blessings of Allah Glorified is He? No, of course not…even though it is possible to calculate population numbers and their distribution according to profession, for example.

In the old days, those who oversaw counting what was in the donation funds would sort all the one-hundred bills together, the ten bills together, and similarly with all the other bills. When it was time to count the coins, they would count them by weight: knowing how many coins were in a kilogram, they would simply calculate how many kilograms there were.

And Allah Glorified is He says, 'If We defer their punishment for a determined time, they are sure to say, "What is holding it back?"' (Hud: 8) It is as if they mockingly and sarcastically ask, 'Why has the punishment promised to us by Messenger Muhammad been delayed?' for no one looks forward to something painful, so such talk is only said sarcastically. The response to this begins with that rhetorical device that we discussed earlier, namely, `ala. In other words: pay close attention to what is about to be said. And Allah says, 'But on the Day, it comes upon them, nothing will divert it from them....' (Hud: 8) This is an assertive confirmation that the punishment will come, even though man is always impatient, rushing things.

However, Allah Glorified is He does not rush things in the way His servants do; everything takes place the time He has determined; and when the predestined moment arrives, they will indeed get what they were impatient for. So, Allah Glorified is He says, 'what they mocked will be all around them.' (Hud: 8) The confirmation of their punishment is evident, firstly, because of the term 'ala, which is a forceful assertion and also because of Allah's Words: 'on the Day it comes upon them' (Hud: 8) which is a guarantee that this day is coming, since the informer is Allah Glorified is He. Also, this punishment stated clearly in the saying of Allah, '…nothing will not divert it from them.' (Hud: 8) is continuous, uninterrupted. And the the danger is inescapble: 'what they mocked will be all around them.' (Hud: 8)

Now, the verb haq is in the past tense, even though the current discussion concerns that which has yet to pass for which the present tense, which expresses the present or the future, should be used. Thus, how are the disbelievers trying to hasten something that is expressed in the past tense? However, the speaker here is Allah Glorified is He and it is He Who determines the rules of discourse. And every action is determined by the power of its doer, and Allah is the source of all power.

Elsewhere in the Quran, Allah Glorified is He says, 'Allah's Judgement is coming, so do not ask to bring it on sooner.' (an-Nahl: 1) The verb ata (came) is by all grammatical standards in the past tense meaning that the statement came after the event had occurred. As when, for example, we say 'Mohammad passed his exams'; this means that Mohammad's successful passing of his exams has happened.

When Allah Glorified is He says, 'Allah's Judgement is coming (literally, has come) ...' (an-Nahl: 1), we understand it as a speech preceded by actual happenings. Allah Glorified is He says afterwards, '... so do not ask to bring it on sooner.' (an-Nahl: 1) Thus, this indicated that the event has not yet come to pass. However, the speaker is Allah Glorified is He. Therefore, the overall meaning is that the event is undoubtedly bound to occur because every action depends upon the power of its doer.

To give a real-life example - and Allah Glorified is He knows best - that you needed to move a heavy, cumbersome suitcase; so your son who is young says, ‘Let me carry it for you.’ Your son is offering to carry it in your place because he can move it faster as his ability to carry it corresponds, of course, to his strength. If your youngest son came to you and said that he would carry it for you, you know that he could carry it only insofar as his limited strength allows.

Therefore, on the human plane, you can look back and evaluate the past, rightly or wrongly. However, you cannot pronounce any judgment when it comes to the future because you have no hold on future events. But when the speaker is capable of carrying out in the future that which He promises in the present, and there is nothing that can bar Him from doing so, then you can be absolutely certain that the matter shall come to pass.

Thus Allah Glorified is He is hereby informing us of that which will come to pass, and nothing in the created universe can thwart His plans. And so long as Allah Glorified is He has said that it is a matter that has already come, then it will certainly come to pass. That is why Allah Glorified is He says, ‘what they mocked will be all around them.’ (Hud: 8) Even though, in the context of the human plan, the proper formulation would be: they will be overwhelmed by the very thing which they were wont to deride given that they wanted to hasten their own punishment. The word wahaq implies, therefore, that no obstacle whatsoever will prevent the fated event from coming to pass.

Afterwards, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَلَئِنۡ أَذَقۡنَا ٱلۡإِنسَٰنَ مِنَّا رَحۡمَةٗ ثُمَّ نَزَعۡنَٰهَا
مِنۡهُ إِنَّهُۥ لَيَـُٔوسٞ كَفُورٞ ٩

How desperate and ungrateful man becomes when We let him taste Our mercy and then withhold it! [9] (The Quran, Hud: 9)

This verse also begins with (wa la`in), where the ‘l’ indicates taking of an oath. And it is as if He is saying, ‘If we let man taste some of Our Mercy, then

We withheld it, he would sink into despair'. Here again it is a case of the taking of an oath and a clause, with the oath coming first; thus, the response is for the oath. The word adhaqna (To let someone taste) implies that the primary place for taste is the mouth: this means that you taste something to find out about its taste: sweet or sour, acidic or alkaline. It is interesting, as far as the precision of human formation is concerned, that every part on the tongue has a corresponding taste that to which it reacts. Thus, the front part of the tongue reacts to a certain food, and the middle of the tongue reacts to another food, and the sides of the tongue react to yet a third type of food, and so on and so forth.

All of this on a single organ, thus Allah Glorified is He has willed to create in such precise construction. And every taste bud on the human tongue has a taste that it detects; that is why we find a person tasting food and saying that this dish needs more salt, or when tasting sweets - like kunafa - and saying that the sugar in it is just right.

This is similar to body temperature. A person takes his temperature, and if he finds it to be thirty-seven and a half degrees centigrade, he says that this is normal temperature. If man's temperature drops below this level, it is said that one has hypothermia. If it rises above this level, it is said that one has a fever. However, this is the human body's overall temperature. Every individual organ in the body requires a particular temperature which enables it to function correctly.

Thus, if the liver's temperature drops below forty degrees centigrade it stops functioning correctly. The human body has multiple organs; the temperature of the eye for example is a mere nine degrees because if its temperature increases above that level the eye could burst. Similarly, the ear's temperature is eight degrees centigrade. You would be unable to bring together multiple entities of different temperatures together, but Allah has willed as much for the human body.

Here, Allah Glorified is He says, 'When We let man taste….' (Hud: 9) And to taste is to perceive; when you are shopping for fruits at the market, the vendor will offer you a taste of the fruit he is selling; so you try a piece to enjoy its taste. To taste, then, is the act of putting something to one's tongue to perceive its flavour.

When Allah Glorified is He wills someone to be showered with His blessings, then they are taken away from him, the person becomes sad or depressed or struck by panic or despair. Man cherishes blessings from Allah Glorified is He however small they might be; and if he is stripped of them, he sinks into despair and ingratitude. And to despair is to lose all hope that something will happen; and because man is incapable of 'blessing himself', for if he were capable, he would not fall into despair. The true believer never despairs; for Allah Glorified is He says, '...and do not despair of Allah's Mercy—only disbelievers despair of Allah's Mercy.' (Yusuf: 87) Thus, despair is when all hope is lost, and you have neither the means nor the power to attain that which you desire. And he who despairs is he who has no God to turn to; for Allah Glorified is He is unfaltering Guide, and when the believer loses something he should say, 'Allah will compensate me with something better'. As for he who has no faith in Allah Glorified is He he would say, 'This is but an unfortunate coincidence that will probably never occur again'.

For the person who has a pound stolen from him might be sad, but if he knows that he has ten pounds at home he will mourn but a little over the stolen pound. A person despairs only when he has no faith in a source which can replace his loss; however, if a person has faith in a source that is capable of granting him all that he wants, such a person is never despondent or in despair.

The believer knows that for every blessed bounty there is a giver; if blessings do come he gives thanks to Allah Glorified is He for them, and if withhold, he knows that Allah Glorified is He has done so out of wisdom.

Allah Glorified is He says, 'When We let man taste Our Mercy....' (Hud: 9) We know that what is meant by 'man' is all humankind, all the descendants of Adam peace be upon him; and they are numerous, some are believers, and some are disbelievers. The term 'man' is used in its general sense, but elsewhere Allah Glorified is He excludes the believers saying, 'By the declining day, man is [deep] in loss, except for those who believe....' (al-'Asr: 1-3) Thus, the term 'man' denotes humanity at large, but Allah Glorified is He excludes all those who believe in Him. So, if you see the term 'man', then realise that it includes all members of humankind.

And if man drifts away from the path of Allah Glorified is He he becomes doomed to perdition - unless he returns to the path of Allah Glorified is He; for His path protects him against going astray, and transforms him such that his very instincts tend towards the Will of Allah Glorified is He.

Thus, Allah Glorified is He has created instincts for fundamental functions; the hunger instinct drives man to find food, and as for thirst, Allah Glorified is He has willed that its purpose be to alert man that he needs to find water to quench his thirst. The instinct of reproduction drives man to get married, and the instinct of curiosity pushes man to discover and invent new things.

Allah Glorified is He says the following about those who are oblivious of His signs in the cosmos, ‘And there are many signs in the heavens and the earth that they pass by and give no heed to.’ (Yusuf: 105) The experimental researcher looks to the phenomena of the universe to discover its secrets. Beware, however, that there is a difference between the love for scientific discovery and that unhealthy curiosity about other people’s affairs. Generally speaking, passionate curiosity is a healthy instinct; it is what makes the world go round. However, our instinct to discover should be directed by religion and good conduct. Therefore, instincts have specific functions outside of which they should be allowed to wander. And the directives of religion are here to elevate the instincts and to direct them toward their proper function.

That is why Allah Glorified is He says, ‘And do not spy on one another.’ (Yusuf: 105) meaning not to seek to discover other people’s private lives; for if we allowed someone to expose people’s secrets, we would have to let everyone else expose his secrets. And when Allah Glorified is He forbids man from delving into the personal lives of others; He has thereby protected him against others' delving into his.

Allah Glorified is He says, ‘When We let him taste Our Mercy and then withhold it....’ (Hud: 9) Notice that the word an-naz` (withholding) testifies to the fact that man is keenly protective over that which Allah Glorified is He bestows upon him like goodness, good health and happiness. When these are taken away from him, he resists. To take away implies the ‘confiscation’ of that which was once ‘possessed’.

That is why Allah Glorified is He says in the chapter of Al-`Imran, ‘Say, “Allah, holder of all control. You give control to whoever You will and remove it from whoever You will…"' (Al-'Imran: 26). It is as if he who is present in control is strongly holding on it.

And here Allah Glorified is He says, 'How desperate and ungrateful man becomes when We let him taste Our Mercy and then withhold it!' (Hud: 9) In the same chapter, the exception to the rule is mentioned, 'Not so those who are steadfast and do good deeds: they will have forgiveness and a great reward.' (Hud: 11) And we will give our commentary on this verse shortly.

Going back to those from whom Allah Glorified is He has taken His Mercy; those who are desperate and ingratitude, He says about them:

ٱلسَّيِّـَٔاتُ عَنِّيٓ ۚ إِنَّهُۥ لَفَرِحٌ فَخُورٌ ﴿١٠﴾

And if We let him taste mercy after some harm has touched him, he is sure to say, 'Misfortune has gone away from me.' He becomes exultant and boastful [10]
(The Quran, Hud: 10)

Here, it is harm that is the pre-existing condition, and the state of mercy and plenty is the condition that is introduced - the opposite of the first case, where the pre-existing condition was dominated by mercy, ease, and munificence. In the first scenario, the 'taking away' replaced the state of Mercy. In the second scenario, mercy and ease replaced the state of harm.

There is a difference between na`ma` (bliss) and ni`ma (a blessing), and between darra` (a state of affliction) and durr (an affliction). For durr is that which harms the soul, and na`ma` is that which gives the soul pleasure. However, pleasure or pain might exist in the soul, their effect might not necessarily be visible. However, if noticeable effects of pleasure become apparent in a person, then it is called na`ma` (bliss), and if the noticeable effects of pain become apparent in a person, then it is called darra' (a state of affliction). So Allah Glorified is He says, 'And if We let him taste mercy after some harm has touched him, he is sure to say, "Misfortune has gone away from me."' (Hud: 10) He who utters this statement does not realise that it is Allah Glorified is He who has taken misfortune away; for misfortune does not go away on its own accord. If it were a believer, he would say, ‘Allah has taken my misfortune away.’ But he who uttered the statement quoted in the verse is not a believer; and that is why he sinks into false happiness and baseless conceit. Allah Glorified is He describes him as, ‘He becomes exultant and boastful.’ (Hud: 10) Overjoyed at such blessed gifts, it is as if he forgot about He who bestowed the gifts and removed the misfortune.

As for pride, we know that it consists of flaunting one’s own qualities; thus, you might find a person touting his virtues and qualities to another person who lacks them. And we know that in society there are certain distinguished people; however, the morals of faith require us not to flaunt our individual qualities. That is why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘I am the master of the children of Adam on the Day of Judgment, and I am not boasting.’(1) During one of the battles we find him saying, ‘I am the Prophet, and there is no lie about it; I am the son of `Abd Al-Muttalib.’(2)

In fact, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was forced to utter such a statement because the disbelievers in that battle had thought that they had him and his companions surrounded and that he would try to flee. However, he bravely announced, ‘I am the Prophet, and there is no lie about it; I am the son of `Abdul Muttalib.’ Indeed, among the ranks of the Muslims, he was the closest vis-à-vis the disbelieving enemy on the battlefield.

We find that in sports, for example, among a group of wrestlers or competitors, there will be an individual who will bellow mightily such that he raises the morale of his own side and intimidates his opponent.

A man who is prideful is in effect oblivious of He who bestows those very qualities of which he is proud. And had he been conscious of the majesty of the Bestower, he would show humbleness towards Him. And if the vision of he who is arrogant and boastful would be turned towards Allah, he would shrivel up in His presence, and would attribute everything he had to the Bestower. An example of this in the Quran is when Allah Glorified is He quotes the companion of Musa (Moses) peace be upon them as saying, ‘I did not do [these things] of my own accord.’ (Hud: 10) Such is the attitude of the modest worshiper.

(1) Narrated by Muslim

(2) Narrated by Al-Bukhari and Muslim

As for the prideful and those who are oblivious of Allah Glorified is He the Quran portrayed their attitude in the following quote from Qarun, ‘This wealth was given to me on account of the knowledge I possess.’ (al-Qasas: 78) His fate was, as Allah Glorified is He says, ‘We caused the earth to swallow him and his home.’ (al-Qasas: 81)

That is why we have insisted that one should cherish every blessing that one has by saying, ‘In the Name of Allah, this is Allah’s will’ so that you might realise that this blessing did not come to you as a result of your own efforts only, but that it primarily came to you because of the will of Allah Glorified is He. And if you come to realize this truly, then the Bestower will safeguard for you those blessings which you have. On the other hand, when you forget about the Bestower, He will not safeguard for you those blessings.

Notice that Allah Glorified is He has not prohibited that joy that emanates from the expanded breast nor that delight in His blessings. On the contrary, He commands us to display such joy when He says, ‘Say [Prophet], “In Allah’s Grace and Mercy let them rejoice....”’ (Yunus: 58) However, Allah Glorified is He commands the believer not to express joy over the most trivial of things, lest he become one the gloating people whom Allah Glorified is He dispraises.

Then Allah Glorified is He says:

إِلَّا ٱلَّذِينَ صَبَرُواْ وَعَمِلُواْ ٱلصَّٰلِحَٰتِ أُوْلَٰٓئِكَ
لَهُم مَّغْفِرَةٌ وَأَجْرٌ كَبِيرٌ ﴿١١﴾

Not so those who are steadfast and do good deeds: they will have forgiveness and a great reward [11] (The Quran, Hud: 11)

Here, the word sabaru (those who are steadfast) corresponds with the two orders that came before in the two previous verses; for there is a taking away of mercy, and there is also bestowing of mercy after some harms, and both situations call for steadfastness; for each of us will go through predestined events, and must be patient and have faith in the wisdom of the Omnipotent Glorified is He.

Allah Glorified is He begins this verse with making an exception for He says, ‘Not so those who are steadfast....’ (Hud: 11) Were it not for Allah Glorified is He making this exception, all human beings would fall under the verdict of the previous two verses, that is, despair and disbelief, or prideful joy devoid of any acknowledgement of the Bestower of blessings.

This exception to the rule comes as a reassurance for those who would endure patiently the hardships that might befall them in their struggle to spread Allah's Message or those who would endure adversity in their personal lives which is not caused by the disbelievers; rather, such adversity is the predestination of the Almighty, the All Knowing. They might also endure hardships caused by their fellow believers.

Therefore, patience means to curb one's ego so as to accept the adversity which Allah Glorified is He puts before us. The adversity comes from different sources: Sometimes it befalls, not from some external antagonist, but from within, such as when one falls sick. Often, however, it is other human beings who test our patience such as when someone steals something from you, or when someone wrongs you. In such cases, you can become fully busy with a burning desire for revenge, for getting back at this person; this can be even more frustrating than those cases where there is no external opponent to blame, such as when one falls ill. Where there is a desire for revenge, patience that is required in such cases differs from that required when there is no external foe.

Thus, Allah presents to us how to adapt our patience according to these different circumstances. Luqman, for instance, tells his son, '...bear anything that happens to you steadfastly: these are things to be aspired to.' (Luqman: 17) Elsewhere, Allah Glorified is He says, 'Though if a person is patient and forgives, this is one of the greatest things.' (ash-Shura: 43) The Arabic phraseology of this verse has the function of firmly asserting that such a situation requires a strong will; for there is an antagonist who is drawing my ire in that case. At some point, I might run into the person who hit me, or insulted me, or robbed me or abused me verbally - the situation requires patience, strength of will.

As for when there is no external enemy, Allah Glorified is He simply says, '...bear anything that happens to you steadfastly.' (Luqman: 17) However, Allah Glorified is He added the letter lam in the other verse to emphasise the need for forbearance and forgiveness when there is an enemy. So, He says, 'Though if a person is patient and forgives, this is one of the greatest things.'

(ash-Shura: 43) These, then, are the exception - the patient ones, in all their different situations. And here Allah says, ‘Not so those who are steadfast and do good deeds...’ (Hud: 11) So long as we are discussing patience, we must point out that this virtue is required when one has been harmed. However, beware of letting harm—that has touched you by an adversary who shares your faith, or by one who does not share your faith — distract you from your religious duties to Allah Glorified is He; for the virtue of patience does not mean simply keeping your anger inside and tormenting yourself such that all the suppressed anger prevents you from performing your normal functions in life. Allah Glorified is He in fact permits you to get rid of your bitterness and resentment through adhering to faith which alleviates some of the anger.

In order to take the sting out of one’s anger, Allah Glorified is He permits you to retaliate against he who has harmed you by harming him in like; for Allah Glorified is He does not wish that you remain in such a state of fierce anger and suppression that it prevents you from doing your work; rather, He wishes that you devote yourself fully to performing your duties. That is why Allah Glorified is He asks of you nothing less than justice when He says, ‘So if anyone commits aggression against you, attack him as he attacked you...’ (al-Baqara: 194). There are some, however, who are capable of controlling their anger, hence Allah Glorified is He says, ‘Those who restrain their anger...’ (Al-‘Imran: 134). The meaning of kazhm al-ghaish (restraining anger) is that, even though one feels angry, one does not react vindictively. Just as one would say, ‘I restrained the water bag’, for if the water bearer does not restrain the water bag, the water would splash out, thus, he restrains the water bag to keep the water contained. Though containing one’s rage can be an estimable virtue, it is not always a positive thing; especially if there is still much anger still raging inside; thus, there is yet a loftier way of dealing with anger, and it is presented in Allah's Words, ‘Those who pardon people...’ (Al-‘Imran: 134) meaning that you expel anger from your heart and forgive.

Thus, you are faced with three options: You repay harm done to you in kind. This option is merely theoretical; for if someone slaps you in the face, how can you gauge the exact amount of pain to inflict when you slap him in return? When seeking exact revenge, anger is a poor judge; anger is unable to fairly gauge how much pain to inflict in return, and so fair justice will not be served. In this case, therefore, patience is a better alternative; for as Allah Glorified is He says, '...but it is best to bear steadfastly.' (Al-'Imran: 134) For if you put too much power in your counter-blow, you would then be the aggressor.

Let us recall Shakespeare's play 'The Merchant of Venice' where the main character is this Jewish merchant who lends out money to a man. Now, part of the agreement stipulated was that the Jewish merchant would cut out a pound of the borrower's flesh, if the latter was late in his repayment. The borrower was indeed late in his repayment, and the Jewish merchant wanted to cut out a pound of the borrower's flesh. The case was brought to a judge—a very wise man—who wanted to issue a ruling that was equitable and just. So the judge said, 'You are justified in taking a pound of this man's flesh; bring forth the knife, and cut out one pound of flesh, no more, no less; for if you cut out more than one pound of flesh we shall cut out the difference from your own flesh and with the same knife; and if you cut out less than one pound of flesh, we will also cut out the difference from your own flesh—as punishment.' The Jewish merchant hesitated because no butcher can steady his hand so much as to cut out a piece of meat weighing exactly one pound; rather, he sometimes cuts out a little more than the exact weight, and other times he cuts out a little less than the exact weight, then he adds a little or takes off a little according to the case. So, the Jewish merchant withdrew his case and dropped the charge; what prompted him to do this was his inability to exact a fair revenge. Had he been able to temper his feelings a little, the situation would have not reached such a verdict.

The True Lord Glorified is He encourages us to return harm done to us in in the same way, and if we wish to elevate ourselves, then let us contain our anger. If we wish to elevate ourselves further, then let us expel anger from the heart and let us be among those who forgive; that we may earn Allah's good pleasure; for Allah Glorified is He says, '…who restrain their anger and pardon people— Allah loves those who do good.' (Al-'Imran: 134) Through such acts, the believer rises by adhering to Allah's path which encourages the one who has been harmed to be the doer of good. When you try to explain Allah's love for those who do good deeds—whether from a philosophical, logical or economic point of view—you will find that it is a sound argument, and Allah Glorified is He says, '…let them pardon and forgive. Do you not wish that Allah should forgive you? Allah is most forgiving and merciful.' (an-Nur: 22)

So, if your brother in the faith wrongs you, you can either retaliate in kind, suppress your anger or rise to the level of forgiveness; in doing so, you join the ranks of those who do good; for, if you had committed a sin, then, learned that Allah Glorified is He intends to forgive you for it, would you not feel joy? Therefore, as long as you want Allah to forgive sins that you have committed against Him, why then would you not forgive the sin that your brother in the faith has committed against you?

The True Lord Glorified is He says, '…Do you not wish that Allah should forgive you?' (an-Nur: 22) Here, the True Lord addresses the human soul; for a servant who forgives the wrong deed of a brother in faith towards him, he will be credited a good deed. Forgiveness earns its author significant credit with Allah Glorified is He; for the servant who forgives, shall earn the forgiveness of Allah because you refrain from punishing and retribution for Allah's sake, for comfort lies in submission to Allah.

If you were to take revenge on those who have harmed you, your revenge would be proportional to your strength. However, if you leave the matter to the strength of Allah Glorified is He then, your revenge would be much more powerful as you are leaving it to the Power of all powers. Thus; he who forgives a wrongdoer, earns a lofty rank because he brought Allah Glorified is He to his side. Some ask: 'how can religion ask people to show kindness to those who wrong them?' Rationalizing this query by saying that such behaviour goes against human nature, We would reply: showing kindness to a wrongdoer is the most supreme of behaviours, and it is not something that is obligatory for the True Lord Glorified is He has permitted that we retaliate in kind to an aggression committed against us; at the same time, Allah also encourages the believer to restrain his anger, or even to ascend to the commendable heights of forgiveness and kindness. All of these correspond to degrees of certitude and faith in Allah Glorified is He.

Take yourself, for example—and with Allah is the highest example—if you want to apply this principle to yourself when one of your children has wronged another, your heart, your feelings and your sympathy inclines towards the child that was wronged.

He who asks: how can the law require that I show kindness towards he who wrongs me? We would say to him: remember what Al-Hasan al-Basri(1) Allah be pleased with him once said, ‘Should I not show kindness towards he who Allah has placed by my side?’ If all those who know this principle in theory put it into practice with certitude and sincerity, life will become an earthly paradise, where forgiveness is swift, intimacy between people dominates, and love becomes its creed.

In the verse which we are discussing, the True Lord Glorified is He says, ‘…Not so those who are steadfast and do good deeds: they will have forgiveness and a great reward.’ (Hud: 11) If one were to ask: why do they earn forgiveness? We say: because they were patient and forgave; that is why Allah Glorified is He grant them His forgiveness because they endured abuse patiently, and forgave those who committed the abuse, so Allah Glorified is He cannot but reward them, not only with forgiveness, but also with great credit as well.

Then Allah Glorified is He says:

فَلَعَلَّكَ تَارِكٌۢ بَعۡضَ مَا يُوحَىٰٓ إِلَيۡكَ وَضَآئِقُۢ بِهِۦ صَدۡرُكَ أَن يَقُولُواْ لَوۡلَآ أُنزِلَ
عَلَيۡهِ كَنزٌ أَوۡ جَآءَ مَعَهُۥ مَلَكٌۚ إِنَّمَآ أَنتَ نَذِيرٞۚ وَٱللَّهُ عَلَىٰ كُلِّ شَيۡءٖ وَكِيلٌ ﴿١٢﴾

So [Prophet] are you going to abandon some part of what is revealed to you, and let your heart be oppressed by it, because they say, ‘Why is no treasure sent down to him? Why has no angel come with him?’? You are only there to warn; it is God who is in charge of everything [12] (The Quran, Hud: 12)

Here, the True Lord Glorified is He uses a rhetorical question when He says, ‘So [Prophet] are you going to abandon some part of what is revealed to you….' (Hud: 12) This is a rhetorical question that implies negation. For instance—and Allah has the highest example—you might want to persuade your son to work hard at school, so you would tell him: 'perhaps you are comforted by your classmate's failure?' This is a rhetorical question that implies negation, and at the heart of this rhetorical question is a plea. Here, the One Who makes the plea is Allah Glorified is He Who has trusted Muhammad peace be upon him with His Message.

(1) Al-Hassan ibn Yasar Al-Basri, Abu Sa`id, Tabe`i, was the Imam of the people of Basra, an eminent religious authority in his time, and a learned religious scholar, extremely pious and ascetic. He was born in Medina in the year 21 of the Islamic calendar and grew up under the wing of `Ali ibn Abu Ṭalib. He used to counsel the political rulers of the time, advising them on what to do and what not to do; he lived in Basra and died there in the year 110 of the Islamic calendar at the age of ninety.

Thus, the True Lord's statement means to not let your breast (heart) be distressed—O Prophet—by these obstinate and intransigent people who want to dislodge you from your station which you have always insisted strongly on, for you have constantly insisted that you are human, and that which they demand of you ought to have been with the station which you have ascribed to yourself for you have never told them that you were a god wherefore they would ask of you to bend the laws of nature; rather, you are a conveyor of Allah's message.

Let not your breast become distressed such that you intentionally withhold certain parts of that which was revealed to you because the Message represents an incriminating proof against them. Though you might feel distress when they deny the verses, nevertheless, so long as you convey the entire message that you have been charged with, know that Allah Glorified is He will increase their punishment in proportion to that which they have denied.

The word da`iq (distressed) is the active present principle. It means that he who is thus described will not remain in such a state permanently, but it is just a phase among others. For example, we can say: 'so and so is najir' which means he is capable of performing some carpentry work, but that his capacities in this craft are limited and he is not a professional. The word da`iq is also indicative of how much obdurate denial the disbelievers directed at the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and how superhuman in nature were the demands they imposed upon him; for in this instance they had asked that treasure would descend upon him.

The True Lord Glorified is He in fact alludes to this issue of a treasure to illustrate what their values in life are; their most supreme value centres on money; that is why they had wished that the Quran would have descended on someone who is rich, as the following verse from the True Lord Glorified is He confirms, ‘and they said, “Why was this Quran not sent down to a distinguished man, from either of the two cities?”’ (az-Zukhruf: 31)

Therefore, their objection was not with the Quran, but with he to whom the Quran was revealed. In the verse which we are considering, they ask that a treasure be brought down to him thinking as they did that wealth and riches would distract him and his followers from spreading the message of Allah Glorified is He. They had forgotten that they had tempted him with worldly wealth once before. Thereby, the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him has made it clear to whosoever makes him such offers that he is uninterested in treasure. The Arabic word al-kanz (treasure) linguistically—refers to that which is densely rich; if cattle, for instance, were full of meat one would say that they are muktaniza lahma. But the word al-kanz designates by which the price and value and everything else is determined, namely gold. Therefore, the True Lord Glorified is He says, ‘…tell those who hoard gold and silver instead of giving in Allah's cause that they will have a grievous punishment.’ (at-Tawba: 34)

We know that there is a difference between direct sustenance and indirect sustenance. Indirect sustenance is that, which you benefit from in terms of food or drink, and there is something that brings to you the indirect sustenance; however, it cannot take the place of direct, continuous sustenance.

If a man in the desert has tons over tons of gold but cannot find any food, then what good does all the gold do him? If someone were to offer him a loaf of bread and a drink of water in return for all his gold he would agree immediately. In this case, the assessment of values does not equate a ton of gold to a loaf of bread and a sip of water; rather, a ton of gold is equivalent to basic survival and vital needs.

Thus, kanz (treasure) means a hoarded amount of gold and silver; in our own Egyptian dialect, we would say: ‘nuqud taht al-balata’ (money (stashed) under the floor tile) which corresponds to the phrase ‘money under the mattresses’. But, if the owner of this currency gives away a portion of what he owns for the sake of Allah Glorified is He, then it is not considered a kanz because the condition of the kanz is that it is hidden; and the portion of stored wealth that is given away as a poor-due lets the society know that the owner is not hiding away what he has.

Kanz only applies to that which has been densely accumulated, where Allah's share has not been disbursed. For, if he disburses the portion that belongs to Allah Glorified is He, then its kanzya status is lifted because the True Lord Glorified is He says, '…tell those who hoard gold and silver instead of giving in Allah's cause that they will have a grievous punishment.' (at-Tawba: 34)

From these sacred words of Allah, we can gather that he who possesses money and from that money gives Allah His due, his wealth may not be considered a kanz. When, on the surface of things, the giving away of the poor-due appears to cause one's net worth to diminish, this drives the person to better invest his money such that he does not lose it over the course of forty years, for the poor-due is 2.5% of one year's total cumulative wealth; which is why he who possesses wealth invests and grows his money, whereby he also creates an opportunity for unemployed people as well as provides for those incapable of work, and thus unemployment levels fall.

You might happen to be the owner of such wealth, but you are ignorant of the secrets of commerce and industry, so you partner up with those who are savvy in commerce and industry, thereby opening the doors of opportunity to those who seek work and to those who are capable of managing business operations, but do not have the money.

Thus, the True Lord Glorified is He has willed that, through the consolidation of complementary skill-sets, growth and development come about. He has also willed that when capital becomes integrated with labour, economic activity ensues. When the owners of capital and the workers come to an understanding, they share in the profits according to supply and demand because every exchange involves this principle—supply and demand—. The cooperation between capital and labour produces merchandise, and the merchandise has no particular inclination itself, but the party who owns the merchandise and the party who buys the merchandise have their separate incentives. The party who owns the merchandise seeks to sell it at the highest possible price, and the party who wants to buy the merchandise wants it for the lowest possible price; the merchandise itself, however, has no particular inclination one way or the other.

So long as merchandise is controlled by the law of supply and demand, it represents an economic equilibrium. For instance, if you saw meat on sale for a high price, those for whom the meat is beyond their budget would be swayed by their self-pride and would say: eating meat is bad for my health. Then they would turn to foods that are within their budget; because it is the merchandise that has control. However, if someone were to intervene in the pricing of the merchandise, in an attempt to hoard the profits and not withhold the capital from the markets for investment, then the power of he who has capital disappears, and he who is talented finds no outlet for his skills.

The True Lord Glorified is He says in this verse, '…Why is no treasure sent down to him? Why has no angel come with him?' (Hud: 12) The word lawla indicates a wish, and the disbelievers had first wished for a treasure then they asked that an angel comes with the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him. How would this angel descend (to earth)? Would he appear in his actual form or would he take on the shape of a man? The True Lord Glorified is He says, 'Indeed, if We had sent an angel as messenger, We would still have sent him in the form of a man….' (al-An'am: 9) If he were to appear in the shape of a man, then how would they ascertain his angelic origins? This is a senseless demand. Also, the True Lord says, 'The only thing that kept these people from believing, when guidance came to them, was that they said, "How could Allah have sent a human being as a messenger?" Say, "If there were angels walking about on Earth, feeling at home, We would have sent them an angel from Heaven as a messenger."' (al-Isra': 94-95) Had the True Lord Glorified is He sent down an angel, this angel would take on human characteristics, same as their own. He would meet them and talk with them, and they would not be able to distinguish him from among the rest of the people; thus, they would deny him as well.

In the verse which we are presently studying the True Lord Glorified is He says in response to their request, 'You are only there to warn.' (Hud: 12) These words are addressed from Allah Glorified is He to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to advise him on how to respond to them. The Prophet, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had already told them himself that he was a warner and a conveyor of good tidings, and that previous nations had asked for proof (from their prophets), and when the proof that they asked for was furnished they insisted on denying, so, the True Lord Glorified is He punished them severely.

Obstinacy of disbelief is not likely to be converted into faith merely because of the ascendance of clear signs. The True Lord Himself says, ‘Nothing prevents Us from sending miraculous signs except the fact that previous peoples denied them…’ (al-Isra’: 59) meaning that Allah Glorified is He has not sent down the miraculous signs which the disbelievers asked for because the people of previous nations had denied them; that is why the True Lord Glorified is He informs the Prophet, ‘You are only there to warn.’ (Hud: 12) The Prophet, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had received the Quran as part of his function as a warner and bearer of good tidings.

The True Lord concludes the verse by saying, ‘…it is Allah who is in charge of everything.’ (Hud: 12) When you put someone in charge of your business affairs—the buying, selling and transporting of goods—and you monitor his performance and his activities closely, then if you like his performance, you will keep him in charge, and if you do not like his performance, you repeal the authority that you put in him. Such is how things go in the human world. However, when Allah invests authority with one of his agents on earth, it is forever, and it does not matter if the disbelievers turn away The True Lord Glorified is He continues:

أَمْ يَقُولُونَ ٱفْتَرَىٰهُ ۖ قُلْ فَأْتُوا۟ بِعَشْرِ سُوَرٍ مِّثْلِهِۦ مُفْتَرَيَـٰتٍ وَٱدْعُوا۟
مَنِ ٱسْتَطَعْتُم مِّن دُونِ ٱللَّهِ إِن كُنتُمْ صَـٰدِقِينَ ﴿١٣﴾

If they say, ‘He has invented it himself,’ say, ‘Then produce ten invented suras like it, and call in whoever you can beside God, if you are truthful’[13] (The Quran, Hud: 13)

In the words of the True Lord Glorified is He, we can discern another aspect of the disbeliever’s opposition to the message of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. They claimed Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him invented this Quran. Al-iftira`a is intentional lying, providing information that is contradictory to actual facts.

If in reality the matter was negative, but you affirmed it is positive, you thereby contradicted the facts; for instance, if there existed some sort of evil, then you said, ‘there exists no evil in this place’, the reality is positive, whereas what you said was denial and what you had said was a negation.

Alternatively, reality might be negative and the statement might be positive; this is also a form of lying. To be truthful is when the given statement agrees with the existential reality; but if the statement is in conflict with the existential reality, then the statement is a lie.

There are two types of lies: intentional and unintentional. Lying is the violation of reality and a fabrication of a false reality. One could say: kharaqta ash-shay`a meaning you distorted and manipulated reality. The True Lord says, '…and they attribute sons and daughters to Him without any true knowledge....' (al-An'am: 100) The True Lord also says, '…what you invent is nothing but falsehood....' (al-'Ankabut: 17) meaning that you refer to things that do not exist when, in fact, it is from yourselves. Allah Glorified is He also says, '…they are merely guessing.' (al-An'am: 116)

When they slanderously accused Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him of concocting the Quran himself, the response that came simply from the Quran; you—O Arabs—are people of eloquence and have the gift of speech; and since the Quran manifests that same type of linguistic genius and since you claim that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him has fabricated the Quran and that its verses are not the words of Allah, why cannot you come up with something to match it? So long as fabrication is an easy matter for you, why cannot you come up with just ten verses similar to those of the Quran? You have lived alongside Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him since his childhood, and you know that he had no special gift for poetry, nor was he exceptionally eloquent, in fact, he had no connections whatsoever with your language games; he never engaged in any poetry or speech writing, and he never participated in any of the poetry contests which used to take place in famous markets such as `Ukaz during the pre-Islamic era.

If it is possible that someone with no training or experience in the art of rhetoric can come up with such a feat as the Quran, then why cannot you—who are capable of and familiar with the art of rhetoric—come up with a few verses that match the eloquence of the Quran; if Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him has fabricated the Quran why do you stand incapable of fabricating a literary work to match? You are familiar with the competitions that are held at the poetry (eloquence) gatherings: when a poet stands up and delivers a poem, another poet tries to outdo him with a better poem than the first, then a judging committee analyses the merits and faults of each poem.

In the verse, Allah answers the disbelievers' query as follows, If Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had fabricated the Quran —as you claim—then where have you been? Have you not known him since he was a child? That is why the True Lord orders the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him to say, 'Say, "If Allah had so willed, I would not have recited it to you, nor would He have made it known to you. I lived a whole lifetime among you before it came to me; how can you not use your reason?"' (Yunus: 16)

Had Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him ever uttered a word of poetry, given a speech or competed in `Ukaz(1), Al-Marbad, Dhi al-Majaz (2) or Al-Majna(3)—the main venues for art of rhetoric festivals in those days? He never frequented those places as a competitor. Were those not, who competed in those festivals, more capable than he was at forging counterfeit literature? Was Imru`u Al-Qayss not a prodigious poet? He was indeed, and he had peers who would rival him as well. There was also `Amr ibn Kalthum, Al-Harith ibn Hilza Al-Yashkuri, and others would follow down through the centuries like Jarir and Al-Farazdaq.

You (the disbelievers mentioned in the verse) are well aware of those who compose poetry and all their peers who compete with them in eloquence. So, bring forth someone who can forge verses akin to the Quran, and if you cannot, this means that the Quran is no human fabrication. That is why the True Lord Glorified is He says, 'If they say, He has invented it himself, say, "Then produce ten invented chapters like it…."' (Hud: 13)

Were they able to accept the challenge of bringing forth ten chapters comparable to the Holy Quran in its enthralling, intelligible speech, its eloquence, and its depth of meaning? The True lord, first, challenged them to bring forth something that matches the Quran, and they could not; then He challenged them to bring forth ten chapters, and they could not, and He challenged them to bring forth one surah (chapter) finally, He challenged them to bring forth a mere few sentences that were comparable to the Quran, and they could not.

(1) Suq `Ukaz: a market not far from Mecca where the Arabs got together every year where each tribe would show off and take pride in its finest poets. Ta`akuz qawm: they competed and contended with each other. Lissan al-`Arab- `Akz.

(2) Dhi al-Majaz: a location in Mina —coinciding, it said, with `Arafat—where a market used to be held in pre-Islamic times. Al-Lissan –under jwz.

(3) Al-Majna: a place a few miles from Mecca, the location of one of the Arabs' markets

Then, the True Lord proceeded to the next phase of the challenge—that they bring forth ten chapters. The True Lord Glorified is He did not stop there: he allowed them to consult with however many eloquent poets and writers they wished: '…and call in whoever you can beside Allah, if you are truthful.' (Hud: 13) meaning summon all your partners and all men of eloquence—other than Allah.

The True Lord, thus, abrogates the possibility of their calling upon Him so that they do not say: we will call on Allah to aid us in this task; that is why the True Lord asks them to count Him out, '…and call in whoever you can beside Allah, if you are truthful.' (Hud: 13) meaning if what you say is indeed true, and Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did invent the Quran, and since you are fluent in the art of rhetoric, then compose ten chapters like the Quran—you and the partners you manage to bring to your cause.

That is why, in the next verse, the True Lord wisely responds:

فَإِلَّمْ يَسْتَجِيبُوا۟ لَكُمْ فَٱعْلَمُوٓا۟ أَنَّمَآ أُنزِلَ بِعِلْمِ ٱللَّهِ
وَأَن لَّآ إِلَٰهَ إِلَّا هُوَ ۖ فَهَلْ أَنتُم مُّسْلِمُونَ ﴿١٤﴾

If they do not answer you, then you will all know that it is sent down containing knowledge from God, and that there is no god but Him. Then will you submit to Him? [14] (The Quran, Hud: 14)

This speech is addressed to those who had alleged that the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had invented the Quran, or it could also be addressed to the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him for the True Lord says in the previous verse, 'Then produce ten invented chapters like it, and call in whoever you can beside Allah, if you are truthful.' (Hud: 13) Then He continues in the next verse, 'If they do not answer you…' (Hud: 14), meaning if they cannot stand up to the challenge, then they should know and be certain—that the Quran is from Allah which was testified by the opponents from amongst them (through their inability to challenge it).

So, why does the True Lord shift His approach by saying, ‘If they do not answer you…’ (Hud: 14)? ‘They’ refers to whom the opponents may be calling to their aid as well as the opponents themselves which the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him has challenged. Then, Allah says, ‘…then you will all know that it is sent down containing knowledge from Allah….’ (Hud: 14) The True Lord says this because Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him has been asked to convey the Message, and what Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him conveyed to the believers, the believers are required to convey, even if the disbelievers do not respond to the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him or to the believers, and even if no one ever stands up to support the disbelievers in their claim that the Quran is the invention of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

It is likely that these poetic and linguistic prodigies are intimidated by the challenge because they realized that the Quran was the truth; and had they tried to come up with something similar, they would have failed. Therefore, all you who do not believe in the Quran, know that, ‘it is sent down containing knowledge from Allah.’ (Hud: 14)

In the verse Allah addresses, for once, His Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and his people. That is why the True Lord Glorified is He switches from the singular pronoun (say, O Muhammad- in the previous verse) to the plural pronoun (know – in this verse) when He says, ‘If they do not answer you, then you will all know that it is sent down containing knowledge from Allah….’ (Hud: 14) Here the word ‘know’ is in the plural form meaning, be even more certain O believers that the Quran has been bestowed from Allah.

As we know, knowledge has three levels: the knowledge of certainty, the eye of certainty and the truth of certainty.

However, the verse can also be seen as addressing the disbelievers whom the Quran had asked to seek the help of whomever they can in their efforts to subvert the Quran: ‘...then you will all know that it is sent down containing knowledge from Allah….’ (Hud: 14)

The highest orders of knowledge are contained with the True Lord Glorified is He who has known all knowledge since pre-eternity. We are not privy to such knowledge. In any case, our knowledge changes depending on that Allah Glorified is He allows us to know. For you might have knowledge of one thing but be ignorant of many other things. Or you might have knowledge of one thing but many other things have slipped your mind.

That is why you find doctors and the folk who work in the field of precision industry and other researchers and scientists—you find that these people are constantly correcting each other when it comes to the vast quantities of knowledge that they deal with. So, when a sick person goes to visit a doctor, and the patient finds that he does not respond well to the medicine which this doctor has prescribed, he will go and see a second doctor who will rectify the first doctor's prescription and recommend a different medicine. Then, if the patient once more does not respond well to the medicine, then, in this case, a physicians' committee will convene and decide on which treatments work and which do not work for the patient. Thus, each doctor will redress the other doctor's medical opinion until they reach a decision. Every doctor who redress the other's opinion is increasingly wiser and more knowledgeable because the first doctor had prescribed a remedy that did not sit well with the patient—the first doctor made this judgment based on what knowledge he had, and so it is for the rest of the researchers and scientists. So, for every knowledgeable person there is one who is wiser and more knowledgeable. The second doctor corrects the first and so on and so forth….

But, is there anyone who can correct Allah's Knowledge? There is not. Therefore, as long as the Quran is sent down containing knowledge from Allah, then no human knowledge can ever come forth with anything comparable, '…then you will all know that it is sent down containing knowledge from Allah…' (Hud: 14). Furthermore, the True Lord Glorified is He declares that there is no other deity save Him; so that no one should claim that there is any other deity save Allah. Allah mentions this because the entire Quran was revealed within the framework: 'that there is no deity but Him' (Hud: 14). So long as it is the True Lord who makes this ruling, then let us trust it.

An example of this is the True Lord's ruling toward Abu Lahab(1) and his wife(2)—that they shall enter Hellfire. Would it have been possible for Abu Lahab to announce his faith even if it were pure hypocrisy? Of course not, because He Who created Abu Lahab knows how he behaves. That is why we find that in the next chapter after the chapter of al-Masad(3)—which condemns Abu Lahab to hellfire—The True Lord Glorified is He says, 'Say…"He is Allah the One"…' (al-Ikhlas: 1), meaning so long as the True Lord Glorified is He has issued the decree that Abu Lahab and his wife shall enter Hellfire, no one will be able to alter His ruling, for there is no deity but Him. The True Lord concludes the holy verse by saying, 'Then will you submit to Him?' (Hud: 14) Questions are usually posed as a means to elicit a response so as to understand something, but this is not always the case. This question is posed by a power that would be capable of imposing Islam on those who are thus questioned. Allah has willed that this question be posed by his Messenger peace and blessings be upon him so that he might elicit a response; and had the questioner not been certain that Islam is the only reality, he would not have posed the question; and had the questioner not been certain that the only possible response is that the listener become Muslim, he would not have taken the answer to the question as a proof against the listener.

The Creator Glorified is He is the One Who says these words—and to Allah belongs the highest example—and He Himself is immune from any comparison—you might listen to a person giving a detailed account of something, then asks you: Am I not right in what I have told you? The reason he asks this question is because he is sure that you will tell him: yes, you are right.

When we look at the verse which prohibits intoxicants and games of chance—for example—we find that the True Lord says, 'With intoxicants and gambling, Satan seeks only to incite enmity and hatred among you, and to stop you remembering Allah and prayer. Will you not give them up?'(4) (al-Ma'ida: 91)

(1) Abu Lahab is one of the Prophet's uncles.

(2) His wife was one of Quraysh's eminent ladies; she was Um Jamil; her name was Arwa bint Harb ibn Umyya and was the sister of Abu Sufyan. She was her husband's accomplice in his disbelief, ingratitude, and intransigence.

(3) Masad al-habl Masada: he twisted the rope into strands. Al-Qamus Al-qawim.

(4) See Ibn Kathir's Tafsir 2/95.

It is as if the rhetorical question represents a command: desist from the consumption of wine and gambling, and be ashamed of engaging in such activities. Therefore, the True Lord Glorified is He says at the end of the blessed verse, '…Then will you submit to Him?' (Hud: 14) meaning: surrender yourselves, and stop your importunity; and refrain from saying that the Quran is fabricated by Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him; The Quran is from Allah and there is no deity but Him.

After that, the True Lord says:

If any desire [only] the life of this world with all its finery,
We shall repay them in full in this life for their deeds – they will be given no less [15] (The Quran, Hud: 15)

The True Lord says that the disbelievers said, '...Why is no treasure sent down to him?' (Hud: 12) In other words, they are preoccupied with the pleasures and extravagance of the life of this world. There are certain fundamentals which life requires, such as clothing for one's body, morsels to eat and a house where one takes shelter. Extravagance, on the other hand, is a different matter, for rather than covering one's body with modest clothing, a man will ask for smooth wool for winter and sleek silk for summer; and rather than asking for a humble abode to shelter him from cold or from heat, he asks for a castle. Regarding this issue, the True Lord Glorified is He says, 'The love of desirable things is made alluring for men— women, children, gold and silver treasures piled up high, horses with fine markings, livestock, and farmland….' (Al-'Imran: 14) All these things are part and parcel of the enjoyment of life in this world. The True Lord says, '…these may be the joys of this life, but Allah has the best place to return to.' (Al-'Imran: 14)

What does the word zeena signify (all its finery)? Its meaning is beauty or that which is made beautiful by the beautification of oneself; and there is a difference between inherent beauty and beauty that is the result of made-up or artificial beauty. When a woman—for example—wants to look nice she wears beautiful, flashy clothes, and adorns herself with lustrous gold, for it is the mineral that derives its value from the intense, eye-catching gleam. However, only a woman who feels insecure will overdo these things. As for the woman that is naturally beautiful, she refuses to beautify herself. That is why she is called al-ghaniyah meaning, she for whom cosmetics is unnecessary by virtue of her natural beauty, who does not need to hide her ears behind large earrings, nor does she need to hide her neck with a large necklace, nor does she try to hide her wrists with bracelets (1), and she refuses to cover up the natural beauty of her fingers with rings. When a woman overdoes all these adornments she gives off the opposite impression.

The example I am giving now might seem to be far-removed from the original topic, but at least it illustrates how when something is overdone it gives the opposite effect.

As Al-Mutanabbi (2) says, 'You are the perfume, when perfume touches your body -- And you wash the water, if water touches your body.' Here the poet is saying that if perfume touches such a person, it becomes perfumed itself; also, it is the water itself that becomes washed if it makes contact with this person. Likewise, a beautiful woman declines to beautify her chest with a necklace because her neck is more beautiful without it. Such types of women are dubbed ghanya (derived from ghina: needlessness) because their natural beauty has no need of enhancements.

They say that the beauty of city women is begotten from artificial powders. It is as if these powders are fixed to the face with the help of pastes, the type of pastes that are used to paint walls; it is as if every one of these women is applying these pastes to her face in order to cover up its jagged cracks. The instance these pastes start to run she is in discomfort, as her face turns into a sorry goulash of colours; hence, it is said that the beauty of city women is artificial and fabricated but Bedouin women's beauty is inherent, not acquired.

(2) Ahmad ibn Al-Hussin, a sagacious poet. He was born in Al-Kufa in a place called Kindah in the year 303 of the Islamic calendar and spent his formative years in the Levant. He claimed to be a prophet in a village called As-Sammawah between Al-Kufa and As-Sahm, which is why he is called Al-Mutanabbi. Then he renounced his claim after being imprisoned. He died in the year 354 of the Islamic calendar at the age of 52.

Therefore, az-zeena is the enhancement of something with something else, and that which is already good has no need of az-zeena.

So, the True Lord Glorified is He says, 'If any desire [only] the life of this world with all its finery, we shall repay them in full in this life for their deeds, and they therein will not be deprived.' (Hud: 15) This means that if you disbelieve in Allah Glorified is He, He will not cease to accord you with provisions and pleasures of life in this world; for He is the Lord, and it is He who has summoned you to existence, and He has made it obligatory upon Himself to provide for you whatever you desire in the way of life's provisions and pleasures because He is capable of making good on what He has promised.

Allah Glorified is He says, '…We shall repay them in full in this life for their deeds…' (Hud: 15) meaning that if they adhere to the basic principle of reaping what they sow, then the True Lord makes it obligatory upon Himself to grant full, undiminished remunerations for actions performed. In their life in this world they will not be cheated of their fair due, and whomsoever perfects an action shall collect the fruits of that action.

This bounteous statement brings up an important issue which concerns us currently, for there are some who say: these Muslims who testify that 'There is no deity but Allah, and Muhammad is His Messenger', and are steadfast in prayer, and who erect mosques—their civilization is backward and underdeveloped, while the disbelievers wallow in the luxuries of their advanced civilization. Our response is that the bestowals of Allah Glorified is He —as 'Lord'—are governed by worldly principles, for whosoever performs an action properly, he shall receive the worldly rewards of his labour, even if he is a disbeliever. However, he shall receive no credit in the life to come; because the True Lord says, 'and we shall turn to the deeds they have done and scatter them like dust.' (al-Furqan: 23)

The True Lord rewards the disbeliever who is good towards people with good in this world, rewards the disbeliever who is sincere with the sincerity of others towards him and rewards the disbelievers who extend a helping hand with assistance in return.

These are all works required by the religion, and even a disbeliever might perform them, then Allah Glorified is He will see that he is recompensed justly in this world. If he had performed them so that people would say: he performed such a work, or he was virtuous in that situation, then one could tell him: ‘you performed good deeds to win people’s approval, and indeed you have won their approval.’ So, if the disbelievers perform actions in this world to reap rewards in this world, the True Lord accords them the fruit of their actions.

It must be said to those who accuse the Muslims of being backward: The Muslims were in fact advanced in the early stages of their history, and they were masters when they applied the principles of their religion, outwardly and inwardly, in form and in content. Backwardness is not the imperative of Islam, nor is it its predetermined fate; rather, backwardness crept in because we abandoned the spirit of Islam and stopped applying its principles.

If we were to set up a comparison with the state of Europe during the time when the church was dominant, we would find that innovative intellectuals were punished and executed for their creativity. That period in Europe is called the dark ages. Then the crusades began, and Europe came to know the strength of Islam and Muslims—for they were repelled and their armies defeated. They then tried to shrug off the authority of the pope and the church. When they did that, they started to become more advanced as a civilization. Thus, when they turned their backs to the Pope’s authority, they became advanced, and we, when we ceased applying the teachings of Islam, became backward. Therefore, which of the two options is better? History shows that the Muslims were advanced when they took the teachings of Islam seriously, and they became backward when they abandoned them.

So, the criterion of worldly success is hard work, and whoever applies himself diligently and utilize the means—and is at the same time a believer—earns a goodly reward in this life and a goodly reward in the life to come; and he who is a disbeliever and applies himself earns a goodly reward in this life but not in the next.

The True Lord says, ‘But the deeds of those who disbelieve are like a mirage in a desert: the thirsty person thinks there will be water but, when he gets there, he finds only Allah, who pays him his account in full- Allah is swift in reckoning.’ (an-Nur: 39) Thus, the disbeliever will be shocked by the fact that Allah, whom he has denied, is true. The True Lord says, ‘the deeds of those who reject their Lord are like ashes that the wind blows furiously on a stormy day: they have no power over anything they have gained.’ (Ibrahim: 18) So, he who desires the world and its pleasures, the True Lord, Most High, remunerates him and will not in the least short change him when it comes to due rights. Hatim At-Ta’i—for instance—took on the virtue of generosity, and Antara took on the virtue of courage, and every man who puts in effort in his actions will reap his rewards, but the rewards of the Hereafter are for those who performed their works for the sake of Allah Glorified is He and who had faith in Him. Even those hypocrites who entered Islam and fought alongside the Muslims took their share of war booty, but they shall have no reward in the Hereafter. Hence, loyalty implies the existence of a binding contract, and as long as there is a binding contract that connects the worker to the work, and the worker perfects his work, he cannot but receive his full reward—full because any less would be to curtail what is rightfully his.

The True Lord Glorified is He says:

أُو۟لَـٰٓئِكَ ٱلَّذِينَ لَيْسَ لَهُمْ فِى ٱلْـَٔاخِرَةِ إِلَّا ٱلنَّارُ ۖ وَحَبِطَ مَا صَنَعُوا۟
فِيهَا وَبَـٰطِلٌ مَّا كَانُوا۟ يَعْمَلُونَ ﴿١٦﴾

But such people will have nothing in the Hereafter but the Fire: their work here will be fruitless and their deeds futile[16] (The Quran, Hud: 16)

Thus, hellfire is the resting-place of those who worked towards worldly goals and did not have faith in Allah, for they had received their due on earth, but all their works counted for nothing in the Hereafter. The word habita (is futile) is derived from al-habat which refers to the bloating of cattle when they have eaten unripe greens. In the countryside, it is said, ‘intafakhat al-bahima’ (the animals have become swollen) meaning that there are gases in their stomachs. The ignorant might take this to mean that they have fattened, but this bloating disappears when its real cause is removed. The works of the disbelievers are rendered futile in the Hereafter; for they are useless in the absence of faith.

The True Lord Glorified is He says after that:

أَفَمَن كَانَ عَلَىٰ بَيِّنَةٖ مِّن رَّبِّهِۦ وَيَتۡلُوهُ شَاهِدٞ مِّنۡهُ وَمِن قَبۡلِهِۦ كِتَٰبُ مُوسَىٰٓ إِمَامٗا
وَرَحۡمَةًۚ أُوْلَٰٓئِكَ يُؤۡمِنُونَ بِهِۦۚ وَمَن يَكۡفُرۡ بِهِۦ مِنَ ٱلۡأَحۡزَابِ فَٱلنَّارُ مَوۡعِدُهُۥۚ فَلَا تَكُ
فِي مِرۡيَةٖ مِّنۡهُۚ إِنَّهُ ٱلۡحَقُّ مِن رَّبِّكَ وَلَٰكِنَّ أَكۡثَرَ ٱلنَّاسِ لَا يُؤۡمِنُونَ ﴿١٧﴾

Can they be compared to those who have clear proof from their Lord, recited by a witness from Him, and before it the Book of Moses, as a guide and mercy? These people believe in it, whereas those groups that deny its truth are promised the Fire. So have no doubt about it [Prophet]: it is the Truth from your Lord, though most people do not believe so [17]
(The Quran, Hud: 17)

The word al-bayyina (have clear proof) denotes that the insight of flawless natural disposition which alerts man to the existence of the Necessary Being; it leads man to the realization that this beautifully designed cosmos must have been brought into existence by that Supreme Being. Thus, through pure, uncorrupted discernment, man is guided.

When the ancient Arabs would be crossing open deserts, and would come across animal droppings, and would also notice animal tracks, they would say, 'these droppings imply the presence of an animal that had recently left the place, and the tracks imply that the animal was moving. Then, what of the sky with its planets, the earth with its mountainous passes and the ocean with its waves, does all this then not testify to The Subtle, The Aware?' Thus, were the Arabs guided through the discernment of his primordial nature; it is the gift of Certainty from Allah.

Allah Glorified is He has instilled this natural disposition in every human being, and it was with this natural disposition that we all testified that He is our Lord fi `alam adh-dharr (primal covenant - in the world before creation).

In this regard, the True Lord says: '[Prophet], when your Lord took out the offspring from the loins of the Children of Adam and made them bear witness about themselves, He said, "Am I not your Lord?" and they replied, "Yes, we bear witness"…' (al-A'raf: 172). The pure, uncorrupted discernment springs from the primordial faith in Allah which is inherent in the hearts of all things.

Now pleasures and temptations might sully this primordial faith, and so man errs from Allah's path, and so Allah, out of mercy, sends down messengers to remind us of the primordial certainties we once held and to point us towards the underlying causes and deeper wisdom. This is so that the certainty of the prophets peace upon them might unite with our own primordial certainty. The True Lord shows us the way to arrive at religious certainty, for the created being might be ignorant of this, so Allah Glorified is He explains to us that this ignorance is an unnatural ignorance; for the pure, uncorrupted state that is our primordial nature shows us the way even before the existence of any messengers have to remind us of the higher power that governs the universe.

I have given this example before, where a man's plane crashes and maroons him in the desert, and he finds himself without water, food, company or shelter; then sleep overtakes him. When he wakes up he finds a sumptuous banquet with the most exquisite of foods and the finest of drinks. This person must utilize his faculty of thought and ask: who made all of this? In fact, he will ask himself this question before he proceeds to enjoy any of this food and drink, especially as there is no one around to tell him: 'you are my guest'. Therefore, he must use his faculty of thought.

The same applies to the man who finds himself in the realm of existence. None of Allah's creatures has ever claimed that it is he who brought all of this into existence, no one has claimed that it is he who created the heavens and the earth and no one has claimed that he has summoned all that is in the universe to the service of man.

It is necessary that, before taking pleasure in all of this, man should ask: who is it who made all of this for my benefit? If a human messenger tells him: I have come to solve this riddle for you, it is incumbent upon a human being to lend his full attention to the messenger; for he has come to address that concern that was on his mind.

It is out of Allah's Mercy for us that He did not ask of us to give it much thought from the beginning; for a long time, He left us without any obligations in this world, so that man might enjoy the many blessings of his Lord, and after that, when man reached full maturity, and without being forced, then the True Lord has charged him with the duties of faith.

Man must then ask: everything—no matter how small or insignificant—must have a maker, and the light bulb that illuminates a circle with a diameter of twenty meters, we know its maker, and we have studied the factories which produced it, the bodies of knowledge that were applied to its production and the materials of which it was made. Do we not try to know how old this sun of ours is, and who has made it so that it does not need any maintenance nor fuel nor extra parts, and illuminates half the globe?

This is an issue that we should have researched, so that we might see how wide are the horizons of this certainty, an illuminating certainty and one of strength and primordial nature which Allah bestows upon the thinking human beings so that he might be led to the realization that behind this universe there is an orchestrating Creator.

So, if another human being like him comes to him and says: Allah is the creator of the world, and Allah Glorified is He asks of you such and such, we should, quite obviously, listen to this human being and apply what he says based upon our primordial intuition and our vision of the certitudes.

In this way, we come to know what we are ignorant of through our primordial nature. We might also arrive at this knowledge through our intelligence, that is pure and uncorrupted by any doubts, for when you perceive smoke you come to realize, through your intelligence, that there must be a fire; and when you are walking in the desert and you see greenery; do you not then conclude, through your intelligence, that there must be water to sustain it? These, then, are things which are elementary and which you know pre-logically, without the need for research or effort.

There are matters which might require of your intellectual effort to reach certain conclusions based on certain initial premises such as the mental effort which the ancient Arabs applied to conclude that there is a Creator Who runs this universe for they were able to conclude from the droppings on the ground that there must have been a camel which had recently left the area, and who were able to conclude from the footprints that it was in motion. They also inferred from this that the planets with their orbits, and the earth with its mountainous passes, and the sea with its waves—that all these things prove the existence of The Subtle, The Aware.

The mind cannot but take all these things and make a general judgment, even if it might be ignorant of the details. The mind has come to know that behind this universe there is a Creator, a Maker a Being Who is Wise, but he did not know what the name of this Being was, and a human being cannot come to know this matter with his mind; he also does not know what kind of directives this Creator requires that he follow in his life, and the manner in which this Being rewards those who are obedient to Him, and how this Being punishes those who are disobedient towards Him.

There is a need for Divine Revelation which will further establish the existence of that Power which you had accepted prior. Those who inspect the universe, using their minds, know that behind this universe there is a Creator, but they neither know His Name, nor what His commandments are.

You cannot know the Name of Allah unless He reveals it to you, through His revelation to His messengers, and you know what His commandments are only through the messenger who has received the message.

It is out of His Mercy that Allah Glorified is He has sent Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the miracle that is with Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is the Quran because even when the mind is guided to the Power of the Fully Capable, the Highest, it will remain ignorant of the specifics of faith, and so when the True Lord revealed the Quran, it was out of mercy for His servants, an illumination for them.

‘Compared to those who have clear proof from their Lord, recited by a witness from Him….’ (Hud: 17)

For the Quran is an illuminating proof which guides man’s innate, uncorrupted capacity of discernment, ‘recited by a witness from Him.’ (Hud: 17) That is, he who has received revelation, and conveyed to us—on behalf of the True Lord – that which confirmed Allah Glorified is He as the Highest Creator, the Absolute Power. Furthermore, the ‘witness’ explained to us that which Allah demands.

We are faced, here, with three witnesses. The first witness is the clear, illuminating proof. The second witness is the clear, uncorrupted discernment that the mind is guided to. After we accept the truth as a whole, the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him provides us with the details. Before the message of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him there was the Book of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him '...and before it the Book of Musa (Moses), as a guide and mercy.' (Hud: 17) This is the third witness.

He who does not take note of the evidences furnished by these three proofs is intellectually negligent. For he who possesses the discernment, and he who hears the testament of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the testament that preceded him—that is, the book of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him in addition to the Gospels which were given to `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him to convey to the Children of Israel—all of this must certainly guide him to true faith.

The True Lord's words, 'These people believe in it' (Hud: 17) refer to those who took note of the evidences: Innate discernment, the witness of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the witness of Musa (Moses) who came before.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says, '...whereas those groups that deny its truth are promised the Fire….' (Hud: 17) Disbelief—as we have learned—is 'covering up' the truth, and thus disbelief is itself a proof of faith, for one cannot cover up a truth that does not exist. The existence of that which is covered up precedes the act of 'covering up'. The 'covering up' comes later. Thus, belief precedes disbelief because belief is at the origin of the primordial state.

'Whereas those groups that deny its truth are promised the Fire.' (Hud: 17) The word ahzab (groups) is the plural form of hizb which means a group that is united over a common cause; like the political parties we see today, they are human factions that compete with one another over values and principles; they are free to do so since this is an intellectual competition.

As for the first doctrine, the directives of the path of Allah come from the True Lord, the Highest Planner. This way leads to Him, and that is why Allah says of those who follow His way, 'They are Allah's partisans' (al-Mujadala: 22) meaning they are part of a league that is different from the other human leagues which vie with each other in the intellectual domain.

Here, the True Lord says, '…whereas those groups that deny its truth are promised the Fire….' (Hud: 17) The verse refers to the disbelievers of Quraysh, the idol-worshippers, the pagan animists and the Jews and Christians who did not believe in the message of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Each of these groups represents a league of which the True Lord says, '…but they have split their community into sects, each rejoicing in their own.' (al-Mu'minun: 53)

Of these, those who deny the Message of Allah's Messenger peace and blessings be upon him or deny His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him their recompense is the Hellfire. Allah shows us that there are two leagues: the league of Allah, and the other leagues; and these two leagues are diametrically opposed to each other.

The True Lord says to His Messenger, and by extension, to the community of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him at large, 'So have no doubt about it.' (Hud: 17) Do not have, O Messenger of Allah, any doubts about the matter; for your Message and your mission are supported by self-evident, clear proofs, by the primordial state, and by the guidance and light that Allah Glorified is He requires; it is also supported by those who attest with you, just as those who came before you attested that yours is the path of the truth, 'it is the Truth from your Lord.' (Hud: 17) The True Lord—as we have learned previously—is that which is static and is not subject to change, and this truth cannot but come from a Lord that is consistent in his actions.

The True Lord concludes the verse by saying, '…though most people do not believe so.' (Hud: 17) These people do not believe out of spite because the proofs are as self-evident as can be; and he who persists in denying them is merely doing so out of intransigence. The True Lord says of such people, 'They denied them, in their wickedness and their pride, even though their souls acknowledged them as true….' (an-Naml: 14) Even as they formally denied the Message of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him they were aware of the undeniable proofs of the Message and of his prophethood. So, their denial was out of spite; for the corroborating evidence was strong and clearly laid out; for, those who refuse faith, given all these proofs, are surely obstinate persons.

In the next verse, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَمَنْ أَظْلَمُ مِمَّنِ ٱفْتَرَىٰ عَلَى ٱللَّهِ كَذِبًا ۚ أُو۟لَـٰٓئِكَ يُعْرَضُونَ عَلَىٰ رَبِّهِمْ وَيَقُولُ
ٱلْأَشْهَـٰدُ هَـٰٓؤُلَآءِ ٱلَّذِينَ كَذَبُوا۟ عَلَىٰ رَبِّهِمْ ۚ أَلَا لَعْنَةُ ٱللَّهِ عَلَى ٱلظَّـٰلِمِينَ ﴿١٨﴾

Who could do more wrong than someone who invents lies about God? Such people will be brought before their Lord, and the witnesses will say, 'These are the ones that lied about their Lord.' God's rejection is the due of those who do such wrong [18] (The Quran, Hud: 18)

This verse begins with rhetorical question which stresses the fact that those people who attribute their own lying inventions to Allah are unjust. The question precedes their acknowledging confession against themselves which represents the best proof. If any of them would disinterestedly contemplate the wrongdoings ever done in this world, he would admit that there is no evil deed worse than fabricating lies to Allah. Thus, Allah expresses this fact in the form of a rhetorical question so that the later confession of the culprits will admit their abominable breach. They will be arraigned before Allah, as He says, 'Such people will be brought before their Lord.' (Hud: 18)

The act of bringing people before Allah is done to uncover the hidden misdeeds to be dealt with. In our life, there is an example of bringing soldiers in military parades and war-games so that the army shows strength to the foes, and so that the government shows off military strength to the governments of other countries. Also, the officer lines up his squad so that he can inspect each one, assess their well attiring and their ability to carry out orders.

Another example is illustrated as the principal of a school lines up the pupils on the day of announcing exam results to be able to see the shame on the faces of the negligent and carless.

How awful the arraignment of people before Allah the Exalted will be and how ashamed the deniers will be then! Indeed, they will be speechless in the presence of Allah Whom they had previously denied spitefully, as Allah says, 'But the deeds of those who disbelieve are like a mirage in a plain desert:(1)

(1) Mirage: Something (such as a pool of water in the middle of a desert) that is seen and appearsin the afternoon to be real but it is illusionary. A plain desert: A large area of flat land surrounded by highlands, as Allah the Almighty says, 'They ask you [Prophet] about the mountains, say, "[On that Day] my Lord will blast them into dust and leave a flat plain, with no peak or trough to be seen.' (Ta Ha: 105-107)

the thirsty person thinks there will be water but, when he gets there, he finds only Allah….' (an-Nur: 39)

Allah Glorified is He discloses the veiled cover-ups as they will be brought before Him, as He says, 'They will be lined up before your Lord….' (al-Kahf: 48) Moreover, they are also brought before the Hellfire, as Allah says: 'they will be brought before the Fire morning and evening(1)….' (Ghafir: 46) Thereupon, the shame, humiliation and contrition will appear on those who attributed their own lying inventions to Allah.

Allah the Almighty knows all things before time begins, but He wills to expose people before each other and before themselves, so that when someone in Heaven sees another in the Hellfire, the scene would not provoke the believer's pity because he knows that the punishment for attributing falsehood to Allah is the Hellfire. Moreover, the matter will not only be limited to such embarrassment. In fact, there is also the testament of the witnesses, as Allah says in the same verse, 'And the witnesses will say, "These are the ones that lied about their Lord."' (Hud: 18)

There are angels among the 'witnesses', as Allah the Exalted says, 'He (the person) does not utter a single word(2) without an ever-present watcher(3).' (Qaf: 18) Allah, also, says, 'Over you stand watchers(4), noble recorders who know what you do!' (al-Infitar: 10-12) Furthermore, there are witnesses from the prophets who had conveyed the right path to Allah. As Allah Glorified is He says, 'What will they do when we bring a witness from each community, with you [Muhammad] as a witness against these people?(5)' (an-Nisa': 41)

(1) This verse refers to the Pharaoh and his people. It is used to prove the concept of 'Punishment in the grave' by Ahl As-Sunna or Sunni Islam (the majority branch of Islam), cited in Tafsir ibn Kathir (Quran exegesis of ibn Kathir), 4/81.

(2) speaking a word means uttering anything.

(3) Ever-present watcher: An observing angel recording every uttered word; whether good or bad, in the man's Book of Deeds, cited in Al-Qamus Al-Qawim.

(4) Watchers: The ever-present angel guarding every man, as Allah the Exalted says, 'There is a watcher over every soul' (at-Tariq: 4). Also, Allah says, 'He is the Supreme Master over His subjects. He sends out recorders to watch over you.' (al-An'am: 61)

(5) Abdullah ibn Mas`ud narrated, 'Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to me, "Recite (the Quran) to me." I said, "O Allah's Messenger! Shall I recite (the Quran) to you while it has been revealed to you?" He said, "Yes." So, I recited from the chapter of An-Nisa` (The Women), but when I recited the verse, "How (will it be) then when We bring =

Moreover, another type of witnesses is the Muslim believer, who is responsible for the propagation of the Message to others, as Allah the Almighty says, ‘We have made you [believers] into a just community, so that you may bear witness [to the truth] before others and so that the Messenger may bear witness [to it] before you….’ (al-Baqara: 143) ‘Bearing witness’ implies that everything is recorded; their actions after receiving the Message and going astray after being shown the right path. Thus, they commit the crime which entails punishment because punishment is only due when the person is incriminated on the basis of an existing promulgated legislative provision. That is the reason that laws decreed by the government come into effect as of date of publication in the official gazette.

Thus, the job of the witnesses is to attest that those people denied the Message conveyed by the messenger, that they had been acknowledged that denying the right path is the most abominable crime, and that they had been notified that the penalty for such crime is the eternal hellfire.

Due to the fact that Allah the Almighty is the Ever-Just of judges, no punishment could have taken place unless the crime has been verified by multiple witnesses. Hence, there are the testimonies of the angels, as a dissimilar category of creatures, the testimonies of the prophets, as infallible human species and those of Muslim believers who bear witness that the Message had been conveyed to all. Above all, there is the ample testimony of the partial (body organs) against the whole (human being). Allah Glorified is He says, ‘On the Day when Allah’s enemies are gathered up for the Fire and driven onward(1) their ears, eyes, and skins will, when they reach it, testify against them for their misdeeds. They will say to their skins, “Why did you testify against us?” and their skins will reply, “Allah, who gave speech to everything, has given us speech— it was He who created you the first time and to Him you have been returned.”’ (Fussilat: 19-21) Thus, the human organs bear witness against the sinners.

= from each nation a witness and We bring you (O Muhammad) as a witness against these people.” (an-Nisa’: 41), he said, “Enough for now”, I looked at him and behold! His eyes were overflowing with tears.’ It is related by Muslim and Al- Bukhari.

(1) Driven onward: They are assembled into groups and gathered collectively (the first and the last).

The sinners should not ask 'how' would their own organs acquire the capacity to talk; but rather, 'why' would they bear witness? The organs are the instruments with which the sinners commit their crimes; it is the hand which is extended to steal, it is the tongue which gives false testimony, it is the heart which harbours malice and they are the feet which walk towards sin. It is known that the organs function together to operate the whole body. The director of the body is the brain; it is the one which either directs the hand to steal or to provide some compassion for an orphan; it also directs the eye either to contemplate the beauty of the nature and the surrounding events, or to forbiddingly gaze on anything prohibited.

However, the body organs are subservient to the person's will and commands in this worldly life; yet, the matter is different on the Day of Judgment, where they will not be subservient to anyone but to Allah, Who has the only power to give commands. Allah Glorified is He says, 'Who has control today? Allah, the One, the All Powerful.' (Ghafir: 16) On the Day of Judgment, the parts of the body tell their owners that they had obeyed every order and were compelled to perform sinful acts as they were subservient to human beings in the worldly life. Though, on that Day, they are no longer agents of human will; but rather, they are going to bear witness to every sin they were forced to commit.

Thus, the witnesses testify, as Allah the Exalted says, '…And the witnesses will say, "These are the ones that lied about their Lord." Oh, verily, Allah's rejection is the due of those who do such wrong.' (Hud: 18) As they had lied about Allah the Almighty they deserve to be banished from Allah's Mercy because, undoubtedly, they had committed the most abominable sin. They disbelieved in the Oneness of Allah, fell into heresy,(1) denied Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the Message of Islam.

Afterwards, Allah Glorified is He says:

(1) The person who falls into heresy is the atheist who deviates from the right path and tries to deform the faith, Al-Qamus Al-Qawim.

ٱلَّذِينَ يَصُدُّونَ عَن سَبِيلِ ٱللَّهِ وَيَبۡغُونَهَا عِوَجٗا وَهُم بِٱلۡأٓخِرَةِ هُمۡ كَٰفِرُونَ ﴿١٩﴾

Who hinder others from God's path, trying to make it crooked, and deny the life to come [19] (The Quran, Hud: 19)

In this verse, the Quran mentions that those transgressors did not only deny Allah, His signs or His Messenger Muhammad; but rather, they further lead others astray from Allah's Path. Thus, the crime is doubled; in addition to transgressing themselves, they entice others to commit the crime as well.

Allah the Almighty has previously mentioned the people of the earlier Scriptures, who received the Message by messengers antecedent to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. However, greed and temporal power blinded such people so that they distorted the verses of their Divine Books anticipating the advent of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Thus, they had turned people away from the right path, trying to make it crooked.

Allah Glorified is He says, 'Say, "People of the Book, why do you turn the believers away from Allah's path and try to make it crooked, when you yourselves [should be] witnesses to the [truth]? Allah is not heedless of anything you do."' (Al-'Imran: 99) Allah the Exalted has sent Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to rectify any deviousness resulted from distorting previous Heavenly Books. Deviousness is the lack of straightness and uprightness. It might refer to moral values; the manners or the trustworthiness are said to be devious. As Allah says, 'Praise be to Allah, who sent down the Scripture to His servant and made it unerringly straight.'(1) (al-Kahf: 1) The adjective 'crooked' can be applied to concrete objects,(2) as Allah the Almighty says, 'They ask you [Prophet] about the mountains, say, '[On that Day] my Lord will blast them into dust and leave a flat plain,(3) with no crookedness or unevenness to be seen.'(4) (Ta Ha: 105-107)

(1) 'Made it unerringly straight' means that Allah made the Munificent Quran upright and unerringly trustworthy, the meaning is transcreated from Al-Qamus Al-Qawim

(2) Ibn Manzour explained in Lisan Al-Arab that crooked can. be applied both to concrete and abstract objects according to different diacritical marks.

(3) A plain: A large area of flat implanted land surrounded by highlands, Al-Qamus Al-Qawim.

(4) This verse stresses that the land is plain, flat and even, with no crookedness, Al-Qamus Al-Qawim.

The word ‘crooked’ shows the linguistic precision of the Quran because it describes certain curvatures which are noticeably felt. When the man is in the desert; he will find that the road is crooked and uneven, going up and down though flat terrain, such as the agricultural plot of land, is thought to be perfectly even. Nevertheless, this is not the case because when the farmer irrigates the land, some parts are submerged with water while other parts are dry. Thus, by watering the land, it is deduced that it is crooked and uneven because water measures the evenness of all things. Therefore, to determine the flatness of a wall or a plot of land, a water balance is used because it prevents any slightly imperceptible unevenness.

On the Day of Judgment, those who followed the crooked doctrine are brought forth. Allah Glorified is He describes them, ‘On that Day, people will follow the summoner from whom there is no escape ;(1) every voice will be hushed(2) for the Lord of Mercy; only whispers will be heard.’ (Ta Ha: 108) Thus, they are lined up into perfectly straight lines, such as criminals who are lined up and driven by guards to jail in silent shame.(3)

In the verse under discussion, the reason of hindering others from the right path of Allah is because they wish that others would also lead a twisted and uneven course. The evildoers want to lead people away from faith so that they can secure temporal power for themselves and can spread corruption on earth. Faith and the reformation deeply bother them and nullify every gain of corruption and perversion.

Subsequently, Allah the Exalted says:

(1) This verse means that on the Day of Judgment, the wrongdoers will follow submissively the summoner after encountering all horrors of this Grave Day. If they had followed the right path in the world, they would have been living in eternal bliss, Tafsir ibn Kathir.

(2) Hushed means that voices calmed down referring to full horrors of the Day of Resurrection, Al-Qamus Al-Qawim, 1/194.

(3) Driven in silent shame: To be disgracefully and submissively humiliated, Lisan Al-Arab.

أُوْلَٰٓئِكَ لَمۡ يَكُونُواْ مُعۡجِزِينَ فِي ٱلۡأَرۡضِ وَمَا كَانَ لَهُم مِّن دُونِ ٱللَّهِ مِنۡ أَوۡلِيَآءَۘ
يُضَٰعَفُ لَهُمُ ٱلۡعَذَابُۚ مَا كَانُواْ يَسۡتَطِيعُونَ ٱلسَّمۡعَ وَمَا كَانُواْ يُبۡصِرُونَ ﴿٢٠﴾

They will not escape on earth, and there will be no one other than God to protect them. Their punishment will be doubled. They could not hear, and they did not see [20]
(The Quran, Hud: 20)

A`jaza means that someone is incapable of carrying out an action. This word manifested the inability of those who denied that the Quran is a miracle, to come up with a single comparable verse. Allah the Almighty shows us that there is no disbeliever on Earth invulnerable to Allah’s wrath. There are plenty of examples of the past disbelieving communities who were either blown away by hurricane-strength winds, swallowed up by the earth or drowned. When they move on to the Afterlife, they will have neither fellowship nor protection from Allah’s wrath. It is known that the ‘fellow’ does not lead his friend to torture; but rather, he is the closest friend who benefits and offers him the best.

In case that a close friend is more skilled, so some of his talents will rub off on you; if he is more powerful, his strength will shield you; if he is rich, you will be in welfare; if he is knowledgeable, you will gain from his knowledge; and if he is forbearing, he will help calm you down when you are angry. In fact, every person whose talent surpasses his close friend, then he will benefit from his talent. A fellow can also be a protector as well because when you call out in times of distress, he is the first to respond as he is the closest to you.

However, those who turned others away from Allah’s path will have neither friend nor protector in the Hereafter even if they actually had them in this worldly life. On the Day of Judgment, every soul shall be tending to its own affairs: ‘On the Day you see it, every nursing mother will think no more(1) of her baby, every pregnant female will miscarry, you will think people are drunk when they are not, so severe will be Allah’s torment.’ (al-Hajj: 2)

(1) ‘Think no more’ means that the nursing mother will forget her baby deliberately or unintentionally, signifying the ultimate horrors of the Day of Resurrection.

Also, Allah Glorified is He says, ‘People, be mindful of your Lord and fear a day when no parent will take the place of their child, nor a child take the place(1) of their parent, in any way….’ (Luqman: 33) Moreover, Allah the Exalted says, ‘On the Day when man will flee from his own brother, his mother, his father, his wife, his children; on that Day, each of them will be absorbed in concerns of their own.’ (‘Abasa: 34-37)

Thus, those disbelievers, who turned others away from Allah’s path, can neither evade His wrath in the worldly life, nor would have a friend or a protector in the Hereafter; but rather, as Allah says, ‘Their punishment will be doubled.’ (Hud: 20) It is understood that the doubling of punishment implies that it occurs twice and that it entails the idea of power and strength. Yet, this is not the matter; because the concept of the existence of two entities implies that the former is weak relative to the latter. Therefore, this ‘doubling’ process demonstrates the weakness of the entity which had to be reinforced in the first place.

The disbelievers deserve this doubling of the punishment because they targeted to distort faith and turned others away from Allah’s Path in an attempt to lead them astray. There is no contradiction between Allah’s saying, ‘Their punishment will be doubled’ (Hud: 20) and His saying, ‘Each soul is responsible for its own actions; no soul will bear the burden of another.’ (al-An‘am: 164) Those people who tried to lead others astray from Allah’s path have not committed only one sin, but two; that of going astray, and that of leading others astray.

There is another verse in this concern, ‘Those who never invoke any other deity beside Allah, nor take a life, which Allah has made sacred, except in the pursuit of justice, nor commit adultery. Whoever do these things will face the penalties(2). Their torment will be doubled....’ (al-Furqan: 68-69)

(1) ‘No one takes the place of’ means that everyone shall not be able to avail aught for others, As Allah says, ‘Guard yourselves against a Day when no soul will stand in place of another.’ (al-Baqara: 48) The verse (Luqman: 33) means that both the parent and the child are not able to defend the other or to stand in place of another against Allah’s punishment. Transcreated from Al-Qamus Al-Qawim

(2) Whoever does these things will face the penalties: means that whosoever does these abominable acts shall be punished for committing sins. The sin means committing forbidden abominable acts. Al-Qamus Al-Qawim

This means that whosoever does these abominable acts shall be doubly punished because he represented a model for others to commit the same crime.

Allah Glorified is He ordains that sins should not be propagated among people; thus, Allah the Almighty insists that the punishment of the sinner should be witnessed by several believers. Concerning adultery, Allah the Exalted says, '…And ensure that a group of (1) believers witnesses the punishment.' (an-Nur: 2) As the believers witness the punishment for a given crime, this implies a warning against committing this abominable act. In fact, this is a means of reducing all crimes.

In this verse under discussion, the punishment is doubled for those who committed two crimes; the former is that they themselves went astray and the latter is that they led others astray. Hence, on the Day of Judgment, some of those who went astray will cry out, as quoted in the Quran, 'Our Lord, show us those jinn and men who misled us and we shall trample them underfoot, so that they may be among the lowest of the low.' (Fussilat: 29)

They will also say, '…Lord! We obeyed our masters and our chiefs,(2) and they led us astray. Lord! Give them a double punishment and reject them completely.' (al-'Ahzab: 67-68) Thus, encouraging people to go astray from Allah's path is a form of misguidance and delusion, and performing any action dishonestly is also a delusion, because it gives a bad example. The doubling of punishment does not mean to be burnt once in the Hellfire because the pain would have an end there; thus, Allah the Almighty ordains that suffering will be kept up unceasingly. As Allah Glorified is He says, '…When their skins have been burned away,(3) we shall replace them with new ones so that they may continue to feel the pain….' (an-Nisa': 56) Thus, the doubling of punishment is conceivably the constant and endless suffering, or perhaps the punishment may differ according to the kind of crime; one for their disbelief and another for enticing others to go astray.

(1) A group of: A section of people. Imam Malik and Ash-Shafei, Allah have mercy on them, assumed that the group of people means at least the existence of four people because adultery is not testified except by the minimum of four witnesses; while ibn Rabia`a conceived that they should be five in number; whereas, Al-Hassan Al-Basri presumed that they are ten. Ibn Kathir, 3/263

(2) At-Tawoos said that 'masters and chiefs' refer to the elite and the scholars, Tafsir ibn Kathir, 3/519. Referring to Ibn Abu Hatem

(3) Skins have been burned away means that they totally burned as a result of utmost torture.

As Allah the Almighty says, '…We shall add torment upon torment for those who disbelieved and barred others from the path of Allah.' (an-Nahl: 88) The punishment of disbelief does not wipe out the punishment for other transgressions committed by the disbeliever.(1)

For example, on the Day of Judgment, the horned sheep which butts another hornless one(2) will be made to pay justice for its counterpart because the aggressor will be brought to justice even though animals are not held to account as they have no choice. However, they shall be used as a means of demonstrating the principle of Justice.

As Allah the Exalted says, '…Their punishment will be doubled. They could not hear,(3) and they did not see.' (Hud: 20)

This means that they failed to make use of their sense of hearing even though they were endowed with this ability, because they refused to hear the Message of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Furthermore, they failed to make use of their sense of sight, for they failed to perceive Allah's signs in the universe; they seemed to be deaf and blind. This verse can also be conceived as the punishment shall be doubled many times as long as they were able to hear and see.

In another verse, Allah Glorified is He says, 'How sharp of hearing, how sharp of sight(4) they will be when they come to Us....' (Maryam: 38) This means that the senses of hearing and sight shall be perfectly intact and functional on the Day of Judgment.

(1) This is done because he does not believe in Islam; that is the reason of his punishment. As well as he is additionally punished for his going astray, whether he was believing in the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him or not.

(2) Abu Hurayra narrated that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'The claimants would get their claims on the Day of Resurrection so much so that the hornless sheep would get its claim from the horned one', it is narrated in Sahih Muslim, The Book of Virtue, Enjoining Good Manners, and Joining of the Ties of Kinship.

(3) This means that they failed to understand or to make use of their sense of hearing even though they were endowed with this ability. Allah says, 'Allah has sealed their hearts and their ears, and their eyes…' (al-Baqara: 7).

(4) This means that that the sense of hearing and of sight of the disbelievers shall be perfectly intact and functional on the Day of Judgment. They will see and hear every fact obviously and clearly to witness against himself. Al-Qamus Al-Qawim

Afterwards, Allah the Almighty says:

أُوْلَٰٓئِكَ ٱلَّذِينَ خَسِرُوٓاْ أَنفُسَهُمۡ وَضَلَّ عَنۡهُم مَّا كَانُواْ يَفۡتَرُونَ ﴿٢١﴾

It is they who will have lost their souls, and what they invented will have deserted them [21] (The Quran, Hud: 21)

Therefore, they are losers because having wronged their souls by indulging themselves in immediate and short-term temptations, led them to deserve eternal suffering.

They transgress against themselves the matter which demonstrates the epitome of blunders, and the imbalance of values. A man might be unjust towards others by usurping their own rights for his own benefit. However, transgressing oneself means that the man gives his soul immediate pleasures while ignoring the longer-term suffering that waits. Short-term enjoyment is temporary; however, suffering is endless.

As Allah Glorified is He says, '…And what they invented will have deserted them'(1) (Hud: 21). This means that all deities worshipped other than Allah, shall be of no avail to them. If the false idols were to have any power on the Day of Judgment, they would have rushed to save them from the suffering, but these idols are completely powerless. Concerning the disbeliever, Allah the Exalted decrees, '…And there will be no one on Earth to protect or help them' (at-Tawba: 74).

None of those false idols or alleged gods other than Allah shall come to their aid. Even though the disbelievers had ascribed to them the power to succour, they will neither be able to grant help nor to even remember them at all.

Allah the Almighty says, '...And what they invented will have deserted them' (Hud: 21). This means that all that which they claimed falsely shall be lost, and forgotten.

(1) This means that the disbeliever failed to have reasonable causes and that he went astray from the truth.

Consequently, Allah Glorified is He says:

لَا جَرَمَ أَنَّهُمْ فِي ٱلْآخِرَةِ هُمُ ٱلْأَخْسَرُونَ ﴿٢٢﴾

There is no doubt they will be the ones to lose most in the life to come [22] (The Quran, Hud: 22)

The term la jaram is controversial among religious scholars; yet, it generally means that a definite event truly, rightfully, or certainly happens.

Thus, when Allah the Almighty says, '…Without doubt it is the Fire that belongs to them…' (an-Nahl: 62), it means that truly and certainly they shall earn the Hellfire as a result of the evil deeds committed. Such deeds entail the punishment, as well as combining the word la jaram with the sins, entail that Allah the Almighty shall rightfully punish them.

Some scholars conceived that la jaram means truly or certainly,(1) whereas others maintained that it means undoubtedly and impossibly avoided.(2) The two meanings are related because being impossibly avoided implies that it is firmly set. The scholars should have searched for the root of the word jaram, which means cutting or undermining.

In this verse under discussion, Allah the Almighty decrees that the disbelievers shall have the Hellfire; His decrees cannot be breached or undermined. Indeed, they shall assuredly meet this fate; thus, la jaram comes to mean undoubtedly and impossibly avoided.

Therefore, the word la jaram means assuredly, and that the promised fate shall undoubtedly come to pass. The word jarima (crime) which is derived from the root jaram means the violation of inviolable laws. If it is decided that one should not steal from another, this would be an inviolable law. When someone does steal from another, he has violated these laws and people's peace of mind. Thus, every crime is a violation and disruption of society's norms.

(1) This concept is maintained by Al-Khalil ibn Ahmad Al-Farahidi, Sibawayh, Al-Farra' and Mohammad ibn Yazid. They dealt with la and jaram as one coherent word, Tafsir Al-Qurtubi (Quran exegesis of Al-Qurtubi), 4/3338.

(2) This concept is maintained by Al-Mahdawi as well as Al-Khalil the term signifies 'assuredly' and 'undoubtedly'. Al-Farra' has also the same opinion, cited by Ath-Tha`labi, Tafsir Al-Qurtubi 4/3338.

It is also said, ‘He had the jaram of something’ meaning he earned the sins of a wrongful action. Therefore, if there is a disruption of the principle of order, then there is no crime if Allah punishes with Hellfire those who made false claims about Him, who wrought injustice and turned others away from His path. Punishment is not a crime because the punishment for a crime is a means of preventing the wrongdoing.(1)

Thus, all meanings come together; on saying la jaram, it is understood that there is no injustice in the punishment because the real crime is their own heinous transgressions.

Therefore, Allah says, ‘Let harm be requited by an equal harm…’ (ash-Shura: 40). Allah calls it a sin because it represents an injustice towards society, or an injustice towards the individual himself. As Allah says, ‘If you [believers] have to respond to an attack, make your response proportionate’ (an-Nahl: 126).

It is now obvious that there are several meanings to interpret la jaram. It signifies that nothing shall ‘undercut’ Allah’s decree of sending the disbelievers to the hellfire or that these disbelievers shall ‘certainly’ be thrown in the hellfire. It may also signify that sending the disbelievers to hell is just and righteous or that there is no crime at all that Allah the Almighty sends them to the Hellfire, for it is they who committed the crime worthy of punishment.

In Allah’s saying, ‘La jaram (There is no doubt) they will be the ones to lose most in the life to come’ (Hud: 22), the words ‘the ones to lose most’ describe the doer’s deed of losing.

‘Losing’ worldly affairs happens when someone gets an unfair deal,(2) such as when someone sells something less than its original value. Whoever does this is called a ‘loser’, but losses in worldly affairs are limited to this life on earth, and even if one loses today, he may win tomorrow

Assume that the man lost all deals throughout his life; yet, how short-lived is life on earth! Everything that is finite is short-lived; however, the harm of the Hereafter is the eternal real loss. Allah says, ‘Say [Prophet], “Shall we tell you(1) who has the most to lose by their actions, whose efforts in this world are misguided, even when they think they are doing good work?”’ (al-Kahf: 103-104) Sometimes, Allah describes them as the ‘greatest losers’ and other times, Allah the Almighty describes their fate as being, ‘The most obvious loss’ (az-Zumar: 15). It is an all-encompassing loss.

(1) For this reason, Allah the Almighty says, ‘Fair retribution saves life for you, people of understanding, so that you may guard yourselves against what is wrong.’ (al-Baqara: 179).

(2) Unfair deal: Not based on or not behaving according to the principles of equality and justice, Lisan Al-Arab Afterwards, Allah Glorified is He mentions the corresponding fate to that of the disbelievers, to comfort people’s souls. When a ruling is made for or against someone, the man likes to hear the opposite one to satisfy the curiosity for knowing the concept of requital.

On hearing Allah’s verse, ‘the good(2) will live in bliss’ (al-Infitar: 13), one necessarily wonders about the fate of the wicked, so Allah says next, ‘and the wicked(3) will burn in the Fire.’ (al-Infitar: 14) This technical juxtaposition creates a sense of elation in the first case and a feeling of constriction in the second. Accordingly, the person should consider carefully which of the two fates he decides to face.

Allah the Exalted juxtaposes the fate of the disbelievers, who led themselves and others astray from Allah’s Path and consequently earned the punishment of Hellfire, with the likely fate of the believers, the doers of righteous deeds. Thus, Allah says:

إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ وَعَمِلُوا۟ ٱلصَّٰلِحَٰتِ وَأَخْبَتُوٓا۟ إِلَىٰ رَبِّهِمْ أُو۟لَٰٓئِكَ
أَصْحَٰبُ ٱلْجَنَّةِ ۖ هُمْ فِيهَا خَٰلِدُونَ ﴿٢٣﴾

But those who believed, did good deeds, and humbled themselves before their Lord will be companions in Paradise and there they will stay [23] (The Quran, Hud: 23)

It is cognisant that faith is a matter of creed,(4) where the person announces his belief in the concept of monotheism and keeps on pursuing Allah’s Message revealed by Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Whosoever believes in Allah but does not perform virtuous deeds, shall be punished because the essence of faith is embodied in righteous acts.

---

(1) To tell somebody of something: communicate information to someone in spoken or written words. Al-Qamus Al-Qawim, 2/250

(2) The good: The virtuous, the moral, the upright, and the religious. Transcreated from Lisan Al-Arab

(3) The wicked: the sinful, the irreligious, and the vile. Transcreated from Al-Qamus Al-Qawim

(4) Ibn Manzour said in Lisan Al-Arab that the place of faith or creed is the heart

That is the reason of Allah's saying, 'The desert Arabs say, "We have faith." [Prophet], tell them, "You do not have faith."(1) What you should say instead is, "We have [outwardly] submitted."' (al-Hujurat: 14) This means that they have merely followed the outward injunctions of Islam.

Thus, the believer is the person who firmly has faith in the Existence and Oneness of Allah, and in the belief that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is a Messenger conveying revelation from Allah. However, the righteous deeds determine the ranks of believers.

There is a difference between the believer and the Muslim. The former devotedly perfects his righteous deeds; wherever the latter performs deeds lazily and barely perform the minimum religious commitments. Both the believer and the Muslim differ significantly from the hypocrite who feigns enthusiasm when performing religious rites, as well as, who harbours a secret,(2) hatred and animosity towards Islam which he does not actually believe in.

During the era of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him the hypocrites were amongst the first to line up in prayer; nevertheless, they harboured an inner hatred and organised conspiracies against him.

In the verse under discussion, Allah shows that the criterion of faith depends on the belief in the Oneness of Allah and on performing the commitments of faith with humility and surrender. It is said that 'Perhaps the sin that humbles you is better than the good deed that makes you arrogant'. This means that the believer should not be arrogant or self-conceited of religious obedience.(3)

(1) Having faith: strong belief in the doctrines of Islam; based on spiritual conviction such as believing in Allah, the Day of Judgment, the Books and the messengers, whereas, Islam includes apparent acts of worship such as prayer, fasting and others.

(2) Harbours a secret: Organizes a conspiracy secretly. Al-Qamus Al-Qawim, 1/89.

(3) Arrogance: An attitude of offensive display of superiority or self-importance; manifested in an overbearing manner or in presumptuous claims or assumptions

The term akhbatu (humbled themselves) means that they fear and submit themselves to Allah. This term infers that the believers do not merely perform their religious commitments to evade Allah's punishment; but rather, to truly revere Allah.

The Arabic root al-khabt is derived from the term akhbatu (humbled themselves), that denotes the plain land that is outstretched, good and comforting; therein is the similarity with faith.

Allah describes the humble believers as, 'Will be companions in Paradise and there they will stay.' (Hud: 23) This means that paradise will be their destined eternal abode, wherein they shall enjoy everlasting bliss. Conversely, the world pleasures are intermittent and discontinuously ended by death or deprivation.(1) However, in the Hereafter, the believers, who performed good deeds and humbled themselves before their Lord, would enjoy everlasting bliss.

Thus, Allah describes the cases of the two parties; the first group of people, who wronged themselves by alleging false claims about Allah, sent people away from His Path and sought to make the straight path to be crooked, shall be powerless(2) to evade Allah's vengeance, and shall have no helping friend to protect them from the double punishment decreed. They sabotaged and lost themselves, with no help received from the false deities worshipped in lieu of Allah. There is nothing that can make them evade torture; they are the greatest losers.

As for the second group, who believed and performed righteous, virtuous deeds in complete submissiveness, reverence and love for Allah, deserve the eternal abode of paradise. Therefore, each party has its distinctive path and targeted end.

Accordingly, Allah says:

(1) Deprivation: Man's disposition of blessings

(2) Powerless: unable to evade something

مَثَلُ ٱلْفَرِيقَيْنِ كَٱلْأَعْمَىٰ وَٱلْأَصَمِّ وَٱلْبَصِيرِ وَٱلسَّمِيعِۚ
هَلْ يَسْتَوِيَانِ مَثَلًاۚ أَفَلَا تَذَكَّرُونَ ﴿٢٤﴾

These two groups are like the blind and the deaf as compared with those who can see and hear well: can they be alike? How can you not take heed? [24]
(The Quran, Hud: 24)

The word party means a group of people joining together to strive towards a common goal, such as the ‘soccer team’ or any other kind of team. It refers to groupings; each has a common goal uniting them.

Allah Glorified is He says, ‘…A party shall be in the Garden and another in the blazing Flame’(1) (ash-Shura: 7).

In the verse under discussion, Allah the Almighty refers to the two chief human senses; the hearing and the sight. They are the primary means of registering information for human beings, whether auditory or visual. This allows the human being to have the ability of inference (2) using his senses.

Hence, Allah the Exalted tells us, ‘Allah is He who brought you out of your mothers’ wombs knowing nothing, and gave you hearing and sight and minds, so that you might be thankful.’ (an-Nahl: 78) Therefore, as Allah has granted us the sense of hearing and sight and has made them along with hearts to be the source of intellective power used for information collection and analysis ;(3) Thus, Allah the Almighty should be thanked.

It is known that great cultural strides and scientific breakthroughs (4) arise thanks to operating the senses of hearing and sight, used to obtain information. Afterwards, inference practically applied this information to serve humanity. For example, steam power was discovered when someone noticed that the lid of a cooking pot started to rise because of the boiling water inside. The discoverer deduced that the water vapour grows increasingly in volume, and thus the lid starts to rise. This discovery led to much advancement which changed many aspects of life.

(1) Blazing flame: The fierce fire of the Hell

(2) Inference: Deducing the right or the accurate logical conclusion based on evidence and reasoning

(3) Analysis: Scrutiny and meticulously testing something, Al-Mu`jam Al-Wasit

(4) Breakthrough: A sudden, dramatic, and important discovery or development. Lisan Al-Arab

But for the gift of deduction and conclusion from sense perception beside the gift of hearing and sight, cultural breakthroughs would not have been achieved.

Thus, Allah says, ‘these two groups are like the blind and the deaf as compared with those who can see and hear well: can they be alike?’ (Hud: 24) The blind or the deaf has never doubted that he who sees and he who hears would have an advantage over him. They cannot be compared as they are not gifted the same senses.

Once more, Allah Glorified is He uses juxtaposition, so that he who hears or he who reads this verse might use his judgment to realise the difference between them to recognise that they cannot be ordinarily the same.

Therefore, Allah concludes the verse as saying, ‘…How can you not take heed?’ (Hud: 24) This means that they should, then, reflect on the existence of such juxtaposition.

As Allah the Almighty says, ‘…It is not people’s eyes that are blind, but their hearts within their breasts’ (al-Hajj: 46). This means that the person might possess the capacity for seeing, or the capacity for hearing; however, he does not properly use any of them for acquiring the intended knowledge about unknown matters.

Allah describes each party and its struggle with the counterpart, He, as well, shows the differences of purposes. The ongoing struggle between the two parties is illustrated in the stories of the messengers of Allah all throughout the Quran.

Almost every chapter in the Quran contains a different snippet from one of the stories of the prophets. The story of the same prophet is variously tackled in each snippet. For example, in the chapter of Yunus, Allah the Exalted speaks once about Nuh (Noah), Musa (Moses), Harun (Aaron) and Yunus (Jonah) peace be upon them. Moreover, here, in the chapter of Hud, Allah the Almighty tackles the story of Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him again from a different point of view. As Allah says:

وَلَقَدْ أَرْسَلْنَا نُوحًا إِلَىٰ قَوْمِهِۦٓ إِنِّي لَكُمْ نَذِيرٌ مُّبِينٌ ﴿٢٥﴾

We sent Noah to his people to say, 'I have come to you to give a clear warning [25]
(The Quran, Hud: 25)

The verse illustrates the purpose of sending Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him as a messenger to his people. It is incumbent upon Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him to fulfil his mission, i.e. delivering his message. Hence, Allah states his saying, '…I have come to you to give a clear warning.' (Hud: 25)

In this verse, there are two versions of pronouncing an Arabic vowel; the former means that Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him came with the message which he delivered to his people. As for the second way,(1) it means that the message itself warns people and speaks on the tongue of Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him. Thus, the former is a narration of the story of Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him while he was delivering his message; whereas, the latter is indicating the content of the message.

In the first way of reading the verse, the speech of Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him is stated directly without prior introduction. This style of omitting the word of saying is a common literary device throughout the Quran. For example, Allah the Exalted says, '…The angels will go in to them(2) from every gate "Peace be with you, because you have remained steadfast."' (ar-Ra'd: 23-24)

(1) The second way is read by ibn Kathir, 'Abu Amr and Al-Kassa`i, cited in Tafsir Al-Qurtubi (Quran exegesis of Al-Qurtubi), 4/3340

(2) The pronoun 'them' refers to the believers who will enter Paradise from every gate, as Allah the Almighty says, 'Can someone who knows that the revelation from your Lord is the Truth be equal to someone who is blind? Only those with understanding will take it to heart; those who fulfil the agreements they make in Allah's name and do not break their pledges; who join together what Allah commands to be joined; who are in awe of their Lord and fear the harshness of the Reckoning; who remain steadfast through their desire for the face of their Lord; who keep up the prayer; who give secretly and openly from what We have provided for them; who repel evil with good. These will have the reward of the [true] home.' (ar-Ra'd: 19 -22)

This means that the angels will come unto the believers from every gate of Paradise,[1] there, the angels will welcome them and will say, ‘Peace be with you, because you have remained steadfast....’ (ar-Ra‘d: 24)

As previously mentioned, if someone is warned of an impending danger to come, it is so he might be prepared in response to the alert. Thus, Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him has been sent by Allah to warn people, as per the discussion began in the previous verse. This means that there is a disobeying and disbelieving group, to whom Allah sent a prophet to warn them. Whereas, as for the other group, the prophet is a bearer of glad tidings who informs them of the coming blissful rewards, to be prepared with peace of mind

As for the group of disbelievers, Allah Glorified is He elaborates the warning:

أَن لَّا تَعۡبُدُوٓاْ إِلَّا ٱللَّهَۖ إِنِّيٓ أَخَافُ عَلَيۡكُمۡ عَذَابَ يَوۡمٍ أَلِيمٖ ﴿٢٦﴾

Worship no one but God. I fear you will have torment on a painful Day [26] (The Quran, Hud: 26)

Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him and his people are mutually concerned for each other; that is why he fears for them because he is strongly tied to them as his community.

Therefore, Allah tries to soften the hearts of the people of the messenger to hospitably welcome him. For example, Allah says, ‘To the people of `Ad, We sent their brother, Hud (Eber) …’ (al-A’raf: 65). As long as the messenger is their brother, they will be assured that he will not cheat or trick them.

The prominent disbelievers of the people of Nuh (Noah) responded to his message by saying:

(1) Paradise has eight gates, as per the Hadith, ‘Whoever of you performs wudu` carefully and then affirms: “Ash-hadu an la ilaha illallahu wahdahu la sharika lah, wa ash-hadu anna Muhammadan `abduhu wa rasuluhu [I testify that there is no deity worthy of worship except Allah Alone, Who has no partners and that Muhammad, is His slave and Messenger],” the eight gates of Paradise are opened for him. He may enter through whichever of these gates he desires (to enter)’. It is narrated in Sahih Muslim (234) on the authority of `Ubadah ibn `Amer.

فَقَالَ ٱلۡمَلَأُ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُواْ مِن قَوۡمِهِۦ مَا نَرَىٰكَ إِلَّا بَشَرٗا مِّثۡلَنَا
وَمَا نَرَىٰكَ ٱتَّبَعَكَ إِلَّا ٱلَّذِينَ هُمۡ أَرَاذِلُنَا بَادِيَ ٱلرَّأۡيِ وَمَا
نَرَىٰ لَكُمۡ عَلَيۡنَا مِن فَضۡلِۭ بَلۡ نَظُنُّكُمۡ كَٰذِبِينَ ٢٧

But the prominent(1) disbelievers among his people said, 'We can see that you are nothing but a mortal like ourselves, and it is clear to see that only the vilest among us follow you. We cannot see how you are any better than we are. In fact, we think you are a liar' [27] (The Quran, Hud: 27)

It is known that the prominent people are the highest representatives; they are the elite who evoke awe and admiration in any gathering. There is a folk proverb tackling the previous meaning: 'He catches the eye'. This denotes that when a dignified person publicly appears, people cannot turn their eyes away from him, as they could not see or be convinced by anyone but him due to his potentials.

The general meaning of the term 'prominent people' is the 'close preeminent circle of elders and leaders'. Thus, they are the first closest group to the centre. Around the circle of leaders there are many concentric circles other than that of the prominent. Instability only occurs when the circle has more than one centre; this causes the dissolution of all circles.

The response of the leading people of Nuh's (Noah's) peace be upon him community implies that they alleged that there is no special potential in Nuh (Noah) to be superior to them, so they asked him about the reason that makes him preeminent to be the messenger.(2)

Their reply is an indication of foolishness because once the messenger is human, his comportment is exemplary, and he deserved to be followed. Whereas, if he is not human, they would be justified in objecting him; because they would be unable to take an angel as an exemplary model. (3)

(1) The prominent people: All preeminent most honoured people.

(2) To make the prophet preeminent means to make him the foremost ordering leader.

(3) They would be unable to take an angel as an exemplary model because he is a different creature with various capabilities and powers. Thus, the power of the angel cannot be used to verify anything related to man. Transcreated from Tafsir ibn Kathir, 2/124

Allah sheds light on this issue, as He says, ‘The only thing that kept these people from believing, when guidance came to them, was that they said, “How could Allah have sent a human being as a messenger?”’ (al-Isra’: 94)

After that Allah says: ‘Say, “If there were angels walking about on Earth, feeling at home, we would have sent them an angel from Heaven as a messenger.”’ (al-Isra’: 95). Therefore, messengers come forth to reveal Allah’s Message and to be comportment exemplary models.(1) But for the messenger’s humanity, he would not have been appropriate as a role model, but as a mere conveyer of the message.

For example, when you see a lion in the zoo, roaring, bellowing, eating meat given by the zookeeper, you would never be tempted to emulate its behaviour. Whereas, if you saw a valiant knight riding his horse with a sword in hand, you might want to be like him. Thus, the role model is only applied to members of the same species. This principle is the key to refute those who ascribe divinity to `Uzayr (Ezra)(2) or to `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon them.

Then Allah quotes the saying of the disbelieving elite of the people of Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him ‘…We can see that you are nothing but a mortal like ourselves, and it is clear to see that only the vilest among us follow you…’ (Hud: 27). The ‘vilest’ means the low, the dishonourable and the debased person, the ‘vilest’ of anything is the residue or the waste.

In the countryside, during the cotton harvest, the process of sorting the cotton is done by young boys and girls; where they separate the clear cotton from the buds which have not been fully opened up. This is done because defective buds usually suffer from slow growth, as they have not yet reached full maturity.

Furthermore, the farmers also perform a similar process during wheat harvest, where they separate the wheat from the chaff. Therefore, the ‘vilest’ of something entails to be thrown away and discarded.

(1) The exemplary model means the excellent model to be followed, as Allah the Almighty says, ‘The Messenger of Allah is an excellent model…’ (*al-'Ahzab:*21).

(2) `Uzayr (Ezra): a virtuous man from the People of Israel. He was called, by the Jews, the son of Allah and they worshipped him for his perfect knowledge of every word of the Testament, Al-Qamus Al-Qawim 2/18 and Tafsir ibn Kathir 2/348.

In this verse under discussion, the disbelieving elite of the people of Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him described the believers as being the vilest and the rejects of society. Additionally, Allah quotes them, elsewhere, as having said, ‘Why should we believe you when the worst sort of people follows you?’ (ash-Shu'ara': 111).

Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him does not deny this because many of his followers might be weak, as they are victims of the cruelty of the unchallengeable powerful elite. The strong people do not suffer from the pressures of the unjust; it is the weak people who suffer the brunt of their maliciousness; so that when a saviour who can defend them from their oppressors appears, they naturally tend to cling to him.

However, this does not mean that faith does not enter the hearts of powerful people because there are some powerful and wealthy people of Mecca who believed in the Message of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him such as Abu Bakr As-Siddiq, ‘Umar ibn Al-Khattab, ‘Uthman ibn Affan, ‘Abd Ar-Rahman ibn `Awf etc. Allah be pleased with them.

However, the oppressed is the one who usually answers calls for reform, because he feels the sting of injustice and boils in cauldrons of pain.(1) As soon as a call for reform appears, and a movement to drive out corruption arises, such oppressed people rally around their leader and give him support. If they happen to be freemen, ruled by an unlikely power, they voice their support for the reformer openly, whereas, if they happen to be slaves and subjects, they support their saviour secretly, except those who are strong enough, bear the brunt of persecution and torture.

All Messengers come forth in times of corruption, from which certain people get benefits, whereas many others suffer from the tyranny and corruption of those people. The advent of the messenger is a revolution against tyranny and oppression; that is why the weak and the oppressed earnestly rally around him and heartedly gives him allegiance.

(1) A figure of speech referring to the suffering of the oppressed who groan with pain from the injustice.

As for those who benefit from corruption, they alleged that the followers of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him are merely the bottom of society. This is a trial to ridicule and deride the messenger; however, they show absolute folly because their saying is a sign that the advent of the messenger is needed to liberate those weak, and to angrily fight and to root out corruption.

However, this revolutionary advent of the messenger is not the same as the anger of the common revolutionary, for the latter is always conceitedly seeking the applause of his supporters from the oppressed class.

The only fault(1) made by the common revolutionary is his craving to remain always a revolutionary. However, the true revolutionary is the one who originally revolts to eradicate corruption, and then he peacefully reposes to build the foundations for a glorious future. The true revolutionary should neither indiscriminately avenge all people, nor prefer a group of people to the other, nor humiliate the oppressed, nor be unjust towards the oppressor. He should rather deal with all people justly and mercifully so that everything is made right; old grudges are buried and all people come to know that he does not oppose a particular group of people, but rather only the oppressing one. Thus, if he seizes the property of the oppressor and gives it to the oppressed, he should then deal unbiased with the two parties afterwards. As a consequence, peace and stability can prevail again in society.

Returning to the concerned verse, the words of the prominent disbelieving people of Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him are a confirmation that corruption plagues society and that those who suffer from the oppression had followed Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him.

Allah then says, '…And it is badi (clear) to see that…' (Hud: 27) Badi means the outward, the apparent which is opposite to the hidden, the esoteric, and the concealed. There is another recitation of reading the word badi to be read as badi'(2) '…And it is seen badi' (at first glance) that…' (Hud: 27)

(1) This fault is a defect in the revolutionary. Lisan Al-Arab

(2) This version is cited in Tafsir Al-Qurtubi (Quran exegesis of Al-Qurtubi), 4/2433: it means at first glance. The disbelievers assumed that the weak believers followed the prophet superficially, at first glance and that if they examined the message deeply they would not have believed. The word, either read badi or badi', has the same meaning.

Badi` here means at first sight or at first glance. Thus, badi means the outward appearance or the first impression. When someone takes a first look at something, the initial impression is a superficial one. It is only afterwards that he can deeply think about it.

When someone hears of a particular case for the first time, he should not rush to judgment based on the outward appearances; rather, he should think deeper and study the case or the message thoroughly and calmly.

They had told Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him that he is a mere human like them and that only the vilest people among them have followed him, only because they had considered his message superficially. The disbelievers assumed that if the believers had examined the message closely and studied its aspects and repercussions diligently, they would not have believed in it.

Allah exposes the folly of the elite people of Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him as they said that the weak people should have examined the message more closely before believing. This is contradicted by the fact that the followers adamantly believed in the message. The matter which actually confirms that their judgment was sound because they do not judge matters superficially with the same standards as those of the rich, nor as those of the empowered, nor as those who owns slaves. Those believers judged matters deeply with their heart, which is given the power to 'perceive' and with their tongues, which proclaimed faith. A man's worth depends on his two smallest organs: his heart and his tongue. (1)

But as for the service offered by the so-called vilest people, their 'masters' would certainly be traumatised and grievously suffer. It is the 'common' people who offer the services; had it not been for the work of the carpenter, there would not be any furnished houses. Similarly, had it not been for the labourers and the constructors, there would not be any sumptuous palaces. Likewise, had it not been for the work of the cook, there would not be any lavish meals; all services rendered by the 'weak' are in the interest of the rich and the powerful.

(1) This is an Arabic proverb. Ibn Manzour explained its meaning in Lisan Al-Arab that the person should judge and deal with matters by using his gifted organs; the heart and the tongue.

Thus, society needs wealthy people, even by the way of inheritance, to spend their money to help the needy who provide services through strenuous work. Therefore, the weak and the poor are an integral essential category for powerfulness and welfare.

On looking closely at wealthy and powerful people, their supremacy refers to the efforts of the so-called 'vilest' Thus, if common people relinquish the service of their masters, the latter will lose his power and authority.

The disbelieving elite of the people of Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him are quoted as saying '…We cannot see how you are any better than we are. In fact, we think you are a liar."…' (Hud: 27) Having said this, they had thereby refuted the fact that they owe their power and wealth to the efforts of the so-called 'vilest'; in this manner, they had denied them any importance.

Allah the Exalted points out the wrong deeds of certain societies, 'And they said, "Why was this Quran not sent down to a distinguished man, from either of the two cities? (1)" Are they the ones who share out your Lord's grace? We are the ones who give them their share of livelihood in this world and We have raised some of them above others in rank, so that some may take others into service...' (az-Zukhruf: 31-32). Therefore, Allah the Almighty has allotted each human with his share of wealth. It would be an error of judgment to think that the people who have 'exceptional wealth' are the affluent; rather, they are merely gifted. When someone is distinctly skilled in one field, he will help others in his field of expertise, and others will help him in theirs; it is basically a matter of integration. That is why Allah Glorified is He never sustains anyone's wealth forever; rather, He has made the world such that it is in a constant state of flux.

Therefore, had the disbelievers of Nuh's community realised what the word fadl (superiority, advantage, favour or surplus) really meant, they would not have uttered it. For the first direct meaning of fadl is the surplus of something, whether it is concrete, physical or moral and ethical. The parties involved in the issue of fadl are fadil (the superior person, the benefactor, or the favour doer) and mafdul (the inferior person or the favour beneficiary).

(1) The two cities are Mecca and Ta`if.

If only every tyrant could tell us what is the advantage or favour in their life, it is some more money or power, yet all those who serve the tyrant are superior to him because the authority of the tyrant is built upon their actions. They are the actual owner of advantage in terms of what is more than necessary.

Thus, the real link between creatures in this world is the ‘need’ to one another, not ‘domination’. Hence, when we see a tyrant abusing his power, we tell him: think about the situation because it is only through ‘abject’ people that you are only able to exert your tyrannical rule; you display your power by means of those who are skilled in the use of weapons, or those who are causing harm to other people. So these ‘abject’ people are the basis of such a power and the means to realise this domination.

The disbelievers from Nuh (Noah’s) people said, ‘…and we do not see that you could be in any way superior to us…’ (Hud: 27). This demonstrates that they understood fadl to mean material wealth and power. They completely misunderstood the word’s meaning.

The True Lord Glorified is He concludes the verse by saying, ‘…on the contrary, we think that you are liars!’ (Hud: 27)

The Arabic word zhann (thinking) means more likely probability, while the less likely is wahm (illusion). This confirms the existence of an innate light of truth that flashes inside the human soul which is called in fitrah (sound disposition) for the arrogant will remain steeped in arrogance until their fitrah at some point flashes, making them realise truth and falsehood. So, when these disbelievers were hit by one of these flashes they said, ‘…on the contrary, we think that you are liars!’ (Hud: 27) They did not say, ‘We believe that you are liars’.

Then, in the next verse, the True Lord Glorified is He says:

قَالَ يَٰقَوۡمِ أَرَءَيۡتُمۡ إِن كُنتُ عَلَىٰ بَيِّنَةٖ مِّن رَّبِّي وَءَاتَىٰنِي رَحۡمَةٗ مِّنۡ
عِندِهِۦ فَعُمِّيَتۡ عَلَيۡكُمۡ أَنُلۡزِمُكُمُوهَا وَأَنتُمۡ لَهَا كَٰرِهُونَ ﴿٢٨﴾

He said, 'My people, think: if I did have a clear sign from my Lord, and He had given me grace of His own, though it was hidden from you, could we force you to accept it against your will? [28] (The Quran, Hud: 28)

When Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him says ara`aytum (What do you think?), it means: tell me, if I possess a clear evidence from Allah and He has vouchsafed unto me such a grace (the divine message) and the secrets of these matters have been veiled from you, can I force you to accept it? No, because faith must come voluntarily as a result of obvious persuasion, and out of emotional fervour, and a result of clear choice.

When we look at His words, '…can we force it on you even though it be hateful to you?' (Hud: 28), it is clear that a messenger cannot force his people to believe, because faith must capture the inner heart and not the outer shell; and coercing the outer shell does not foster faith in the heart.

The True Lord Glorified is He wants submissive, humble hearts from the believers, not just submissive outer shells. Had He wished so, He would have forced them to believe since everything in the universe is subjected to His power. Allah Glorified is He says, 'O men! Are you more difficult to create than the heaven which He has built?' (an-Nazi'at: 27)

Thus, the True Lord Glorified is He has subjected the sky, the sun, the moon, and the whole universe to His will. Allah Glorified is He also tells us, 'Greater indeed than the creation of man is the creation of the heavens and the earth…' (Ghafir: 57). The entire universe is subjected to the will of Allah.

The True Lord Glorified is He has also created the angels who are a nobler class of creatures than human beings, and Allah Glorified is He says regarding them, '…who do not disobey Allah in whatever He has commanded them, but [always) do what they are bidden to do.' (at-Tahrim: 6)

Therefore, if the True Lord Glorified is He wished blocks of obedience, He would have forced all of them to worship Him. However, He wants the loving submissive and humble hearts of His free creatures and that is why Allah Glorified is He says, ‘Would you, perhaps, torment yourself to death (with grief) because they (who live around you) refuse to believe (in it)? Had We so willed, We could have sent down unto them a message from the skies, so that their necks would (be forced to) bow down before it in humility.’ (ash-Shu'ara’: 3-4)

Thus, we understand that the True Lord Glorified is He is above than to coerce the outer shapes of human beings. Rather, it is His will that we are given a choice and that is why Allah Glorified is He does not coerce anyone into faith.

Faith, in principle, should not be out of coercion, but should come because of willingness and satisfaction. As the True Lord Glorified is He says, ‘there shall be no coercion in matters of faith. Distinct has now become the right way from (the way of) error…’ (al-Baqara: 256).

Thus, the True Lord Glorified is He calls upon His creatures to present the issue of faith to their intellects. When their intellects realise the excellence of Allah’s creativity, they promptly choose the certainty of faith. The True Lord Glorified is He says, ‘Verily, in the creation of the heavens and the earth, and in the succession of night and day, there are indeed messages for all who are endowed with insight.’ (Al-‘Imran: 190)

Coercion deals with things that are unclear. However, with faith the guidance is clear. For when the Law of Allah requires that you do not steal from anyone, it guarantees in return, that no one shall steal from you. When it orders you not to pry into the private life of others, it thereby protects your own private life, and when it orders you not to cheat or envy anyone, this is a comfort for man.

Therefore, the demands of Allah’s Way consist of things that are comfortable for man. If you were to look at the demands of Allah’s Way, you would find that they are not addressed to you alone, but everyone else is commanded to follow them as well. Allah has intended that such a harmonious exchange will make a world of give and take.

Therefore, the ‘right way’ does not need to force its followers to walk onto it, for its truth is clear and visibly distinct from error. However, the mistake that some people make is that they take this verse out of context, for example when you ask a Muslim to pray, they might reply with this part of the Quran verse, 'there shall be no coercion in matters of faith…' (al-Baqara: 256). You should tell such a person that there is no coercion in making someone adopt faith, but once you become a believer, beware not to break its rules and do not be lax towards its commands. That is why the True Lord Glorified is He has prepared a harsh punishment for abandoning faith because The True Lord Glorified is He did not coerce anyone to adopt faith. One must think and contemplate because if they enter the realm of faith and then commit a sin, they shall suffer the corresponding punishment for that sin. For they came into faith out of their own free will and they used their intellect to make this choice. Thus, for every transgression there is a corresponding punishment. Therefore, there is no coercion when it comes to adopting faith, but to abandon faith entails punishment to the apostate, and other minor transgressions entail relevant punishment too.

So, when everyone becomes aware of such matters, they realise that the True Lord Glorified is He has made the adoption of faith arduous, if only because the consequences of leaving faith are arduous.

Then, Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him is quoted as saying:

وَيَٰقَوۡمِ لَآ أَسۡـَٔلُكُمۡ عَلَيۡهِ مَالًاۖ إِنۡ أَجۡرِيَ إِلَّا عَلَى ٱللَّهِۚ وَمَآ أَنَا۠ بِطَارِدِ ٱلَّذِينَ
ءَامَنُوٓاْۚ إِنَّهُم مُّلَٰقُواْ رَبِّهِمۡ وَلَٰكِنِّيٓ أَرَىٰكُمۡ قَوۡمٗا تَجۡهَلُونَ ٢٩

My people, I ask no reward for it from you; my reward comes only from God. I will not drive away the faithful: they are sure to meet their Lord. I can see you are foolish [29]
(The Quran, Hud: 29)

All messengers uttered similar lines. For example, in other parts of the Quran, the True Lord Glorified is He says, '…No reward do I ask of you for this (truth)…' (al-An'am: 90). For the reward might not necessarily be money, it might be dates, or barley, or cotton and so on, and 'reward' can be more than just money. That is why the True Lord Glorified is He says, 'No benefit do I ask of you for this (message), my reward rests with none but Allah' (Hud: 29).

So, here we find that the True Lord has elevated the matter to a higher status. Nuh (Noah) says, '…my reward rests with none but Allah…' (Hud: 29)

This indicates that the matter which the messenger has brought forth is highly propitious since the reward should correspond to the value of the service rendered. We know that to exchange something for money or for its equivalent is called buying, whereas when someone utilises a property or an asset, while the ownership title is maintained to the original owner, then the beneficiary pays a rent fee for it. Here, it is as if Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him is saying, 'I deserve a reward since I am offering you this service, but I have not accepted anything from you, not because of any ascetic attitude, but because I hope to receive a reward from He Who is Greater, more Beneficent than you'.

Furthermore, because the disbelievers had described Nuh's (Noah's) followers as being 'the most abject among us', Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him answered by saying, '…And I shall not repulse (any of) those who have attained to faith…' (Hud: 29). This response makes it clear that Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him cannot possibly repulse a believer from the community of faith just because he is poor. Spiritual certainty has nothing to do with wealth and power or with poverty and need.

Allah's messenger never cast out his poor followers to make room for wealthier newcomers, for all stand equally before Allah Glorified is He.

The True Lord Glorified is He says, 'Hence, repulse not (any of) those who at morn and evening invoke their Lord, seeking His countenance. You are in no wise accountable for them – just as they are in no wise accountable for you – and you have therefore no right to repulse them; for then you would be among the evildoers.' (al-An'am: 52)

The True Lord Glorified is He had made the so-called 'abject' people a test for others. Let those who would become arrogant because of the poverty and weakness of the messengers' followers, drown in their own conceit! That is why the True Lord Glorified is He says, 'For it is in this way that We try men through one another – to the end that they might ask, "Has Allah, then, bestowed His favour upon those others in preference to us?" Does Allah not know best as to who is grateful (to Him)?' (al-An'am: 53)

The True Lord Glorified is He also orders His messenger to be kind to the weak, and not to abandon them or neglect any one of them. The True Lord Glorified is He says, 'And contain yourself in patience by the side of all who at morn and at evening invoke their Lord, seeking His countenance, and let not your eyes pass beyond them in quest of the beauties of this world's life…' (al-Kahf: 28).

Such commands from Allah came so that no misconduct or animosity should arise between the believers over the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and it would not be said that, 'so-and-so is close to him'. That is why when the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was surrounded by company he would distribute his looks evenly between the present companions, so that each would feel as if the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him was looking solely at him.

In the verse which we are presently studying, the True Lord Glorified is He mentions Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him describing the poorest of the believers, '…Verily, they (know that they) are destined to meet their Lord…' (Hud: 29). This is a declaration that Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him will not expel those who are weak from among his flock. If he were to expel those who are destined to meet Allah Glorified is He would Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him wish it to be said, in front of Allah, that he had repulsed a people who believed in his message? Of course not.

We know that the True Lord Glorified is He holds His messengers accountable. He says, 'Thus, on Judgment Day We shall most certainly call to account all those unto whom a divine message was sent, and We shall most certainly call to account the message-bearers themselves' (al-A'raf: 6). Therefore, Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him is accountable to his Lord, but the disbelievers of his community are ignorant of this. That is why the True Lord Glorified is He says at the end of the verse, '…whereas in you I see people without any awareness (of right and wrong)!" (Hud: 29) This means that they do not understand Nuh's mission and they do not realise that he will be held accountable by His Lord.

Then, the True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَيَٰقَوْمِ مَن يَنصُرُنِي مِنَ ٱللَّهِ إِن طَرَدتُّهُمْۚ أَفَلَا تَذَكَّرُونَ ٣٠

My people, who could help me against God if I drove the faithful away? Will you not take heed? [30]
(The Quran, Hud: 30)

Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him is clearly revealing to us that he could not face Allah, if he were to expel the weak from among his followers because none shall speak favourably of Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him before Allah Glorified is He on the Day of Judgment; for on that day, Allah alone shall have absolute dominion and none shall intercede on another's behalf except with His permission, and none can help or give nasr (victory) to anyone else if such is not the Will of Allah Glorified is He for He is the All-Dominant over all of His creatures.

Nasr (victory) occurs by overcoming opponents, but intercession occurs by submission; the True Lord Glorified is He does not permit anyone to intercede on behalf of one who has repulsed a believer from the flock of faith.

Nuh's words are a reminder to his people. That is why the True Lord Glorified is He says, '…Will you not, then, keep this in mind?' (Hud: 30) meaning that you must not let yourselves be overtaken by forgetfulness.

Just as the True Lord Glorified is He mentions the question of remembrance (the practise of which keeps forgetfulness at bay), the True Lord Glorified is He also mentions the question of contemplation which is reflection on things to bring about something new by using one's intellect. It is to meditate on the Perfection of the Creator, and to discover those facts which are the landmarks along the path.

Likewise, the True Lord Glorified is He encourages us to consider things deeply; meaning that we must not be taken in by the outward appearances of things, rather, we must delve deeply into the truth of matters. That is why Allah Glorified is He says, 'Will they not, then, try to understand this Quran?' (an-Nisa': 82) Will they not then explore the treasures hidden in the fabric of the Quran?

The word tadabur (contemplation, reflection, or careful consideration) means discovering the meanings behind the verses. People stand at different levels when they contemplate the words of Allah.

`Abdullah ibn Mas`ud Allah be pleased with him says about the Quran, thawwiru al-Quran meaning delve into the meaning of its verses so that you might find its treasures, and do not just look at the external aspect of the verses, for the wonders of the Quran are endless.

The True Lord Glorified is He continues:

وَلَآ أَقُولُ لَكُمْ عِندِى خَزَآئِنُ ٱللَّهِ وَلَآ أَعْلَمُ ٱلْغَيْبَ وَلَآ أَقُولُ إِنِّى مَلَكٌ
وَلَآ أَقُولُ لِلَّذِينَ تَزْدَرِىٓ أَعْيُنُكُمْ لَن يُؤْتِيَهُمُ ٱللَّهُ خَيْرًا ۖ ٱللَّهُ أَعْلَمُ بِمَا فِىٓ
أَنفُسِهِمْ ۖ إِنِّىٓ إِذًا لَّمِنَ ٱلظَّٰلِمِينَ ﴿٣١﴾

I am not telling you that I hold God's treasures, or have any knowledge of what is hidden, or that I am an angel. Nor do I say that God will not grant any good to those who are despised in your eyes: God Himself knows best what is in their souls. If I did this I would be one of the wrongdoers'[31] (The Quran, Hud: 31)

Does Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him refute each reason for which the disbelievers of his community might abstain from faith? If they conceive of faith as requiring wealth, then Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him asserts that he does possess Allah's treasures, and he does not possess more than they do, and if they ask him to reveal the unseen, this is impossible since knowledge of the unseen rests with Allah Glorified is He alone.

Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him also does not claim that he is super-human. He is no more human than they are and does not possess anything that he could use to force them to comply with the demands of faith, whether this is wealth, power, or knowledge of the unseen.

Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him shall not repel the weak under-privileged members of his flock whom the disbelievers look down upon in scorn and contempt because Nuh (Noah) fears being held accountable to Allah were he to close the doors of faith against them. We must pause here and consider the True Lord's words, 'And I do not say unto you, "Allah's treasures are with me, nor (do I say) know the reality which is beyond the reach of human perception, nor (do I say) behold, I am an angel, nor do I say of those whom your eyes hold in contempt, 'Never will Allah grant them any good…' (Hud: 31).

We notice that the language shifts to al-ghyba (third person), for Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him did not address the poor people directly. In other words, he did not say, 'Allah shall never grant you any good because He knows what is in their hearts', and had Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him uttered such a thing he would have been a transgressor.

The letter 'l' (usually used as 'for' or 'to' but in this case 'about') in the word lilladhin (of those) indicates that Nuh (Noah) is talking about the helpless and not to them directly. The letter 'l' here means 'about'. There are other instances where this has occurred such as when the True Lord Glorified is He says, '…And they say, "This Quran is nothing but a falsehood invented by man!" And finally, they who are bent on denying the truth speak thus of the truth when it comes to them, "This is clearly nothing but spellbinding eloquence!"' (Saba': 43) In this instance, the disbelievers are not speaking to the truth; rather, they are speaking about the truth.

Thus, Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him demonstrates that if he had expelled these people who are described as 'abject', this would have implied that he was aware of the inner intentions of people's hearts, and Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him knows with absolute certainty, that Allah is the most knowledgeable of what is in people's hearts. Therefore, he refuses to put himself in a position where he is committing an injustice to himself or others.

The True Lord Glorified is He then says:

قَالُوا۟ يَـٰنُوحُ قَدْ جَـٰدَلْتَنَا فَأَكْثَرْتَ جِدَٰلَنَا فَأْتِنَا بِمَا
تَعِدُنَآ إِن كُنتَ مِنَ ٱلصَّـٰدِقِينَ ﴿٣٢﴾

They said, 'Noah! You have argued with us for too long.
Bring down on us the punishment you threaten us with, if you are telling the truth' [32] (The Quran, Hud: 32)

Jidal (controversy) is to say something in response to something else, with each party aiming to make the other abandon their point of view based on some proof or doubt; the goal is to refute the other's position. Thus, jidal is an argument between two parties, exchanging debate, each attempting to convince the other to change their views. The noun jidal is derived from the verb jadal which means to twist together strands of flax or silk or any other similar type of yarn, then to weave a pair of strands together, and continue doing so with every pair of strands around the other until a rope is completed.

A strong man is described in Arabic by the phrase 'maftul al-`adalat' (a man with twisted muscles) meaning that his muscles are not flabby and weak; rather, they are taut and tightly interconnected.

When you look at the muscular system, you are truly amazed at the power of the True Lord Glorified is He who created each muscle in a unique way while allowing it at the same time to coordinate with other muscles to perform the required movement.

For when a human being lifts their head up, they are using more than one muscle, and when using a hand, more than one muscle moves and if the movement of a single muscle stopped, this would prevent the next movement from occurring.

They had told Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him '...You have contended with us in argument, and have (needlessly) prolonged our controversy…' (Hud: 32). We know that Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him lived for nine-hundred-and-fifty years which means that his contention with them lasted a very long time. An argument is different from a dispute because an argument tries to settle the truth, and a dispute occurs after the truth appears. An argument therefore is required, and the True Lord Glorified is He says, '...and argue with them in the kindliest manner…' (an-Nahl: 125). The True Lord Glorified is He also says, 'Allah has indeed heard the words of her who pleads with you concerning her husband, and complains unto Allah…' (al-Mujadala: 1).

Then, argumentation is necessary for reaching the truth, on the condition that it is a quiet discussion, not one where tensions run high or where any violent outbursts ensue.

There is a difference between a civilized exchange of views and a clash of opinions, for in the latter there is no desire to reach the truth, whereas in the former the truth is arrived at; just as when we rub flint against a piece of metal and sparks fly and we perceive the truth. But when deeply entrenched opinions clash, the truth is concealed.

Mira` is the disputing argumentation that ensues after the appearance of the truth and the word is taken from mari ad-dar which means ‘milking’ a she-camel or a cow. For when they cause the milk to flow from the udder of a she-camel or a cow, the udder is full and overflowing, and the milk flows down profusely, and when the milking is done, the person who did the work tries to extract the last few drops of milk, it is this last phase that is called al-maryi. So, they derived the word mira` from this process meaning the thing that follows the truth’s appearance.

There is also the word hijaj which means trying to find the huja i.e. the ultimate proof that would refute the adversary’s argument.

Thus, after the disbelievers of Nuh’s (Noah’s) community got tired of arguing with him, they asked that he bring down the suffering that he had warned them of. They had started finding this punishment slow in coming because Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him had been living among them for nine-hundred-and-fifty years. They said, ‘…bring upon us, therefore, that with which you do threaten us, if you are a man of truth!’ (Hud: 32)

Having said this, it is as if they had assumed that the matter of bringing down the punishment or withholding it was within Nuh’s (Noah’s) capacity. However, this matter is not in Nuh’s (Noah’s) hands, it is the purview of Allah Glorified is He.

That is why Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him warns them:

قَالَ إِنَّمَا يَأْتِيكُم بِهِ ٱللَّهُ إِن شَآءَ وَمَآ أَنتُم بِمُعْجِزِينَ ﴿٣٣﴾

He said, ‘It is God who will bring it down, if He wishes, and you will not be able to escape [33] (The Quran, Hud: 33)

The True Lord Glorified is He determines the timing and the coming of punishment, and Allah does not rush things simply to satisfy the wishes of his servants.

However, at the same time, they will not be able to prevent Allah Glorified is He from carrying out the punishment when its time does come because no power in existence, no matter how adamant, can oppose the Will of Allah Glorified is He.

Nuh (Noah) peace be upon is being quoted as saying:

وَلَا يَنفَعُكُمْ نُصْحِىٓ إِنْ أَرَدتُّ أَنْ أَنصَحَ لَكُمْ إِن كَانَ ٱللَّهُ يُرِيدُ
أَن يُغْوِيَكُمْ ۚ هُوَ رَبُّكُمْ وَإِلَيْهِ تُرْجَعُونَ ﴿٣٤﴾

My advice will be no use to you if God wishes to leave you to your delusions: He is your Lord and to Him you will be returned'[34] (The Quran, Hud: 34)

Here, the meaning is that if Allah Glorified is He wants to beguile you and keep you lost in error, you will hardly benefit from my good advice if I wanted to give you advice. The verse has a compound conditional clause.

An example of this in our life is when a school principal expels a student as a punishment for having done something wrong. The school principal might take pity on the student and say, 'If you come back tomorrow, I will accept your apology if you are accompanied by your parent.' The principal's saying, 'if your parent is with you'—is a post-positioned condition, but it should have come in advance.

In the verse which we are now studying, the first condition comes later, but does Allah Glorified is He really mislead his servants? Absolutely not; Allah Glorified is He guides them. Ghuwaya is deviation and going astray from the straight path.

The True Lord Glorified is He says of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him 'This fellow-man of yours has not gone astray, nor is he deluded.' (an-Najm: 2)

Allah Glorified is He says of Adam peace be upon him when he ate from the forbidden tree, '…And thus did Adam disobey his Lord, and thus did he fall into grievous error.' (Ta Ha: 121)

We must not fall into the same error that others fall into, for there are people who take the popular understanding or use of certain terms and apply them to doctrinal ideas; words have more than one meaning. That is why we must take into consideration all the meanings of a given word so that we can apply the meaning that is most appropriate to the context.

For example, the True Lord Glorified is He says, 'Yet they were succeeded by generations (of people) who lost all thought of prayer and followed their own lusts; and these will, in time, meet with utter disillusion.' (Maryam: 59)

Here, the True Lord's words, '…and these will, in time, meet with utter disillusion.' (Maryam: 59), mean that they shall meet their punishment (disillusion in the translation of the verse above) because of their transgression. Thus, the punishment itself was given the same title as the offender.

Also, for example, the True Lord Glorified is He says, 'But (remember that an attempt at) requiting evil may, too, become an evil…' (ash-Shura: 40). The True Lord Glorified is He never wrongs his servants, it is they who wrong themselves. Thus, whatever they receive as punishment is itself given the title of 'sin'. The same applies to the term ghay (disillusion) which has the connotation of ighwa` (to err and to go astray), and simultaneously means the punishment caused by erring and going astray.

Throughout the Holy Book, the True Lord Glorified is He gives numerous examples of ighwa`. Adam peace be upon him erred from the path by eating from the forbidden tree despiteteh fact that the True Lord had explicitly warned him not to approach it. In this situation the True Lord Glorified is He says, '…And thus did Adam disobey his Lord, and thus did he fall into grievous error.' (Ta Ha: 121)

Of course, what Adam peace be upon him had done was due to his human nature, and, Allah Glorified is He wanted to inform him that if he went astray, by not abiding by the command of 'do' and 'do not do', he will be exposed to shame and disgrace, represented by exposition of his private parts. Thus, Adam peace be upon him gained the experience that would prepare him for receiving Divine Guidance and Divine Revelation.

The True Lord Glorified is He tells us that 'Whereupon Satan said: "O my Lord! Since You have thwarted me, I shall indeed make all that is evil on earth seem goodly to them, and shall most certainly beguile them into grievous error.' (al-Hijr: 39) Did Allah Glorified is He really trick the devil? The True Lord Glorified is He does not trick anyone, but he does leave the choice of either obeying or disobeying open.

Had the True Lord Glorified is He created us all as devout believers, He would not have thereby given us a choice in the matter. If man obeys Allah, he earns Allah's reward, and if he errs, it is man's choice, oriented by him towards the bad deeds, even though he can orient it towards the good too.

Then, free will does not necessarily imply that man will go astray, but there is also the possibility that he will be guided to the right way. Man can find the right path as much as missing it.

The True Lord Glorified is He then says:

أَمْ يَقُولُونَ ٱفْتَرَىٰهُ ۖ قُلْ إِنِ ٱفْتَرَيْتُهُۥ فَعَلَىَّ إِجْرَامِى وَأَنَا۠ بَرِىٓءٌ مِّمَّا تُجْرِمُونَ ٣٥

If [these disbelievers] say, 'He has made this up,' say [Muhammad], 'If I have made this up, I am responsible for my own crime, but I am innocent of the crimes you commit'[35] (The Quran, Hud: 35)

This assertion in the verse comes in the heart of the story of Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him. It might be referring to that which Allah Glorified is He revealed to Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him or it might be that this is what was said to the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

The word iftira is an intentional lie that contradicts actual facts.

If you look at all the obligations which the Law of Allah saddles an individual with, you will also find that it imposes these obligations on everybody, and the benefit which you receive in return is truly great, for if the Law orders you not to steal, for instance, this is also protection from others who might steal from you.

So, when you think of the Path of Allah and all its Laws, do not only think of things that you are demanded to do. Notice rather, all that is given back to you in return. This proves that the Path of Allah is not simply human fabrication.

We know that the Law of Allah determines the criteria for establishing social justice, and when the True Lord Glorified is He makes a law, it might appear to limit your freedom. The truth is that it provides you with numerous services, and it protects you from being oppressed by others.

In response to their accusations that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had invented the Quran, they were given the choice: either to come up with a similar invented book with the same quality or to let Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him endure the punishment for the crime of lying. If it turns out that he did not invent it, then they should have assumed the punishment for accusing him of lying.

The style of the first part of the verse precludes the possibility of their innocence by omitting an understood text with the meaning of the words in italics, ‘If I have invented it, upon me be this sin, and you are innocent from my crime.’ (This is a literary device in Arabic that is called ihtibak, which may be like juxtaposition in English). Likewise, the second part of the verse contained a corresponding omission of the understood text with the meaning, ‘and if I did not invent it, I am innocent from your crime of accusing me of lying’. This is the style of 'ihtibak'.

The True Lord Glorified is He says, ‘…How often has a small host overcome a great host by Allah’s leave...’ (al-Baqara: 249). The small party is that with a small number of men and military equipment. The larger party is characterized by its abundant numbers and a wealth of military equipment. However, with Allah’s help, the small party achieves victory. Thus, the True Lord Glorified is He demonstrates that the usual victory is decided by the reasons of physical strength and huge numbers, but with His Will override such reasons and reaches its goal.

That is why the True Lord Glorified is He says in another verse, ‘You have already had a sign in the two hosts that met in battle, one host fighting in Allah’s cause and the other denying Him…’ (Al-‘Imran: 13).

Allah Glorified is He did not mention that the first host is composed of believers, and He also did not mention that the second host fights for the sake of all that is unholy and satanic. This is an example of that literary device known as ihtibak.

In the verse that we are currently studying, the True Lord Glorified is He says, ‘...Say O Prophet, “If I have invented it, upon me be this sin, but far be it from me to commit the sin of which you are guilty.’ (Hud: 35)

It is the True Lord’s Will however, that he reveals to us what the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said when he addressed his people. Allah Glorified is He says, ‘Say, “Neither shall you be called to account for whatever we may have become guilty of, nor shall we be called to account for whatever you are doing.'" (Saba': 25) Notice that He did not say, 'nor shall we be called to account for whatever you may have become guilty of'. Thus, He did not react to their offenses, both oral and actual, by offending them orally in return. The True Lord Glorified is He notes that the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him also says, '…And, behold, either we (who believe in Him) or you (who deny His oneness) are on the right path, or have clearly gone astray!' (Saba': 24). What the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is employing is a higher standard of debate, one that is consistent with Prophet Muhammad's mercy which is gifted by Allah to the world.

So, after nine-hundred-and-fifty years of arguing back and forth between Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him and his people, the True Lord Glorified is He tells him:

وَأُوحِيَ إِلَىٰ نُوحٍ أَنَّهُۥ لَن يُؤْمِنَ مِن قَوْمِكَ إِلَّا مَن
قَدْ ءَامَنَ فَلَا تَبْتَئِسْ بِمَا كَانُوا۟ يَفْعَلُونَ ﴿٣٦﴾

It was revealed to Noah, 'None of your people will believe, other than those who have already done so, so do not be distressed by, what they do [36] (The Quran, Hud: 36)

In this verse, the word illa (except) does not denote an exception; it has the meaning of 'exclusion', but it means the mere telling of 'other than', i.e. there will be no more who attain to faith other than those who have already attained faith.

There is another example of this and it happens to occur during the discussion of the most cardinal of doctrines. When the True Lord Glorified is He says, 'Had there been in heaven or on earth any deities other than Allah, both would surely have fallen into ruin.' (al-Anbiya': 22) Here, illa means other than. If it were to denote the idea of an 'exception' this would imply that Allah Glorified is He would be one among multiple other deities. Therefore, it is inappropriate to conceive illa as denoting the idea of an 'exception'; rather, in this case it is equivalent to 'besides' and 'other than'. It implies the Oneness of Allah Glorified is He and it ascribes all Divinity to Him alone.

The verse that we are now studying asserts that no other members of Nuh's (Noah's) community might have attained faith other than the few who already had; Allah Glorified is He had put an end to that case. So, this provides us with the justification of why Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him was encouraged to pray against those who did not attain faith. '…O my Lord! Leave not on earth any of those who deny the truth, for behold, if You do leave them, they will always try to lead astray those who worship You, and will give birth to nothing but wickedness and stubborn ingratitude.' (Nuh: 26-27) The justification for Nuh's (Noah's) invoking punishment on those disbelievers is that he had called them to faith for a long period of time, and they never responded. In addition, Allah Glorified is He told Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him that they would not believe. Allah Glorified is He says, '…Be not, then, distressed by anything that they may do' (Hud: 36). Being distressed means feeling exasperating sadness. Nuh's (Noah's) people had disbelieved in Allah, committing the ultimate sin.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَٱصۡنَعِ ٱلۡفُلۡكَ بِأَعۡيُنِنَا وَوَحۡيِنَا وَلَا تُخَٰطِبۡنِي فِي ٱلَّذِينَ ظَلَمُوٓاْ إِنَّهُم مُّغۡرَقُونَ ٣٧

Build the Ark under Our [watchful] eyes and with Our inspiration. Do not plead with Me for those who have done evil – they will be drowned'[37] (The Quran, Hud: 37)

Thus, Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him knew about drowning those disbelievers through Allah's command to build the ark. The command isna` (build) in this verse means to make a certain work. This is not the same as 'craft' and 'artistry'. For 'making', implies making from scratch, like the cup-maker, or the shoemaker, or the dike-builder or the furniture-maker, whereas a craftsman is he who looks over the knowledge and the process of craftsmanship.

There is also another kind of occupation, which is the profession of the farmer who ploughs the earth, sows the seeds, and waters them for plants to grow. They are called agriculturalists or farmers because agriculture is a direct means of providing and sustaining life essentials.

On the other hand, a maker deals with life needs, developing them, inventing a machine that had not existed before etc. while a craftsman serves and maintains that machine. A merchant however, brings all these together, being the link between the producer and the consumer; they display products for buying and selling.

The True Lord Glorified is He says to Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him 'but build…the ark' (Hud: 37). Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him was to build something new that was made from another existing thing. Nuh (Noah) had previously planted a tree which had lived throughout that long time, and its trunk and branches had become extremely large. Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him began cutting the tree up to build the ark (it is said its dimensions spanned three-hundred arm-lengths, and its width spanned fifty arm-lengths and its height measured thirty arm-lengths). The ark contained three stories to accommodate the believers and the pairs of all animals on earth.

It is known that the tree that Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him had planted had become very large indeed since Nuh (Noah) had been preaching his message to his people for a very long time. We also know that the trunk of a tree increases in width every year such that when we cut it down we find that the trunk is composed of numerous concentric circles, each one representing a year in the life of the tree.

Thus, the tree was so large that Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him could build the ark. The True Lord Glorified is He taught (Noah) peace be upon him how to build the ark through revelation and through Divine inspiration. Was it not Allah Glorified is He who inspired Dawud (David) peace be upon him the industry of metalwork? Indeed, it was. Moreover, Allah Glorified is He says that He ordered the mountains as well as the birds to echo Dawud's invocation, and He also caused metal to become soft and malleable without having to use fire, 'And indeed, did We grace Dawud (David) with Our favour, "O you mountains! Sing with him the praise of Allah! And [likewise) you birds!" And We softened all sharpness in him and inspired him thus, "Do good deeds lavishly…"' (Saba': 10-11). Thus, the True Lord Glorified is He informed us the metal became soft and malleable without fire by His Will so that Dawud (David) peace be upon him could craft large shields that would protect a man's torso and other vulnerable areas on the body. Indeed, the True Lord Glorified is He inspired Dawud (David) peace be upon him to build such shields in a remarkable way such that they would extend all the way down to the ankles and interlace. The armour was interlacing, just like matting is interlacing with each piece of straw strewn with another, and they are all bound together in a way that makes them easy to flatten or roll up. In the same verse the True Lord Glorified is He reveals how that precise technique was revealed to Dawud (David) peace be upon him ‘without stint’ (Saba’: 11).

This means that when you weave the rings of soft metal together to make body armour, you must craft that armour with utmost precision so that it does not fit tightly restricting movement and preventing taking full breaths, and consequently, causing rapid tiredness and inability to continue fighting.

Armour should also not be loose fitting around a warrior’s torso lest the size of the shield be a help to the enemy’s sword, with the armour itself striking the warrior’s chest, and the power of the armour doubling the enemy’s sword power. However, the ideal war armour is that enclosing the body without restricting its movement. So, Dawud (David) peace be upon him perfected the crafting of those body armours using the precise design revealed to him by the True Lord Glorified is He. For, he had built them according to the True Lord’s command when He said, ‘without stint.’ (Saba’: 11) The Arabic word qaddir (without stint) means calculating and designing to perfection.

For those whose profession is to build things, they should know that when the Holy Quran advises on the question of perfecting one’s work, it is thereby informing us of the way we must perfect and refine everything we do so that we might take such advice as an illuminating guidance that the work might be virtuous. You see someone who perfects his work while invoking, ‘Oh Allah!’ as if the primordial state is acknowledging the power of the True Lord Glorified is He to bestow man with the capacity for perfection and ingenuity.

As part of his tutelage of Dawud (David) peace be upon him, the True Lord Glorified is He also says, ‘And We taught him how to make garments (of Allah-consciousness) for you, O men…’ (al-Anbiya’: 80). Thus, Allah Glorified is He inspires the notion, ‘to do like so’, into the heart of a messenger or a prophet; and he does so.

When we look at the ancient Egyptian’s civilization, we find that all their science and art, including embalming, making and using dyes and sculptures, were the specialty of the priests who represented the religious authority. These priests never wrote down any of the secrets of these sciences so that no modern researcher has been able to discover them. Thus, we see that the origins of all matters are coming from Allah.

Regarding the story of Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him, we find the True Lord Glorified is He says, ‘but build, under Our eyes and according to Our inspiration, the ark [that shall save thee and those who follow you); and do not appeal to Me in behalf of those who are bent on evildoing – for, behold, they are destined to be drowned!’ (Hud: 37) The word a`yunina (our eyes) means under our protection and our guardianship. To be sure, it denotes a complete protection; full guardianship.

The True Lord Glorified is He has already said regarding Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him ‘And so, await in patience your Lord’s judgment, for you are well within Our sight…’ (at-Tur: 48).

The True Lord Glorified is He also says in the story of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him ‘…and (this) in order that you might be formed under My eye.’ (Ta Ha: 39) The True Lord Glorified is He rescued Musa (Moses) peace be upon him from Pharaoh who was killing the children of the People of Israel, and Allah Glorified is He planted in the heart of the Pharaoh’s wife a deep love for Musa (Moses) peace be upon him. Allah Glorified is He says, ‘…And (thus early) I spread My Own love over you…’ (Ta Ha: 39) For when he was still a young suckling, Musa (Moses) peace be upon him was cast into the waters and was found by the Pharaoh’s men, but Pharaoh’s wife pleaded for Musa’s (Moses’s) life saying, ‘…A joy to the eye (could this child be) for me and you...’ (al-Qasas: 9). Thus, we find the very enemy of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him and his people, is adopting Musa (Moses) and taking him under his wing; it is as if Allah Glorified is He is telling them: I will make you nurture the person who will preside over your destruction.

The True Lord's words, ‘but build, under Our eyes and according to Our inspiration, the ark (that shall save thee and those who follow you)…’ (Hud: 37). It means that, if you, Nuh (Noah), are set back by an obstacle, We shall inspire you with knowledge by which you can overcome it.

As Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him was busy building the ark, he needed wooden planks, and these had to be tightly bound to each other. Nails had not been invented at that time, so Allah inspired him to bind them together with tightly twisted ropes. This has been done in modern times by one of the explorers of America; he built a ship made from papyrus and tied it all together with strong, tightly twisted ropes.

Regarding the way Nuh's (Noah's) ark was built, the True Lord Glorified is He says, 'but him We bore on that (vessel) made of (mere) planks and nails' (al-Qamar: 13) meaning that Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him had crafted planks of wood and tied them together with tightly twisted ropes such that they did not allow water to penetrate inside the boat.

In our time, this is just like the construction of wood barrels where the craftsman uses rectangular pieces of wood and binds them together using a sturdy frame; and when liquid is poured into them, the wood absorbs it and expands, thus closing the gaps and preventing the liquid from leaking from the barrel because wood is the only material that expands with cold, in contrast to all the other materials which expand with heat.

That is why we find that expert carpenters build their furniture, doors or windows in the temperate months; if they are built in summer, and the wood is shrunken during that time, then when winter comes along, the wood expands and this results in doors and shutters not closing properly; similarly, if they are built in winter while the wood is in an expanded state, summer will come and the wood will shrink, causing doors to malfunction, and making it hard to close window shutters tightly.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says, '…and do not appeal to Me in behalf of those who are bent on evildoing – for, behold, they are destined to be drowned!' (11: 37) meaning not to speak to Me regarding the question of forgiveness towards those who wronged themselves by disbelieving for they have committed the ultimate transgression; that is, they rejected the summit of the doctrine which is to believe in Allah Glorified is He The One and Only besides Whom there are no partners; that is why they deserve the punishment of drowning.

Thus, did Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him come to know that building of the ark was related to the type of punishment that was to befall those who rejected his message; for he and the believers will be saved, whereas those who disbelieved will be drowned.

The True Lord Glorified is He further explains this when He says:

وَيَصۡنَعُ ٱلۡفُلۡكَ وَكُلَّمَا مَرَّ عَلَيۡهِ مَلَأٞ مِّن قَوۡمِهِۦ سَخِرُواْ مِنۡهُۚ
قَالَ إِن تَسۡخَرُواْ مِنَّا فَإِنَّا نَسۡخَرُ مِنكُمۡ كَمَا تَسۡخَرُونَ ٣٨

So he began to build the Ark, and whenever leaders of his people passed by, they laughed at him. He said, 'You may scorn us now, but we will come to scorn you [38] (The Quran, Hud: 38)

The superiors of Nuh's community used to pass by Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him as he was building the ark and scoff at him. For after having claimed prophethood, he now seems to have reinvented himself as a carpenter. Moreover, they wondered how this ship is supposed to get from Al-Mawsil (a small city in the north of Iraq) to the sea.

Little did they know, as Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him knew, that it would be floodwaters that would carry the ark. We notice in the words of the True Lord Glorified is He 'And so Nuh (Noah) set himself to building the ark…' (Hud: 38) that Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him is executing the command that Allah Glorified is He has issued to him in the previous verse, 'but build, under Our eyes and according to Our inspiration, the ark (that shall save thee and those who follow thee), and do not appeal to Me in behalf of those who are bent on evildoing – for, behold, they are destined to be drowned!' (Hud: 38)

Then, the True Lord Glorified is He says,

فَسَوۡفَ تَعۡلَمُونَ مَن يَأۡتِيهِ عَذَابٞ يُخۡزِيهِ وَيَحِلُّ عَلَيۡهِ عَذَابٞ مُّقِيمٌ ٣٩

You will find out who will receive a humiliating punishment, and on whom a lasting suffering will descend' [39] (The Quran, Hud: 39)

We notice in the words 'you will come to know' (fasawfa t`lamoon) that the action which Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him knew about concerned the flooding and drowning that would to happen in the future because any event has more than one facet, so that if one speaks about the event after it has come to pass, the verb used will be in the past tense; and if one speaks of an event at the same time that it is happening, the verb used will be in the present tense.

And when one speaks about an event for which the time has not yet come, in this case it is necessary to prefix the verb with the letter ‘s’ (in Arabic to indicate the future tense); for example, we would say, ‘sa ya`lamoon’ (will know) about the short-term future. As for the long-term future, we would use the word fasawfa (will be knowing). And we know that Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him spent many years building the ark. That is why the word fasawfa is used to indicate a maximum length of time.

And what is it that they shall come to know? It is punishment and suffering. And who is it that shall suffer this punishment? Is it Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him and his followers or is it the disbelievers from, Nuh’s (Noah’s) people and the great ones from among his community?

The True Lord Glorified is He says, ‘But in time you will come to know who it is that (in this world) shall be visited by suffering which will cover him with ignominy…’ (Hud: 39). Thus, these words confirm Nuh’s (Noah’s) knowledge of the suffering that is to befall them because they had disbelieved and scoffed at him saying, ‘…bring upon us, therefore, that with which you do threaten us, if you are a man of truth!’ (Hud: 32)

And the True Lord Glorified is He says, ‘…and upon whom long-lasting suffering shall alight (in the life to come)!’ (Hud: 39) We find that the opposite of the word yahil (corresponding 'alight' in the description verse*)* is ‘moving’ or ‘fleeting’. So, the word yahil denotes ‘settling’ or ‘staying’ after having descended. For example, to say, ‘hal bimakan’ means to arrive and settle at a place; this is opposed to moving away and emigrating from a place. And the word ‘long-lasting’ (muqim in Arabic) means that the suffering that will alight upon them will be permanent or lasting forever.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

حَتَّىٰٓ إِذَا جَآءَ أَمۡرُنَا وَفَارَ ٱلتَّنُّورُ قُلۡنَا ٱحۡمِلۡ فِيهَا مِن كُلّٖ زَوۡجَيۡنِ ٱثۡنَيۡنِ وَأَهۡلَكَ
إِلَّا مَن سَبَقَ عَلَيۡهِ ٱلۡقَوۡلُ وَمَنۡ ءَامَنَۚ وَمَآ ءَامَنَ مَعَهُۥٓ إِلَّا قَلِيلٞ ٤٠

When Our command came, and water gushed up out of the earth, We said, 'Place on board this Ark a pair of each species, and your own family – except those against whom the sentence has already been passed – and those who have believed,' though only a few believed with him [40] (The Quran, Hud: 40)

The word hatta (till) indicates that the duration elapsed up until an appointed time. The word amruna (judgment) refers to the deluge, and the True Lord's command to Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him that he places on board the ark a pair of every species of animal in addition to his followers, few as they were.

Therefore, in the story of Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him there is more than one phase. Allah Glorified is He orders Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him '…build, under Our eyes and according to Our inspiration, the ark (that shall save thee and those who follow thee).' (Hud: 37) And so Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him busied himself with building the ark, and this process took Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him a long time before Allah ordered the waters to gush forth. The True Lord Glorified is He says, '…and waters gushed forth in torrents over the face of the earth.' (Hud: 40)

The word fara (gushed) implies that the waters had reached a boiling point. For water contains air, and the proof of this is that fish can breathe in it, And when we boil water we notice air bubbles rising to the surface, then the boiling water reaches such frenzy that it overflows the container.

And the word at-tannur (oven, furnace, not expressly mentioned in the above translation of the Quran verse) indicates the place where bread is baked. When the waters gushed forth out of at-tannur, it was the sign for Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him to bring all those whom he wanted to save on board including his followers and all the animals and life facilities at that time. The signal was when the water gushed forth out of the furnace, a place from which water is not expected to flow.

The religious scholars have different opinions when it comes the meaning of at-tannur (the furnace). Some have said that it is the place where Adam peace be upon him used to bake bread; others said that it is the place where Eve used to do her chores, and others that it is Nuh’s (Noah’s) home or the home of an old woman. These explanations are neither helpful nor harmful; what is important is that the flooding of the furnace represented a clear sign for Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him and that when this happened it was time that he bring a pair of each kind of animal on board the ark.

When the True Lord Glorified is He says, ‘Place on board of this ark one pair of each kind of animal of either sex’ (Hud: 40), it means that he should place on board the ark a pair of every kind of animal and plant species, so that these survivors can ensure the survival of their respective species. Even pigs were among the animals Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him he brought on board.

And those who say that the prohibition of eating swine goes back to Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him who supposedly did not place on board the ark a pair of this species; this group of scholars did not realise the importance of pigs as animals which eat waste and thus rid the earth of it; for every species has a function; the role of animals is not limited solely to the providing of food for human beings.

And the words, ‘…one pair of each [kind of animal) of either sex…’ (Hud: 40), indicate that the word zawj (pair) is singular, and the proof of this is, ‘…Be conscious of your Lord, who has created you out of one living entity, and out of it created its mate…’ (an-Nisa’: 1). Therefore, the word zawj designates an individual entity with its equivalent, a pair of shoes, for example. I say this so that the term az-zawj is not understood to mean ‘two’. The True Lord Glorified is He says in another verse, ‘His followers would have it that, in certain cases, any of these four kinds of cattle of either sex is unlawful to man, either of the two sexes of sheep and of goats. Ask them, ‘Is it the two males that He has forbidden, or the two females, or that which the wombs of the two females may contain? Tell me what you know in this respect, if what you say is true. And likewise they declare as unlawful either of the two sexes of camels and of bovine cattle…’ (al-An‘am: 143-144). When we count the total number we find it is eight, so if the word zawj meant ‘two’ the total number in this verse would be sixteen.

The Holy Quran also shows that the word zawj is singular in the following words of the True Lord Glorified is He ‘Was he not once a [mere) drop of sperm that had been spilt, and thereafter became a germ-cell – whereupon He created and formed it in accordance with what it was meant to be, and fashioned out of it the two sexes, the male and the female?’ (al-Qiyama: 37-39) Thus, a male is a zawj, and a female is a zawj as well.

Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him continued carrying out the True Lord’s Order, ‘Place on board this Ark a pair of each species, and your own family–except those against whom the sentence has already been passed–and those who have believed,’ though only a few believed with him.’ (Hud: 40) It was the True Lord’s Will that life should be preserved on earth by saving all the elements necessary to sustain life; pairs of each kind of creature were placed on the ark. Some historians and exegetes said they lived on board the Ark for two years.

Then the True Lord the Exalted says:

وَقَالَ ٱرۡكَبُواْ فِيهَا بِسۡمِ ٱللَّهِ مَجۡرٜىٰهَا وَمُرۡسَىٰهَآۚ إِنَّ رَبِّي لَغَفُورٞ رَّحِيمٞ ٤١

He said, ‘Board the Ark. In the name of God it shall sail and anchor. My God is most forgiving and merciful’[41]
(The Quran, Hud: 41)

This is the last stage of the story of Nuh’s (Noah’s) Ark which began by Allah ordering Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him to build the ark. Throughout its construction, Nuh (Noah) kept trying to guide his people to Allah until he received the sign that marked the beginning of the floods, ‘and the furnace boiled over’ (Hud: 40). By Allah’s Command, Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him brought on board the ark a pair of every kind of creature, in addition to his family and the believers. Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him said to those who believed, ‘Embark therein. In the Name of Allah, it shall sail and anchor.’ (Hud: 41)

The previous statement was attributed to Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him because he also added the words, ‘My Lord is most forgiving and Merciful’ (Hud: 41). Embarking requires that the person doing the act of embarking places himself on board of something, in a way that makes him on it or above it. This obviously implies that the ship, on which one has embarked, should be in the service of its passengers. It is as if when Allah the Exalted commissioned the building of the ark, its purpose was to serve those who would embark on it and be carried by it.

We note here that Allah the Exalted says, 'Embark therein' and has not said, 'Embark on it'!The True Lord Glorified is He has said it this way to give us an idea of the ark's design; for Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him had built it according to divine inspiration in the best possible form. Its design was far from rudimentary. The ark's passengers did not just ride on top of it. It was designed in a way that enabled them to live inside of it, especially as it was supposed to house every variety of wild beasts, insects, and animals alongside humans. Therefore, it was necessary that the ark's design should consist of multiple levels and floors. The True Lord's Words, 'in the Name of Allah it shall sail and anchor' show that the ark was built to be seaworthy and safe from sinking. It must safely carry its passengers to a place impenetrable by water; a place of high altitude which would allow for the ark to become properly anchored, just as the flood waters allowed the ark to be carried afloat. Thus, the sailing of the ark on water and the end of its journeying and its anchoring was in Allah's Name and with His Permission.

Nuh's words, 'in the Name of Allah it shall sail and anchor' inform us that the ark's course through the water was by Allah's Will. Also, those who were allowed to board the ark did so not by virtue of their personal status, but because they believed in Allah the Exalted and the Glorious.

To cite an example relevant to our own lives—and indeed Allah is beyond compare—we find that a judge opens a courts session by saying, 'In the name of the constitution and the law' meaning that he will not be pronouncing judgment from a personal point of view, but in the name of the constitution and the law.

Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him said, 'in the Name of Allah it shall sail and anchor' because the ark was a Command from Allah that was carried out and built by His messenger. That is why the Hadith says, 'every act not begun with the Name of Allah shall remain cut off (from blessings and prosperity; incomplete).'

Before you begin anything, you know that all actions and events require various energies for their execution. For instance, if the action is of a physical nature, it will require physical power. If the action is mental, it will require thought, reflection, and deliberation. If it is an action that involves challenging people in power, it will require courage. If it is an action that aims at purifying souls, it will require clemency and patience. That being said, it is clear that different actions require different approaches. To have the necessary strength, you can say, 'In the Name of the All-Powerful, the All-Able'. To acquire the necessary knowledge, you can say, 'In the Name of the Omniscient'. To find sufficiency, you can say, 'In the Name of the Self-Sufficient Master'. To show clemency and forbearance, you can say, 'In the Name of the Clement, the Forbearing'. And when you need to find courage, you can say, 'In the Name of the Dominant, the Subduer'.

A single action may require seeking out many qualities. In place of all this, you can call on your Lord using His Name Allah and immerse yourself in the blessedness of this Unique Name of the Creator of existence Glorified is He. For it is the name indicative and all-inclusive of every Divine Name and Attribute of Absolute Perfection and Glory. Do not be intimidated or shy. Approach every matter with Allah's Name even if you are neglectful of some of His Commandments. The True Lord the Exalted is the One Most Merciful and Ever Compassionate.

The True Lord says, relating the words of Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him '…My Lord is Most Forgiving and Merciful.' (Hud: 41) What is meant by these words is that the believers in Nuh's (Noah's) message were human beings after all. And like most human beings, they did not fulfil all their religious obligations perfectly, as they were not angels. Therefore, the True Lord Glorified is He evaluated their faith as a whole, overlooking some of the sins they had committed and not punishing them for them. Herein lies the advantage of uttering the formula: 'In the Name of Allah, the Most Merciful, the Ever-Merciful.'

Then the True Lord the Exalted continues describing the ark and its passengers:

وَهِىَ تَجۡرِى بِهِمۡ فِى مَوۡجٖ كَٱلۡجِبَالِ وَنَادَىٰ نُوحٌ ٱبۡنَهُۥ وَكَانَ فِى
مَعۡزِلٖ يَٰبُنَىَّ ٱرۡكَب مَّعَنَا وَلَا تَكُن مَّعَ ٱلۡكَٰفِرِينَ ﴿٤٢﴾

It sailed with them on waves like mountains, and Noah called out to his son, who stayed behind, 'Come aboard with us, my son, do not stay with the disbelievers' [42] (The Quran, Hud: 42)

And so the ark moved on with them, not through a sea that was merely tempestuous, but a sea where the waves were the size of mountains. This suggests that the ark was guided by a higher power that made it impervious to the waves. Then the verse mentions the fatherly love that the situation brought up in Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him towards his son when he called out to him, 'Come aboard with us, my son, do not stay with the disbelievers.' (Hud: 42) But the son rejected his father's advice thinking that one of the mountains would keep him safe and dry.

Revealing the son's intentions, contrary as they were to his father's demands, the True Lord says:

أَمۡرِ ٱللَّهِ إِلَّا مَن رَّحِمَۚ وَحَالَ بَيۡنَهُمَا ٱلۡمَوۡجُ فَكَانَ مِنَ ٱلۡمُغۡرَقِينَ ﴿٤٣﴾

But he replied, 'I will seek refuge on a mountain to save me from the water.' Noah said, 'Today there is no refuge from God's command, except for those on whom He has mercy.' The waves cut them off from each other and he was among the drowned [43] (The Quran, Hud: 43)

Nuh's (Noah's) son thought that he could save himself by taking refuge on a mountain. He assumed that perhaps the high ground would keep him secure from drowning. But Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him knew that no disbeliever shall be safe, and that safety shall only be granted to those upon whom Allah bestowed His Mercy through belief. Thus, the waves came in and separated between Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him and his son who then drowned.

The True Lord the Glorious and Exalted wanted to conclude the story of Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him by showing the ark coming to rest on the mountain of Judi(1). Some say that the mountain of Judi is situated in the Iraqi city of Mosul. Others say that it is near the city of Kufa. At any rate, the knowledge of the mountain's exact location neither benefits the one who possesses it nor harms the one who is ignorant of it.

Afterwards the True Lord the Exalted says:

وَقِيلَ يَٰٓأَرۡضُ ٱبۡلَعِي مَآءَكِ وَيَٰسَمَآءُ أَقۡلِعِي وَغِيضَ ٱلۡمَآءُ وَقُضِيَ ٱلۡأَمۡرُ
وَٱسۡتَوَتۡ عَلَى ٱلۡجُودِيِّۖ وَقِيلَ بُعۡدٗا لِّلۡقَوۡمِ ٱلظَّٰلِمِينَ ٤٤

Then it was said, 'Earth, swallow up your water, and sky, hold back,' and the water subsided, the command was fulfilled. The Ark settled on Mount Judi, and it was said, 'Gone are those evildoing people!' [44] (The Quran, Hud: 44)

The word bal` (swallowing) means to cause something to pass through the throat down into the stomach. So, when the Quran mentions such a command as this, 'O earth, swallow up your water' (Hud: 44), understand that the giver of this order is none other than the One to Whom the earth humbly submits.

Notice that the wording of the verse does not come as, 'Allah said, "O earth swallow up your water' because the Sayer is indicated by the context even if not explicitly mentioned. The True Lord wants to develop in us the instinct of belief and the insight into its meaning. For no one except Allah can order the earth to swallow up its water.

As for His Command to the sky, 'O sky, hold back', it was for it to stop raining. Thus, the True Lord Glorified is He brought an end to the flooding that enveloped the earth by stopping its source and ordering the land to absorb the water.

We notice that when it rains, the drainage systems clog up as if there is something that is blocking the water's course. This is because today's cities are surfaced with asphalt that does not absorb the water. That is why we find that the concerned government departments invest all their energies in the repair and maintenance of the city drainage systems to evacuate all the rainwater and city life goes on unhindered.

(1) A mountain near the city of Mosul [Kalimat Al-Quran]

At this point, I should say that the proper use of water is part and parcel of proper faith. I notice that when some people make their ablutions, they open the water taps fully and use more water than they need to perform their ablutions. We must avoid committing the sin of wasting clean water for no reason. People should try and conserve water, and not to be wasteful with it. When water is available, it has the power of reviving the dead earth. We have a great need for water to reclaim desert lands for agriculture. We must do our part to alleviate the immense pressure that is currently being put on the city's sewage networks. In short, we should make a better and more economical use of Allah's blessings so that we can all enjoy and benefit from them.

The saying of the True Lord, 'O sky, hold back' means desist from sending rain. From this sense derives the word qal` which is the sail of small boats. One can say, 'aqla`at al-markib' (the boat took off) meaning: 'The boat left behind the calm of the shore on which it was beached'.

The True Lord also says, 'and the water subsided'. The passive structure of this part of the verse acknowledges to us that the One Who caused the flood water to sink into the earth was Allah the Glorious and Exalted. Then Allah says, 'the Ark settled on Mount Judi'. That is, after the flood receded, the ark rested on the mountain called Judi. The True Lord concludes the blessed verse by saying, 'Away with the evildoing people!', this signifies a total and eternal banishment from Allah until the Day of Resurrection.

Then Nuh's (Noah's) fatherly feelings were awakened once again, as demonstrated by the True Lord's Words:

وَنَادَىٰ نُوحٌ رَّبَّهُۥ فَقَالَ رَبِّ إِنَّ ٱبْنِى مِنْ أَهْلِى وَإِنَّ وَعْدَكَ ٱلْحَقُّ وَأَنتَ أَحْكَمُ ٱلْحَٰكِمِينَ ﴿٤٥﴾

Noah called out to his Lord, saying, 'My Lord, my son was one of my family, though Your promise is true, and You are the most just of all judges' [45] (The Quran, Hud: 45)

Now fatherly compassion is commendable, and the True Lord Glorified is He fills up the heart of every father with it in proportion to the needs of his offspring. If this love was not there, no father or mother would ever put up with the hardships of raising children. This situation teaches us the principle that there is no filiation to the prophets without fellowship. We find an example of it in the story of Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) who was known as the Khalil (beloved, close elect) of Allah) and upon our Prophet Muhammad. Concerning him, the True Lord says, ‘And (remember) when the Lord of Ibrahim (Abraham) tried him with (certain) Commands, which he fulfilled...’ (al-Baqara: 124).

That is, Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him fulfilled his Lord’s Commandments to perfection such as when he wanted him to raise the foundations of the Sacred House, he extended them above their original height through contrivance. So he brought forth a stone and stood on it to raise the walls of the Ka’ba. Also, Allah the Exalted said to him, ‘Verily, I am going to make you a leader (Prophet) of mankind …’ (al-Baqara: 124) because he was faithful to Allah’s Law and was able to fulfil every commandment with utmost precision. Then Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him asked his Lord, ‘and (will you make leaders) of my offspring as well?’ (al-Baqara: 124) Whereupon the True Lord the Exalted replied, ‘My Covenant does not embrace the wrongdoers.’ (al-Baqara: 124)

From this we learn that prophethood has no filiation but must entail discipleship. This fact is also evident in what Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him said after having imbibed the True Lord’s Words, ‘My Covenant does not embrace the wrongdoers,’ (al-Baqara: 124), when he asked his Lord Glorified is He to endow the city of Mecca and its inhabitants with security and provision, Ibrahim (Abraham) said, ‘My Lord, make this a secure city and provide its people with fruits - whoever of them believes in Allah and the Last Day….’ (al-Baqara: 126)

Thus Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him asked Allah to provide for the believers, but the True Lord the Exalted pointed out to him that in this situation his request is misplaced. For Allah, being the Lord of all creatures, provides sustenance to both the believers and the disbelievers. As for the obligations of worshiping Allah, these pertain only to the believers. Therefore, the True Lord says, ‘As for those who disbelieve, I will grant them enjoyment for a short while' (al-Baqara: 126). That is, worldly provision is given to both believers and disbelievers—for giving sustenance is one of the acts of Allah's Lordship.

We would also like to add in this respect that fatherly and motherly compassion is always inversely proportional to the need of the children. Thus, if the son or daughter has a strong personality, the fatherly and motherly compassion is relatively diminished. For example, let us suppose there are two brothers; one of whom is well off and can take care of his parents and support them financially, and the other is poor and is unable to support his parents.

We will see that the father and the mother's empathy leans towards the poor son, not towards the one who is well off because fatherly and motherly sympathy is always with the one who is weak, sick or the one who is away. The more need the child has, the more sympathy he draws.

In Nuh's (Noah's) appeal to His Lord, we notice that Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him had an excuse for asking that his son be saved along with the others because the True Lord had ordered him to carry on board the ark a pair of every kind of creature in addition to his kindred. So Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him asked that his son be saved because he was a member of his family. He said, 'O my Lord! Verily, my son is of my family! And certainly, Your Promise is true, and you are the Most Just of all judges.' (Hud: 45)

Accordingly, Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him had a right to ask as much of Allah, for he was requesting the fulfilment of that which Allah had promised to grant, which was to carry his family with him in the ark to be saved. When Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him said, '…You are the Most Just of all judges…' this was an acknowledgement of the fact the Allah the Glorious and Exalted does not make mistakes. That, even if his son had drowned, there was surely wisdom behind it

Allah the Exalted then says:

قَالَ يَٰنُوحُ إِنَّهُۥ لَيۡسَ مِنۡ أَهۡلِكَۖ إِنَّهُۥ عَمَلٌ غَيۡرُ صَٰلِحٖۖ فَلَا تَسۡـَٔلۡنِ مَا
لَيۡسَ لَكَ بِهِۦ عِلۡمٌۖ إِنِّيٓ أَعِظُكَ أَن تَكُونَ مِنَ ٱلۡجَٰهِلِينَ ٤٦

God said, 'Noah, he was not one of your family. What he did was not right. Do not ask Me for things you know nothing about. I am warning you not to be foolish' [46] (The Quran, Hud: 46)

The True Lord the Exalted wants to inform Nuh (Noah) that a prophet's family does not consist of his biological progeny; rather, it consists of his followers and appliers of Allah's Message. Thus if Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him were to hold his son to this standard, he would find that he was not a son to him at all.

This reminds us of what our own Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said about Salman Al-Farisi, 'Salman is a member of our household.'(1) Thus, when it comes to prophets, their true family consists of the people who follow them, and not necessarily their biological progeny.

Notice how concise and exact Allah's Words are when He says, '…Surely, he is not of your family' (Hud: 46). Then Allah the Glorious and Exalted follows this up with the rationale for such a pronouncement, 'verily, his work is unrighteous'. It is as if filiation focuses on the work rather than the person of the son. There is no mention here whatsoever of 'the person'; what is mentioned is 'work' and 'conduct'. Therefore, the 'actions' of Nuh's (Noah's) son automatically disqualified him from being Nuh's (Noah's) son.

We learn that when it comes to prophets, the criterion for determining filiation is not one's bloodline; rather, it is whether one is a follower or not. The proof of this is the description that the True Lord gives of Nuh (Noah's) son, 'verily, his work is unrighteous.' Were he righteous in his conduct, he would have indeed been considered Nuh's (Noah's) son. The True Lord further says, 'so ask not of me that of which you have no knowledge! I admonish you, lest you be among the ignorant.' The True Lord hereby asks Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him to consider carefully before asking anything from his Lord; for the prophets cannot be reproached when their Lord educates and disciplines them.

(1) Narrated by Al-Hakim in his Mustadrak (vol. 3, p. 598); this part of the Hadith was narrated on the authority of `Amr ibn `Awf. Al-Muzni, Adh-Dhahabi and Al-`Ajluni noted that its chain of transmission was weak

Then the True Lord says:

قَالَ رَبِّ إِنِّيٓ أَعُوذُ بِكَ أَنۡ أَسۡـَٔلَكَ مَا لَيۡسَ لِي بِهِۦ عِلۡمٞۖ
وَإِلَّا تَغۡفِرۡ لِي وَتَرۡحَمۡنِيٓ أَكُن مِّنَ ٱلۡخَٰسِرِينَ ﴿٤٧﴾

He said, 'My Lord, I take refuge with You from asking for things I know nothing about. If You do not forgive me, and have mercy on me, I shall be one of the losers' [47] (The Quran, Hud: 47)

Here Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him asked his Lord the Exalted to forgive him for what he had said. Nuh (Noah) recognized that he was unable to hold back the urge to ask Allah to save his son. Only the True Lord Himself could cause such an urge to be suppressed in Nuh's (Noah's) heart. And that is the highest level of submission to Allah the Most High.

Nuh's (Noah's) words, 'I seek refuge in You' further tell us that when a person takes refuge in some other power, this can only mean that he is unable to overcome the threat he is facing through his own power. Therefore Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him sought that his Lord would protect him from asking about matters beyond his knowledge, and begged for Allah's Forgiveness and Mercy so as not to be among the lost.

The True Lord then continues:

قِيلَ يَٰنُوحُ ٱهۡبِطۡ بِسَلَٰمٖ مِّنَّا وَبَرَكَٰتٍ عَلَيۡكَ وَعَلَىٰٓ أُمَمٖ مِّمَّن
مَّعَكَۚ وَأُمَمٞ سَنُمَتِّعُهُمۡ ثُمَّ يَمَسُّهُم مِّنَّا عَذَابٌ أَلِيمٞ ﴿٤٨﴾

And it was said, 'Noah, descend in peace from Us, with blessings on you and on some of the communities that will spring from those who are with you. There will be others We will allow to enjoy life for a time, but then a painful punishment from Us will afflict them' [48] (The Quran, Hud: 48)

The saying of the True Lord, 'disembark in peace from us' indicates that Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him had received orders to disembark and to proceed with his religious mission on a land containing the elements needed for life, including the pairs of each kind of creature and all the believers that were saved by Allah the Most High. As for those who used to scorn Nuh's (Noah's) followers as low and vile, they were drowned.

The saying of the True Lord, 'on you and on some of the communities that will spring from those who are with you' encompasses Nuh's (Noah's) family as well as those who believed in him, and the communities of all the beasts, birds, animals and beasts of burden that were on the ark. This is reference to the primary community of creatures which comprised the human beings and the classes of creatures that were subservient to mankind. This way the necessities of life were provided for the believers. Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him and his folk were free to devote themselves to their religious mission on Earth.

The word salam (peace) in the verse 'disembark in peace from Us' denotes security and peace of mind. There were no more disbelievers around to harass Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him or to speak any such words to him like, 'Nuh (Noah)! You have argued with us for too long. Bring down on us the punishment you threaten us with…' (Hud: 32).

And he would no longer face accusations of fabricating this message. The only people left with Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him were the believers. They understood well that their deliverance from the flood was due to their adherence to the doctrine which Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him had brought to them on behalf of Allah the Exalted. The saying of the True Lord, 'with blessings' means that the True Lord bestows His Blessings on that which is few and little until it becomes many times larger. A thing can be described as mubarak (blessed) when, for example, a person brings a meal, intending to serve it to two diners. But then five guests show up and the food suffices for all those present. Therefore, something that is mubarak is that which, while seemingly little and modest, can offer the same benefits as that which is large and plentiful.

It was necessary, in this context, to use the word barakat (blessings) because all what Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him had saved by placing on the ark—the pairs of each type of creature—these now required the blessings of the True Lord Glorified is He to multiply and become sufficient.

‘With blessings on you and on some of the communities that will spring from those who are with you. There will be others We will allow to enjoy life for a time, but then a painful punishment from Us will afflict them.’ (Hud: 48) These words are consistent with human nature. The original believers who were saved with Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him were the best; but with the passage of time, forgetfulness and heedlessness crept up on some of them. Then the later generations who arrived on the scene lacked the guidance they needed from upright role models. Then the next generations grew up under conditions that completely cut them off from the Law and Path of Allah.

In this regard, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘The man would have some sleep, and honesty would be taken away from his heart leaving the impression of a faint mark. He would again sleep, and honesty would be taken away from his heart leaving an impression of a blister; as if you rolled down an ember on your foot and it left a vesicle. He would see a swelling with nothing inside.’ The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him then took up a pebble and rolled it over his foot and said, ‘The people would enter into transactions with one another, but there would hardly be any trustworthy persons among them. (And there would be such a paucity of upright, honest people) until it would be said, ‘Among such and such a tribe there is a trustworthy man’, and it would be said of a man, ‘How strong he is, how nice and how wise’, and there is not even a mustard seed of faith in his heart.’(1)

Thus, a state of heedlessness and forgetfulness can come over the followers of Allah’s Path. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him also said, ‘Trials and temptations will be presented to the heart like the weaving of a straw mat, straw after straw. Any heart that absorbs (accepts) them will have a black dot left in it and any heart that rejects them will have a white dot left in it. In the end, there will be two types of hearts left: one white like a smooth and white stone with no temptation able to harm it as long as the heavens and earth endure, and another black and turbid, like an overturned vessel, that does not abide by virtue or reject evil except what agrees with its desire-soaked heart.'(1) I seek refuge in Allah the Glorious and Exalted from the prospect of our hearts sliding into forgetfulness.

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (7086) and by Muslim in his Sahih (143) on the authority of Hudhayfah ibn Al-Yaman Allah be pleased with him

The people that the True Lord is referring to in this noble verse are those who remained with Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him who were the most eminent believers. Yet, some of them would be eventually overwhelmed by heedlessness. Still Allah Glorified is He would not withhold from them any of the goods and joys of this world; but in the end, their appointed suffering would befall them.

In such an atmosphere of heedlessness, when a new generation comes forth, it will be influenced twofold: Firstly, by its own heedlessness and forgetfulness, and secondly, by the poor example that has been set by the previous heedless and neglectful generation.

We know that among Nuh's (Noah's) progeny were the people of `Ad, to whom the True Lord had sent Hud peace be upon him and the people of Thamud, to whom Allah had sent their own brother Salih peace be upon him and the people of Lut (Lot) peace be upon him. All these were some of the communities whose hearts got rusted with heedlessness and forgetfulness.

After this, the True Lord says:

تِلۡكَ مِنۡ أَنۢبَآءِ ٱلۡغَيۡبِ نُوحِيهَآ إِلَيۡكَۖ مَا كُنتَ تَعۡلَمُهَآ أَنتَ وَلَا قَوۡمُكَ
مِن قَبۡلِ هَٰذَاۖ فَٱصۡبِرۡۖ إِنَّ ٱلۡعَٰقِبَةَ لِلۡمُتَّقِينَ ﴿٤٩﴾

These accounts are part of what was beyond your knowledge [Muhammad]. We revealed them to you. Neither you nor your people knew them before now, so be patient: the future belongs to those who are aware of God [49] (The Quran, Hud: 49)

The demonstrative pronoun tilka (this) is used to identify something specific to the one addressed. The addressee here is Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and 'the news' that is referred to is if Nuh's (Noah's) ark and the unseen events that followed. Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was not a contemporary of Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him. Neither he nor his people knew about these events until this Quranic verse was revealed.

---

(1) Narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad (vol. 5 pp. 386, 405) and by Muslim in his Sahih (104) on the authority of Hudhayfa ibn Al-Yaman Allah be pleased with him.

Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him never sat with a teacher, nor was it narrated that he ever read anything. Hence, we find verses of the Quran enlightening and informing about the past, such as, ‘You (O Muhammad) were not present on the western side of the mountain when We gave Our Command to Musa (Moses)…’ (al-Qasas: 44) and ‘This is a part of the news of the Unseen which We inspire you with (O Muhammad). You were not with them, when they cast lots with their pens as to which of them should be charged with the care of Maryam (Mary); nor were you with them when they disputed.’ (Al-‘Imran: 44)

Who taught Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him if he did not study and was not educated by a teacher? It was indeed, Allah the Exalted who taught him. Allah Glorified is He taught his Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him about the story of Nuh (Noah) to serve him as a lesson and as an example. He would feel sure that Allah’s Support of every messenger would be present in every step of his mission, and that Allah would not surrender him over to his enemies or adversaries.

That is the reason why Allah says, ‘So be patient (O Muhammad)’ because you know now the result of Nuh’s (Noah’s) patience over the course of nine-hundred fifty years. Then came Allah’s Words, ‘…Surely, the good end is for those who are aware of Allah…’ (Hud: 49).

After the story of Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him comes the story of the people of `Ad. We know that the True Lord the Exalted does not send a messenger unless corruption reigns in the land. We can conclude, therefore, that heedlessness crept up back on the scene after Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him. With every new generation being more forgetful and heedless than the last, those who remained were totally unfit to uphold the waning religious beliefs and principles.

Allah the Exalted does not send any new messengers unless there is no one among the people who can uphold the Word of Allah. As we know, the decline of belief and practice in the human soul can issue from within. In other words, a person’s own soul can persuade him to abandon Allah’s Law, but his nafs al-lawama (reproaching self) deters him from this by chiding him and bringing him back to faith. However, if the person's moral consciousness is weak, or altogether absent, then the person has no internal defences against disbelief. In this case, it is the society surrounding him that reprimands him.

Yet, if both the spiritual immunity and social (collective) immunity disappear, then Allah Glorified is He must send a new messenger, a new revelation, and a new demonstrative proof. This is what happened after the time of Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him. For this reason, the True Lord says:

وَإِلَىٰ عَادٍ أَخَاهُمۡ هُودٗاۚ قَالَ يَٰقَوۡمِ ٱعۡبُدُواْ ٱللَّهَ مَا لَكُم
مِّنۡ إِلَٰهٍ غَيۡرُهُۥٓۖ إِنۡ أَنتُمۡ إِلَّا مُفۡتَرُونَ ﴿٥٠﴾

To the 'Ad, We sent their brother, Hud. He said, 'My people, worship God. You have no god other than Him; you are only making up lies [50] (The Quran, Hud: 50)

The True Lord the Glorious and Exalted begins the glorious verse by engendering in the people of `Ad's acceptance, compassion and friendliness towards their messenger, Hud. The True Lord the Exalted informed them that he was their brother, and it was impossible for a brother to harbour any ill will towards them. Rather, he was an advisor and a trustworthy messenger. His saying to them, 'O my people' is a further expression of amiability. Then Hud entreated them to worship Allah the Exalted alone; for they had taken to worshipping false gods, and this is the ultimate falsehood. It was due to rampant corruption that Allah the Exalted says regarding them, '… you are only making up lies…' (Hud: 50).

Then Allah the Glorious and Exalted mentions Hud as saying:

يَٰقَوۡمِ لَآ أَسۡـَٔلُكُمۡ عَلَيۡهِ أَجۡرًاۖ إِنۡ أَجۡرِيَ إِلَّا عَلَى ٱلَّذِي فَطَرَنِيٓۚ أَفَلَا تَعۡقِلُونَ ﴿٥١﴾

I ask no reward from you, my people; my reward comes only from Him who created me. Why do you not use your reason? [51] (The Quran, Hud: 51)

It was as if Hud peace be upon him was telling them, 'What is it that you find hard in what I am calling you to. I am bringing you a message from Allah the Glorious and Exalted. No reward do I ask of you for this. It is illogical that I ask you to change your habitual ways, then ask you for money as a reward. I cannot ask you to endure the hardship of changing old habits and, on top of that, ask that you compensate me for my efforts. I will not cause you to go through two difficulties: letting go of habitual patterns of thinking and behaving and paying me for guiding you to do so. Since I am not going to accept any reward from you, then I am not laying upon you any hardships. I do not need to be offered any form of reward, as no can reward me except He Who has sent me to you'. '…my reward rests with none but Him Who brought me into being. Will you not, then, use your reason?' (Hud: 51) That is, my reward is due from none but Allah Who created me so that I can deliver this message. The term al-fitra (natural disposition) involves man's fundamental make-up.

The True Lord the Exalted had prepared Hud peace be upon him to be a messenger, and we already know that reward is usually given in return for services rendered. I have previously mentioned the example of the person who buys a house. The buyer pays the seller what the house is worth, and this is called buying and selling. However, when one rents a house, the tenant pays a monthly fee in return for the convenience of living in that house.

Thus when Hud peace be upon him said, 'No reward do I ask of you for this (message)', this implies that he deserved a large compensation for bringing them the message that he did. The compensation that you pay for ordinary services provide you with benefit on a temporary basis, By contrast, the benefit that Hud's people will derive from his message is ever-lasting.

This is also the reason why Hud peace be upon him left it to Allah to reward him, as He is the Only One capable of giving him his reward in its full value. Certainly, Allah is Capable of anything.

I have previously pointed out that all Allah's messengers uttered this statement, 'No reward do I ask of you for this (message)' except for Ibrahim (Abraham) and Musa (Moses) peace be upon them. Ibrahim (Abraham) did not say it because of his father, while Musa (Moses) did not say it because Pharaoh said to him, '...Did we not bring you up as a child among us?' (ash-Shu'ara': 18). Therefore, Hud's people should have appreciated the profound blessing in the form of Allah's Doctrine, which Hud brought to them.

Then the True Lord continues with Hud's address to his people:

وَيَٰقَوۡمِ ٱسۡتَغۡفِرُواْ رَبَّكُمۡ ثُمَّ تُوبُوٓاْ إِلَيۡهِ يُرۡسِلِ ٱلسَّمَآءَ عَلَيۡكُم
مِّدۡرَارٗا وَيَزِدۡكُمۡ قُوَّةً إِلَىٰ قُوَّتِكُمۡ وَلَا تَتَوَلَّوۡاْ مُجۡرِمِينَ ﴿٥٢﴾

My people, ask forgiveness from your Lord, and return to Him. He will send down for you rain in abundance from the sky, and give you extra strength. Do not turn away and be lost in your sins' [52] (The Quran, Hud: 52)

So, we learn that asking for forgiveness involves a confession of negligence and a pledge to cease committing sins; so we say, 'O Allah, forgive us'. When you ask for Allah's Forgiveness, you are thereby reaffirming your sincere commitment to the faith, and are acknowledging that what the True Lord demands of you is a true duty. And, having begged Allah's forgiveness for past sins, a person must not fall into sin again. After such a spiritual turnabout through repentance, the servant must avoid all acts of disobedience and sins.

A human should remember that every blessing he enjoys comes from Allah, and that all the creatures are made subservient to the use of mankind by Allah's Command. We should not allow the monotony of life to make us forget about the Originator and Bestower of all blessings.

The first thing that Allah assigns to a messenger that He sends to mankind is the rectification of the most central of all doctrinal principles, namely, the belief in One Unique God from Whom people should receive the 'Do' and 'Do not do' Commandments.

Thus, Hud's address to his people, the tribe of `Ad was a call to worship and revere One God, and to abide by His Laws, which does not merely consist of performing the rituals of testifying to Allah's Oneness and Uniqueness, offering prayers, fasting, giving alms and performing Hajj (pilgrimage to Mecca). To truly worship Allah the Most High, one must perform the rituals and acts of worship, along with striving to perfect every action in life in the light of Allah's Path, and not to disassociate religion from one's daily life.

Those who fear the integration of Islam into daily life, ask that we limit religion to its basic rituals. We would tell them: when Islam held a prominent role in daily life, it conquered the whole world, and defeated two ancient civilizations, the Persians in the East and the Romans in the West. These people were part of powerful, ancient civilizations, who boasted high culture and sophisticated civil codes. Despite this, they were defeated by unlettered Bedouins, led in their faith by an unlettered man sent by Allah the Exalted. He was able to topple these regimes and cultures, and uplift the standards of living to the level of intellectual aspirations.

These people, therefore, want to limit Islam to its five pillars with the aim of isolating it from daily life. We would say to these people: No, you cannot reduce the religion to its five pillars. Worship, in its essence, means that there is a worshipper who worships the True Lord, and obeys the Commandments of the worshipped Lord, which are contained in the principles of ‘Do’ and ‘Do not do’. Any matters which are not touched upon by the moral guidelines of ‘Do’ and of ‘Do not Do’ are permissible for you to do or refrain from doing. And whether you do such matters or do not do them; either way, the world does not become corrupted.

Accordingly, worship consists of all commandments issued by Allah. So do not try to limit religion to the bare essentials. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him explained to us that the five pillars are the foundations upon which Islam is built, but they do not represent the entirety of Islam. Islam is a structure that rests on certain foundations; that is why we cannot reduce Islam to its foundations alone. Islam consists of every action in daily life. People’s actions must conform to Allah’s Way, so that life at large can be ordered just as the natural world around us is ordered.

So worship incorporates every action in life. Some have mistakenly conceived of worship as being limited to the religious rituals and acts of worship in terms of juristic classifications, forgetting that the domain of human dealings and translations are also part of religion. When people are upright in their interactions with one another, their own lives become better ordered.

In the current noble verse which we are now contemplating, the True Lord says, ‘O my people! Ask forgiveness of your Lord’ (Hud: 52). Now to ask for forgiveness implies that sins have been committed in the past; and since this one of the first things that Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him told his people to do, it means that forgiveness should be asked for having transgressed the laws that were brought down by the messenger who came before him, or for the misdeeds they committed by some derives of instinct. Then he bade them to 'repent to Him'. Repentance entails a pledge not to commit new sins.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says in the same noble verse, 'He will send you (from the sky) abundant rain, and add strength to your strength'. One may wonder what is the relevance of begging forgiveness to such a natural phenomenon, We would say that everything in the universe—inanimate objects, plants and animals—have an owner. This owner is Allah Who is All-Capable and All-Powerful. No creature can disobey His Order. He is also capable of causing things to behave contrary to or beyond their own nature. You may see a cloud that is heavy with water and think that it will produce rain, but the True Lord may order it not to rain – if He so wills. Allah the Glorious and Exalted also says in another verse, 'Then, when they saw it as a dense cloud coming towards their valleys, they said, "This is a cloud bringing us rain!" Nay, but it is that (torment) which you were asking to be hastened! A wind wherein is a painful torment!' (al-Ahqaf: 24)

Therefore, do not treat the appearances as being monotonous and repetitive. The Originator of all causes and effects owns and controls them. He does whatever He wills. If you worship Allah in such a way as to incorporate this worship in all actions of life, you will begin enriching the world, and supply yourself with the resources that Allah the Glorious and Exalted has hidden in the earth.

Sustenance—as we know—comes from the earth. That is why we must sow the land, so that the seeds can grow stems and trunks which praise Allah's Glory and bow to Him. Then the True Lord the Exalted brings forth the rain, so that the seedlings can nourish themselves from the water that percolates down to them through the earth, and so that we, also, can satisfy our needs with this water.

The word as-sama` (sky) connotes all that rises high above you and provides you with shade; as for 'as-sama` al-`ulya' (the highest heaven), this is another topic and everything else is below it. Consider the True Lord's Words, 'Whosoever thinks Allah will not help him in the present world and the world to come; let him stretch up a rope to heaven, then let him sever it, and behold whether his guile does away with what enrages him.’ (al-Hajj: 15) That is, anyone who thinks that Allah the Exalted will not grant his messenger victory then let him who makes this claim hang himself from a high place; he will die, and his spite will remain with him.

Concerning the part of the verse that says, ‘He will send you (from the sky) abundant rain (midrar)’, the word midrar signifies that which provides copious, unremitting blessings, without causing any harm. Rain that is torrential can cause much damage. Allah had caused great torrents of rain to pour down from the sky in the past. Thus, midrar is incessant rain that is always beneficial, and never harmful. That is why, when it rained, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him used to say, ‘O Allah, (let it rain) around us and not on us.’(1) So when Allah Glorified is He sends steady, beneficial rain, the earth becomes green, and the world becomes populated, which adds to people’s strength.

As for those who turn their backs on this guidance, his crimes hurt none but himself because the servant’s transgressions always recoil upon him. So, do not think that a servant’s wrongdoing is hurtful to anyone but himself. The True Lord says, ‘it is the people who are wronging themselves.’ (Yunus: 44)

Then the True Lord relates the response given by the people of `Ad:

قَالُوا۟ يَـٰهُودُ مَا جِئْتَنَا بِبَيِّنَةٍ وَمَا نَحْنُ بِتَارِكِىٓ ءَالِهَتِنَا
عَن قَوْلِكَ وَمَا نَحْنُ لَكَ بِمُؤْمِنِينَ ﴿٥٣﴾

They replied, ‘Hud, you have not brought us any clear evidence.
We will not forsake our gods on the strength of your word alone, nor will we believe in you [53] (The Quran, Hud: 53)

Here they are denying that Hud peace be upon him brought forth clear evidence or a miraculous sign.

Now the term bayyinah is the clear proof or sign that attests to the truthfulness of a messenger. It is true that Hud peace be upon him did not, at this point, mention what his miracle was. But they forgot that challenge is the essence of a miracle. Nuh's (Noah's) miracle, for example, was the flood, and Ibrahim's (Abraham's) miracle was that the fire cooled down and became peaceful and did not harm him when his people threw him into it.

(1) Narratedby Muslim in his Sahih (897) and Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (933)

We notice that the central miracle that defines every prophet is found in Nuh's words, 'My people, if my presence among you and my reminding you of Allah's Signs is too much for you, then I put my trust in Allah. Agree on your course of action, you and your partner-gods— do not be hesitant or secretive about it— then carry out your decision on me and give me no respite.' (Yunus: 71) That is, if you decide to be defiant, then here I am; fighting corruption right under your nose, though you are a dominant, powerful, and tyrannical people. Devise the best plot you can, still you can never annihilate the Divine Message. No one can extinguish the light that Allah put in the hands of one of his prophets; and none can remove from the world one of Allah's messenger by killing him. Never has this happened.

Based on this, the clear proof that Hud peace be upon him brought was his standing alone before his tyrannical people and exhorting them to abandon their disbelief. He defied all those who were more powerful than he was; for his people had proved themselves to be tyrannical and oppressive. Despite this, they were powerless against him. Just as the disbelievers of Quraysh were unable to defeat our Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

We know that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had brought the ultimate comprehensive miracle, that is the Glorious Quran. The Quran shall remain a miracle until the Day of Judgment. We know that most prophets peace and blessings be upon them brought miracles that were of a physical cosmic nature whose term ended as soon as they occurred; and had the Quran not informed us of these miracles we would not have believed in them. These past miracles are like matches whose fire glows bright for a few moments and then burn out. For example, `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him healed the blind and the lepers by Allah's Will; anyone who witnessed this sign instantly became a believer. But those who did not witness this miracle might not become believers. Similarly, Musa (Moses) peace be upon him struck the sea with his staff and parted it, and all those who witnessed this miracle became believers. But then those miracles came to an end, whereas the miracle of the Quran is here to stay until the Final Hour.

Any follower of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him can say, before the coming of the Final Hour, that Muhammad is Allah's Messenger and his miraculous sign is the Quran. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had been sent as a messenger to all mankind and no other messenger will come after him. That is why it was necessary that his miracle be of a permanent and lasting nature; and despite this, his people told him, 'We will not believe in you (O Muhammad) until you make a spring gush out of the ground for us, or until you have a garden of date palms and vines, and make rivers pour through them, or make the sky fall on us in pieces, as you claimed will happen or bring Allah and the angels before us face to face.' (al-Isra': 90-92)

All that they asked for were material miracles; hence the following response was given to them, 'Is it not sufficient for them that we have sent down to you the Book (the Quran) which is recited to them?' (al-'Ankabut: 51) Despite this they persisted in their denial and rejection of the Truth.

The people of `Ad further said, 'we will not forsake our gods on the strength of your word alone, nor will we believe in you.' They had therefore, deceived themselves by calling these idols 'gods' because the function of a real God is to reveal a doctrine specifying how He should be worshipped. These idols spoke not a word to them and never revealed any such doctrine. Every logical standard invalidates the idea of conceiving these idols as 'gods', so why did these people worship them? They worshipped them because the human instinct calls for the worship of a Supreme Being or Power. But when such Transcendent Power that is to be obeyed and worshipped issues commandments which curb the soul's carnal desires, the soul may find difficulty in submitting to these rules. Whereas, if these deities imposed no prohibitions, restrictions or commands at all, they would be easy to obey and worship for those who deluded themselves into believing in them and in their power to avert harm from, or bring benefit to them.

These, in effect, are the allegations made by all claimants of prophethood or being the Mahdi(1) in this age. Any fake prophet claims that he is sent by Allah, and allows free intermixing of men and women, consuming intoxicants, committing obscenities and destructive sins, and calls this a religion. Such false claims to prophecy can be found in movements such as Bahaism[1] and Qadianism[2] and other similar false belief systems. Their saying, ‘we will not forsake our gods on the strength of your word alone’ means that they would not abandon their gods because of what he said. Their further statement, ‘nor will we believe in you’ means ‘We do not believe you are truthful’.

(1) This is a reference to those who claim themselves to be the awaited Mahdi (Rightly-Guided One); the Mahdi is mentioned in Hadiths narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih. The Mahdi is foretold to appear at the end of time, contemporaneous with the second coming of `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him.

The Arabic word aman can have different meaning depending on the context. It can mean, for instance, ‘to safeguard from fear’ as in the True Lord’s Words, ‘…and has made them safe from fear.’ (Quraysh: 4) When it is followed by the Arabic letter ba`a, it can denote the idea ‘having faith in’ and ‘believing in’; as in the True Lord’s Words, ‘…all those who believe in Allah and the Last Day and do good—will have their rewards with their Lord…’ (al-Baqara: 62). Here aman is related to belief in divinity. When it is followed by the Arabic letter lam, it denotes the idea of ‘trusting’ and ‘having confidence in’; such as the True Lord’s Words, ‘But none trusted Musa (Moses) except the offspring of his people because of the fear of Pharaoh and his chiefs, lest they should persecute them…’ (Yunus: 83). Here it means to ‘trust’ or ‘have faith in’. Then the True Lord the Exalted says:

إِن نَّقُولُ إِلَّا ٱعْتَرَىٰكَ بَعْضُ ءَالِهَتِنَا بِسُوٓءٍ ۗ قَالَ إِنِّىٓ
أُشْهِدُ ٱللَّهَ وَٱشْهَدُوٓا۟ أَنِّى بَرِىٓءٌ مِّمَّا تُشْرِكُونَ ﴿٥٤﴾

All we can say is that one of our gods may have inflicted some harm on you.’ He said, ‘I call God to witness, and you too are my witnesses, that I disown those you set up as partners with God [54] (The Quran, Hud: 54)

The particle (in) by which this blessed verse opens is conditional after which there usually follows a conditional clause, otherwise it usually connotes a

(1) Bahaism: A sect which espouses corrupt beliefs; founded by Al-Mirza Husain `Ali Al-Mazandarani, who was born in the year 1233 of the Islamic calendar and grew up in Tehran. His ideas were a bizarre mixture of Buddhism, Mazdeism, Islam, Judaism, and Christianity. See (Haqiqat Al-Babiyyah wal Al-Baha`iyyah) by Muhsin `Abd Al-Hamid, 1985.

(2) Qadianism: It was founded by Marza Ghulam Ahmad from Qadian in Lahore, in the province of Punjab, situated between Pakistan and India. He was born in the year 1252 of the Islamic calendar and claimed prophecy. (See Al-Qadianiyyah – Nash`atha wa Tatawwurha) by Hassan `Isa – Dar Al-Qalam, Kuwait, 1981.

negation, like when the True Lord the Exalted says, '…none can be their mothers except those who gave them birth…' (al-Mujadala: 2).

In the verse under discussion, the True Lord says, 'All we can say (in-naqulu) is that one of our gods may have inflicted some harm on you…' Here the particle (in) is interchangeable with the negative particle (ma). Thus, the particle (in) connotes a negation. On this basis, the meaning of the verse becomes: 'The only conceivable explanation for your behaviour is that our gods have harmed you because you have disparaged them and invalidated their status as deities, and brought to us a new god of your own invention. In consequence, our gods have afflicted you with harm—namely, insanity—so you started confusing words and talking nonsense'. In the same verse Hud peace be upon him responded to them by saying, 'I call Allah to witness, and you too are my witnesses, that I disown those you set up as partners with Allah.' Hud peace be upon him called Allah to witness because he had confidence that Allah was the One Who sent him and was protecting him and his mind. It is a prophet's mental power that is responsible for strategizing how best to call people to Allah. It is impossible that Allah the Exalted would dispatch a messenger without protecting him.

Similarly, the disbelievers of Quraysh claimed that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was demented; and so, in response, the True Lord Glorified is He revealed the following noble verses, 'You (O Muhammad) are not, by the Grace of your Lord, a madman. And verily, for you (O Muhammad) will be an endless reward. And verily, you (O Muhammad) are on an exalted standard of character.' (al-Qalam: 2-4) We know that a demented person has no proper manners, and this clear proof that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was perfectly sane because his manners were exceedingly graceful.

In the verse at hand, Hud peace and blessings be upon him called his people to witness and exhorted them to revert to their original, pure state of being and then judge whether he was insane. Hud peace be upon him also affirmed that he stood clear of the idols which they worshipped instead of Allah.

Then Hud peace be upon him was quoted as saying:

مِن دُونِهِۦۖ فَكِيدُونِي جَمِيعٗا ثُمَّ لَا تُنظِرُونِ ٥٥

So plot against me, all of you, and give me
no respite [55] (The Quran, Hud: 55)

The words min dunih (translated in the previous verse as ‘other than Him’) can mean ‘beside Allah’ or ‘instead of Him’, for Hud’s people had worshiped idols besides or instead of Allah the Exalted. In the face of this, Hud peace be upon him presented them with the challenge of joining all together in plotting against him. He was just one man, and they were a massive tyrannical force. Clearly, if one oppressive multitude of people united and conspired against one person, it is expected that they should defeat him. Yet, Hud peace be upon him defied them, telling them to proceed with their evil plots and cunning schemes, and even try to kill him if they wanted; this was the ultimate defiant stance. This defiance is itself a miracle (attesting to his prophethood) because Hud challenged them while knowing that Allah Glorified is He would grant him victory.

In the previous verse, Prophet Hud peace be upon him confidently uttered, ‘I call Allah to witness’ as Hud could not possibly have raised this challenge haphazardly (without being sure that Allah would support him). No one would jeopardize his life by a single word. Hud peace be upon him said, ‘So plot against me, all of you, and give me no respite.’ only because he had, prior to this challenge, taken refuge with a strong support. He had said so with unflinching faith that the True Lord the Exalted would enable him to fulfil his word.

Hud peace be upon him called Allah the Glorious and Exalted to witness, and Allah the Most High was the first to have called Himself to witness. The True Lord says, ‘Allah bears witness that there is no god but Him’ (Al-‘Imran: 18). The angels and those endowed with knowledge also testified to this(1); and so when Allah the Glorious and Exalted testifies that there is no god except Him, this represents a reassuring guarantee that, whenever Allah decrees a matter, He will most surely see that His Will be done. Hud peace be upon him called his Lord to witness, and he was confident that He would protect him. The True

Lord the Exalted could never send a messenger and let a people obstruct him from spreading His Message.

Then the True Lord the Most High continues to mention that which Hud peace be upon him had uttered:

إِنِّي تَوَكَّلْتُ عَلَى ٱللَّهِ رَبِّي وَرَبِّكُمۚ مَّا مِن دَآبَّةٍ إِلَّا هُوَ ءَاخِذُۢ
بِنَاصِيَتِهَآۚ إِنَّ رَبِّي عَلَىٰ صِرَٰطٖ مُّسۡتَقِيمٖ ﴿٥٦﴾

I put my trust in God, my Lord and your Lord. There is no moving creature which He does not control. My Lord's way is straight [56] (The Quran, Hud: 56)

Hud peace be upon him thus declared the reality of reliance on Allah, which is entrusting all his affairs to Him. For Allah transcends not only them, and provides sustenance not only for them, but also to all creatures. He is the One who takes every freely moving, living thing on earth by its forelock. The forelock signifies the forepart of the head; it is the lock of hair that grows just above the forehead. To grab a person by his forelock can be a sign of humiliation. The True Lord the Exalted says elsewhere in the Quran, 'The criminals will be known by their marks, and they will be seized by their forelocks and their feet.' (ar-Rahman: 41) In another verse, the True Lord says, 'Nay! If he ceases not, we will catch him by the forelock.' (al-'Alaq: 15)

This provides some insights into the reason why the Tribe of `Ad did not unleash a group of snakes or a pack of wild dogs against Hud peace be upon him. They could never do so, and Hud peace be upon him had explained why they would be powerless to harm him when he told them, '…for there is no living creature which He does not hold by its forelock. Verily, straight is my Lord's Way!' (Hud: 56)

We notice that Hud peace be upon him repeated in their hearing the concept of Allah's Lordship. In the beginning of the noble verse, he said, 'my Lord as well as your Lord' and at the end of it, he said, 'verily, straight is my Lord's Way.' This is because they had an irreverent attitude towards Allah's Lordship over all creation. For this reason, Hud peace be upon him said concerning dominion, 'my Lord as well as your Lord', whereas at the end of the verse, he said, 'verily, straight is my Lord's Way!' That is, the One True God exercises Absolute Justice. Hud peace be upon him was talking here only about the True Lord's Absolute Justice, and mentioned nothing regarding their idols.

The True Lord exercises His Absolute Power with perfect straightness and righteousness in the fullest sense. He is the Possessor of Subjugating and Dominating Power, from which nothing can escape, but despite Allah's Infinite Power, He never uses it to for injustice.

Then the True Lord says:

فَإِن تَوَلَّوْا۟ فَقَدْ أَبْلَغْتُكُم مَّآ أُرْسِلْتُ بِهِۦٓ إِلَيْكُمْ ۚ وَيَسْتَخْلِفُ رَبِّى قَوْمًا
غَيْرَكُمْ وَلَا تَضُرُّونَهُۥ شَيْـًٔا ۚ إِنَّ رَبِّى عَلَىٰ كُلِّ شَىْءٍ حَفِيظٌ ﴿٥٧﴾

But if you turn away, then I have conveyed the message with which I was sent to you, and my Lord will bring along another people in your place. You cannot do Him any harm: it is my Lord who protects everything'[57]
(The Quran, Hud: 57)

This means that if you turn away, then at least I have fulfilled my responsibility and delivered the message that I was delegated with and you will not be able to cite my lack of effort as an excuse. For the True Lord Glorified is He does not punish a people that are ignorant, uninformed of the True Lord, indeed, this is the very reason why He sent me to you.

Or that these words are addressed from Allah Glorified is He to Hud peace be upon him to explain that if they chose to turn away, then tell them, '…I have delivered to you the message with which I was sent unto you, and [that] my Lord may cause another people to take your place…' (Hud: 57). Now the word al-istikhlaf means that they are a people that are to replace a previous generation and either it is the case that they are just, and do not stand in opposition to the Laws of Allah nor to Divine Revelations—as did the Tribe of `Ad, or it is the case that they are unjust such those whom the True Lord Glorified is He describes in the following verse, 'Yet they were succeeded by generations [of people] who lost all [thought of] prayer and followed [but] their own lusts…' (Maryam: 59).

The True Lord Glorified is He promises '…those of you who have attained to faith and do righteous deeds that, of a certainty, He will cause them to accede to power on Earth, even as He caused [some of] those who lived before them to accede to it…' (an-Nur: 55). Thus al-istikhlaf implies that those who take the place are either doers of good deeds, or those who disregard the Laws of Allah and follow their carnal desires. In another verse the True Lord Glorified is He says, 'Here you are - those invited to spend in the cause of Allah - but among you are those who withhold [out of greed]. And whoever withholds only withholds [benefit] from himself; and Allah is Free of need, while you are the needy. And if you turn away, He will replace you with another people; then they will not be the likes of you.' (Muhammad: 38). Here the True Lord Glorified is He says, 'Whereas you will not harm Him in the least' (Hud: 57).

The doctrine that was revealed to the creation by The True Lord Glorified is He is to rectify His servants, for Allah Glorified is He is the Creator endowed with all the qualities of Fullness and Perfection, and none of His servants can ever hope to 'supplement' His Qualities, nor can any of His servants reduce any of His Qualities. That is why we say to those who are recalcitrant towards Allah with their disbelief, those who are disobedient towards His Path with their sinfulness: You are accustomed to being so insubordinate; either by rejecting Allah altogether—which is the ultimate act of disobedience—or by exhibiting resistance towards Allah's Laws by breaking them. Why, then, are not you insubordinate towards other things, such as sickness? Why does not one of you say, for example, 'I will not fall sick'? Why does not one of you rebel against death? Since you demonstrate such defiance towards matter in which you have a choice, can you rebel against Allah's other incontrovertible Laws?

You will not be able to do so because you will be grabbed by your forelock. If the True Lord Glorified is He wished, He could stop the beating of the heart, and you would in no measure be able to make it begin beating again. That is why Hud peace be upon him says, '…whereas you will not harm Him in the least. Verily, my Lord watches over all things!' (Hud: 57)

Allah Glorified is He is vigilant, watchful over everything in His Creation. Some philosophers posit that Allah created the universe and set up the laws of nature and then left the world to operate independently. To these people we would say: No, for you take into account only the qualities of Allah as the Creator, the fully Capable. But what about the quality of vigilance that watches over every soul like when Allah Glorified is He describes Himself to His servants as One Who '…neither slumber overtakes Him, nor sleep…' (al-Baqara: 255)? When Allah Glorified is He says this, He is reassuring His servants that they might relax and have peace of mind for He is immune to forgetfulness and to sleep. Allah Glorified is He is the All-Sustaining.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَلَمَّا جَآءَ أَمْرُنَا نَجَّيْنَا هُودًا وَٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ مَعَهُۥ
بِرَحْمَةٍ مِّنَّا وَنَجَّيْنَٰهُم مِّنْ عَذَابٍ غَلِيظٍ ﴿٥٨﴾

And so, when Our judgement came to pass, by
Our grace We saved Hud and his fellow believers.
We saved them from a severe punishment [58]
(The Quran, Hud: 58)

When you hear the words 'when our judgment came to pass' you know that there is an order and it is obeyed, and at the instant when the order is issued, it is executed because it is an order from He Who is capable of execution. In another verse, the True Lord Glorified is He says, 'When the sky is split asunder, obeying its Lord, as in truth it must.' (al-Inshiqaq: 1-2) Therefore, the moment the sky heard the True Lord's Command, it carried it out.

When the True Lord Glorified is He wanted to save Musa (Moses) peace be upon him from the slaughter which Pharaoh had ordered, Allah Glorified is He told Musa's (Moses') mother, '...when you have cause to fear for him, cast him into the river and have no fear and do not grieve – for We shall restore him to you, and shall make him one of Our message-bearers!' (al-Qasas: 7) How could a mother do that?

Every mother cares for her son. The killing of baby Musa (Moses) peace be upon him was imminent, and throwing him into the sea would spell certain death, but Musa's (Moses') mother trusted the words that Allah had revealed to her and did not hesitate. This shows that she did not assess the situation by ordinary human standards, but she carried out what Allah Glorified is He had inspired her to do, and neither doubt nor the devil can challenge this divine inspiration. Then Allah Glorified is He gives specific orders to the river itself, '…and thereupon the river will cast him ashore…' (Ta Ha: 39). The river welcomed the Lord's order since it was the command of the Almighty, just as it would have carried out the opposite.

In the story of Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him the True Lord Glorified is He says, '…when Our judgment came to pass, and waters gushed forth…' (Hud: 40). So the flood occurred, and the disbelievers were drowned. Here the True Lord Glorified is He says, 'And so, when Our judgment came to pass…' (Hud: 58), meaning, that the judgment that came to pass was the punishment of those who were recalcitrant regarding Hud's message peace be upon him and the execution of this punishment occurred in a very special and precise way. A precision which does justice to the Greatness of Allah Glorified is He Who issued this judgment. For the violent wind or fatal blow that descended on them was out of their control, a force of nature directed by Allah, but the deniers of the True Lord Glorified is He could have gathered closely around Hud peace be upon him and his followers, so how would the howl of the winds affect only the ears of the disbelievers sparing the ears of the believers? This was a precision strike, not an all-out assault. The wind's targets had been predetermined. It was just like the pebbles of dried-up clay that were hurled by the swarms of birds on the armies of Abraha al-Habashi, the same stones spared the armies of Quraysh. So they were not destroyed by a plague as some philosophers have claimed.

This is one of the secrets of the True Lord's Greatness—to single out the disbelievers targeted for punishment and to spare the believers. For every force of nature, no matter how powerful, is governed by an even Greater Power.

Al-Mutanabbi[1] said[2]:

The sun blackens the whiteness of our faces
But does not blacken the whiteness of our beards and our locks [of hair]
And their state would surely be one [and the same] in judgment
If the judge were to be one from this world

Here Al-Mutanabbi speaks of how exposing oneself to the sun can make one's skin turn dark, but will not make one's grey hair dark again. However, if you were to leave any dark coloured object in the sun long enough, its colour would start fading; the result is different in each case even though the actor—that is, the sun—is one and the same. Here the True Lord Glorified is He says, 'And so, when Our judgment came to pass, by Our Grace We saved Hud and those who shared his faith…' (Hud: 58). So do not ask how they were saved from that suffering which seemingly affected all things indiscriminately because this is Allah's Mercy. Mercy—as we know—is when harm is prevented from ever affecting a person; as for the act of 'healing', that involves remedying a harm that was already done. That is why the True Lord Glorified is He says, 'Thus step by step, We bestow from on high through this Quran all that gives health [to the spirit] and is a grace unto those who believe [in Us] …' (al-Isra': 82).

We notice that in this verse the True Lord Glorified is He mentions two acts of deliverance. The first act of deliverance was that they were saved from total suffering—from the raging storm winds, from, the mighty blast, from the obliterating calamity and Allah Glorified is He says, '…by Our Grace We saved Hud and those who shared his faith; and We saved them [too] from severe suffering [in the life to come].' (Hud: 58) The second act of deliverance was that they were spared from the severe suffering of the hereafter, for the suffering in this life on earth, no matter how severe, can last only as long as life itself. As for the suffering of the hereafter, it is one without end. Furthermore, the True Lord Glorified is He describes it as being 'severe'.

(1) Abu At-Tayeb Ahmad ibn Al-Hussain; a wise poet. He was born in Al-Kufa in a place called 'Kandah' in the year 303 of the Islamic calendar and spent his formative years in Ash-Sham. He claimed to be a prophet (or in Arabic nabi) in a village called As-Sammawa (between Al-Kufa and Ash-Sham), which is why he is called Al-Mutanabbi ('claimer to prophet hood'). Then he renounced his claim after being imprisoned. He died in the year 354 of the Islamic calendar at the age of 52.

(2) Even though Al-Mutanabbi was an eloquent poet capable of integrating multiple meanings, he was open to a source of true knowledge out of which hidden meanings can be drawn; this same source leads the mind to the truth of Allah's Oneness.

Now an object described as being ghalizh means it is powerful and harsh, and the suffering is severe insofar as a person's deeds were severe. That is why when the True Lord Glorified is He grants a man sexual rights over a woman through marriage, this union is described as a 'solemn pledge'. Even though this pledge is utilitarian in nature, it nevertheless involves the principles of virtue and honour. For the man is not given absolute dominion over the woman he marries; the pledge of marriage simply grants the man the right of sexual contact. The True Lord Glorified is He says, '…and she has received a most solemn pledge from you' (an-Nisa': 21).

So Hud peace be upon him and his followers' deliverance from the first punishment foreshadowed their deliverance from the second, more severe suffering.

After this the True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَتِلْكَ عَادٌ جَحَدُوا۟ بِـَٔايَٰتِ رَبِّهِمْ وَعَصَوْا۟ رُسُلَهُۥ وَٱتَّبَعُوٓا۟ أَمْرَ كُلِّ جَبَّارٍ عَنِيدٍ ﴿٥٩﴾

These were the 'Ad: they rejected their Lord's signs, disobeyed His messengers, and followed the command of every obstinate tyrant [59] (The Quran, Hud: 59)

The word tilka in this verse refers to the location where the tribe of `Ad lived, for the word is 'feminine', and let us also remember that the speaker here is Allah Glorified is He. Thus, Allah has distinguished between `Ad—the place, and `Ad —the tribe. Allah Glorified is He says, '… [Who] had rejected their Lord's messages…' (Hud: 59), for they had disappeared off the face of the earth, but they left certain traces behind. The word `Ad refers either to the place and the location, or to the inhabitants of that location; and so if the word is preceded by the term tilka, it then becomes a reference to the village where they lived. To be sure, their houses never rejected Allah's Message. Therefore, the following words from Allah the Exalted follow, '… [who] had rejected their Lord's messages…' (Hud: 59). Here, the word jahad means to deny something by abrogating evidence. The word ayat (verses) —plural of the word aya (verse)—denotes the marvellous eye catching phenomena which prompt us into faith and reverent obedience.

Some of Allah's signs are concerned with the doctrine's summit, which is to have faith in The Necessary Being—The Lord of creation, The Wise, The Fully-Capable. Among these signs are those of night and day, the sun and the moon, and the vision of the humble earth and many other premier signs of this sort. There are also signs that substantiate the coming of messengers from Allah the Exalted these are the miracles. Other signs contain Allah's rules and regulations which are intended to ensure the continued health of the life of His creation. Now the tribe of `Ad rejected all these signs. They rejected faith, refused to accept the messenger—though he came with his miracle—and they neglected and abandoned Allah's Path. That is why the True Lord Glorified is He says, '…and rebelled against His apostles…' (Hud: 59). Hud peace be upon him is the one who was sent by the True Lord Glorified is He to the tribe of `Ad; so is it him that this verse is referring to here? No, because Allah the Exalted says, 'And lo, Allah accepted, through the Prophets, this solemn pledge [from the followers of earlier revelation], "If, after all the revelation and the wisdom which I have vouchsafed unto you, there comes to you an apostle confirming the truth already in your possession, you must believe in him and succour him…"' (Al-'Imran: 81). Therefore, every human community has conveyed a message from their messenger, and this message asks that they believe in the story of every other messenger sent by Allah. The True Lord Glorified is He also says, 'The apostle, and the believers with him, believe in what has been bestowed upon him from on high by his Lord; they all believe in Allah, and His angels, and His revelations and His apostles, making no distinction between any of His apostles…' (al-Baqara: 285). Thus, they are split up into two groups; for the True Lord Glorified is He says, '…and rebelled against His apostles, and followed the bidding of every arrogant enemy of the truth' (Hud: 59) meaning that there are those who follow and those who lead. The expression 'every arrogant enemy of the True Lord' refers to the leaders of communities, the lords of tyranny. As for the second category, it includes those who follow these oppressors. It is out of His Mercy Glorified is He that when speaking about aberrant groups, he differentiates between those who are astray in and of themselves, and those who lead others astray. He who leads others astray has two sins to answer for; the first is his own aberrance from the straight Path, and the second is his responsibility for leading others away from the Path. As for those who followed these people, they have a mitigating excuse because they had been blinded by power and had been forced through tyranny. They did not follow because of deep conviction or clear proof.

Notice how the Quran addresses this issue. When speaking of those who went astray it says, ‘And there are among them unlettered people who have no real knowledge of the Book, [following] only wishful beliefs and depending on nothing but conjecture.’ (al-Baqara: 78) Then the True Lord Glorified is He speaks about those who lead others astray, ‘Woe, then, unto those who write down, [something which they claim to be] the Book, with their own hands, and then say, “This is from Allah”, in order to acquire a trifling gain thereby…’ (al-Baqara: 79).

Going back to the chapter of Hud, the True Lord Glorified is He continues:

وَأُتْبِعُوا۟ فِى هَٰذِهِ ٱلدُّنْيَا لَعْنَةً وَيَوْمَ ٱلْقِيَٰمَةِ ۗ أَلَآ إِنَّ عَادًا كَفَرُوا۟
رَبَّهُمْ ۗ أَلَا بُعْدًا لِّعَادٍ قَوْمِ هُودٍ ﴿٦٠﴾

They were rejected in this life and so they shall be on the Day of Judgement. Yes, the 'Ad denied their Lord – so away with the 'Ad, the people of Hud! [60] (The Quran, Hud: 60)

Allah’s creatures go through three major periods of time: the first is their life on earth, the second is the time between death and the coming of the Day of Judgment—known as barzakh, and the third begins when they are resurrected.

The life on earth involves work. In the life of the barzakh the reward is—not actually experienced—but merely presented or contemplated. Then during the third life—the life of the hereafter—one enters either heaven or hell. The True Lord Glorified is He says, ‘How can you refuse to acknowledge Allah, seeing that you were lifeless and He gave you life, and that He will cause you to die and then will bring you again to life, whereupon unto Him you will be brought back?' (al-Baqara: 28) These are the three periods—life on Earth, the barzakh and the resurrection. Each represents a period of time. The Quran describes these periods when it speaks of the suffering of the people of Pharaoh beginning from the moment Allah Glorified is He caused the sea to swallow them up, 'the fire [of the hereafter – that fire] which they had been made to contemplate [in vain], morning and evening; for on the Day when the Last Hour dawns [Allah will say], "Make Pharaoh's folk enter upon suffering most severe!"' (Ghafir: 46) This verse confirms that during the barzakh, the dead shall be made to contemplate the coming reward. As the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said, 'The grave shall feel like either one of the gardens of paradise or like one of the pits of hell.'(1) Thus, two time-periods are involved; the period during which they are made to contemplate hellfire, day and night, then the period during which they enter the hellfire.

This confirms that there is such a thing as 'suffering' even during the barzakh because the disbeliever will be made to see the hellfire into which he will be thrown. He sees the suffering that he is destined to, and then the Hour comes. He will receive his share of suffering. As for the tribe of `Ad, Allah Glorified is He gave them a foretaste of the suffering in their life on earth, then on the Day of Judgment, He will throw them into the hellfire. The True Lord Glorified is He says in the same verse, '...Oh, verily, [the tribe of] `Ad denied their Lord! Oh, away with the `Ad, the people of Hud!' (Hud: 60) As we have previously explained, the term ala serves to draw the reader's attention to the importance of what the speaker is saying, so that the uttered words do not fly over the listener's inattentive head. The speaker has full rein of the conversation, the listener must not receive his words negligently. Thus, the term ala comes as an alarm bell, warning the listener to pay close attention to what is about to be said. Here the subject revolves around the suffering that the tribe of `Ad had brought upon themselves, namely, the annihilating winds. Then they experienced the suffering of the barazkh, and on the Day of Judgment they shall be received with even more suffering; thus, suffering three-fold.

(1) Narrated by At-Tirmidhi and At-Tabarani and narrated in Al-Kabir of Abu Sa`id. It is also narrated by At-Tabarani and narrated in Al-Kabir of Abu Hurayra. Their chains of transmission are both weak. See also (Mujma' Az-Zawa`id) (3/46) and Ad-Dilmi's (Musnad Al-Firdaws) (3/231).

The True Lord Glorified is He knows that the listener's (or the reader's) heart might cringe at the amount of suffering through which the tribe of `Ad goes. That is precisely why the term ala is mentioned to make the reader understand that the tribe of `Ad had rejected their Lord.

Their crime occurred at a specific point in time, and the punishment for that crime has an appointed time. Their rejection of Allah occurred during their life on earth, and since this represents the mother of all crimes, they received their punishment during their time on earth. It is a very risky proposition indeed to delay the punishment until long after the crime has been committed. Do not be foolish and show mercy towards them, for their rejection of Allah is the ultimate doctrinal crime; that is why they will continue to suffer even as they lie waiting in their graves until the Day of Judgment when their full sentence will be carried out. To be sure, it was not Allah's innumerable blessings that they rejected, it was Allah Himself. The True Lord Glorified is He did not demand that anyone worship Him before they reach the age of maturity, and He had bestowed upon His creation all kinds of blessings; therefore the punishment they received was fair and they fully deserve it. Hud peace be upon him had made it clear to them, 'Behold, I have placed my trust in Allah, [who is] my Lord as well as your Lord: for there is no living creature which He does not hold by its forelock. Verily, straight is my Lord's way!' (Hud: 56) Or in other words, the True Lord Glorified is He is Just. When you hear about their crimes, you reel with disgust and demand that they receive the harshest possible penalty. That is why the True Lord Glorified is He says, '…Oh, verily, [the tribe of] `Ad denied their Lord! Oh, away with the `Ad, the people of Hud!' (Hud: 60) To curse them once is not enough; you must curse them twice over. One might ask, why does the True Lord Glorified is He says, '...Oh, away with the `Ad, the people of Hud!' (Hud: 60)

We would reply that the True Lord Glorified is He says elsewhere in the Quran, 'and that it is He who destroyed the ancient [tribes of] `Ad' (an-Najm: 50). This demonstrates that there are two different tribes of `Ad. The first tribe of `Ad, who were a community of people who lived on earth for a while but were then annihilated by Allah, and then there is a second tribe of `Ad.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says,

ٱلۡأَرۡضِ وَٱسۡتَعۡمَرَكُمۡ فِيهَا فَٱسۡتَغۡفِرُوهُ ثُمَّ تُوبُوٓاْ إِلَيۡهِۚ إِنَّ رَبِّي قَرِيبٞ مُّجِيبٞ ٦١

To the Thamud[1], We sent their brother, Saleh. He said, 'My people, worship God. You have no god other than Him. It was He who brought you into being from the earth and made you inhabit it, so ask forgiveness from Him, and turn back to Him: my Lord is near, and ready to answer' [61]
(The Quran, Hud: 61)

The True Lord Glorified is He points out that the messenger who was sent to the tribe of Thamud was one of them. This was Saleh (Shelah) peace be upon him. The True Lord Glorified is He uses the word akhahum to call attention to the relationship between Saleh (Shelah) peace be upon him and his people for he had grown up among them, and they are intimately acquainted with him so that when he brought them the message—the authenticity of which is palpable—they must indeed have put their faith in the doctrine which he had brought. Saleh (Shelah) peace be upon him calls to them, 'ya qawm' which comes from qiyam, that is, 'O you who undertake actions', or 'O you who carry out actions'. Now carrying out action is normally the role of men because women's affairs are to be kept discreet and veiled, as it were, behind the activities of men, for not every article of faith that mentions women most concern men, the affairs of the women being contained implicitly in the affairs of the men. The men toil and labour, while the women manage the life of the house and the rearing of children. We find many cases of men and women who come to the agreement that, after marriage, the woman will not go out into the world to work. Of course, a woman has every right to work if she needs to do so and does not find someone to care for her. However, if she finds someone who can support her, is it not better for her, then, to focus on the equally important task of caring for the family? There are also those who attack the veil in the name of freedom. Who, we ask, are you doing this for? If you refuse to condemn promiscuous clothing, because you consider that it is a

---

(1) The tribe of Thamud: One of the first Arab tribes. Some say they are the descendants of the survivors of the tribe of `Ad. [See Lissan Al-`Arab –under t h m d].

‘freedom’, why are you involving yourself in the issue of the veil; is wearing the veil not also a ‘freedom’?

Returning to the Quranic verse, ‘...Worship Allah [alone]: you have no deity other than Him…’ (Hud: 61), the word ‘worship’ involves the directives—‘dos’ and ‘do nots’—that are to be received from Allah and applied to all aspects of human life. The first thing that Saleh (Shelah) peace be upon him asked of the tribe of Thamud was that they ‘Worship Allah [alone]’.This commandment is incumbent upon every soul, and none can afford to contravene it. ‘...you have no deity other than Him…’ (Hud: 61) expresses an incontrovertible fact which you cannot alter as indeed, you have no other deity than Allah, notwithstanding your veneration of other false deities. The True Lord Glorified is He says, ‘...He brought you into being out of the earth, and made you thrive thereon…’ (Hud: 61). The notion of insha` implies bringing something into being from scratch, i.e. out of nothing. That is why we do not say that one who has invented, has ansha` because he made use of other existing materials to come up with his invention. For instance, he might have made use of materials that were mined from under mountains, and he might have drawn on knowledge that was cultivated by previous generations of men. It is only the True Lord Glorified is He Who creates out of nothing. Thus, there are two categories of creation: creation that draws on pre-existing things, and creation from nothing. The latter is known as true insha` and only Allah Glorified is He is capable of such creation.

Exalted is the True Lord’s creation; for He creates man out of the convergence of husband and wife, and if you were to trace this procreation back to Adam peace be upon him, you would find that the True Lord Glorified is He has created him out of the same substance as the earth—and the earth itself is one of Allah’s creations. Both a man’s sperm and a woman’s egg are extracts of human blood, and the latter is what is extracted from food which comes from the earth. So, whether you look back at the creation of Adam peace be upon him from the substance of the earth or whether you look at the biological processes by which his progeny continues to multiply—all comes back to earth. When the True Lord Glorified is He says, ‘...He brought you into being out of the earth, and made you thrive thereon…’ (Hud: 61), note that the word `amar is prefixed by the letters ‘alif’, ‘sin’, and ‘ta`’. This indicates that the verb, in addition to its original meaning, also connotes a ‘demand’ or an ‘appeal’. So the word ista`mar denotes ‘asking to inhabit’. Therefore, it is a catastrophic error to label colonizing nations as ‘duwal al-isti`mar’. I say this because these nations did not really want to ‘inhabit’ other lands; rather, what they wanted was to ‘exploit’ other lands and hinder the development of the peoples of those lands. That is why they ought to be called instead, ‘duwal al-istikhrab’ (the nations of destruction).

So ista`marakum fiha means that Allah asked you to live there and prosper, and this requires that two conditions be fulfilled: maintain that which is good in its state or make it better. Just as I have previously given the example of the improvements that were made in bringing drinking water into people’s homes thanks to the discovery of water towers. Before the advent of water towers people used to get their water directly from the canals. Now with the discovery of water towers and the improvements of water treatment systems, every home now has its own supply of water.

Thus, now with drinking water reaching every household—this is a situation in which something good became even better. Also, if we succeed in reinvigorating land that is fallow, we can expand the area of agricultural land to produce more food for a growing population. Since population numbers are rising, we must find a way of rejuvenating the land. The current crisis is a result of our inattentiveness to the fact that rapid population growth was not matched by an increase of agricultural land. This is all part and parcel of ‘living and thriving on earth’ that is mentioned in the Quranic verse. The Greatness of the True Lord Glorified is He is that He projects His Exalted Qualities into His creation. The strong helps the weak, and the True Lord’s Power is absolute; He also bestows His Wisdom, His Contraction, His Expansion, and His Wealth. All these Divine Qualities are innate to Allah, and we are merely the recipients.

The proof of this is that the strong among us eventually becomes weak, and the rich among us can easily succumb to a state of poverty. Therefore, we must realise that we do not inherently possess any of these qualities that it is the True Lord Glorified is He Who bestows on us of His Attributes some abilities so that we can function. It is incumbent on him whom Allah the Exalted has given the capacity to take action, to realise that he himself is merely the beneficiary of action taken by those who came before him. For instance, if today he eats a date, he must remember that the date palm was planted by someone who came before him. So, he who enjoys the date today should plant a date palm so that, in seven years—the time required for a date palm to bear fruit—he and others can derive benefit from it.

Going back to the current verse, the True Lord Glorified is He says that Saleh (Shelah) peace be upon him told the tribe of Thamud, '...Ask Him, therefore, to forgive you your sins, and then turn towards Him in repentance – for, verily, my Lord is ever-near, responding [to the call of whoever calls unto Him]!' (Hud: 61). For if a person was to ask forgiveness for sins that do not involve violating other peoples' rights, the True Lord Glorified is He is Ever-Near; Allah Glorified is He responds to those who ask him for forgiveness. So what was the tribe of Thamud's response?

The True Lord Glorified is He mentions them as saying:

قَالُوا۟ يَـٰصَـٰلِحُ قَدْ كُنتَ فِينَا مَرْجُوًّا قَبْلَ هَـٰذَآ ۖ أَتَنْهَىٰنَآ أَن نَّعْبُدَ
مَا يَعْبُدُ ءَابَآؤُنَا وَإِنَّنَا لَفِى شَكٍّ مِّمَّا تَدْعُونَآ إِلَيْهِ مُرِيبٍ ﴿٦٢﴾

They said, 'Saleh, We used to have such great hope in you. Will you forbid us to worship what our fathers worshipped? We are in grave doubt about what you are asking us to do' [62] (The Quran, Hud: 62)

Indeed, they had had high hopes for Saleh (Shelah) peace be upon him that is, until he started calling them to worship Allah alone, to the exclusion of any other false deities. The term marju means a person in whom there are high hopes because he exhibits the qualities of intelligence, ambitiousness, honesty and any other qualities that are signs of a good future. As soon as Saleh (Shelah) peace be upon him started calling them to worship Allah Glorified is He they announced that—because of such calls—all their hopes for him were dashed. Saleh (Shelah) peace be upon him had only done what all previous messengers had done before him, and that is he warned them that worshipping idols, trees or the sun is wrong. True worship consists of following commandments that were revealed as part of a total doctrine, whereas the objects which they were wont to worship lay down no such doctrine, and there is no true worship without a doctrine. The tribe of Thamud said furthermore, '...we are in grave doubt, amounting to suspicion, about [the meaning of] thy call to us!' (Hud: 62)

Now doubt occurs when the two sides—confirmation and denial—balance each other out. Thus, they are not entirely certain that their worship of their forefathers' idols is a valid religion; for Saleh (Shelah) peace be upon him made them uncertain about the validity of that kind of worship and this shows that it was Saleh (Shelah)'s virtuous qualities that gave him credibility to cause them to question their old pagan habits.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He states what Saleh (Shelah) peace be upon him told the tribe of Thamud:

قَالَ يَٰقَوۡمِ أَرَءَيۡتُمۡ إِن كُنتُ عَلَىٰ بَيِّنَةٖ مِّن رَّبِّي وَءَاتَىٰنِي مِنۡهُ رَحۡمَةٗ
فَمَن يَنصُرُنِي مِنَ ٱللَّهِ إِنۡ عَصَيۡتُهُۥۖ فَمَا تَزِيدُونَنِي غَيۡرَ تَخۡسِيرٖ ٦٣

He said, 'My people, just think: if I did have clear proof from my Lord, and if He had given me mercy of His own, who could protect me from God if I disobeyed Him? You would only make my loss greater [63] (The Quran, Hud: 63)

Saleh (Shelah) peace be upon him wisely responded, 'Tell me, am I not making my stand on clear evidence from my Lord, that He has sent me and endorsed me; and if I have fooled other people I will surely not fool myself; so shall I abandon all that my Lord has blessed me with, shall I abandon the message He has entrusted me to deliver to you? Shall I abandon all of this and, instead, heed your words? Shall I overlook my certainty in that I am His Messenger, that He has, '…vouchsafed unto me grace from Himself…' (Hud: 63), the grace of prophecy? '... [if this be true,] who would shield me from Allah were I to rebel against Him?' (Hud: 63) When a person poses such a rhetorical question in this kind of a situation, this person cannot be but certain that the response will please him. Then the True Lord Glorified is He quotes Saleh (Shelah) peace be upon him as saying, '...Hence, what you are offering me is no more than perdition!' (Hud: 63) We know that the term al-khusara is the antonym of the word maksab meaning that which is gained. Al-khusara on the other hand signifies a decrease, especially when it comes to wealth. So, is it he who will cause them to lose, or is it them who will cause him to lose? The richness of the Quranic language brings out all these meanings. For if Saleh (Shelah) peace be upon him were to obey them and disobey his Lord, he would have incurred upon himself an overall loss. At the same time, they would have incurred an even more devastating loss because they were misguided to begin with, and wanted him to become lost as they were, and to worship false deities (in lieu) of Allah the Exalted. Therefore, either Saleh (Shelah) peace be upon him would have led them to perdition, or they would have led Saleh (Shelah) peace be upon him to perdition.

Then, Saleh (Shelah) peace be upon him further says:

أَرۡضِ ٱللَّهِ وَلَا تَمَسُّوهَا بِسُوٓءٖ فَيَأۡخُذَكُمۡ عَذَابٞ قَرِيبٞ ﴿٦٤﴾

My people, this camel belongs to God, a sign for you, so leave it to pasture on God's earth and do not harm it, or you will soon be punished' [64] (The Quran, Hud: 64)

The tribe of Thamud had asked Saleh (Shelah) peace be upon him to perform a miracle that would confirm his prophecy, and so they said, 'If you are truly a prophet then make a she-camel appear out of this boulder, and they pointed to a certain boulder. They were a tribe that was famous for carving their houses out of rock cliffs. Anyone who travels to the region lying between the Levant and the city of Medina can see the remnants of their villages, for they are carved out of mountains. The True Lord Glorified is He refers to them in the following verse, 'and that you will [always be able to] hew dwellings out of the mountains with [the same] great skill?' (ash-Shu'ara': 149)

Thus, it is they who had specified what type of miracle they wanted. They wanted that a she-camel would come forth from within the boulder which they pointed at, and when the she-camel appeared, she was pregnant. After the she-camel was brought into existence, they still did not have the heart to affirm Saleh's (Shelah's) peace be upon him prophethood. Saleh (Shelah) peace be upon him had told them, 'And [then he said], "O my people! This she-camel belonging to Allah…"' (Hud: 64). When you hear that something is attributed to Allah the Exalted know that this thing is immensely great as a result. Just as we would say, 'the house of Allah', when these words are spoken we know that they are a reference to the Holy Ka'ba. If we designate a spot and say that it is 'the house of Allah', we then would build a mosque in this spot—a structured consecrated entirely to the worship of Allah, where no other type of activity takes place. Thus, the Ka'ba is Allah's house because Allah the Exalted chose the spot, and other spots are also houses of Allah because they were designated by His servants. That is why the house of Allah—at the spot chosen by Him—now becomes the Qibla for all the other secondary houses of Allah selected by His servants. Therefore, whenever anything is attributed to Allah the Exalted that thing then takes on greatness akin to the Greatness of the True Lord Glorified is He Himself. Saleh (Shelah) peace be upon him tells them, '...This she-camel belonging to Allah…' (Hud: 64), does not belong to Zayd or `Amr. The people of Saleh (Shelah) peace be upon him paid little attention to what Saleh (Shelah) peace be upon him had said, and they did not realise that anything that is attributed to Allah the Exalted becomes endowed with the same Greatness. An example of this(1) is the son of Abu-Lahab who had married the daughter of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. When Abu-Lahab's intransigence towards the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him increased, Abu-Lahab told his son to divorce the Prophet's daughter(2). Such an action is a mark of utter disdain, so the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him told him, 'I ask that Allah unleash his beasts on him.' Then Abu-Lahab exclaimed, 'Muhammad's prayer fills me with ominous forebodings'. Then, when Abu Lahab took his entourage on a long trip, he asked that his son sleep in the middle of the caravan's camp, out of fear that the Prophet's prayer would be answered. Nevertheless, a lion jumped over the travellers and ate the son, whereby the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him attributed this event to Allah, saying, 'You were eaten by one of Allah's beasts.' Indeed, Allah's beast was a lion.

(1) The story of `Utba the son of Abu Lahab with Um-Kalthum the daughter of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and the latter's accusing him

(2) Um-Kalthum Allah be pleased with her

Going back to the verse which we are currently studying, Prophet Saleh (Shelah) peace be upon him explained to them that this she-camel is the product of the miracle which you asked of me, and she has miraculously appeared out of a boulder. Out of that inanimate object he could have brought a higher class of creature such as a plant. When the True Lord Glorified is He answered their demands he brought forth a creature belonging to an even higher category, namely, from the animal kingdom. We know that when it comes to earthly creatures, they can either belong to the category of inanimate objects, or they can possess the capacity for growth, and so they are plants, or they can possess the capacity for movement and sensory experience, and are thus animals, or they might possess the capacity for movement, sensory experience as well as rational thought, and are thus humans.

It would have been possible that Saleh (Shelah) peace be upon him bring forth a tree. This would also have been a miraculous feat. The True Lord Glorified is He affected the miracle exactly as they had demanded: a she-camel, belonging to the animal kingdom, and pregnant at the same time. Saleh (Shelah) peace be upon him asked them to take good care of her because she was a divine miracle. Thus, they could not harm her. Saleh (Shelah) peace be upon him said, '…leave her alone to pasture on Allah's earth, and do her no harm, lest speedy chastisement befall you!' (Hud: 64) Thus, did he warn them and asked that they let it graze on Allah's earth. If they harmed it, and grave suffering did not befall them, all those who had come to believe in Saleh (Shelah) peace be upon him would then revert to disbelief. Therefore, if they were to harm the she-camel, swift punishment must necessarily follow. In the end, they harmed it, as the following verse explains:

فَعَقَرُوهَا فَقَالَ تَمَتَّعُوا۟ فِى دَارِكُمْ ثَلَٰثَةَ أَيَّامٍ ۖ ذَٰلِكَ وَعْدٌ غَيْرُ مَكْذُوبٍ ﴿٦٥﴾

But they hamstrung it, so he said, 'Enjoy life for another three days: This warning will not prove false' [65] (The Quran, Hud: 65)

They stayed in their homes for three days, and then the suffering befell them. One might ask: Why were they spared for those three days? If the punishment would have befallen them immediately, they would have been spared the anxious, unbearable wait. Allah the Exalted had willed that they experience that feeling for three whole days, and with every passing day their distress would increase as the fateful day drew closer as they knew that Allah's Wrath was coming, '…a judgment which will not be belied!' (Hud: 65) Since this is the True Lord's Judgment, and He being fully Capable of carrying it out—with no power being capable of standing in His way—the promise is therefore a sincere one that will not be belied. This is not the case with human promises, where a person might make a vow, but when the time comes to make good on it he might not be able to. That is why the True Lord Glorified is He tells us, 'And never say about anything, "Behold, I shall do this tomorrow, without adding, "if Allah so wills…"' (al-Kahf: 23-24). If you say, 'I will do this tomorrow', and you promise someone that will do this or that then you should say, 'Allah willing' because Allah the Exalted does not prevent actions from being accomplished in the future, but he who intends on performing future action must do so 'by the Will of the Powerful, the Fully Capable', so that even if he does not end up accomplishing what he planned to accomplish, at least he would not have lied about it, since, in that case, it was Allah the Exalted who did not will it. When man gives a promise, he is not depending on his own will, but is relying on the Will of Allah the Exalted that is above all else.

Every action requires a performer, an object to be performed upon, a time to perform the action in, a motivating cause and finally the actual capacity for a person to carry out the action; does any human being own any of these things? A man has not even the power to guarantee that we will live until tomorrow; he does not have the power to guarantee that there will be a tomorrow, and he has not the power to guarantee the reason for there being a tomorrow. And even if he could guarantee all these conditions, a man has not the capacity of carrying out the action. Therefore, if he says, 'I will do this or that with so-and-so tomorrow' he would have thereby promised something over which he has no power whatsoever. But if he says, 'Allah willing', then he is seeking the help of Allah, who has all these capacities. The True Lord Glorified is He demonstrates His Power over his creation every moment. He says for example, 'But they cruelly slaughtered her. And thereupon Saleh (Shelah) said, "Only for three days [more] shall you enjoy life in your homes; this is a judgment which will not be belied!"' (Hud: 65) The words "in your homes” indicate that these disbelievers were scattered around a large area and were not all centred in a single village. Some of them were travelling, for example, and others were returning from their travels, and so the suffering befell them wherever they happened to be. The punishment did not target a single location, but befell everyone no matter where they were.

None was spared this fate save an individual called Abu-Raghal, who was on a pilgrimage at the Ka’ba. His sentence was not carried out while he was in those holy quarters because Allah Glorified is He has asked us, His servants, to give protection to anyone who visits His house. Allah Glorified is He also protects whoever enters His house, so Allah held back the stones that were to strike him, or the ‘shout’ that was to overtake him, until he left the holy sanctuary, then his suffering befell him…This suffering had struck all the disbelievers from amongst Saleh’s (Shelah’s) people peace be upon him. It befell all those who were in their homes, except for this one man, and the moment this man left the house of Allah, the suffering befell him. That is why anyone who had blood on his hands because of having murdered someone, when they took refuge in the holy sanctuary, they were protected until they left the grounds. The community then used to do what it could to make life unbearable for the criminal. They would not feed him, nor would they give him water, so as to force him out. Only after he came out would they carry out his punishment, so that the sanctity of Allah's house would be preserved. We know that the True Lord Glorified is He has wisely forbidden killing in his house to uphold human dignity.

We also know that every event requires a time and place. The Arabs were always raiding one another, and so the True Lord Glorified is He wished that there be a place where such killing was forbidden, and so He consecrated the holy Ka’ba for that purpose. Allah Glorified is He also wanted that there be a time period during which killing was forbidden; these are the holy months because when two warring parties are equally matched it can bring out of both the feelings of vainglory and pride. Every one of these warring individuals secretly wishes that these wars would end, at the same time he does not want to be seen as a coward in front of other people. So the True Lord Glorified is He wanted to give them all an honourable excuse for ceasing hostilities during the holy months. With the coming of these holy months, one of the warriors is always wont to say, ‘If it were not for the holy months I would have dealt a crushing blow to my enemies’; however, he only says as much to satisfy his sense of pride. Deep inside, he wished that the war would be over. Similarly, when a warrior seeks refuge in Allah's house, his enemy announces, ‘Had he not taken refuge in the sanctuary, I would have made him taste the shame of defeat’.

'Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

فَلَمَّا جَآءَ أَمۡرُنَا نَجَّيۡنَا صَٰلِحٗا وَٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ مَعَهُۥ بِرَحۡمَةٖ
مِّنَّا وَمِنۡ خِزۡيِ يَوۡمِئِذٍۗ إِنَّ رَبَّكَ هُوَ ٱلۡقَوِيُّ ٱلۡعَزِيزُ ٦٦

And so, when Our command was fulfilled, by Our mercy We saved Saleh and his fellow believers from the disgrace of that day. [Prophet], it is your Lord who is the Strong, the Mighty One [66] (The Quran, Hud: 66)

So when, after the three days had passed, the True Lord Glorified is He wrought the suffering down of the tribe of Thamud, He saved Saleh (Shelah) peace be upon him and those who had believed in his message from the destruction. Allah's Mercy protected them because they had believed in the doctrine which Saleh (Shelah) peace be upon him had brought. They were thus spared the humiliation and ignominy suffered by the rest of the tribe of Thamud. That was the humiliation, and such was the ignominy that befell the tribe of Thamud. The True Lord Glorified is He concludes the verse by saying, ‘…Verily, your Lord alone is Powerful, Almighty!’ (Hud: 66) These words are addressed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as a means to bolster his determination. For the True Lord Glorified is He is capable of dominating and defeating every disbeliever, and nothing can resist His Will. Herein is a warning to those who rejected the message of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَأَخَذَ ٱلَّذِينَ ظَلَمُواْ ٱلصَّيۡحَةُ فَأَصۡبَحُواْ فِي دِيَٰرِهِمۡ جَٰثِمِينَ ٦٧

The blast struck the evildoers and they lay dead in their homes [67] (The Quran, Hud: 67)

The True Lord Glorified is He calls the punishment that befalls the tribe of Thamud as-sayha, and elsewhere He calls it at-taghya, ‘Now as for the Thamud – they were destroyed by a violent upheaval [of the earth]’ (al-Haqqa: 5).

Elsewhere He also calls it sa`iqa, ‘But if they turn away, say, “I warn you of [the coming of] a thunderbolt of punishment like the thunderbolt [that fell upon the tribes] of `Ad and Thamud!”’ (Fussilat: 13) In the chapter of al-A`raf He calls it ar-rajfa; all of these terms denote an event that occurs suddenly, an event from which there is no escape. One might ask, ‘Why does the True Lord Glorified is He say, ‘And the blast [of Allah's punishment] overtook those who had been bent on evildoing…’ (Hud: 67), akhdh and not akhadht? Why is the letter ‘ta’ denoting the feminine gender omitted? The True Lord Glorified is He says, ‘And the blast [of Allah's punishment] overtook those who had been bent on evildoing…’ (Hud: 76). We would reply that the Speaker in this case is the Lord of His servants; and it is not proper to conceive of the ‘blast’ as having been singular. This would have the effect of weakening the expression. When the letter ‘ta’ is omitted, and we understand that there were multiple ‘blasts’, this gives the expression more power. Then Allah Glorified is He says, ‘...and then they lay lifeless, in their very homes, on the ground.’ (Hud: 67) meaning that they lay on their faces, motionless.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

كَأَن لَّمۡ يَغۡنَوۡاْ فِيهَآۗ أَلَآ إِنَّ ثَمُودَاْ كَفَرُواْ رَبَّهُمۡۗ أَلَا بُعۡدٗا لِّثَمُودَ ٦٨

As though they had never lived and flourished there. Yes, the Thamud denied their Lord – so away with the Thamud! [68] (The Quran, Hud: 68)

The term ghina has many meanings which are all ultimately related to each other. Ghana` is presence; the presence of something absolves the need for it, so ghina (in this case meaning wealth) is the presence of money which absolves you from depending on others; and ghina (in this case meaning singing) is what which we hear from singers, and the ughniya (song sharing the same root of ghina) is that which one becomes enchanted with, its words and melody, and becomes 'occupied' with it. In other words, one's mind dwells on it and excludes all other words it reads and hears despite how many they may be. Ghana` is establishment (and exclusion of need). Just as the True Lord Glorified is He says in another verse, '…when the earth has assumed its artful adornment and has been embellished, and they who dwell on it believe that they have gained mastery over it – there comes down upon it Our judgment, by night or by day, and We cause it to become [like] a field mown down, as if there had been no yesterday….' (Yunus: 24) In other words, it is as if it were never there. Here the True Lord Glorified is He says, 'as though they had never lived there…' (Hud: 68) meaning they did not reside there because it had become like a field that has been mown down. Then the True Lord Glorified is He says in the same verse, '…Oh, verily, [the tribe of] Thamud denied their Lord...' (Hud: 68). This is exactly why they suffered such severe punishment.

The words 'kafaru bi rabihim' mean that they tried concealing Allah's existence. However, this is itself an acknowledgement that He exists. It is just that, outwardly, they deny this. Therefore, the words 'kafaru bi rabihim' is Allah's rejoinder to those heretics that do not acknowledge His existence; there is no greater sin than to deny the existence of Allah. That is why the True Lord Glorified is He says, '…Oh, away with the Thamud!' (Hud: 68) meaning that they deserved what befell them—their destruction and their expulsion from Allah's Grace—and no one will have any pity on them given the enormity of their sin. Then, in the next verse, the True Lord begins Glorified is He recounting another one of the stories of the Prophets.

The following is part of the story of the father of Prophets—Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him.

وَلَقَدْ جَآءَتْ رُسُلُنَآ إِبْرَٰهِيمَ بِٱلْبُشْرَىٰ قَالُوا۟ سَلَٰمًا ۖ
قَالَ سَلَٰمٌ ۖ فَمَا لَبِثَ أَن جَآءَ بِعِجْلٍ حَنِيذٍ ﴿٦٩﴾

To Abraham Our messengers brought good news. They said, 'Peace.' He answered, 'Peace,' and without delay he brought in a roasted calf [69] (The Quran, Hud: 69)

The word rasul means he who is 'sent forth'; any person that you send somewhere is called a rasul, but religiously the term means 'he who is sent by Allah'. The True Lord Glorified is He says, 'In His Almightiness, Allah chooses message-bearers from among the angels as well as from among men…' (al-Hajj: 75).

Angels are selected to deliver Allah's messages so as to mitigate the power of receiving direct messages from the Lord Glorified is He. The power that receives messages directly from The Creator Glorified is He has to be itself great. No human being has the capacity for receiving revelation directly from the True Lord Glorified is He that is why He sent us messengers. He elects the most elite of angels and sends them down to deliver the message to select human beings capable of bearing it.

Thus, we learn that not all angels are capable of receiving direct revelation from Allah the Exalted and that not all human beings are capable of receiving direct revelation from Allah or by way of the angels. Such episodes in the history of Divine Revelation are intentionally willed by the True Lord Glorified is He so that the weak might be empowered through the strong, and human beings resort to such measures during their lifetimes. I have previously given this example, where at night we turn off all the lights in our homes, but we leave a dim light on to delineate the contours of the house, so that if we were to wake up in the middle of the night, we would not bump into the furniture, such that we break it, or we injure ourselves if the furniture in question is made of sturdier stuff than ourselves. The dim light also allows us to locate the switch for the brighter lights. When it comes to revelation, the True Lord Glorified is He operates in much the same way such that He conveys His Message to an elite angel who then transmits it to an elite class of human beings.

To be sure, the True Lord Glorified is He says, ‘And it is not given to mortal man that Allah should speak unto him otherwise than through sudden inspiration, or [by a voice, as it were,] from behind a veil, or by sending an apostle to reveal, by His leave, whatever He wills [to reveal] …’ (ash-Shura: 51).

Here the True Lord Glorified is He says, ‘And, indeed, there came unto Ibrahim (Abraham) Our [heavenly] messengers, bearing a glad tiding...’ (Hud: 69). A glad tiding is news that causes joy, even before the joyous event arrives; in contrast, a warning is news that causes sorrow before the event occurs. Before the messengers conveyed to Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him the good news which they came to tell, the True Lord Glorified is He teaches us about the proper manners of entering peoples’ homes—that is, we must begin by greeting its residents. As the True Lord Glorified is He says, ‘O you who have attained to faith! Do not enter houses other than your own unless you have obtained permission and greeted their owners…’ (an-Nur: 27). That is why the True Lord Glorified is He relates what the angels had said before delivering their message, ‘They bade him peace’ (Hud: 69). Then came Ibrahim’s (Abraham’s) response, ‘And he answered, “And upon you be peace!”’ (Hud: 69) Note how their greeting indicated a renewal of the relationship, and how Ibrahim’s (Abraham’s) peace be upon him response was firm and insistent. The True Lord Glorified is He says, ‘But when you are greeted with a greeting [of peace], answer with an even better greeting, or [at least] with the like thereof....’ (an-Nisa’: 86). This is how Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him welcomed the True Lord’s messengers. Then the True Lord Glorified is He says, ‘…and made haste to place before them a roasted calf.’ (Hud: 69) A calf is an offspring of a cow. There are many sections of the Quran which speak about the story of Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him; this is not a case of pointless repetition, for every snapshot in the story of Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him contains hidden wisdom so that if all the sections of Ibrahim’s (Abraham’s) story are brought together, you will then have a complete understanding of the saga from every angle. To give an example, the True Lord Glorified is He says, ‘And thus we gave Ibrahim (Abraham) [his first] insight into [Allah’s] Mighty Dominion over the heavens and the earth...’ (al-An‘am: 75), in another part of the Quran, the True Lord Glorified is He showcases the education of certitude that He Willed for Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him; Allah Glorified is He says, 'Then, when the night overshadowed him with its darkness, he beheld a star; [and] he exclaimed, "This is my Lord!" – but when it went down, he said, "I love not the things that go down." Then, when he beheld the moon rising, he said, "This is my Lord!" – but when it went down, he said, "Indeed, if my Lord guide me not, I will most certainly become one of the people who go astray!" Then, when he beheld the sun rising, he said, "This is my Lord! This one is the greatest [of all]!" – but when it [too] went down, he exclaimed, "O my people! Behold, far be it from me to ascribe divinity, as you do, to aught beside Allah! Behold, unto Him who brought into being the heavens and the earth have I turned my face, having turned away from all that is false; and I am not of those who ascribe divinity to aught beside Him."' (al-An'am: 76-79)

These verses demonstrate the primary function of the senses, that is, realization. They demonstrate the function of the human conscious, that is, to discern. They also demonstrate the function of the human free will, that is, to choose the Oneness of Allah and to choose the knowledge of certainty. Then the True Lord Glorified is He recounts another episode during which Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him addresses his father(1) with a high level of deference. The True Lord Glorified is He says, 'And call to mind, through this Book, Ibrahim (Abraham). Behold, he was a man of truth, [already] a prophet when he spoke [thus] unto his father, "O my father! Why do you worship something that neither hears nor sees and can be of no avail whatever to you? O my father! Behold, there has indeed come to me [a ray] of knowledge such as has never yet come to you; follow me, then, I shall guide you onto a perfect way. O my father! Do not worship Satan– for, verily, Satan is a rebel against The Most Gracious! O my father! I dread lest a chastisement from The Most Gracious befall thee, and then you will become [aware of having been] close unto Satan!"' (Maryam: 41-45) These verses demonstrate the gentleness of the speaker and the beauty of the proposition. When the uncle remains adamant in his disbelief, Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him tells him, '…I shall ask my Lord to forgive you…' (Maryam: 47). After that Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him acquits himself from his father's persistent disbelief. Then there is the episode where some people were debating Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him about Allah, ‘Are you not aware of that [king] who argued with Ibrahim (Abraham) about his Lord, [simply] because Allah had granted him kingship? Lo! Ibrahim (Abraham) said, “My Lord is He who grants life and deals death.” [The king] replied, “I [too] grant life and deal death…”’ (al-Baqara: 258).

(1) Azar

This empty argument resulted from the king’s inability to communicate because condemning someone to death and then forgiving him is not the same as killing him and bringing him back to life. Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him even takes him to where no one dares to venture. He says, ‘Verily, Allah causes the sun to rise in the east. Cause it, then, to rise in the west!’ (al-Baqara: 258). This verse is a testament to the logic of truth and the incoherence of falsehood.

In another part of the Quran, Allah Glorified is He compared the concept of disbelief with the concept of faith. Allah Glorified is He says, ‘And convey unto them the story of Ibrahim (Abraham), when he asked his father and his people, “What is it that you worship?” They answered, “We worship idols, and we remain ever devoted to them.” He said, “Do you really think that they hear you when you invoke them. Do they benefit you or do you harm?” They exclaimed, “But we found our forefathers doing the same!”’ (ash-Shu'ara': 69-74)

In this last verse, the questions Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him posed to his people had self-evident answers. Then Allah Glorified is He narrated that Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him said, ‘The One (Allah) who has created me and guides me. He is The One Who sustains me with food to eat and water to drink. When I fall ill, He is The One Who restores me to health. He is the One who will cause me to die and then will bring me back to life and who, I hope, will forgive me my faults on Judgment Day!’ (ash-Shu'ara': 78-82)

Allah Glorified is He says in the chapter of al-Anbiya`, ‘And, indeed, long before We bestowed unto Ibrahim (Abraham) the awareness of what is right; and We were Knowledgeable of (what moved) him when he said unto his father and his people, “What are these statues to which you are so intensely devoted?” They answered, “We found our forefathers worshipping them.” He said, “You and your forefathers have indeed gone astray!” They asked, “Have you come to us with the Truth, or are you of the ones that play?” He answered, “Nay, but your (True) Lord is The Lord of the heavens and the earth. He is the One who has brought them into existence by breaking them asunder and I am one of those who bear witness to this truth!”’ (al-Anbiya’: 51-56) This is the knowledge of certainty which Allah Glorified is He granted to Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him in order that we learn what true faith is. Prophet Ibrahim’s (Abraham’s) people used to worship deities other than Allah Glorified is He but Ibrahim (Abraham) turned to worship the One who brought him into existence and created the universe. He is the Supreme Architect who laid down the laws by which His creation functions.

That is why we need to pay close attention to the meaning of Prophet Ibrahim’s (Abraham’s) words that are narrated in the Quran, ‘He is the One (Allah) who has created me and He is the One who guides me’ (ash-Shu'ara’: 78). In this verse, the Arabic pronoun huwa (Who) was used to highlight that guidance was from Allah Glorified is He alone. As many people have tried to obtain guidance elsewhere and formulated their own immoral laws in life, the verse placed emphasis on the fact that Allah Glorified is He the Creator is the Only Guide and Lawgiver. This excluded any other source of guidance such as the false deities that the disbelievers have claimed were their guides.

When it came to matters that can only be directly made by Allah Glorified is He the Quranic verses omitted the pronoun, huwa, as such issues were uncontested by the pagans. For instance, a following verse that narrates Prophet Ibrahim’s (Abraham’s) says, ‘And (Allah) will cause me to die and then will bring me back to life’ (ash-Shu'ara’: 81). Thus, this verse spoke of a matter of life and death and omitted the word huwa (Who). The emphasis was redundant and unnecessary because the pagans already believed that Allah alone created life.

On the other hand, in verses of coarser conflict with the pagans, the word huwa is included to strike emphasis. An example of this is the verse which says, ‘And when I fall ill, He (Allah) is the One who cures me’ (ash-Shu'ara’: 80). This verse highlighted the pronoun huwa, as some disbelievers might say, ‘It is the doctor who heals diseases’. This concept is not true, because it is Allah Glorified is He who allowed medical knowledge to accumulate and be understood by mankind. It is He Who created the illnesses and it is He Who created their corresponding cures.

Then Allah Glorified is He continues the story of Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him 'And remember when Ibrahim (Abraham) and Ismail (Ishmael) were raising the foundations of the Ka'ba (al-Baqara: 127). Therefore, every occasion where one of the meanings of faith is explained is accompanied by one of the scenes from the story of Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him. When you look at all these lessons in faith, you will have looked at his complete story.

Allah Glorified is He narrates all these stories to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him because He wanted to strengthen the Prophet's heart with certitude, 'And remember out of all the accounts relating to the earlier apostles We convey unto you that wherewith We aim to make firm your heart' (Hud: 120). The Prophet peace be upon him persevered through many different experiences. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He reminded him of the events that previous prophets had faced. These experiences of the previous messengers were narrated to reinforce his heart.

Allah Glorified is He says, 'They greeted him [Ibrahim (Abraham)] with peace (and) he answered, "And peace be upon you"; he did not delay placing before them a roasted calf.' (Hud: 69) In another chapter of the Quran, Allah Glorified is He says, 'As they entered to him [Ibrahim (Abraham)] and they said, "Peace!" He said, "Surely, we feel tremulous of you"' (al-Hijr: 52). In another verse, Allah Glorified is He says, 'And when he saw that the guests would not eat, he became apprehensive of them, but they said, "Fear not", and gave him the glad tiding of (the birth of) a son who would be blessed with deep knowledge' (adh-Dhariyat: 28). Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him felt fear from their strange angelic behaviour. This fear is a normal emotion that is found in any heart. Every action begins with a perception and awareness. Then there comes the desire for action, followed by the action itself. Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) felt fear when he saw them, but he directed himself to an action that is contrary to fear, which is bidding them peace.

In general, religious law does not interfere with our perceptions or their resulting emotions. However, it does intervene regarding how we react to these feelings. Nevertheless, there is one exception to that rule, which is the male’s perception of female beauty. Jurisprudence orders us to lower our gaze when faced with a woman’s beauty, as this prevents a male’s perception from leading his behaviour in an unbecoming manner. When a man’s senses perceive feminine beauty, he may easily act on impulse. His behaviour in that instant is instinctive and may jump from perception to immediate action without pausing for reflection.

We now return to the verse where Allah Glorified is He tells us of Prophet Ibrahim’s (Abraham’s) feelings in the situation with the angels, ‘But when he saw that their hands did not reach out (towards their meal), he deemed their conduct strange and became apprehensive of them. But they said, “Fear not,”’ (Hud: 70). Allah Glorified is He demonstrated Prophet Ibrahim’s (Abraham’s) instinctive reaction in the verse, ‘They greeted him with peace (and) he answered, “And peace be upon you”, (Hud: 69). This is an example of insistence and emphasis. Allah Glorified is He also says, ‘He did not delay placing before them a roasted calf (`ijlin haneeth)’ (Hud: 69).

`Ijlin haneeth is a calf that is roasted on hot stones because, as we know, one can roast meat over open flames, burning coals or hot stones. This way of roasting meat is still practiced today in Arab countries when they heat delicate stones over fire and roast meat over them. This is to avoid the reactions that may occur when metal or coal is placed on fire. For them, hot stones are the cleanest way to roast meat. The words `ijlin haneeth could also mean that the calf was dripping with fat after being roasted.

Allah Glorified is He says about Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him ‘He did not delay placing before them a roasted calf’ (Hud: 69). It was in the nature of Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) to love and honour his guests. It is a habit of hospitality to hasten when welcoming a guest while offering the guests food as soon as possible. This is the definition of a person who is kareem (generous), since the host does not know how much time has passed since his guests had their last meal. After being presented with food, the guests will eat if they were hungry, and will let their host know if they had already eaten.

Allah Glorified is He told us what happened after Ibrahim (Abraham) brought them the roasted calf:

فَلَمَّا رَءَآ أَيْدِيَهُمْ لَا تَصِلُ إِلَيْهِ نَكِرَهُمْ وَأَوْجَسَ مِنْهُمْ خِيفَةً ۚ
قَالُواْ لَا تَخَفْ إِنَّآ أُرْسِلْنَآ إِلَىٰ قَوْمِ لُوطٍ ﴿٧٠﴾

When he saw that their hands did not reach towards the meal, he found this strange and became afraid of them. But they said, ‘Do not be afraid. We have been sent against the people of Lot’[70] (The Quran, Hud: 70)

When Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) noticed that they were not eating, he became fearful of them. Did Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him suspect that they were angels? Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) realised that they were angels from the way they spoke. Allah Glorified is He explains this in another verse in the Quran, ‘When they presented themselves before him and bade him peace, he answered, “Behold, we are afraid of you!” They said, “Fear not! Behold, we bring you the glad tidings of (the birth of) a son who will be blessed with deep knowledge.” He said, “Do you give me these glad tidings despite the fact that old age has overtaken me? Of what (strange thing), then, are you giving me a tiding!” They answered, “We have given you the glad tiding of something that is bound to come true, so be not of those who abandon hope!” Ibrahim (Abraham) exclaimed, “And who – other than those who have utterly lost their way – could ever abandon the hope of his Lord’s grace?” He added, “And what (else) may you have in view, O you (heavenly) messengers?” They answered, “We are sent to (punish) people lost in sin.”’ (al-Hijr: 52-58)

Therefore, they did not tell him what they told Prophet Lut (Lot) in a later encounter, “O Lut (Lot)! Behold, we are messengers from your Lord’ (Hud: 81). Here, when they told Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham), ‘Fear not! Behold, we are sent to the people of Lut (Lot)’ (Hud: 70), they understood that Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) knew that they were angels.

Angels can assume human form, just as the arch-angel Jibril (Gabriel) took on the form of a man when he came to see Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Jinn have the ability to assume different forms as well, but there is a difference between the Jinn and the angels in this respect. When a jinni takes on a different form, the jinni becomes subject to the laws that govern that form. For example, if a jinni resembles the form of a human being, you can physically harm them if you wanted to.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘A highly mischievous demon came to interrupt my prayer last night, but Allah gave me the power to overcome him. So I seized him and intended to tie him to one of the pillars of the mosque so that you all could see him, but then I remembered the supplication of my brother Sulaiman (Solomon), “O my Lord! Forgive me my sins, and bestow upon me the gift of a kingdom which may not suit anyone after me. Verily, You alone are a giver of gifts!” (Sad: 35) So, I repulsed him.’(1)

Thus, if one of the Jinn takes on a particular form, they become a captive of that form and it is possible to inflict harm on them. However, when angels take on a particular form, they do not become subject to its physical laws. Thus, since the Jinn become subject to the same physical laws that humans are subject to, they fear us just as we fear them. Jinn may appear in human form for fleeting moments only, and then quickly vanish in the fear that you might physically assault them. Allah Glorified is He has willed it to be so, in order that the Jinn do not constantly frighten human beings.

Here Allah Glorified is He says, ‘But when he saw that their hands did not reach out towards it, he deemed their conduct strange (nakirahum)’ (Hud: 70). To understand the meaning of the Arabic word nakirahum, we must look at the root of the word which comes from the letters nun, kaf and ra. The words nakar and ankar are both used in the Quran. An Arab poet once said:

She shunned me, and what she shunned was not,
Of my mishaps, except aging and baldness.

The linguistic manner in which the term is used in this verse indicates that bad behaviour is called munkarat. These munkarat are the actions that people naturally shun. So, when Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) noticed that they did not eat the roasted calf that was placed before them, he stopped to notice their behaviour and became slightly fearful. When they noticed this fear, they said, ‘Fear not! Behold, we are sent to the people of Lut (Lot)’ (Hud: 70). Thus, when he realised to whom they had been sent, he took comfort in the fact that his own people had not done anything to warrant punishment.

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (3426) and by Muslim in his Sahih (541). This Hadith was narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him.

Tradition(1) tells us that Prophet Ibrahim's (Abraham's) wife(2) had told him, 'Will you not take your nephew(3) under your wing because his people are on the verge of being punished by Allah'. When she heard that the angels had been sent to the tribe of Lut (Lot), she was pleased with her keen intuition, for she had sensed this matter beforehand.

In another verse, Allah Glorified is He says, 'They answered, "Behold, we have been sent unto a people lost in sin, to let loose upon them stone-hard blows of chastisement, marked out in your Lord's sight for (the punishment of) those who have wasted their own selves.' (adh-Dhariyat: 32-34)

Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَٱمۡرَأَتُهُۥ قَآئِمَةٞ فَضَحِكَتۡ فَبَشَّرۡنَٰهَا بِإِسۡحَٰقَ وَمِن وَرَآءِ إِسۡحَٰقَ يَعۡقُوبَ ﴿٧١﴾

His wife was standing [nearby] and laughed. We gave her good news of Isaac and, after him, of Jacob [71]
(The Quran, Hud: 71)

When Prophet Ibrahim's (Abraham's) wife was preparing the food for the guests, she heard the words of the angels and took comfort in the fact that no suffering was to befall their community. She was also pleased that her intuition was confirmed. Allah Glorified is He gave her even more cause for joy when the angels delivered the glad tidings of the coming birth of her son, Prophet Ishaq (Isaac), followed by her grandson, Prophet Ya`qub (Jacob) peace be upon them.

Thus, after being reassured that the suffering was not to befall their community, but was destined for another wicked people, they were given the good news which Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) and his wife(4) had been longing for. It had previously seemed to them that the time (for having children) had passed, as Prophet Ibrahim's (Abraham's) wife had reached the age of seventy and Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) himself had reached the age of one-hundred-and-twenty. This promise told Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him that, in addition to a son, they would also have grandchildren. Allah Glorified is He has bestowed the blessings of children upon His servants. He says, 'And Allah has given you mates of your own kind and has given you, through your mates, children and grandchildren.' (an-Nahl: 72) Man loves to have a child, but he desires to have grandchildren even more because this represents a continuation of his bloodline.

(1) The prediction of Sara, the wife of Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him of a befalling torment on the people of Prophet Lut (Lot) peace be upon him

(2) Sara peace be upon her

(3) Prophet Lut (Lot) peace be upon him

(4) Sara peace be upon her

These glad tidings were successive. The angels had announced that they had been sent to punish the tribe of Prophet Lut (Lot) with whom Ibrahim (Abraham) had previously argued due to their indecent transgressions. However, they reassured Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) and his wife Allah be pleased with them both that their actions did not displease Allah Glorified is He. The third piece of glad tidings was the blessing of a boy, as the wife of Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon them had for a long time desired a son although she was barren. She received the first piece of glad tidings with joy and received the glad tidings about the son with astonishment. This is clear in the next verse, Allah Glorified is He says:

قَالَتْ يَٰوَيْلَتَىٰٓ ءَأَلِدُ وَأَنَا۠ عَجُوزٌ وَهَٰذَا بَعْلِى
شَيْخًا ۖ إِنَّ هَٰذَا لَشَىْءٌ عَجِيبٌ ٧٢

She said, 'Alas for me! How am I to bear a child when I am an old woman, and my husband here is an old man? That would be a strange thing!' [72]
(The Quran, Hud: 72)

An event is truly remarkable when it defies natural laws. However, Allah Glorified is He is the Creator of the natural laws and can change them at His will. Note that Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him said in another verse, 'Do you give me this glad tiding despite the fact that old age has overtaken me' (al-Hijr: 54). Here, however, Allah Glorified is He narrated that Ibrahim's (Abraham's) wife said, 'Woe (to me)! Shall I bear a child, now that I am an old woman and my husband (ba`ly) is an old man?' (Hud: 72) The use of the Arabic word ba`ly (my husband) here is very precise because al-ba`l is a husband who performs all the needed matters of his wife so she does not need the help of anyone else. It is the definition of a husband who performs a function for his wife which neither her father nor her brother can perform. This is when he satisfies her sense of motherhood. This is the most important thing a woman can ask for.

A date palm is also called by this term (ba`l) if it does not require regular watering after it has been planted. Such date palms are able to survive by making use of the little water that is in the ground or that occasionally falls as rain. The term is also used to describe a type of bean (fool ba`li) because it does not require watering. Therefore, al-ba`l is the husband who tends to the affairs of his wife so that she is never in need of anyone else.

Here, Prophet Ibrahim's (Abraham's) wife(1) was astonished at the prospect of conceiving a child. Astonishing things usually come up suddenly without warning. That is why the angels answer her question in the next verse, Allah Glorified is He says:

قَالُوٓا۟ أَتَعْجَبِينَ مِنْ أَمْرِ ٱللَّهِ ۖ رَحْمَتُ ٱللَّهِ وَبَرَكَٰتُهُۥ
عَلَيْكُمْ أَهْلَ ٱلْبَيْتِ ۚ إِنَّهُۥ حَمِيدٌ مَّجِيدٌ ﴿٧٣﴾

They said, 'Are you astonished at what God ordains? The grace of God and His blessings be upon you, people of this house! For He is worthy of all praise and glory' [73] (The Quran, Hud: 73)

It would be truly astonishing if a breach of the natural laws was performed by a human being, but Allah Glorified is He the Fully-Capable can suspend such laws without awe. Miracles that serve to attest to the authenticity of Allah's messages are the results of such laws being suspended. Indeed, miracles transcend all natural laws.

This story of Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) and his wife(2) has its parallel in the story of Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him. Allah Glorified is He bestowed upon Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her plentiful fruits. Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) asked her, ‘Whence came this unto you?’ (Al-‘Imran: 37) Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her responded ‘It is from Allah; behold, Allah grants sustenance unto whom He wills, beyond all reckoning (and without account).’ (Al-‘Imran: 37)

(1) Sara peace be upon her

(2) Sara peace be upon her

Despite it being normal that meticulous accounting be practised between Allah’s creatures, no such accounts are plausible between the Creator and His creatures. That is why Allah Glorified is He says, ‘In that same place, Zakaryya (Zechariah) prayed unto his Lord’ (Al-‘Imran: 38). Since Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) had realised the truth of Maryam’s (Mary’s) words, ‘Allah grants sustenance unto whom He wills, beyond all reckoning (and without account).’ (Al-‘Imran: 37) It was only right that he ask his Lord, 'O my Lord! Bestow upon me (too), out of Your grace, the gift of goodly offspring.’ (Al-‘Imran: 38) So Allah Glorified is He told him, ‘O Zakaryya (Zechariah)! We bring you the glad tiding of (the birth of) a son whose name shall be Yahya (John). Never have We given this name to anyone before him.’ (Maryam: 7) Allah Glorified is He blessed him with a son and gave the son a name that no one had ever held before.

Allah’s method in naming is very different from names given by humans. Some people have subsequently named their sons Yahya which means ‘living’ out of optimism and hope that the son would survive. However, when Allah Glorified is He named Prophet Yahya (John) peace be upon him this meant that he would survive to maturity and never die. That is why Prophet Yahya (John) peace be upon him was martyred because martyrs are always alive with their Lord, forever unaffected by death.

This is not necessarily the case when it comes to human beings naming their children with pleasant names. A parent may name his child Sa`eed (the happy one), but the child could end up living a life of gruelling misery. An Arab poet once said, after naming his child Yahya, hoping that he may live to old age:

I named him Yahya so that he may live, but it was no measure to reverse Allah’s verdict upon him.

Maryam peace be upon her was the one who told Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him about Allah’s countless blessings. Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) prayed to his Lord, that he was getting older and that his wife was infertile. This prayer was a mere supplication, as Zakaryya (Zechariah) knew that Allah Glorified is He Himself created and had all knowledge of the events of his life. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He wanted to reassure Zakaryya (Zechariah) that he would be blessed with a son who He had named. Allah Glorified is He says, ‘Thus, it was (decreed); (as) your Lord said.’ (Maryam: 9) Since it is Allah Glorified is He who has decided this blessing, there is none who can reverse this decision. That is why Allah Glorified is He says, ‘This is easy for Me, just as I have created you before out of nothing’ (Maryam: 9).

Thus, as Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her informed Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him that Allah Glorified is He can suspend the natural laws for his creation, she was also presented with a similar event. Later, Allah Glorified is He suspended the natural order for her as well. An angel came to her in the form of a man and gave her the good tidings of a son. His name was ‘Isa (Jesus), the son of Maryam (Mary) peace be upon them. Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her asked how this could be possible when no human being has ever touched her. The angel reminded her of the words that she had uttered in her conversation with Zakaryya (Zechariah), ‘Allah grants sustenance unto whom He wills, beyond all reckoning (and without account).’ (Al-‘Imran: 37) It was necessary for Maryam (Mary) to be comforted because giving birth to ‘Isa (Jesus) with no father was a situation in which her honour might be questioned. It was necessary that she approach the situation with confidence and without apprehension that she might be accused (of wrongdoing).

Now, in the verse which we are currently examining, Prophet Ibrahim’s (Abraham’s)(1) wife found herself in a similar situation. The angels explained to her that she should not be astonished in what Allah Glorified is He had willed for her, even though it goes against all natural laws. Allah’s Mercy can encompass all that is good and can include the prophetic family in His blessings. Part of this mercy includes the gift of children after the natural time of childbearing. That is why Allah Glorified is He says in this verse, ‘The Grace of Allah and His Blessings be upon you, O people of this house’ (Hud: 73).

(1) Sara peace be upon her

Then, Allah Glorified is He concluded the verse by saying, 'Verily, ever to be praised is Allah (Hameed) sublime is He (Majeed)!' (Hud: 73) Allah Glorified is He deserves all the praises from His creation for being Who He is and for everything that comes forth from Him. There is no limit to His favours and goodness. Indeed, Allah Glorified is He is the Most Sublime.

The word 'Hameed' in this verse has two meanings. One meaning is that it is an active verb which indicates that Allah Glorified is He receives praise from those upon whom He bestows His blessings. On the other hand, the word could indicate a passive meaning which is that Allah Glorified is He Himself praises those who revere him in their faithful hearts.

Allah Glorified is He is also the Sublime Lord who bestows His blessings on His servants before His servants even ask for them. For instance, we have a story(1) of the righteous man who was approached by a beggar. The righteous man put some coins in the beggar's hand, but went back to his wife in misery. His wife asked him, 'Why are you in misery. You gave the poor man the money that he needed.' The righteous man replied, 'I am in dismay because I waited until he asked, whereas I should have helped him before he needed the opportunity to ask others.'

Allah Glorified is He has given us His blessings before we even knew how to ask for them. For example, Allah Glorified is He provides sustenance for the foetus inside its mother's womb even before the foetus learns how to communicate.

Throughout the Quran, Allah Glorified is He explains how we must approach social situations according to the tenets of faith. In the current verse, for example, Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him placed a roasted calf in front of his guests. This is to show us that if we receive guests and they do not eat the food that we have offered, the proper response is not to take the food away immediately. Instead, we should sincerely and generously ask them to eat. At that point, they may insist that they have no desire to eat because, for instance, they may have eaten before coming to see us. In such cases, we may take the food away, only after having encouraged them to eat with fervour.

Some religious scholars have posited that Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him asked the angels, 'Will you not eat?' The angels responded,

(1) The story of the righteous man and his wife with the beggar

'We would only eat the food if we pay for its price.' Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) said, out of the wisdom bestowed on him by Allah Glorified is He 'The food's price is invoking Allah's Name before eating it and praising Him after finishing.' If you were to begin a meal by saying, 'Bismillah' and finish the meal by saying, 'Alhamdulilah' (All praises are due to Allah), you would have thereby fulfilled your obligation towards the blessing of food. Allah Glorified is He says about blessings in general, 'And on that Day (of Judgment), you will most surely be called to account for (what you did with) the comforts of life!' (at-Takathur: 8)

To summarize the previous verses we have studied in this chapter, Allah Glorified is He shows us how Ibrahim (Abraham) and his wife (1) rejoiced in the good tidings brought to them by the angels. They were also relieved that the angels did not intend any harm to Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him or his people. Rather, they were sent to punish the tribe of Prophet Lut (Lot).

Allah Glorified is He then says:

فَلَمَّا ذَهَبَ عَنۡ إِبۡرَٰهِيمَ ٱلرَّوۡعُ وَجَآءَتۡهُ ٱلۡبُشۡرَىٰ يُجَٰدِلُنَا فِي قَوۡمِ لُوطٍ ٧٤

Then, when the fear left Abraham and the good news came to him, he pleaded with Us for Lot's people [74]
(The Quran, Hud: 74)

The Arabic word jidal (argument) means that for each argument put forth by an opponent, one should put forth a counter-argument until the truth is reached. This is different from al-mira` where one already knows where the truth of the matter lies, but they continue to argue on the side of error while avoiding the truth. Allah Glorified is He forbids us from engaging in the latter type of argument. On the other hand, He encourages us to engage in civilized exchanges of opinion, as long as these exchanges serve a greater good.

Allah Glorified is He shows us that after Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him regained his composure, with his initial fears turned into joy after hearing that Allah will bless him with a son, he realised that the angels were sent to punish the tribe of Prophet Lut (Lot). ‘They (the angels) answered, “Behold, we have been sent unto a people lost in sin, to let loose upon them stone-hard blows of chastisement, marked out in your Lord’s sight.”’ (adh-Dhariyat: 32-34)

(1) Sara peace be upon her

The argument put up by Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him regarding the punishment of the tribe of Prophet Lut (Lot) peace be upon him was not an objection to Allah’s orders. Rather, it was Ibrahim’s (Abraham’s) merciful temperament that prompted him to ask for their forgiveness, in the hope that they will come to believe. Allah Glorified is He pointed this out when He says:

إِنَّ إِبۡرَٰهِيمَ لَحَلِيمٌ أَوَّٰهٞ مُّنِيبٞ ﴿٧٥﴾

for Abraham was forbearing, tender-hearted, and devout [75] (The Quran, Hud: 75)

Thus, the reason why Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him ‘contended’ with them is because he was always kind-hearted, never wanting to hasten punishment. Note that the word awwah, in this context, means ‘the one having a gentle heart’. If the context deals with a person being awwah towards the ‘higher power’ (Allah), the adjective (awwah) denotes a fear of not having paid the obligatory dues to the higher power. On the other hand, as in this verse, if the context deals with being awwah towards a ‘lower entity’, the adjective denotes ‘mercifulness’ and ‘leniency’. That is why Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him implored Allah Glorified is He to delay the punishment to the tribe of Lut (Lot), hoping that they would turn to Allah in faith. So, in this case, the term awwah denotes both a fear of Allah’s wrath as well as a feeling of pity for those who have earned for themselves severe suffering.

Allah Glorified is He also described Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) as muneeb. This means that Ibrahim’s (Abraham’s) ultimate tendency is to resign himself to Allah’s Judgment. Allah Glorified is He described this attribute of Ibrahim (Abraham) in another verse, ‘And Ibrahim’s (Abraham’s) prayer that his father be forgiven was but due to a promise which he had given to him (during his lifetime)’ (at-Tawba: 114). Then, after Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) had searched for the truth and set his heart to it, he ultimately accepted Allah’s Judgement, ‘But when it was made clear unto him that Ibrahim’s (Abraham’s) father had been Allah’s enemy, Ibrahim (Abraham) disavowed him.’ (at-Tawba: 114)

In the verse which we are currently studying, Ibrahim (Abraham) resigned to Allah’s decree, but also felt pity for the tribe of Lut (Lot) who refused to believe. The other reason why Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) pleaded that Allah Glorified is He spare them is mentioned in the chapter of al-‘Ankabut, ‘And so, when Our (heavenly) messengers came to Ibrahim (Abraham) with the glad tiding (of the birth of Ishaq (Isaac), they (also) said, “Behold, we are about to destroy the people of that land, for its people are truly evildoers!” And Ibrahim (Abraham) exclaimed, “But Lut (Lot) lives there!”’ (al-’Ankabut: 31-32)

Here, Ibrahim’s (Abraham’s) question to the angels was, ‘How can you destroy the people of this town when faithful people live among them, including Prophet Lut (Lot)’. The angels responded by saying, ‘We know clearly well who is there. Indeed, we shall save him and his household - all but his wife. She will indeed be among those that stay behind (in punishment).’ (al-’Ankabut: 32) Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him assumed that, since the village was inhabited by both believers and disbelievers, he can rightfully plead for the forgiveness of the entire village. The answer to Ibrahim’s (Abraham’s) pleas came in the following verse. Allah Glorified is He says:

يَٰٓإِبۡرَٰهِيمُ أَعۡرِضۡ عَنۡ هَٰذَآۖ إِنَّهُۥ قَدۡ جَآءَ أَمۡرُ رَبِّكَۖ
وَإِنَّهُمۡ ءَاتِيهِمۡ عَذَابٌ غَيۡرُ مَرۡدُودٖ ٧٦

Abraham, cease your pleading: what your Lord has ordained has come about; punishment is coming to them, which cannot be turned back’ [76] (The Quran, Hud: 76)

When the angels said, ‘O Ibrahim (Abraham), desist from this (pleading)’ (Hud: 76), it meant that Allah’s judgment was final. The angels were there to execute the punishment and not to warn or intimidate the people of Lut (Lot). They told Ibrahim (Abraham), ‘Behold, your Lord's judgment has already gone forth.’ (Hud: 76) Thus, since Allah’s Judgment has already gone forth, and given that Ibrahim (Abraham) was inclined to resign to Allah’s Will, Ibrahim (Abraham) accepted Allah’s judgment. ‘And, verily, there shall fall upon them a chastisement which none can avert!’ (Hud: 76) This meant that no one was capable of reversing Allah’s decision to punish (these people).

Just as there is, ‘A divine promise which will not be overturned’, there is also ‘A chastisement which none can avert’.

It is stated that when Ibrahim (Abraham) was pleading with the angels, he asked them, ‘If there were fifty believers from among the tribe of Lut (Lot), would you still punish them?’ They said, ‘No’. He asked, ‘If there were ten believers from among the tribe of Lut (Lot), would you still punish them?’ They said, ‘No.’ He asked, ‘What if the only believer from among the tribe of Lut (Lot) was Lut (Lot) himself?’ They answered, ‘We know clearly well who is there. Indeed, we shall save Lut (Lot) and his household - all but his wife. She will indeed be among those that stay behind (in punishment).’ (al-’Ankabut: 32) Thus, the argument ended and the angels went about their mission which was to bring suffering to the tribe of Lut (Lot).

Allah Glorified is He says:

وَلَمَّا جَآءَتۡ رُسُلُنَا لُوطٗا سِيٓءَ بِهِمۡ وَضَاقَ بِهِمۡ ذَرۡعٗا وَقَالَ هَٰذَا يَوۡمٌ عَصِيبٞ ٧٧

And when Our messengers came to Lot, he was anxious for them, feeling powerless to protect them, and said, ‘This is a truly terrible day!’ [77] (The Quran, Hud: 77)

Prophet Lut (Lot) peace be upon him sensed the imminent danger. In the expression, ‘Daaqa bihim dhar`an’ (It was beyond his reach to shield them), the word dhar`an is taken from the word dhira` which means ‘arm’. The meaning, therefore, is all that one can push away with one’s arm. If your arm was unable to reach a certain person to push them away, you would say, ‘Diqtu bihi dhar`an.’ which means, ‘My arm was unable to reach that person’. Therefore, it is a matter that is beyond your reach and capacity.

Why was Prophet Lut (Lot) sorely grieved when he was visited by the angels? It is said that the angels manifested themselves, as they usually do, in stunningly handsome forms. The expression, ‘That person is an angel’, is an indication that a person’s appearance is sublime. The evil that plagued Prophet Lut’s (Lot’s) people was sodomy. Prophet Lut’s (Lot’s) wife(1) also welcomed this evil that her people engaged in. It is said that when she noticed the handsome guests, not knowing that they were angels who are intent on destruction, she climbed up to the roof of the house and began clapping in an attempt to draw her people’s attention. When no one paid her any attention, she lit a fire, and people began taking note. Then, she announced that some supremely handsome guests had arrived. At this point, Prophet Lut (Lot) peace be upon him told them, ‘This is a woeful day (Yawmun 'aseeb)!’ (Hud: 77)

(1) The story of the wife of Lut (Lot) peace be upon him with the angels

In Arabic, one can say, ‘Yawmun 'aseeb’, or ‘Yawmun asabsab’ to mean, ‘What a day full of difficulties this is!’ The term al-usba is derived from this. It is used to indicate a group of people who swarm over something, where the power of one individual is magnified by the size of the crowd. Prophet Lut’s (Lot’s) deduction proved correct. Allah Glorified is He describes this in the following verse.

Allah Glorified is He says:

وَجَآءَهُۥ قَوْمُهُۥ يُهْرَعُونَ إِلَيْهِ وَمِن قَبْلُ كَانُوا۟ يَعْمَلُونَ ٱلسَّيِّـَٔاتِ ۚ قَالَ يَـٰقَوْمِ هَـٰٓؤُلَآءِ بَنَاتِى
هُنَّ أَطْهَرُ لَكُمْ ۖ فَٱتَّقُوا۟ ٱللَّهَ وَلَا تُخْزُونِ فِى ضَيْفِىٓ ۖ أَلَيْسَ مِنكُمْ رَجُلٌ رَّشِيدٌ ﴿٧٨﴾

His people came rushing towards him; they used to commit foul deeds. He said, ‘My people, here are my daughters.
They are more wholesome for you, so have some fear of God and do not disgrace me with my guests. Is there not a single right-minded man among you?’ [78] (The Quran, Hud: 78)

Allah’s words, ‘And his people ran (while being rushed) (yuhra'una) to him’ (Hud: 78) meant that they scurried towards him in droves. When a person is not accustomed to committing sin, he approaches it with hesitancy and trepidation. However, those in the habit of sinning, like the people of Prophet Lut (Lot), approached their matters with confidence and energy

Traditionally, the word yahra`una (with an initial ya) is used to indicate a group of people rushing (in the active form). The word used in this verse is *yuhra’una (*with an initial yu) which means that the verb assumes the passive tense. This depicts the picture that Lut’s (Lot’s) people were hurrying towards his house, as if by a force that was outside them, or a force that is not specifically mentioned. It is as if these people were not rushing (in the active sense of the verb), but were being rushed to sin (in the passive sense) by their evil desires. Allah Glorified is He says, ‘And his people ran (while being rushed) (yuhra'una) to him’ (Hud: 78). Thus, Allah Glorified is He explains that in their rush towards Prophet Lut‘s (Lot’s) house, they were neither timid nor hesitant. In fact, they were so habituated with committing the sin of sodomy that they rushed forward eagerly. Each one of them was driven forward by his craving and the craving of the others around him.

Imagine a market where it is announced to the shoppers, ‘We are giving out free rations!’ You would indeed see the people pushing and shoving each other (to be first in line). In the same sense, the people of Lut (Lot) were clearly comfortable with such an obscene sin that they were rushing to it without hesitation. Allah Glorified is He said concerning the tribe of Lut (Lot), ‘For they had always been committing (such) abominations’ (Hud: 78). They enjoyed committing the sin of sodomy and were used to it. It was not something that burdened their consciousness, nor did it cause any sense of shame in their hearts. To have a sense of shame means that while certain people are engaged in something sinful, they are uncomfortable with the idea of others doing the same actions. However, since the people of Lut (Lot) all shared a love for that sin; no one felt embarrassed from the other members in the group of sinners.

So how did Prophet Lut (Lot) peace be upon him react to this woeful day? They had raced towards his house and surrounded it like swarms, and he knew all too well what their intentions were. They had done this many times in the past. So, in an attempt to get rid of them, Prophet Lut (Lot) sought to redirect their desires. Allah Glorified is He says, ‘Lut (Lot) said, “O my people! Take instead these daughters of mine (in marriage); they are purer for you (than men)!”’ (Hud: 78) Prophet Lut (Lot) said this because women and men are created for this purpose. Therefore, he wanted to give them the possibility of marrying his daughters. In fact, it was permissible in Prophet Lut’s (Lot’s) day for a believer to allow his daughter to marry a disbeliever. Prophet Muhammad himself peace and blessings be upon him allowed one of his daughters to marry `Utba Ibn Abu Lahab and another daughter to marry Abu Al-`As ibn Ar-Rabi`. Shortly thereafter, however, Allah made it unlawful for a female believer to marry a disbeliever.

Whose ‘daughters’ was Prophet Lut (Lot) referring to? Was he referring to his own daughters, the daughters of the community at large or the daughters of his followers? It is said that the only believers from among the tribe of Prophet Lut (Lot) were Lut (Lot) himself and his two daughters. How could these two daughters be married to this large crowd of men? Some say that Lut (Lot) had offered this to prominent men who had political influence. They would have been the only ones capable of putting a stop to all of this. Prophet Lut (Lot) thought that this offer might influence them to desist from their sins and purify themselves, while redeeming his honour in the eyes of Prophet Lut’s (Lot’s) guests.

Prophet Lut (Lot) peace be upon him said, ‘Be, then, conscious of Allah, and disgrace me not by assaulting my guests (dayf)’ (Hud: 78). The word dayf is singular, but can also be used to denote the plural of male or female guests. In another chapter of the Quran, Allah Glorified is He says, ‘And has the story of Ibrahim’s (Abraham’s) honoured guests (dayf) ever come within your ken?’ (adh-Dhariyat: 24). There are other words in the Arabic language, such as tifl which are used to denote the singular and the plural nouns. The word also has a plural which is atfal. Allah Glorified is He says when describing the males that a woman does not need to wear the full veil with, ‘Or the children (al-tifl) that are as yet unaware of women’s privacy’ (an-Nur: 31). Therefore, the word (tifl) can also be used to denote a group of children.

Here, Prophet Lut (Lot) peace be upon him asked these people not to disgrace him by harming his guests. The word al-khizy implies being disgraced or shamed in front of oneself and others. A person might be tempted to commit an evil act so long as no one is watching. However, if they are caught in an act by other people, they are then socially humiliated (al-khizy). On the other hand, personal disgrace (al-hawan) occurs when the only one who knows about the evil act is the person himself. Prophet Lut (Lot) asked them, ‘Is there not among you even one right-minded man?’ (Hud: 78). ‘Is there not even a person among you who is conscientious, virile, noble and can put an end to this’?

Then Allah Glorified is He says:

قَالُوا۟ لَقَدْ عَلِمْتَ مَا لَنَا فِى بَنَاتِكَ مِنْ حَقٍّ وَإِنَّكَ لَتَعْلَمُ مَا نُرِيدُ ﴿٧٩﴾

They said, ‘You know very well that we have no right to your daughters. You know very well what we want’ [79] (The Quran, Hud: 79)

This was how the crowd of people answered Prophet Lut’s plea, ‘We have no use of your daughters, and they are not what we came for. You know exactly what we want’. Thus, they refused to accept Prophet Lut’s (Lot’s) suggestion and instead wanted to commit the sin of sodomy with his guests. They were unaware that these guests were actually angels who had taken the form of handsome men.

Allah Glorified is He says:

قَالَ لَوْ أَنَّ لِى بِكُمْ قُوَّةً أَوْ ءَاوِىٓ إِلَىٰ رُكْنٍ شَدِيدٍ ﴿٨٠﴾

He said, ‘If only I had the strength to stop you or could rely on strong support!’ [80] (The Quran, Hud: 80)

When you see the Arabic term laww (if that), it denotes a wish, or a longing. Prophet Lut (Lot) wished that he had the strength to cast them all out. It is traditional in Arabic that a conditional statement (such as ‘if that’) is followed with an answer for the conditional element. For instance, one could say, ‘If that Zayd was not there, I would have come’. However, in this verse we only find the condition (if that) without the answer. This indicates the level of dismay that Prophet Lut (Lot) was in. That is why some scholars narrated, that at this point of his sadness, the angels turned to him and said, ‘Your support is mighty, indeed’. Thus, Prophet Lut (Lot) said, ‘Or that I could lean upon some mightier support!’ (Hud: 80)

A thing that is described in Arabic as shadeed is that which is condensed together tightly such that it is hard to break up. When you add different elements together, they still retain a sense of individuality. However, melting elements together is another matter. For example, when you mix two kinds of beans together you are still able to differentiate between the two because they both retain their individual shape and colour. On the other hand, if you were to mix lemon juice with sweetened water, this mix would be much harder to separate. Similar to that range of difficulty, Prophet Lut (Lot) felt that he had not power in preventing his people from doing what they were about to do. These people are also known by the name of 'Sodom', and some say that these were five villages near the city of Hams.

It was narrated that Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him was moved by Prophet Lut's (Lot's) response. According to Al-Bukhari, Prophet Muhammad was heard saying, 'May Allah bestow his Mercy on my brother Lut (Lot), for he had sought refuge with Allah (during those distressing moments).'(1) It was the extreme anguish of those moments which prompted Prophet Lut (Lot) to say that statement although he was certain that no support is mightier than Allah's support.

Allah Glorified is He then states what the angels had told Prophet Lut (Lot):

قَالُواْ يَٰلُوطُ إِنَّا رُسُلُ رَبِّكَ لَن يَصِلُوٓاْ إِلَيۡكَۖ فَأَسۡرِ بِأَهۡلِكَ بِقِطۡعٖ
مِّنَ ٱلَّيۡلِ وَلَا يَلۡتَفِتۡ مِنكُمۡ أَحَدٌ إِلَّا ٱمۡرَأَتَكَۖ إِنَّهُۥ مُصِيبُهَا مَآ
أَصَابَهُمۡۚ إِنَّ مَوۡعِدَهُمُ ٱلصُّبۡحُۚ أَلَيۡسَ ٱلصُّبۡحُ بِقَرِيبٖ ٨١

They [the messengers] said, 'Lot, we are your Lord's messengers. They will not reach you. Leave with your household in the dead of night, and let none of you turn back. Only your wife will suffer the fate that befalls the others. Their appointed time is the morning: is the morning not near?'[81]
(The Quran, Hud: 81)

Thus, for the first time, Prophet Lut (Lot) peace be upon him came to know that they were angels sent by Allah Glorified is He. Even though when these angels spoke with Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) in the earlier verses, they never explicitly divulged their nature as messengers from Allah. Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him had assumed correctly that they were angels, but he did not know exactly why they had come. The angels informed Prophet

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (4694, 3375), by Ahmad in his Musnad (2/326, 332, 35) and by Ibn Majah in his Sunnan (4026) This Hadith was narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayra.

Lut (Lot), ‘Behold, we are messengers from your Lord! Never shall (your enemies) approach you’ (Hud: 81). This means that the people will not harm Prophet Lut (Lot) and his family and will, indeed, not approach the angels themselves. The angels ordered Lut (Lot) to take his family and leave during the night, because the ordained punishment was to take place in the morning, ‘Verily, their appointed time is the morning – (and) is not the morning near?’ (Hud: 81) The angels told Prophet Lut (Lot), ‘Depart, then, with your household while it is yet night’ (Hud: 81). This means that he should travel during the second or third quarters of the night by beginning his journey when the first quarter of the night ends. His aim should be to leave the vicinity of the villages when the fourth quarter of the night begins. His total travel time would amount to half of the night.

Allah Glorified is He says, ‘And let none of you look back (yaltafit)’ (Hud: 81). The Arabic word yaltafit (to look back) means in the verse to discontinue some current act. In this case, the act is travelling away from the village. The word also has a metaphorical meaning, which is to abandon or to let go of something. So, which of these two meanings is relevant in this case?

We know that Prophet Lut (Lot) peace be upon him was to bring the believers with him on this journey. He would take them away from their homes and wealth as well as from the life that they had become accustomed to. That is why the angels warned them not to look back regretfully on what they had left behind. For the time being, they must save themselves and Allah will replace their losses in due time. Thus, both the literal and the figurative meanings of the word yaltafit are relevant here. They must not think of physically turning back or remain psychologically attached to the life that they have left behind.

The angels also advised Prophet Lut (Lot) peace be upon him not to bring his wife along, for she had betrayed him by lending a helping hand to those perverted people. She divulged her husband’s secrets. Thus, he must leave her with those who are to be punished. When the time came to leave, she argued that she had been faithful to Prophet Lut (Lot) and said, ‘I will leave with you’. Then she looked back at the people and decided to stay with them. Thus, she was visited by the same suffering that was destined to visit her tribe, at the time which the angels had specified in the morning, ‘Verily, their appointed time is the morning – (and) is not the morning near?’ (Hud: 81) The time for their appointed suffering was set in the morning because it is a calmer, more peaceful time. Therefore, the punishment will be much more severe on their hearts. Allah then says:

فَلَمَّا جَآءَ أَمۡرُنَا جَعَلۡنَا عَٰلِيَهَا سَافِلَهَا وَأَمۡطَرۡنَا
عَلَيۡهَا حِجَارَةٗ مِّن سِجِّيلٖ مَّنضُودٖ ٨٢

And so when what We had ordained came about, We turned their town upside down and rained down stones of baked clay on it, layer upon layer [82] (The Quran, Hud: 82)

Here, Allah Glorified is He made it clear that when His Judgment came to pass, all the natural elements complied with His command to destroy the tribe of Lut (Lot). It is said that the tribe of Lut (Lot) included five villages. These were Sodom, Daduma, Da`uh, `Amura and Qatim. When Allah Glorified is He says, ‘We turned those (sinful towns) upside down’ (Hud: 82), this meant that these villages were completely upturned.

The Quran said in another chapter, ‘Just as He thrust into perdition those cities (al-mu`tafika) that were overthrown’ (an-Najm: 53). The word al-mu`tafika is derived from the word ifk which means ‘intentional lying’ or ‘purposeful deceit’. In effect, these people intentionally ‘inverted’ the truth into falsehood and contradicted reality. Therefore al-mu`tafika is a reference to those villages that were upturned in a state of complete disarray. Then, Allah Glorified is He pelted them with waves of hard clay pebbles.

Allah Glorified is He says in another verse, ‘To let loose upon them stone-hard (hijara) blows of chastisement’ (adh-Dhariyat: 33). The word hijara (stones) gives a sense of solidity, whereas the word teen (mud) gives the sense of pliability. However, the mud that rained on them that day had solidified and became as hard as rocks, by Allah’s Command. Furthermore, it rained down upon them in systematic waves. It was as if every rock knew exactly who its target was.

Allah Glorified is He says;

مُّسَوَّمَةً عِندَ رَبِّكَۖ وَمَا هِيَ مِنَ ٱلظَّٰلِمِينَ بِبَعِيدٖ ﴿٨٣﴾

Marked from your Lord. It is not far from the evildoers [83] (The Quran, Hud: 83)

The word Musawwama means that the stones were 'marked'. It was as if every pebble was pre-destined to strike its respective target as cruise missiles seek out their individual targets. Allah Glorified is He had intended these pebbles to punish selected human beings and not to annihilate entire countries. Thus, the clay pebbles were raining down in a highly organized attack. Allah Glorified is He used the word sijjeel when describing their nature, 'Stone-hard blows (sijjeel) of pre-ordained chastisement, one upon another' (Hud: 82). Thus, the pebbles were ordered, as the word sijjeel was used in this verse. The word also occurs in the following verses describing the punishment of Abraha, the Abyssinian, who had attacked the Ka'ba, 'Thus, He let loose upon them (Abraha's army) great swarms of flying creatures, which smote them with stone-hard blows (sijjeel) of chastisement pre-ordained' (al-Fil: 3-4).

Allah Glorified is He concludes the verse we are currently studying by saying, 'And these (blows of doom) are never far from the evildoers!' (Hud: 83) These 'evildoers' are those disbelievers who rejected Allah's message which was brought to humanity by the long succession of messengers that was finalized by the mission of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

We know that these stories of past prophets served to reinforce the certitude and the confidence of our own Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. They also served as examples of commendable behaviour (on the part of previous prophets), 'We convey unto thee (only) that wherewith We (aim to) make firm your heart' (Hud: 120).

These stories narrated the conflicts that arose between Allah's messengers, who were enforced with divine miracles, and the disbelievers that denied them. All these conflicts inevitably ended with the victory of the messenger over the disbelievers.

However, previous prophets were not asked to fight for their faith on the battlefield. They were only responsible for the exposition of the metaphysical proofs and the delivery of their messages. When their people rejected these proofs, Allah intervened to punish the transgressors. Allah Glorified is He says, ‘Are you not aware of how your Lord has dealt with (the tribe of) `Ad, these were the people of Aram who had many pillars, the like of whom has never been constructed in all the land. And with (the tribe of) Thamud, who hollowed out rocks in the valley? And with Pharaoh of the (many) monuments? It was they who transgressed all bounds of equity all over their lands, and brought about great corruption therein. Therefore, your Lord let loose upon them a scourge of suffering, for verily, your Lord is ever on the watch!’ (al-Fajr: 6-14)

With the coming of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him arose new obligations. This is because the religion which Prophet Muhammad brought would be the prevailing religion as the end of time draws near. His community of believers would be responsible for carrying forth the Divine Message after him. Every member of his community must have a basic understanding and knowledge of Allah’s Commands, so that he can share it with others. Every member is, in his own right, a representative of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

Allah Glorified is He says, ‘And thus have We willed you to be a community of the optimal way, so that (with your lives) you might bear witness to the truth before all mankind, and that The Apostle might bear witness to it before you’ (al-Baqara: 143). Therefore, every member from the community of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is an extension of the Islamic Message. Instead of defeating the disbelievers through direct intervention from heaven, Allah Glorified is He has ordered Prophet Muhammad’s community to defend their religion with strength. The purpose here is not to force their beliefs upon people, for, as a matter of Islamic principle, belief is forbidden to be imposed on others. You can force a person to perform physical actions, but you cannot dictate what they feel in their hearts. Allah Glorified is He wants faith that comes from the heart, as a result of people’s free will. That is why Allah Glorified is He says, ‘Would you (Muhammad), perhaps, torment yourself (with grief) because they (who live around you) refuse to believe (in the message)? Had we so willed, we could have sent down unto them a message from the skies, so that their necks would (be forced to) bow down before it in humility.' (ash-Shu'ara': 3-4)

Thus, the community of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was entrusted with a two-fold mission. Firstly, they are to transmit the message of Prophet Muhammad to the future generations, with every generation being responsible for transmitting it to the next. Prophet Muhammad said, 'Allah bestows a radiating glow on the one who, upon hearing my sayings, teaches them and conveys them to those who did not hear them, for many a receiver (of knowledge) will understand better than the one who heard it first.'(1) Secondly, they were entrusted in standing firm against the disbelievers, not to force faith upon them, but to defend the right of people to choose their religion. In Islam, no swords are to be unsheathed to impose faith on people. Allah Glorified is He says, 'Let, then, him who wills, believe in it, and let him who wills, reject it.' (al-Kahf: 29) Therefore, Allah Glorified is He wants the hearts that are sincere in their reverence and not the hearts that are forced or compelled.

In fact, if a man chooses to believe in Islam, he is told that he must commit himself to its faith and not break any of its laws. This serves to make entering Islam a voluntary step. Given this, how can it be argued that Islam was imposed on people?

Thus, the believer from among Prophet Muhammad's community should adhere to the following two principles. The first principle is observing the pillars of Islamic faith and the second principle is the spreading of its message. That is why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'The scholars (`Ulama`) from among my community are equivalent to the Prophets of Israel.'(2)

(1) Narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad (1/437), by At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan (2657, 2658), by Ibn Majah in his Sunnan (232) and by Al-Hamidi (1/47). This saying was narrated on the authority of `Abdullah ibn Mas`ud Allah be pleased with him.

(2) Cited by As-Suyuty in (Ad-Durr Al-Manthur) (293), adding that its source was unknown. According to Ash-Shawkani in Al-Fawa`id Al-Majmu`a) (286), this is also the opinion of Ibn Hajar and Az-Zarkashy. Also, see Al-`Ajaluni's Kashf al-Khafa` (2/83). We can understand from the Hadith, that we must venerate the scholars for their sincerity and their integrity in the transmission of the message, and for their intelligent exposition [of the message].

Now does the word `Ulama` (scholars) refer only to religious scholars? No. The term applies to anyone who has thorough knowledge of at least one issue pertaining to faith. They should then roam the earth conveying this knowledge to the disbelievers while leaving them the free decision to choose their faith. The believer should also stand ready to defend Prophet Muhammad's Message against any power that threatens people's freedom to choose their faith.

Thus, stories such as this story in the Quran, served to strengthen Prophet Muhammad's heart. We know that Allah Glorified is He entrusted His Prophet with the Message while he was in Mecca. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him proclaimed the message loudly and clearly, directly addressing the chiefs of the Arabian Peninsula and not just the tribes living on its outskirts. Therefore, no one can accuse him of having preached only to the weak tribes (of the outlying provinces), shying away from the masters of the peninsula, who were Quraysh at that time.

Quraysh had risen to prominence having taken up residence near the Ka'ba which all the Arab tribes used to visit. Thus, if any member of the tribe of Quraysh were to be harmed, Quraysh could exact its revenge when the members of the offending tribe made their pilgrimage to the Ka'ba. Thus, the tribe of Quraysh rose to power due to the strategic value of the Ka'ba. It is the Ka'ba that lifted Quraysh to their prominent position, and gave value to the deified idols brought in by the various tribes. Those idols were then placed inside the Ka'ba in the hopes that the sanctity of the Ka'ba would include them. Therefore, Quraysh gained all their power from the Ka'ba. When Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came along and proclaimed the message of Islam clearly to the chiefs of Quraysh, he publicly exposed their ignorance without being intimidated by their power or their prominent status.

Allah willed for the triumph of Islam not to happen at the hands of the leaders of Quraysh in Mecca; it happened in Medina because Allah wanted to let the world know that tribal allegiance to Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not cause the people to follow and believe him. Allah willed for the weak people who dwelled near the boundaries of the Arabian Peninsula to be those who advocated the Message of Islam. It was the people's belief in Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that caused them to advocate him, not tribal allegiance. Allah has described the tribe of Quraysh as unjust and clarified to them that the place which was turned upside down is not too far from them, and they should learn from these events of the past.

It is well known that injustice means taking someone's right away and giving it to another who does not deserve it. When it is used in the context of religion, it refers to major shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship). Accordingly, there are different levels of injustice.

The tribe of Quraysh wronged themselves extremely because they associated others with Allah in His Divinity which is the greatest form of injustice. Allah wants to remind them that when He passes His Judgment, nothing can hold it back. Therefore, Allah instructed them to pay attention to the fact that just as suffering befell the other villages which are close to them they were liable to be punished. The distance between Medina and the Levant may seem great, but Allah enabled them to travel to the Levant every summer.

The ruins of these villages lay on the routes they took while travelling. Allah says about their location, 'They are still there on the highway.' (al-Hijr: 76) This means that they lie on the routes which they regularly took without being swept away by flood or winds. Therefore, they should have learnt lessons every time they passed by them for them to avoid committing another injustice. Allah also warned them every time they passed by the village of the tribe of Prophet Saleh (Shelah) peace be upon him to whom Allah Glorified is He says, 'Do you construct on every elevation a sign, amusing yourselves. Take for yourselves palaces and fortresses that you might abide eternally? And when you strike, you strike as tyrants.' (ash-Shu'ara': 128-130) As Quraysh saw how the old dwellings of the tribes of Thamud, `Ad and Lut (Lot) were completely vacant, they should not have avoided injustice and learnt a lesson concerning the destiny of those who associated others with Allah in His Divinity. Allah Glorified is He alerts them to the fact that not only did they associate others with Allah in His Divinity, but also they were also ungrateful to Allah Who blessed them with the winter journey to Yemen and summer journey to the Levant. Both journeys were for commercial purposes and brought about immense profits to the people of Quraysh, as they used to travel with their capital money to buy goods which they sold to the dwellers of Mecca and the pilgrims of the Ka'ba. The people by whom the merchants of Quraysh passed during their journey held Quraysh in high esteem because they lived near the holy Ka'ba. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He has shown them the bounties He bestowed on them in His saying, 'Have you not considered, [O Muhammad], how your Lord dealt with the companions of the elephant? Did He not make their plan into misguidance? He sent against them birds in flocks. Striking them with stones of hard clay, He made them like eaten straw. (al-Fil: 1-5) If the people who came to destroy the Ka'ba - the symbol of power for Quraysh - had succeeded in destroying the Ka'ba and the pilgrim's destination had shifted from Mecca to Sana'a, the people of Quraysh would have no longer enjoyed their prominent position. However, Allah protected the holy Ka'ba and sent against the aggressors birds in flocks that made them like eaten straw. Why did Allah Glorified is He do this? The answer is mentioned in the chapter of Quraysh which follows the chapter of al-Fil, as Allah says, '[He did this] to make Quraysh feel secure. Secure in their winter and summer journeys. So let them worship the Lord of this House: who provides them with food to ward off hunger, safety to ward off fear.' (Quraysh: 1-4)

Therefore, they should have learnt a lesson when they passed by the ruined villages. As they used to pass by these ancient villages for purposes of trade to earn their living without learning a lesson, they committed another injustice. Therefore, Allah says, 'Allah's punishment is not from the wrongdoers [very] far' (Hud: 83). The verse may also mean that Allah warns Quraysh that the destruction that befell the previous disbelievers is not too far from them, and that He can strike every disbeliever with a marked rock wherever he may be.

Those who have superficial knowledge of Arabic find fault with the Quran out of misunderstanding. For example, they wonder how Allah says in the Arabic text of the following verse, '…Allah's punishment is not from the wrongdoers [very] far.' (Hud: 83) Ma hiya which is a feminine form and follows it by biba`eed (not very far) in the masculine form, while it is supposed to be biba`eedah, i.e. in the feminine form, they have forgotten that this is the saying of Allah. They may not also have a wide knowledge of the Arabic language because when the form fa`il of the morphological balance - which refers to the word 'far' in the translation of the verse - occurs as maf`ul (the object of a verb), it is permissible to use the masculine or the feminine form. For example, Allah says in another verse, ‘angels, moreover, are [his] assistants.’ (at-Tahrim: 4), and, ‘Indeed, the mercy of Allah is near to the doers of good’ (al-A’raf: 56). Their ignorance of the language causes them to make such a mistake.

Allah Glorified is He begins recounting another story of the numerous stories of the prophets; this one is the story of Prophet Shu`aib (Jethro).

Allah Glorified is He says:

وَإِلَىٰ مَدۡيَنَ أَخَاهُمۡ شُعَيۡبٗاۚ قَالَ يَٰقَوۡمِ ٱعۡبُدُواْ ٱللَّهَ مَا لَكُم مِّنۡ إِلَٰهٍ غَيۡرُهُۥۖ وَلَا تَنقُصُواْ
ٱلۡمِكۡيَالَ وَٱلۡمِيزَانَۚ إِنِّيٓ أَرَىٰكُم بِخَيۡرٖ وَإِنِّيٓ أَخَافُ عَلَيۡكُمۡ عَذَابَ يَوۡمٖ مُّحِيطٖ (٨٤)

And to Midyan, We sent their brother Shu`aib. He said, ‘My people, worship God. You have no god other than Him. Do not give short measure nor short weight. I see you are prospering, but I fear you will have torment on an overwhelming Day [84]

Midyan is the name of Prophet Ibrahim’s (Abraham’s) peace be upon him son who was not alive during the era of Prophet Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him but the tribe whose members were his descendants was named after him. The village where these people dwelled was also named after him. Thus, if you say that Shu`aib (Jethro) was sent to the tribe of Midyan, this statement will be true; and if you were to say that Shu`aib (Jethro) was sent to a village called Midyan, this statement will also be true, since there must be inhabitants living in that village. Allah quotes the brothers of Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) as saying, ‘Ask the town in which we were and the caravan in which we came’ (Yusuf: 82). Thus, sometimes the word refers to the place and at other times it refers to the inhabitants of a certain place. Shu`aib (Jethro) began preaching his message to his people in the same way that previous messengers had done, as he called them to worship Allah alone without any partners. This is the common element in all prophetic messages. Allah Glorified is He says, ‘He has ordained for you of religion what He enjoined upon Nuh (Noah) and that which We have revealed to you, [O Muhammad], and what We enjoined upon Ibrahim (Abraham), and Musa (Moses) and `Isa (Jesus) - to establish the religion and not be divided therein. Difficult for those who associate others with Allah is that to which you invite them. Allah chooses for Himself whom He wills and guides to Himself whoever turns back [to Him].' (ash-Shura: 13) Therefore, the most important element in creed is to worship Allah Alone without any partners. Allah enjoins commands only on those who believe in Him while those who do not believe in Him receive no commands. Allah prefixes every command with, 'O you who have believed' (al-Baqara: 178), whether this commandment concerns the issue of fasting or seeking retribution, for example, it is always preceded by 'O you who have believed'. Therefore, I have always said that underlying reason (for obeying) any commandment is one's faith in the One Who enjoins this command, and there is no need to look for any other reasons. For example, if someone says that the reason for ablution is cleanliness, we say that in case that water is unavailable, we perform tayammum (dry ablution with clean earth) using dust or rock. The goal, therefore, is to prepare ourselves for prayer in any way that fulfils the religious objective; worshiping the Creator Glorified and Exalted is He. The believer should never delay the performance of a religious rite for merely finding the reason behind it because the reason for performing it is the fact that it has been enjoined by Allah.

Similarly, we follow everything that Prophet Muhamma peace and blessing be upon him said without looking for the reason. If we postponed obeying Allah's commands concerning eating pork and drinking alcohol until they are scientifically justified, diseases would spread, as it has been proven that pork is impure as it contains diseases, and alcohol causes damage to the brain and liver.

Muslims obey Allah's Commands concerning these issues the moment they were enjoined due to their belief in the instructions of their creed and their desire to draw closer to Allah. These commands have been proven beneficial.

Allah Glorified is He says, 'and to Midyan, We sent their brother Shu`aib (Jethro). He said, "My people worship Allah. You have no god other than Him."' (Hud: 84) We have learnt that worship is not limited solely to prayer, fasting, alms giving and pilgrimage, as these are the basic pillars(1) of Islam which involves the construction of the earth through following Allah's commands(1). Therefore, every action, which makes performing the obligatory actions possible, is itself obligatory in turn.

(1) It is narrated on the authority of Ibn `Umar Allah be pleased with him and his father that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Islam is based on five (pillars): testifying that there is no true god except Allah and that Muhammad is His slave and Messenger, performing prayer, the payment of zakat (alms giving), fasting during Ramadan and performing pilgrimage to the House of Allah (the Ka`ba).' [Related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (8) and by Muslim in his Sahih (16)]

Any work, which a person performs and the society needs, is an act of worship. If a particular profession is in decline, it is incumbent on the officials to find people who can learn and reinvigorate the craft in question; perfecting one's work or craft is also a form of worship.

Allah quotes Shu`aib (Jethro) as saying, 'You have no god other than Him' (Hud: 84). It means, in other words, not to take your religious commands from anyone other than Allah Glorified is He as there is no god other than Him with no partner.

A person should never accept rulings from a human being while finding fault with Allah's rulings. In addition, a person should never wrong himself by thinking that Allah overlooked a certain ruling which we should follow.(2) Therefore, beware of supplanting any of Allah's rulings; understand it first, and if it is precise and clear, apply it, and if it is general or nor clear, make juristic effort to infer the most suitable legal ruling.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him asked his envoy to Yemen, 'How will you judge?' he said, 'We will judge according to what is in Allah's Book.' Prophet Muhammad asked, 'If it is not in Allah's Book?' he said, 'Then with the Sunnah of the Messenger of Allah.' Prophet Muhammad asked, 'If it is not in the Sunnah of the Messenger of Allah?' he said, 'We will give in our view.' Then he said that Prophet Muhammad gently stroke his chest and said, ‘All praise is due to Allah, Who granted the messenger of the Messenger of Allah success in what pleases the Messenger of Allah.(1)

(1) The commandments constitute all the prescriptions and the proscriptions. We derive from the prescriptions that which is fard (obligations), Sunnah (whatever is narrated from the Prophet) and 'mustahab' (desirable). Prescriptions involve religious and social matters. Proscriptions include that which is haram (unlawful) and makruh (prohibited). The society will be good so long as the prescriptions are followed and proscriptions are avoided, as Allah says, '…so accept whatever the Messenger gives you, and abstain from whatever he forbids you…' (al-Hashr: 7). Allah also says, 'Indeed, those who have said, "Our Lord is Allah" and then remained on a right course...' (Fussilat: 30).

(2) Allah says, '…This day I have perfected for you your religion and completed My favour upon you and have approved for you Islam as your religion...' (al-Ma'ida: 3).

After Prophet Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him called the people of Midyan to worship Allah Glorified is He alone - which is the common denominator between all the Prophetic messages - rulings followed; for every sinner, there is a means of repentance. As for the person who gave short measure, the messenger rectified this matter.

In the past, world communities were isolated from one another; thus, some deficiencies might be prevalent in one area, but did not exist in another. All prophets were sent to treat the shortcomings and a deficiency that was specific to the area to which they were sent except Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who is a mercy for all people, and is the last Prophet and Messenger. Prophet Muhammad was sent when the world was on the eve of an era of unprecedented religious interconnectedness. With the advent of modern communication, distances between countries were enormously reduced. At present, what happens on the American continent is broadcast in our country on the same day, as the world is closely interconnected. Spiritual diseases have proliferated and prevailed because of the speed at which communication takes place. In addition, there is no longer any discernment between good and evil. Therefore, Allah willed for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to be the Seal of the Prophets.

The shortcomings of the people of Midyan were that they did not worship Allah alone, and were guilty of giving short measure. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He quotes Shu`aib (Jethro) as saying, ‘do not give short measure or short weight. I see you are prospering’ (Hud: 84). When the religious scholars read this verse, they realised that the verse is not only relevant to things measured and weighed.

This is just from the point of view of the seller. The meaning of this verse encompasses the seller and buyer so that the buyer must take his rightful share of the commodity and the seller must take his rightful share of the profit. Therefore, this verse includes both buyer and seller(1).

(1) Related by Ahmad in his Musnad (5/230, 236, 242) and by Abu Dawud in his (Sunnan) (3592, Book on Judgments, from the Hadith narrated by Mu`adh ibn Jabal

It is well known that al-kayl is the process of measuring something against something else. If we are measuring weight, then we need units for measuring weight. If we are measuring volume, then we need units for measuring volume. Textiles are measured by the metre; land is measured by area etc. Other things are measured by volume which entails calculating the length, width and height and multiplying them.

The important matter is that every person should receive his rightful share. This principle applies even when it comes to compensating a worker for the effort of work he has exerted in performing his work. The most famous case is the measure and weight, and the purpose of other kinds of measurement is to give everyone his rightful due. If a person starts to take other people's rights, he will continue doing so; and if some people usurp the rights of others, the latter would stop doing their work correctly. When you give someone less than what he deserves or if the payment he receives does not suite the effort he has exerted in work, he will become sluggish in his work and will not perform his work properly. This will result in work deficiencies. Therefore, I emphasize that giving everyone his rightful due results in a better quality of work.

Instead of hoarding money, ambitious people must work because when they set up a project or establish a building, they benefit the poor-even if they do not realise it -because he who establishes a building benefits the construction workers and the manufacturers of building materials. Therefore, he benefits the poor workers even before he himself benefits from this building.

Therefore, it is important that every person receives his rightful due before his sweat dries. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Give the worker his wage before his sweat dries.'(2)

(1) It is deduced from Sheikh Ash-Sha`rawi's intention that giving everyone his due right amounts maintaining balance in life.

(2) Related by Ibn Majah in his Sunnan (2443) on the authority of Ibn `Umar... Al-Busairi states in his book `Az-Zawa`id, 'Its chain of transmission is weak, as there are two weak narrators.

We learn that Islam encourages altruism and emphasises at the same time the rewards that Allah will give to the one who gives preference to other people over himself although he may be poor. When a person has little money, but gives it to another in need this means that this person has given another preference over himself, but he will receive reward from Allah Glorified is He double the money he paid.

Islam teaches us the superior usefulness which Allah intends to establish among people. When this principle governs the people's lives, everyone in society will benefit easily.

In this verse, which we are currently explaining, Prophet Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him tells the people of Midyan, '...do not give short measure or short weight. I see you are prospering…' (Hud: 84). This means that they had no need to do such underhand practises because the sellers owned enough merchandise, and the buyer had enough money. Therefore, they should have been content with what they had and everyone should have received his rightful due. This is an issue which many people ignore; if the seller cheats his customers when they buy a certain commodity from him, other sellers will cheat him when he buys other types of goods that are necessary for his life.

If a person cheats others by giving short measure and weight, other sellers will cheat him when he buys the commodities he needs for his daily life. Therefore, Prophet Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him told them that they were not in need for such dishonest measures because they were already prosperous. Then, he warned them, saying, 'But I fear you will have torment on an overwhelming Day.' (Hud: 84) when you give a buyer less than his full due or when you take from a seller more than your rightful due, you are not only cheating the person you are dealing with, but also you are cheating yourself. We all know that the seller or the buyer may be inattentive, and a

= The Hadith is related by Al-Tabarany in his (Al-Mu`jam As-Saghir) (1/20) on the authority of Jabir; also, Abu Na`im in Al-Hulya (7/142) on the authority of Abu Hurayra.
By these chains of transmission and narrations, the Hadith has acquired the status of Hasan (a Hadith whose chain of narration contains a narrator with weak exactitude, but is free from eccentricity or blemish). The origin of the Hadith is mentioned in Sahih Al-Bukhari, (Book on Transactions) where it is narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayrah seller may try to take advantage of the buyer's inadvertence by pressing down upon the scale with his fingers (so that the desired merchandise may seem heavier). The buyer may also try to take advantage of the seller's inadvertence by lifting the scale up with his fingers while the seller is not looking to take more than his fair share. This is a type of self-deception because Allah has ordered us to be honest in our economic dealings with other people as the benefits gained from anything - no matter how copious it is - is limited as human life on earth is limited. Therefore, he who cheats and deceives others exposes himself to Allah's endless punishment in the Hereafter. Thus, a person may earn a meagre profit in this transient world, but he meets endless and overwhelming torment in the Hereafter. This indicates that the tormented person cannot escape from it. In the worldly life, you may escape some suffering by seeking refuge with someone more powerful than you are, but on the Day of Judgment, if you are destined for hellfire, you will face a day on which there will be no trading, friendship or intercession.

Allah continues with what Prophet Shu`aib (Jethro) said to the people of Midyan saying:

وَيَٰقَوۡمِ أَوۡفُواْ ٱلۡمِكۡيَالَ وَٱلۡمِيزَانَ بِٱلۡقِسۡطِۖ وَلَا تَبۡخَسُواْ
ٱلنَّاسَ أَشۡيَآءَهُمۡ وَلَا تَعۡثَوۡاْ فِي ٱلۡأَرۡضِ مُفۡسِدِينَ ﴿٨٥﴾

My people, in fairness, give full measure and weight. Do not withhold from people things that are rightly theirs, and do not spread corruption in the land [85] (The Quran, Hud: 85)

In the previous verse, Allah says, 'in fairness, give full measure and weight' (Hud: 85). Accordingly, we learn that fulfilment of measure and weight is religiously required because Allah speaks about things measured or weighted in the absolute sense, as this includes every transaction that takes place between the buyer and the seller. In another verse, Allah Glorified is He says, 'Woe to those who give short measure, who demand of other people full measure for themselves, but give less than they should when it is they who weigh or measure for others!' (al-Mutaffifin: 1-3) The seller may ask the buyer to weigh for himself regarding him trustworthy, but the buyer may cheat the seller by taking more than his right. The seller may do the opposite, a matter which involves misery for the both. Prophet Shu`aib (Jethro) says, ‘My people, in fairness, give full measure and weight…’ (Hud: 85). Allah has explained the issue of giving people short measure and weight and that of fulfilment of measure and weight. Then Allah Glorified is He says, ‘…do not withhold from people things that are rightly theirs…’ (Hud: 85).

This verse has a general meaning which is not limited to things measured or weighed. A buyer may belittle the value of a certain commodity, a person may take a bribe from another, usurp that which is not rightfully his, extort or embezzle, which all amount usurping someone else’s right using in different ways.

Snatching means taking hold of something suddenly and running away, extortion means obtaining something by force, embezzlement means secretly taking something which is in one’s care and bribery means taking money or presents in return for offering a service for a person who is already entitled to this service.

Allah’s saying, ‘...in fairness, give full measure and weight…’ (Hud: 85), includes different meanings, and the word al-bakhs is to harm someone by giving him less than his full due, whether this be in terms of volume or weight. The word ashya` is the plural of the word shay` which refers to different things regardless of their gender. Allah instructs us not to be lured by anything no matter how small it is.

In this verse, we notice that the word *an-na*s is plural just as the word ashya`ahum is. When two plurals occur together, the meaning of the verse applies to each person of these people and everything of these ashya`. In other words, the verse means that no one is allowed to belittle anything possessed by any person.

There is a story of a pious man who leased a riding animal from a lender so that he could ride it from one place to another. As he was riding it, his whip with which he guided the animal fell to the ground, so he stopped the animal and dismounted and returned on foot to the spot where the whip fell. When he had found the whip, he walked back to his animal and remounted it. A person asked him, ‘Why did you not ride your animal back to where you had dropped your whip’? Whereupon the pious man replied, ‘I leased this animal to go from a certain point to a certain destination; my agreement with the lender does not include using the animal to search for my lost whip'

There is a story of another pious man who was writing a book. In the past, people used to help the ink dry faster by soaking up the excess using sand. However, the pious man could not find anything with which he could soak up the excess ink. Therefore, he took a handful of dust from the base of a wall, and then he went to the owner of the wall and asked him to assess the price of the dust he took from the base of his wall. Therefore, the owner of the wall said, 'By Allah, because of your integrity I will not assess the price of the dust.' Allah Glorified and Exalted is He concludes the verse saying, '…do not commit abuse on earth, spreading corruption.' (Hud: 85)

The Arabic word adha means committing abuse and spreading corruption, such as sullying water well or digging a hole in a road used by people. Thus, it is something that destroys that which is good.

All members of society are ordered not to spread such corruption. If all were to apply this directive, the whole society would become upright. However, the problem is that some people want other people not to be corrupt, while they themselves are corrupt and do not like other people to stop their acts of corruption.

Then Allah Glorified is He says:

بَقِيَّتُ ٱللَّهِ خَيْرٌ لَّكُمْ إِن كُنتُم مُّؤْمِنِينَ ۚ وَمَآ أَنَا۠ عَلَيْكُم بِحَفِيظٍ ﴿٨٦﴾

What lasts with God is best for you, if you are believers: I am not your keeper' [86] (The Quran, Hud: 86)

This means that whatever they gain from honest transactions is better for them because the one who takes more than his fair share commits a mistake because unlawful earning removes blessing from lawful earning. In addition, the one who takes what is not rightfully his, Allah will cause him to lose his unfair share. Someone may say, 'so and so is awash with Allah's blessings' which means that even though his income is low, he is well off and able to raise his children in relative comfort as opposed to someone else who has amassed his wealth through unlawful means and leads a distressing life.

This person may have numerous expenses so that his budget cannot afford his expenses, as Allah Glorified is He has caused him to fall prey to many evil temptations. A person may succeed in deceiving other people, but he can never deceive his Lord.

Allah Glorified is He says, ‘What lasts with Allah is best for you…’ (Hud: 86) which means that Allah guards the person who does not usurp other people’s rights against evil temptations and all the expenses that consume their money. Consider negative provision rather than a positive one because most people tend to emphasize positive provision which means seeking large amounts of money. However, they forget that Allah causes the person who gained money unlawfully to lose his money through evil channels of expenses while He protects the person who guards the people’s rights from these evil channels of expenses.

Allah does not bless those who raise their children with unlawful money. We find - for example - that the son of a briber takes private lessons and still fails whereas the son of an upright person, who earns his living from lawful sources, gains knowledge easily and succeeds. In addition, Allah may cause the person who earns his living from unlawful sources to have a greedy wife that is never satisfied with anything whereas He grants the person who guards the people’s rights a wife that is content and appreciative of her husband.

Allah Glorified is He says, ‘What lasts with Allah is best for you, if you are believers…’ (Hud: 86). This means that if you believe that Allah Glorified is He is the Ever-Watchful and the Self-Existing; do not usurp other people’s rights as Allah watches you. Allah Glorified is He concludes the verse saying, ‘…I am not your keeper.’ (Hud: 86) Prophet Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him has made it clear to the people of Midyan that he will not watch every corrupt person to prevent him from doing any act of corruption because every person must watch over himself as long as he believes in Allah Glorified is He and knows that He says, ‘What lasts with Allah is best for you, if you are believers…’ (Hud: 86). This means that what lasts will be blessed, and the purpose of faith is to follow what is prescribed and to shun what is proscribed. This is not the case with man-made law which is not concerned with what people do secretly. Therefore, it seems as if it protects people from being subject to legal prosecution. On the other hand, the Divine Law encompasses all that humans do in public and secretly.

Allah says, ‘and to Midyan, We sent their brother Shu`aib (Jethro). He said, “My people worship Allah. You have no god other than Him. Do not give short measure or short weight. I see you are prospering, but I fear you will have torment on an overwhelming Day. My people, in fairness, give full measure and weight. Do not withhold from people things that are rightly theirs, and do not spread corruption in the land. What lasts with Allah is best for you, if you are believers; I am not your keeper.”’ (Hud: 84-86) When one contemplates these verses, he can find the elements that protect the well-being of society; if the society is not protected, it will not corrupt. Allah has willed for the society to be integrated without redundancies, because if the skills are redundant, people will not need each other and will not be interdependent. Public interest necessitates that people depend on the skills of each other. For example, the person who studies for obtaining a PhD needs the person who sweeps the streets, and the person who treats people - with the help of Allah - needs the person who repairs the sewers. What werethe response of the people of Midyan to Prophet Shu`aib (Jethro)?

Allah Glorified is He says:

قَالُواْ يَٰشُعَيۡبُ أَصَلَوٰتُكَ تَأۡمُرُكَ أَن نَّتۡرُكَ مَا يَعۡبُدُ ءَابَآؤُنَآ أَوۡ
أَن نَّفۡعَلَ فِيٓ أَمۡوَٰلِنَا مَا نَشَٰٓؤُاْۖ إِنَّكَ لَأَنتَ ٱلۡحَلِيمُ ٱلرَّشِيدُ ﴿٨٧﴾

They said, ‘Shu`aib, does your prayer tell you that we should abandon what our forefathers worshipped and refrain from doing whatever we please with our own property? Indeed you are a tolerant and sensible man’ [87] (The Quran, Hud: 87)

The verse means that the people of Midyan asked Prophet Shu`aib, ‘Does your Lord ask us to abandon what our forefathers worshipped’? One may ask why they said, ‘does your prayer’ (Hud: 87)? The answer is that Islam is based on five pillars. The first is to testify that there is no god but Allah and that Muhammad is His Prophet; it suffices a person to utter this testimony of faith once in his lifetime. Then performing the prayer, giving alms, fasting during the month of Ramadan and performing pilgrimage, for whoever can bear the journey. If you consider these pillars, you will find that a person may not be able to give alms or perform the pilgrimage. In addition, a person may be sick, so he may be excused from fasting during Ramadan, and he may utter the testimony of faith once during his life. Only the prayer remains; therefore, it is said, 'Prayer is the most important pillar of faith, whoever performs it, establishes the entire faith, and whoever abandons it destroys the entire faith'. Prayer is the only pillar which enables the believer to reaffirm his loyalty to his Lord five times daily.

No person is excused from the daily prayer whatever his circumstances are. If a person is unable to move, he can perform the prayer with his eyes. If he is not able to move the eyes, he must pray with his heart. Even in the condition of war or battle, the Muslim should perform the prayer of fear. Therefore, the prayer is the pillar which is not waived and should be performed five times a day. In addition, Allah has attached due importance to it in the Islamic law.

All religious obligations have been revealed by Allah Glorified is He as Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him brought them to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who conveyed them to us. The five daily prayers were the only rituals with which Allah charged Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him during the Night Journey when he was at sidrat al-muntaha (a lote-tree of the utmost boundary over the seventh heaven beyond which none can pass) because of its great importance.

For example - and to Allah belongs the utmost example of perfection - you will find that when a president of a country receives his daily briefings he delegates the work to his subordinates while putting in a suggestion as to how the work should be done. However, when the president receives a matter of critical importance, he summons the responsible official and arranges with him the appropriate arrangements and procedures that should be taken. If this is the case with human matters, what will be the case when Allah assigns an obligation to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him?

Allah Glorified is He willed for the obligation of prayer to be the only obligation that has attained this status due to its importance, as it is the only pillar that must be performed five times a day. You may utter the testimony of faith once in your lifetime, but you utter it every time you pray.

Alms giving involves paying a portion of one's wealth; a person may not be born with any money except if he had inherited some. It is obligatory for a person to give alms from his money which can only be attained by hard work. In addition, work itself takes up time, but praying involves sacrificing some time; sacrifice of one's time is broader than giving alms.

During fasting, you refrain from the carnal desires from dawn until sunset, but you continue to practise all the other activities of life. However, during prayer, you do not only abstain from the carnal desires, but also you abstain from the other activities of life which are permissible during fasting.

During pilgrimage, as well as prayer, you direct yourself towards the Holy House of Allah. Thus, all the pillars of Islam are contained in the prayer.

In the verse which we are currently examining, the people of Midyan mocked their Prophet Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him and his prayer, just as the disbelievers of Quraysh mocked Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. The people of Midyan told Prophet Shu`aib (Jethro), 'does your prayer tell you' (Hud: 87) thinking that they were ridiculing him as he was in the habit of praying often; the disbelievers of Quraysh were also ignorant of the fact that prayer can prevent sins.

Allah Glorified is He says, 'prayer prohibits immorality and wrongdoing' (al-'Ankabut: 45). Thus, prayer can urge a person to do the good and prevent him from doing evil. Since a ruling has been issued for a certain matter, it entails some repercussions. A person may say to another, 'I know that you pray so I trust you' or 'how you can commit such a sin although you perform prayer'? Many people forget that such analogies can solve numerous dilemmas; they tend to consider only one side of the issue and forget its counterpart. Therefore, so long as Allah Glorified is He says that prayer prevents committing sins, it should enjoin good. Another example is Allah's saying about the drowning of Pharaoh's people, 'And the heaven and earth wept not for them...' (ad-Dukhan: 29). So long as Allah Glorified and Exalted is He forbade the heavens and the earth from weeping over the people of Pharaoh, then it is clear that they weep over other people because the heavens and the earth were created for the sole purpose of praising Allah. Allah Glorified is He says, 'Indeed, we offered the Trust to the heavens and the earth and the mountains, and they declined to bear it…' (al-'Ahzab: 72). In this verse, the heavens and the earth chose to be among the creatures who praise Allah, as He says, '…there is not a thing except that it exalts [Allah] by His praise….' (al-Isra': 44) Therefore, if the heavens and the earth see a person praising Allah, they will inevitably love him and if they see a disbeliever, they will hate him. The heavens and the earth did not weep over the people of Pharaoh because they were deluded, as the heavens and the earth only weep over the upright people.

'Ali ibn Abu Taleb Allah be pleased with him settled this issue as he said, 'When a believer dies he is mourned in two places: one on the earth and the other in heaven. The place which mourns him on earth is the place where he used to pray, and the place which mourns him in heaven is the spot where his good deeds ascend to heaven.' The place where he used to pray loses a person who used to pray there, and the place through which his good deeds used to ascend to heaven misses the scent of his good works ascending to heaven. Therefore, prayer may refer to and symbolises the religion. The prayer itself involves commands just as the religion involves commands; it represents sincere faith because false faith has no benefit.

The people of Midyan wanted to mock Prophet Shu`aib's call to faith, so they asked, '...does your prayer tell you that we should abandon what our forefathers worshipped…' (Hud: 87). This saying involves their response to his call for them to worship no god but Allah, as there is no other god but Him, not to give short measure and weight and not to deprive people of their dues. This saying also involves their response to their call for them to realise that whatever lasts with Allah is better for them, and not to spread corruption on earth. They asked him, 'Do you also forbid us from using our money in the way we want to'? It seems that they lost their insight because if they allowed themselves to do whatever they wanted with their money, others will also do what they wish with their own money; and interests will clash and everyone will lose. Their saying, '…Indeed you are a tolerant and sensible man.' (Hud: 87)

They continued to mock Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him as they said at the beginning, '...does your prayer tell you that we should abandon what our forefathers …' (Hud: 87). Their situation resembles that of the hypocrites of Medina who said to the Ansar (Helpers from Medina), '...Do not spend on those who are with the Messenger of Allah….' (al-Munafiqun: 7) Their purpose was to stir temptation between the Immigrants and the Ansar. They said, 'the Messenger of Allah' only out of sarcasm, as they were urging the wealthy men of Medina to starve the immigrants.

They also resembled the people of Prophet Lut (Lot) when he forbade them from committing sins; they said ironically, '…Evict them from your town! Indeed, they are men who keep themselves pure.' (al-A'raf: 82) Is their purity a valid reason for expelling them from the town? Because they did not want anyone to disturb their life of sin, this saying resembles what some people say in our daily life, 'Do not consult so-and-so as he is strict in religious matters'.

The people of Prophet Shu`aib (Jethro) said, '…Indeed you are a tolerant and sensible man.' (Hud: 87) They mock him because he did not agree with them on worshipping any god other than Allah and giving short measure and weight. He also forbade them from depriving people of their due. When a righteous ruling is pronounced by a person who does not adhere to or believe in it, his purpose of doing so is mockery and ridicule. This type of mocking language is mentioned in the Quran in many verses. Allah Glorified is He tells those who were tyrannical and oppressive in their life, and will be tormented in the Hereafter, 'It will be said, "Taste! Indeed, you are the honoured, the noble!"' (ad-Dukhan: 49) Allah Glorified is He also says, '…if they call for relief, they will be relieved with water like murky oil, which scalds [their] faces…' (al-Kahf: 29).

Both sayings include mockery and sarcasm. The following verse which we are explaining now, '...does your prayer tell you…' (Hud: 87) involves mockery of his prayer. Likewise is their saying, '…Indeed you are a tolerant and sensible man.' (Hud: 87). They tell him that he is a tolerant and sensible, so he should not say, '...worship Allah. You have no god other than Him' (Hud: 84). They said that because they used to worship idols. They also ridiculed him as he called them to stop giving short measure and weight. They also rejected his advice regarding making good use of their wealth, and the reason that justifies Shu`aib's preaching is that he is a tolerant and sensible, so how can he call them to do that which opposes their desires? Allah Glorified is He relates what Shu`aib (Jethro) says to them, saying:

قَالَ يَٰقَوۡمِ أَرَءَيۡتُمۡ إِن كُنتُ عَلَىٰ بَيِّنَةٖ مِّن رَّبِّي وَرَزَقَنِي مِنۡهُ رِزۡقًا حَسَنٗاۚ
وَمَآ أُرِيدُ أَنۡ أُخَالِفَكُمۡ إِلَىٰ مَآ أَنۡهَىٰكُمۡ عَنۡهُۚ إِنۡ أُرِيدُ إِلَّا ٱلۡإِصۡلَٰحَ مَا
ٱسۡتَطَعۡتُۚ وَمَا تَوۡفِيقِيٓ إِلَّا بِٱللَّهِۚ عَلَيۡهِ تَوَكَّلۡتُ وَإِلَيۡهِ أُنِيبُ ﴿٨٨﴾

He answered, ‘My people, can you not see? What if I am acting on clear evidence from my Lord? He Himself has given me good provision: I do not want to do what I am forbidding you to do, I only want to put things right as far as I can. I cannot succeed without God’s help: I trust in Him, and always turn to Him [88] (The Quran, Hud: 88)

In this verse, Prophet Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him announced that he was acting on clear evidence from Allah; Glorified is He who gave him an authoritative proof. Allah bestowed on him good provision with which he needed no one else, as he lived in well-being. The words ar-rizq al-hasan may refer to the blessing of prophethood. Allah Glorified is He quotes Shu`aib (Jethro) as saying, ‘...I do not want to do what I am forbidding you to do…’ (Hud: 88). This means that he practised what he preached; he did not give short measure or weight and did not deprive people of their due, as he did not worship anyone but Allah.

And the word ukhalif (contradict) indicates two opposing directions; if you intend to discourage people from doing something so that you could do it, this is expressed by the phrase khalafta ila, but if you intend to encourage a person to do something so that you do not have to do it, this is expressed by the phrase ‘khalafta `an’.

Prophet Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him clarified to them that he did not forbid them from these actions for him to do them. Rather, he forbade them from doing these actions which he did not do because Allah Glorified is He has ordered him not to engage in such actions, as He has revealed to him a divine message.

Prophet Shu`aib (Jethro) did not do the actions in which they regarded good, as there is no good in giving short measure or weight or worshiping any god other than Allah. In fact, these actions involve evil. Prophet Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him explains to them the mission of prophethood as he said, ‘I only want to put things right as far as I can’ (Hud: 88). Allah sent prophets when corruption spread, as prophets were sent with doctrines to guide people and to rectify their affairs by giving those commands and prohibitions. These prophets were sent as models to show people how to apply the doctrine, as the prophets cannot give a certain command without applying it first.

Therefore, Prophet Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him said, ‘I only want to put things right as far as I can’ (Hud: 88). Allah Glorified and Exalted is He only charges a soul with that which it is capable of and that which lies within its means. Prophet Shu`aib then said, ‘...I cannot succeed without Allah’s help. I trust in Him, and always turn to Him.’ (Hud: 88) This verse reveals that there is a difference between work and success because your limbs may be busy with work, but the intention may not be sincere, so success is not granted by Allah. However, if you work with the intention that Allah will grant you success in working sincerely, Allah will draw your intention to any mistake you may make, you will do your work perfectly and will be impressed by the beauty of perfection.

Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him as saying is quoted saying, ‘`alayh tawakkaltu’ (I trust in Him) (Hud: 88). This means that Shu`aib (Jethro) places his trust in none other than Allah, and it is not appropriate at all to modify such a formula or to add anything to it; for if you do, by saying for example, ‘I have placed my trust in Allah as well as in so-and-so’, then expect that Allah will not grant you success, as you associate someone along with Him. Hud (Eber) is also quoted as saying, ‘tawakkaltu ‘ala Allah’ (I have relied upon Allah) (Hud: 56). One of the upright people said, ‘O Allah, I seek your forgiveness for any deed which I intended to do for your sake, but other motivations interfered’. Nothing should detract you from complete dependence on Allah because you will eventually return to Him. Prophet Shu`aib (Jethro) said, ‘and always turn to Him’ (Hud: 88).

Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَيَٰقَوۡمِ لَا يَجۡرِمَنَّكُمۡ شِقَاقِيٓ أَن يُصِيبَكُم مِّثۡلُ مَآ أَصَابَ قَوۡمَ نُوحٍ
أَوۡ قَوۡمَ هُودٍ أَوۡ قَوۡمَ صَٰلِحٖۚ وَمَا قَوۡمُ لُوطٖ مِّنكُم بِبَعِيدٖ ﴿٨٩﴾

My people, do not let your opposition to me bring upon you a similar fate to the peoples of Noah or Hud or Saleh; the people of Lot are not far away from you [89] (The Quran, Hud: 89)

Prophet Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him told them not to let their antagonism towards him to commit sins that cause Allah Glorified is He to punish them just as He punished the peoples that preceded them and who opposed their prophets. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He inflicted torment upon them like floods, earthquakes, and hurricanes. He told them to beware of acting like these people. Prophet Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him advised them out of his keenness for their interest although he knew that they harboured hostility towards him because he called them to cease worshipping the idols which their forefathers had worshipped. He also forbade them from giving short measure and weight and depriving people of their dues. Allah tormented the predecessors who opposed Allah's shar` (Islamic Law). Prophet Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him reminded them of the torment inflicted upon the people who were geographically close to them: the people of Prophet Lut (Lot) peace be upon him. Then Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says:

وَٱسۡتَغۡفِرُواْ رَبَّكُمۡ ثُمَّ تُوبُوٓاْ إِلَيۡهِۚ إِنَّ رَبِّي رَحِيمٞ وَدُودٞ ﴿٩٠﴾

Ask forgiveness from your Lord, and turn to Him in repentance: my Lord is merciful and most loving [90] (The Quran, Hud: 90)

This demonstrates that Allah Glorified is He never closes the door of repentance even the one who is persistent on committing sins. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Verily, Allah is more pleased with the repentance of His slave than a person who has his camel in a waterless desert carrying his provision of food and drink and it is lost.'(1)

---

(1) Related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (6308-6309) and by Muslim in his Sahih (2744) on the authority of 'Abdullah ibn Mas'ud, and the wording is stated by Al-Bukhari.

Imagine the feeling of the person who lost his camel, which carries all his food and drink, then he comes across his camel. Such a person must indeed be very happy to have found his camel.

Allah Glorified is He relates that which Prophet Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him told his people, ‘Ask forgiveness from your Lord, and turn to Him in repentance…’ (Hud: 90). As long as a person asks forgiveness from his Lord for his past sins and turns to Him in repentance, with the intention of abstaining from these sins, Allah will never turn away the one who seeks His Graces, ‘…my Lord is Merciful and Most Loving.’ (Hud: 90) His Forgiveness and Mercy repel torment. Allah Glorified is He represents the broadest possible meaning of forgiveness, mercy and love. Allah is Most Loving, an attribute which implies compassion for the person loved.

For example - and to Allah belongs the utmost example of perfection - if a mother has two sons, the first is wealthy and provides her with anything she wants and the second is weak and poor. We find that the mother’s heart always leans towards the poor son, and she implores the stronger and wealthier son to feel compassion for him. We find that when an Arab mother in the past was asked, ‘Which of your sons is dearest to you’? She would respond, ‘The youngest until he reaches maturity, the absent until he returns and the sick until he recovers his health’. Therefore, love requires an outpouring of compassion insomuch as needed. Allah Glorified is He says in a Qudsi Hadith, ‘O son of Adam, have no fear of any powerful person, so long as my Power endures, and my Power never runs out. O son of Adam, have no fear of scarcity of provision, so long as my coffers are full and never run out. O son of Adam, I have created you for worship, so do not dally, and I have guaranteed your sustenance so do not tire after it. Therefore, by My Majesty and Glory, if you content yourself with that which I have allotted for you, your heart and your body will be at rest, you will deserve my praise. If you do not content yourself with that which I have allotted for you, By My Majesty and Glory I will let this worldly life rule over you, you shall strive for your living just as the beasts strive for their living, and still you shall only be able to gain what I have already allotted for you. O son of Adam, I have created the heavens and the earth without being exhausted; would it then lie outside my capacity to bring a morsel of bread your way? O son of Adam, do not ask about tomorrow's sustenance, just as I do not ask you for tomorrow's work. O son of Adam, I have much love for you; therefore, it is my right to expect that you love me in return.' This Hadith shows how deep Allah's love for His creation is which the disbelievers' hearts cannot grasp. Allah Glorified and Exalted is He states the response of the people of Midyan to Prophet Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him:

قَالُواْ يَٰشُعَيۡبُ مَا نَفۡقَهُ كَثِيرٗا مِّمَّا تَقُولُ وَإِنَّا لَنَرَىٰكَ فِينَا
ضَعِيفٗاۖ وَلَوۡلَا رَهۡطُكَ لَرَجَمۡنَٰكَۖ وَمَآ أَنتَ عَلَيۡنَا بِعَزِيزٖ ﴿٩١﴾

They said, 'Shu`aib, we do not understand much of what you say, and we find you very weak in our midst. But for your family, we would have stoned you, for you have no great status among us' [91] (The Quran, Hud: 91)

This saying is similar to what the disbelievers of Quraysh said to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as they said, 'Our hearts are within coverings from that, to which you invite us, and in our ears is deafness, and between us and you is a partition...' (Fussilat: 5). Faith needs a heart that is not cluttered with falsehood so it can warmly embrace faith. However, when a heart is filled with falsehood, it becomes unable to receive faith; if the minds work to rid the heart of this falsehood, it will allow that which it accepts as the Truth to enter the heart. Therefore, Allah seals up the hearts that are full of disbelief, so that He causes disbelief to remain firmly established in the hearts and prevents faith from entering them.

The people of Midyan did not only declare their disbelief, but they also threatened Prophet Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him saying, '…and we find you very weak in our midst. But for your family, we would have stoned you, for you have no great status among us.' (Hud: 91) Such a threat carries an open challenge as they thought that they were capable of harming him because they detested him. However, they declared that they would kill him but for the rest of his family that still worshipped idols and would be angry if any harm befell him. They forgot that He Who sent forth Prophet Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him is fully capable of protecting him. Accordingly, they carried out Allah's Will to subject disbelief to serve faith. Another example on this point is the Prophet Muhammad's peace and blessings be upon him uncle Abu Taleb who remained adherent to paganism, a matter which apparently served to protect Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him from Quraysh.

The True Lord Glorified is He then relates Shu`aib's (Jethro) peace be upon him response to his people:

ظِهۡرِيًّاۖ إِنَّ رَبِّي بِمَا تَعۡمَلُونَ مُحِيطٞ ﴿٩٢﴾

He said, 'My people, is my family stronger in your estimation than God? And have you put Him behind you? My Lord surrounds everything you do [92] (The Quran, Hud: 92)

Here Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him condemns them for equating of the Glory of Allah with the clout of his own family. How could they put those two side by side and conclude that the retribution of Shu`aib's (Jethro) family can be more terrifying than the wrath of Allah?! Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him is not at all flattered by the esteem they have for his family, especially in the face of his own reverence for His Lord. Shu`aib (Jethro) had already announced his absolute reliance on Allah, and he knows full well that Glory and Might belong first and foremost to Allah.

Not only did they hold Shu`aib's (Jethro's) family in higher esteem than Allah, but they also cast the idea of faith (in Allah) behind their backs because Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him tells them. '…And have you put Him behind you?' (Hud: 92) He meant they did not put Allah Glorified is He in the forefront (of their lives) and they did not recognize His Greatness nor His ability to protect His prophets since they ascribed to some of His creatures a greatness that exceeds His own. Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him reminds them, 'My Lord surrounds everything you do.' (Hud: 92), He meant that everything you say or do is recorded with Allah and can be used against you, for with the True Lord Glorified is He there is nothing that goes unregistered. Previously, we have come to learn how our speech is like a vehicle for our deeds (whether good or bad); the deed of the tongue is speaking; just as much as the actions of the rest of the organs are also 'deeds'.

The True Lord Glorified is He has given speaking a special status because it is the primary means of spreading His Word. Then Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him is quoted as saying:

وَيَٰقَوۡمِ ٱعۡمَلُواْ عَلَىٰ مَكَانَتِكُمۡ إِنِّي عَٰمِلٞۖ سَوۡفَ تَعۡلَمُونَ مَن يَأۡتِيهِ
عَذَابٞ يُخۡزِيهِ وَمَنۡ هُوَ كَٰذِبٞۖ وَٱرۡتَقِبُوٓاْ إِنِّي مَعَكُمۡ رَقِيبٞ ٩٣

My people, do whatever is within your power, and I will do likewise. Soon you will know who will receive a disgraceful punishment and who is a liar. Watch out, and so will I [93]
(The Quran, Hud: 93)

This means that Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him is standing on an opposite platform (than they are); Allah is dearer to him than his family. By cherishing his Lord in such a manner, he has taken refuge with the strongest of 'pillars'. So, it is from the standpoint of such an ardent faith that he announces to them, 'Do whatever is within your power—and you are no more capable than any other human being. I, for my part, will do all that is in my capacity; however, I am not alone; Allah Glorified and Exalted is He is with me and your power will be no match with Allah's Absolute Power. No matter what you do in your attempt to divert me from my reforming mission, I will not be let down by He who has sent me forth. You have put yourselves in the same position adopted by previous nations which have tried to stand in the face of Divine reformation; people whom Allah Glorified is He has defeated with earthquakes, hurricanes or other obliterating forces from Him'. So, he said to them: Do all that is in your power, and do not imagine for once that I will beg you to desist; I have taken my stand on clear evidence from my Lord, and I want the best for you, and I wish that you would check yourselves.

By no means did Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him say the above out of weakness; it was rather a response to their threat, '…and we find you very weak in our midst. But for your family, we would have stoned you…' (Hud: 91). Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him makes it known that he holds significant status and clout in the eyes of Allah Glorified and Exalted is He who has sent him. He says, ‘My people do whatever is within your power, and I will do likewise…’ (Hud: 93).

Thus, Shu`aib (Jethro) makes it clear to them that he will not sit idle, that he shall do all that is in his capacity and, ‘…Soon you will know who will receive a disgraceful punishment and who is a liar. Watch out, and so will I.’ (Hud: 93) He meant that time will tell who of us is rightly guided and who of us is misguided and who of us shall be victorious, and who of us shall be humbled in defeat. This meant that the loser will come to hold himself in contempt, and will feel disgraced and humiliated in front of all of Allah’s creation, Time will tell who of us is a liar and who of us is on the side of the truth.

Consequently, the verse that follows reads:

وَلَمَّا جَآءَ أَمۡرُنَا نَجَّيۡنَا شُعَيۡبٗا وَٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ مَعَهُۥ بِرَحۡمَةٖ مِّنَّا
وَأَخَذَتِ ٱلَّذِينَ ظَلَمُواْ ٱلصَّيۡحَةُ فَأَصۡبَحُواْ فِي دِيَٰرِهِمۡ جَٰثِمِينَ ٩٤

When what We had ordained came about, in Our mercy We saved Shu`aib and his fellow believers, but a mighty blast struck the wrongdoers. By morning they lay dead in their homes [94] (The Quran, Hud: 94)

We notice that in the chapter of Hud, the True Lord Glorified is He uses two different kinds of expressions to describe to the passing of His Judgment and the suffering that ensues. First, He uses wa-lamma and then He uses fa-lamma. The first comes in ‘so, when Our command was fulfilled…’ (Hud: 66). The second which starts with the letter (f) is used to state a punishment which arrives instantaneously without any time lapse. Like when the True Lord Glorified is He tells us He causes man to die then get buried (with no time lapse) (‘Abasa: 21).

As for thumma, its role is to state an event which will occur after the elapse of a certain period of time; such as when The True Lord Glorified is He tells us that, with His will, He will raise man again from the dead (‘Abasa: 22).

The word falamma occurs in the story of Lut (Lot) peace be upon him because the True Lord Glorified is He had specified the exact time at which the suffering would be brought down from Him. Allah Glorified is He said to him that their appointed time is going to be the morning (Hud: 81). In this case, falamma had to precede the statement of their punishment; so Allah Glorified is He tells us that when the time He ordained came about, He turned their town upside down and bombarded them with raining stones made of baked clay, layer upon layer (Hud: 82).

As for the verse that we are currently studying, the True Lord Glorified is He says, ‘When what We had ordained came about, in Our Mercy We saved Shu`aib (Jethro) and his fellow believers...’ (Hud: 94). Here, He makes no mention of a specific date for the suffering. The True Lord Glorified is He says, ‘When what We had ordained came about…’ (Hud: 94). Every order requires that there be an issuer, a description, and a receiver upon whom the order will be acted. The giver of the order is Allah, and He is capable of executing all that He orders, and no one ordered by Allah is even capable of refusing the order; the whole universe is subject to the orders of its Creator.

Therefore, when the True Lord Glorified is He informs us that suffering had befallen them, this means that the order had been given and the suffering did not escape them. The possibility of refusing an order can only occur if the receiver of the order is disobedient, but ‘the suffering’ dares not disobey the Divine Command. It is forced to obey; it has no choice in the matter.

In this instance the speaker is Allah Glorified is He – the issuer of both the cosmic order and the legislative order. So, when the True Lord Glorified is He issues one of His Judgments, and records it in the Quran, you can be certain that it must come to pass. All laws related to the running of the universe fall within the True Lord’s domain, and these are not capable of disobeying His Will; as for His legislative commandments, the one who follows them will live in peace, and the one who disobeys them will surely suffer; either in this life or the afterlife.

The True Lord Glorified is He gives us an example of this in the story of Musa’s (Moses’) mother. He tells us that He inspired her to suckle him and that if she feared for him, then she must cast him into the river (al-Qasas: 7).

Our common sense might wonder, ‘How can one tell a mother to cast her baby in the river if she feared for him? How can you save your son from a potential threat by sending him off to a certain death'? Though such behaviour goes against human nature, the mother of Musa (Moses) hastened to carry out Allah's order; for when Allah issues such orders—through inspiration—to those who are near and dear to Him, the human mind voices no objections. Just as the True Lord Glorified is He ordered her to cast her newborn into the waters, He also inspired her to place him in a cradle and throw it into the river. (Ta Ha: 38-39) The True Lord Glorified is He also ordered the water to bring the cradle carrying Musa (Moses) to the shore. Therefore, Musa's (Moses') mother knew with certainty that Allah's orders are never disobeyed, and this is what made her hasten to carry out what Allah had ordered her to do. The True Lord Glorified is He always wants to nurture and grow the faith of His servants. Imagine, then, if Allah passes some order, and then the universe did not carry out that order properly, what would people think?

Thus, since the Lord has issued an order, this order must necessarily come to pass. Likewise, when the True Lord Glorified is He says that His soldiers are indeed the ones who will be victorious, (as-Saffat: 173) then victory must necessarily go to the soldiers of Allah. But when they are defeated, then it must be that the conditions of being the 'soldier of Allah' are no longer fulfilled, and that one of the elements (such as obedience) has dropped from the equation.

For instance, remember those who disobeyed the Prophet Muhammad's peace and blessings be upon him orders to maintain their position on the mountain during the Battle of Uhud? They had disobeyed the Prophet's order; so what would have been the case had they won that battle despite this disobedience? Consequently, the Muslims suffered defeat on that day because of those individuals in whom the quality of being 'soldiers of Allah' had been disrupted.

Both causes must coincide: the Quranic and the Cosmic because the author of the Quran is (at the same time) the Creator of the universe. So, when the people of Midyan hereby announced their disbelief, suffering had to befall them. The True Lord Glorified is He calls this suffering that befalls them as-sayha (literally, the shout or blast). Allah Glorified is He says, '…but a mighty blast struck the wrongdoers. By morning they lay dead in their homes.' (Hud: 94)

Elsewhere the True Lord Glorified is He calls the suffering that befell them ar-rajfa (the earthquake) which overtook them till they lay lifeless in their very homes and right on the ground (al-A'raf: 91). In the story of the tribe of `Ad, Allah inflicted them with a raging storm (al-Haqqa: 6). As for Qarun (Korah), Allah describes the torment He sent upon him as alkhasf (earth sinking). It is a testament to Allah's Greatness that the suffering befell the disbelievers only, and not those who attained to faith; as the True Lord Glorified is He says, '…in Our Mercy We saved Shu`aib (Jethro) and his fellow believers…' (Hud: 94). None is so capable except Allah, the fully Capable, and the One Who runs all the affairs as He wills. The word najayna comes from najah meaning the act of rescuing, or the condition of being rescued. But it is also related to the word najwa which means an elevated ground. The Arabs had come to experience, very early, how destructive the force of water can be since they used to live in Yemen and then they got scattered by the floods. The True Lord Glorified is He relates the story of the people of Sheba who had two vast expanses of gardens, to the right and the left, for which they thanked their Sustainer for His provisions. Then they turned away from Allah so He sent upon them a flood that destroyed their dams and turned their gardens into a couple of lands yielding bitter fruits, tamarisks and a few Lote trees (Saba': 15-16).

This is how the Arabs started spreading out from Yemen, and became scattered around the Arabian Peninsula. Still, they were fearful of water, even though it is the secret of life. They preferred to exert extra effort in finding drinking water—for themselves and their animals—rather than living close to a ready supply of water. From this primordial fear of water, originated the word naja meaning high ground. This word has been used in every situation wherein a man escapes any impending danger. Thus, one can say 'naja min an-nar' (escaped fire) or 'naja min al-`adew' (escaped the enemy) and 'naja min al-hayawan al-muftaris' (escaped the predator); all derived from the word najwa—meaning, a high place. The word naja implies that the person is able to save himself from the danger depending on himself. But when a man is unable to depend solely on himself in escaping danger, he will surely need someone to save him. In each case the word anjah is used where a special effort is required to achieve deliverance.

In this verse, the doer is Allah and so He says najayna. The True Lord Glorified is He uses in this particular case the 'We' of divinity, like when He tells us, 'We sent it (the Quran) down on the Night of Glory.' (al-Qadr: 1)

The ‘We’ of divinity ‘inna’ is used anywhere an action performed by the True Lord Glorified is He is involved. When the matter involves any of the attributes of His Divine Entity, the True Lord Glorified is He uses the first-person pronoun ana (I); for example, ‘I am Allah…’ (Ta Ha: 14) The True Lord Glorified is He saved Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him and his faithful followers because Shu`aib (Jethro) had said to his people, ‘My people, do whatever is within your power, and I will do likewise…’ (Hud: 93).

Shu`aib’s (Jethro) endeavours where backed with a sincere intention and characterized by complete confidence in Allah. That is why Allah saved him and those who shared his faith; for all that Allah asks of His servants is that they turn toward Him with sincere intentions, and when his servants do so the True Lord Glorified is He relieves their anxiety and grants them the confidence to carry out any task. For the servant of Allah, the mere act of turning to Allah with full faith and sincerity opens horizons of success and eminence. The key is indeed in the servant’s hand; for the True Lord Glorified is He has said in a Qudsi Hadith, ‘Whosoever mentions Me (by name) to himself I will mention his name in a loftier assembly.’(1) Indeed, it is the True Lord Glorified is He who says, ‘He who draws near to Me an arm’s length, I draw near to him a fathom’s length.’ Thus, the True Lord Glorified is He leaves the question of drawing closer—to Him—to the servant. When the servant draws near to Allah, Allah Glorified is He draws near to the servant more. Then the True Lord Glorified is He says in the Qudsi Hadith, ‘If he comes to Me walking, I go to him running’(2) because walking can tire the servant, but nothing ever tires the True Lord Glorified is He; for He is transcendent of such things. Hence, the True Lord Glorified is He wishes that we purify our intentions when seeking His Company so that He may envelop us with the attributes of His Splendour and Beauty.

(1) The complete Hadith is as follows, ‘I am as My servant thinks I am. I am with him when he makes mention of Me. If he makes mention of Me to himself, I make mention of him to Myself; and if he makes mention of Me in an assembly, I make mention of him in an assembly better than it. If he draws near to Me an arm’s length, I draw near to him a fathom’s length. If he comes to Me walking, I come to him running.’ The Hadith is narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayra.

(2) Related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (7405) and by Ahmad in his Musnad (2/315); narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him

Look, for instance, how Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, while he was in the cave with Abu Bakr As-Siddiq Allah be pleased with him saying to his companion not to grieve because Allah is with them (at-Tawba: 40). This means that the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him was telling his companion not to despair, for they are in the company of Allah Glorified and Exalted is He. Abu Bakr As-Siddiq Allah be pleased with him must have said something that bespoke of his sorrow; and his sorrow did not spring from nothing, it was a very natural sorrow based on the laws of nature. Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him said, 'If any of them had just looked down at his feet, he would have seen us!' But the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him was not worried about the laws of nature, when he said, 'What do you think of two (persons), the third of whom is Allah? (1)', he was referring to the (infinite) ability of the Creator. Thus, by being in the company of Allah, they became endowed with some of His Majesty and His Beauty; no human vision can encompass Him, but He encompasses all human vision.

Thus, the True Lord Glorified is He rescued Shu`aib (Jethro) and those who followed him out of His Mercy; the Mercy is in being unharmed. A man could get sick, take a medication, and then recover back to normal, or Allah can keep the illness away from him altogether. So, remember that the Quran came with a twofold topic: cure and mercy. If you get afflicted, and you refer it back to Allah's method, the True Lord Glorified is He will remove it. As for mercy, it is about not being afflicted in the first place.

Now we come to the unjust people who were overtaken by the mighty 'blast'; or as related in another verse were struck by the mighty blast (Hud: 67). Allah says, '…but a mighty blast struck the wrongdoers…' (Hud: 94). The whole language of the Quran came very close to the dialect of the tribe of Quraysh, and this was not intended to distinguish the tribe of Quraysh in any way; it was only because their dialect was purer than that of the rest of the Arab tribes. Their dialect incorporated the supreme articulacy of all the other neighbouring tongues. But this does not mean that we should belittle the other Arab tribes.

(1) Unanimously agreed upon authentic Hadith... Related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (4663) and by Muslim in his Sahih (2381); the Hadith is narrated on the authority of Abu Bakr As-Siddiq Allah be pleased with him.

That is why the language of the Quran pays tribute to some of the dialects of the other tribes so as not to establish a leadership for Quraysh over Islam just because of the leadership it enjoyed over the Arabs in the pre-Islamic era. That is why we find the Quran exhibiting patterns from the different dialects of the Arabs at that time.

The True Lord Glorified is He concludes the verse by saying, '…By morning they lay dead in their homes.' (Hud: 94) We notice that for every punishment, the True Lord Glorified is He sets a specific time, like setting the morning for the torment in the verses, (Hud: 81), or (as-Saffat: 177). The morning is the time when the punishment befalls those who are still light headed with sleep. Like the police forces who are dubbed 'dawn visitors' because they assault the houses at the early hours of the day.

The True Lord Glorified is He says, 'By morning they lay dead in their homes.' (Hud: 94) The word diarihim is pluralized to be broad enough to denote places other than the homes. The True Lord Glorified is He uses this word—as opposed to darihim —to explain that some of them might not necessarily have been in their homes at that time, that they might have been visiting someone else or on a business trip.

For example, a man called Abu Raghal was in Mecca at the time, but the stones which slew him by Allah's will were hurled upon him not in Mecca but in Al-Biqa`. It was Allah's will that these stones would not be hurled in the sanctified sanctuary. As if the stones picked him, just as the mighty cry had picked the disbelievers from among the people of Midyan. We notice that in the last word of the verse—jathimin—when the letters j and th are combined—and notwithstanding what letters come after them—they convey the essence of 'destruction' and 'death'; with this very unusual musical or lyrical tone. The word jathimin means that they lied motionless on the floor, on their stomachs. Elsewhere, The True Lord Glorified is He also tells us that on Judgment Day we will see every nation kneeling on its knees (al-Jathiya: 28). A dead body is also called al-juththa.

Look at the greatness of the True Lord Glorified is He causing the people to utter the word juththa to describe any dead person whether the corpse is for a great man or a simple person. Then the corpse is then placed in the grave.

If you want to calm a grieving or agonized person who has just lost a loved one, ask him, ‘Will you feel better if you kept his corpse with you for a week’? He will answer, ‘No’. So, the instant Allah Glorified is He extracts the ‘secret’ which makes us human—this secret being the soul—the body becomes a mere corpse then decays and then turns to ash.

Describing those—from among the people of Midyan—who were overtaken by the mighty cry, The True Lord Glorified is He says:

كَأَن لَّمْ يَغْنَوْا۟ فِيهَآ ۗ أَلَا بُعْدًا لِّمَدْيَنَ كَمَا بَعِدَتْ ثَمُودُ (٩٥)

as if they had never lived and flourished there. Yes, away with the people of Midyan, just like the Thamud! [95] (The Quran, Hud: 95)

This means that anyone who passes by the people of Midyan will feel as though they never existed, Elsewhere, the True Lord Glorified is He tells us how His punishment drops at the most unexpected time; when the earth has assumed its full beauty and adornment and when those who lived upon it believed they have gained mastery over it (Yunus: 24). Human civilization has reached a level where a man can pour himself a cup of coffee by the press of a button, but if Allah Glorified is He so wills, He can wipe out all that in the blink of an eye.

A human being may enjoy such a pleasant life by being served (by others or by machines); but it is nothing like paradise where a man’s desires are instantly gratified the minute a thought crosses his mind. Here the True Lord Glorified is He says, ‘As if they had never lived and flourished there…’ (Hud: 95). Now from the word ghina there are several derivatives; there is al-ghina` which is the singing performed by singers. There is also Al-ghana` which is something that makes you self-sufficient for example, having enough money not to need what other people have.

As for the word `l-ghina` (singing), we use this word because the ear hears a lot, and the eye reads a lot but a human being only repeats the speech which pleases him. The Same is with the singer who sings in a way which pleases him. So, al-ghina` is the sweet melody which leaves you without a need for any other.

Al-ghana` also means to reside in a place such that you have no need for going elsewhere; so you settle down in that place that suffices you.

Therefore, when the True Lord Glorified is He says, ‘As if they had never lived and flourished there…’ (Hud: 95), it means as if they had never even resided there in the first place; as if it did not leave them needless for going elsewhere.

The True Lord Glorified is He tells us in another verse that some of the ruins would stay standing and some others would be mowed down (Hud: 100) meaning that the ruins had survived in the form of a few rocks, like the old pharaonic temples for instance. When you visit these temples, you never find them intact, rather, you find that while some pillars have remained upright, others have fallen over and lie on the ground, and you find ruined doors. Had they been all mowed down, they would have completely disappeared, but most of the pharaonic temples have survived in some form or another, while others have vanished without a trace. Here the Quranic content reaffirms the fact that there existed great civilizations in the past; for if these had all vanished, we would not have known that such civilizations existed long before our time.

Then, the True Lord Glorified is He says, ‘…Yes, away with the people of Midyan, just like the people of Thamud!’ (Hud: 95) The word `ala —as we have previously explained—is a linguistic device that serves as a prelude to a statement, or grasps the listener’s attention, to be sure that he is not distracted and prepared to hear what will follow. The word bu`daa is not a request for the people of Midyan to go far away, for they had been, in effect, destroyed. The root of the word bu`daa consists of the letters b`ud and is used in two ways: the first implies parting—parting that assumes reunion at some point in the future. But, when it is certain that such a reunion will never happen, it will be followed, as in the following example by, ‘…just like the people of Thamud!’ (Hud: 95) In this case, it implies that there will be no further reunion—at least not until the True Lord Glorified is He brings all people together on the day of Resurrection.

The poet says:

As they bury me they say do not go far,
but is there a place farther than where I am?

This is the 'distant' dimension where a human being goes to and never comes back. Why does the True Lord Glorified is He single out the tribe of Thamud, even though He says, 'ala bu`dan' to many other peoples? Because the tribe of Thamud were also destroyed by the blast, so the means by which they were both punished coincides. Thus, the story of Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him and his people(1) comes to an end, and we notice that it overlaps with the times of other prophets such as Musa (Moses) peace be upon him; just as Lut's (Lot's) time overlapped with Ibrahim's (Abraham's) peace be upon them.

Thus, we learn that some prophets were contemporaries of each other, meaning that each was sent to a specific environment and a specific place. Since these messengers are all servants of Allah, every one of them was given a methodology that befits the specific moral defects prevalent in the societies to which they were sent . Ibrahim (Abraham) was Lut's (Lot) uncle, and Musa (Moses) was Shu`aib's (Jethro) son-in-law peace be upon them all. Musa (Moses) was sent to the people of Midyan even before Allah had sent him to Pharaoh's people.

We know that, in the old days, places used to be isolated from one another, and communication between them was difficult. Every community resided in its specific spot not knowing anything about the other communities. Hence, the moral and social defects were different from one community to the other.

Yet, when the True Lord Glorified is He sent forth Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as the seal of prophets, the Lord knew beforehand that the advent of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him heralded the dawn of a new age of interconnectedness, where the various defects would be merged. Nowadays, whatever happens in one corner of the world reaches us via satellites in a few seconds; that is why the need for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was of the essence.

As for the multitude of prophets and their various stories in the Quran, there is no redundancy as the literalists would have it; the wisdom behind the mention of the stories of previous prophets in the Quran is that the True Lord Glorified is He wished to bolster Prophet Muhammad's peace and blessings be upon him resolve.

(1) The people of Midyan.

These verses were revealed from Allah to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him so as to correspond to specific instances where he found himself in need of reassurance. The True Lord Glorified is He reminds Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to take note of his fellow prophets to remember what happened in their struggle with their people, and ultimately, the victory that Allah helped them achieve.

But when the True Lord Glorified is He wanted to relate an intricate and wholesome story he revealed the chapter of Yusuf. So, there is no redundancy in the Quran. Every scene was revealed to address a specific situation which Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was going through. We notice that the story of Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him and his people could not but end with a reference to the story of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him who was incidentally Shu`aib (Jethro) son-in-law.

We notice that the True Lord Glorified is He mentions two scenes from the story of Musa (Moses). The first scene is sending him with evident signs to Pharaoh. The second scene is the ultimate meeting of Pharaoh with, not Musa (Moses), but with the True Lord on Judgment Day. Allah Glorified is He tells us that he will be at the forefront of his people on Judgment Day leading them down towards Hellfire; for they were all pursued by Allah's rejection in this life and hence will receive the same treatment on Judgment Day. (Hud: 98-99)

One of the roles of Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him was to keep Musa's (Moses') heart steadfast and help cure his anxiety. Musa (Moses) had told him that he was afraid from being killed by the people of Pharaoh since he had killed one of them. So, Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him told him (as mentioned in the chapter of al-Qasas not to worry and that he was now safe from these evildoing lowlifes. (al-Qasas: 25) So, he reassured him and prepared him to a life in which he would live in safety for eight, or even ten years. Allah relates to us how he offered one of his daughters to Musa (Moses) for marriage and how he asked him to remain for eight years in his service, or ten if he wanted to as an act of grace from him. He also told him that he will find him righteous in all his dealings. So, Musa (Moses) accepted the kind offer and requested from Shu`aib (Jethro) that whichever of the two terms he fulfils let there be no injustice against him, as Allah is there witness (al-Qasas: 27-28).

That was how, Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him played a role in the story of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him. Here and there the True Lord Glorified is He teaches us that the pure, innate nature (of human beings) can deduce laws that often coincide with the laws of Allah. Allah does not prevent human minds from reaching the truth because we reach the truth after strenuous experience. See, for example, how the True Lord Glorified is He ordered the rules of divorce in Islam, and how other non-Muslim countries have now begun to appropriate these laws for their own societies after having suffered strenuously from the lack of it!

Similarly, the True Lord Glorified is He made drinking alcohol forbidden, then, centuries later, science came forth and confirmed its bad effect on health. Should we have delayed the application of Allah's law for all that time that it took the human mind to reach this conclusion? No, because the Quran is the revealed law of Allah which when applied, will save us the troubles of strenuous and life-wasting experiences because He Who has revealed the Quran has also created us and is our trustworthy guardian. Time has proved the wisdom of the laws of Allah that even those who do not believe in the Quran have come to adopt and apply some of its laws; out of experience.

The story of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him is a clear example of the True Lord's Will, for here was the disbelieving Pharaoh who adopts baby Musa (Moses)—after having found him on the riverbank—in the hopes that he will grow up to become a dear son to him. This is despite the fact the Pharaoh was killing all the baby boys born to that class of society. Then Musa's (Moses') sister recognizes her brother, and the True Lord Glorified is He reunited Musa (Moses) peace be upon him with his mother.

A poet describes this scene saying:

> If your child is not in the care of Allah,
> Then your yearning has been betrayed and your hopes disappointed,
> For the Musa (1) who was raised by Gabriel turned a disbeliever,
> And the Musa who was raised by Pharaoh turned a Messenger

---

(1) Musa the Samaritan who saw the archangel Gabriel peace be upon him disobeyed the commandments of his Lord, and was exiled and destined to great suffering; contrary to Musa the Messenger peace be upon him.

The story of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him was briefed, both in the beginning and in the end, because the True Lord Glorified is He wants to show us that Shu`aib (Jethro) had a role to play alongside one of the prophets of 'great determination'— Musa (Moses) peace be upon him.

Before his revelation, Musa's (Moses) destination was the wells of Midyan, and it is this episode that offers us a cure to the problems of both sexes –men and women –it is based on gender issues that Islamic societies are most criticized because some people want the woman to do her best in exposing herself to seduce men at an age where their interest in women is at the peak.

But the Quran cures this problem for us during this brief episode. The True Lord Glorified is He tells us how Musa (Moses) peace be upon him arrived to Midyan and he first saw a large group of men watering their flocks and beside them were two women keeping their flocks back, so he asked them what was the matter with them. (al-Qasas: 23) They were keeping their cattle from the water; and this was the scene which captivated Musa (Moses) peace be upon him. So, it was only natural for him to ask: did you two not come here to water your cattle?! They told him that they did come to water their flock but that they won't be able to do it until the men leave, and that they are weak and their father is a very old man (al-Qasas: 23). Thus, we learn that the reason why the girls left their house and gone out into the world was because the father was an old man. We also learn that the reason that caused them to leave their house does not make engage in pushing and shoving around the waterhole. They only did what was necessary without excess, so they had to wait until all the other cattle had been watered. In fact, they kept a respectable distance, and that is why Musa (Moses) peace be upon him stepped up and carried out his role as a man, and watered their flock for them (al-Qasas: 24).

Such is the prerogative of the community of faith at large. It is not simply the prerogative of a specific tribe, or the prerogative of an acquaintance or the prerogative of a family member. Rather, it is the prerogative of the community of faith at large. When someone sees that a woman has left her house and gone out into the world, he knows that necessity compelled her to do so, and so a Muslim man must do what he can to help her go about her business.

I remember when I went to Mecca in 1950; my friend pulled over the car in front of a house and stepped out of the car right in front of the house's gate. There was a wooden board in front of it that had on it some dough loaves which had not been baked. So, he took them to the bakery, and then returned with them to that same door after they had been baked. He turned to me and said: this is common tradition among the people of Mecca. If a person finds unbaked loaves of dough (in front of a door), he should take them to be baked because this means that the man of the house is not present. This wisdom is taken from the lesson of Musa who watered the flock for the girls whose father (man of the house) was too old (al-Qasas: 24).

`Umar ibn Al-Khattab Allah be pleased with him used to order his soldiers to knock on people's doors and ask what they needed. The third and most important matter is that the woman who leaves her house and goes out (into the world) to perform some task must not get used to this type of life. Rather, she must only perform what is necessary, and if she finds an opportunity to fulfil her needs, she must quickly seize it (without delay). This was why the young maiden told her father Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him to hire Musa (Moses since the best one to hire is always the strong and trustworthy (al-Qasas: 26).

Then, Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him concludes this episode in a wise and resolute manner. He offered one of his daughters to Musa (Moses) for marriage and asked him to remain for eight years in his service, or ten if he wanted to, as an act of grace from him (al-Qasas: 27). This means that Shu'aib (Jethro) was not just marrying off his daughters without a dowry. No, there had to be a dowry for her. This offer also meant that marrying her sister would be unlawful to Musa (1).

This story lays out the principles which address most of the criticisms levelled at Islam by its enemies. We now hear modernizers from the West asking that the woman remain at home to care for her family and children; not because a woman is deficient in any way but because she achieves her utmost potential when she is performing her most noble role—raising her children.

(1) Marrying two sisters is temporarily unlawful and the unlawfulness ceases once its causes cease to exist (if the wife is divorced and after she completes her waiting term, or if the wife dies). The evidence to this is mentioned in (an-Nisa': 23).

We know that human beings undergo the longest period of childhood compared to other creatures, and children who grow up under the care of a dedicated mother turn out to be better than those who are not. This is what we learn from the story of Shu`aib (Jethro), and Musa (Moses) peace be upon them.

Next, the True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَلَقَدْ أَرْسَلْنَا مُوسَىٰ بِـَٔايَـٰتِنَا وَسُلْطَـٰنٍ مُّبِينٍ ﴿٩٦﴾

We also sent Moses, with Our signs and clear authority [96] (The Quran, Hud: 96)

The signs that are mentioned in the Quran fall into one of three categories. First, the universal signs which everyone can witness like the turning of day and night, the sun and the moon, the stars and the submissiveness of the earth, which rises and flourishes when water pours down upon it. All these universal signs captivate the minds and lead to the realization that behind this intricately engineered universe there is a Fully-Capable Creator. There are other signs whose purpose is to attest to the sincerity of any prophet conveying Allah’s message to his people—these are the miracles, such as Thamud’s clairvoyant she-camel, and ‘Isa’s (Jesus’s) ability to heal the blind and the lepers, by Allah’s will.

Then there are signs which articulate the commandments of the religious methodology—namely, the directive ‘do’ and ‘do not’. Here the True Lord Glorified is He has says, ‘We also sent Musa, with Our signs and clear authority.’ (Hud: 96) So, there are signs that prove his sincerity, supported with a clearly manifest power. Either this power can be a forceful, compelling one or it can be a power that wins over the minds through persuasive argument. This mighty power might be able to defeat most people outwardly, but it has no power over the hearts, and Allah Glorified is He is interested in the core, not the outward crust. That is why Allah Glorified is He tells Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him not to be tormented with sadness to the point of almost dying out of grief because of those who refuse to believe. Had Allah willed it, He would have sent down upon them a miracle from the skies that would compel their necks to bow down before it in humility (ash-Shu'ara': 2-4).

Hence, the True Lord Glorified is He requests sincere and reverent hearts; not an outwardly compliant crust. He requests the hearts to worship Allah by their own free will. So, the most important dominion is the dominion of persuasive argument, since it persuades a human being to act… and Musa (Moses) peace be upon him did not possess the dominion of power, he possessed the dominion of persuasive argument. The True Lord Glorified is He relays to us how he went to Pharaoh and told him that he is an apostle from the Sustainer of all the worlds, and that he cannot say anything about Allah except the truth. He also added that he came to him with clear signs and requested him to let the Israelites leave with him (al-A'raf: 104-105). But the Pharaoh asked him to show any of those signs to prove his truthfulness and to this, Musa (Moses) threw down his staff and it turned into a plainly visible serpent. He also drew his hand from his pocket and it appeared so white and flawless to the viewers (al-A'raf: 106-108).

The whiteness of Musa's (Moses) hand was subjective but it was also unforeseen. It was not due to some skin disease like vitiligo because Allah points out that Musa's hand came out 'white' and 'flawless' (Ta Ha: 22). As for Musa's (Moses's) staff, its transformation into a serpent was the reason which prompted Pharaoh to bring out the sorcerers so that Musa (Moses) peace be upon him could defeat them in full view of Pharaoh and his elite. What happened next was that the sorcerers became followers of Musa (Moses) and they all became believers in the Lord of Musa (Moses) and Harun (Aaron) peace be upon them.

We know that the True Lord Glorified is He had sent Musa (Moses) peace be upon him forth with nine signs: 1) The staff which transformed into a serpent and devoured what the sorcerers had concocted, 2) the white and flawless hand, 3) the catastrophic years which befell Pharaoh's people, 4) the decline in population and agricultural production till the lands became so barren that no food could be planted, and the fortunes were lost leading to famine, 5) the unleashing of floods, 6) the swarms of locusts, 7) the lice, 8) the frogs and 9) the blood. These are the nine 'signs' which the True Lord Glorified is He sent to the people of Pharaoh because of their refusal to believe in the message of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him.

There are also other signs which the True Lord Glorified is He sent to the people of Musa (Moses) through Musa (Moses) himself. These are the suspension of the mountain, the splitting of the sea with the staff, the striking of the rock wherefrom twelve springs gushed forth, and finally the descent of the tablets with the Torah. The nine ‘signs’ mentioned earlier refer to the sings with which Musa (Moses) was sent forth to Pharaoh whereas the latter signs occurred after Musa (Moses) peace be upon him had left the land of Egypt, or during his exodus; like the parting of the seas with the staff.

What proves the special nature of the story of Musa (Moses) is that he had two messages (to deliver): the first of these was to Pharaoh, and the second was to the Israelites. Thus, we note that the True Lord Glorified is He informs us —at the end of the chapter—about the disagreement that came between Musa (Moses) peace be upon him and the Israelites (Hud: 110). So, the story of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him and the Israelites took place after Musa (Moses) had been brought the book; the Torah. But in this verse, the True Lord Glorified is He is speaking about the ‘signs’ which occurred earlier when Musa (Moses) peace be upon him was confronting Pharaoh, ‘We also sent Musa (Moses), with Our signs and clear authority.’ (Hud: 96) ‘Sultan mubin’ means an all-encompassing dominion which leaves the enemy with no room to manoeuvre or escape.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

إِلَىٰ فِرۡعَوۡنَ وَمَلَإِيْهِۦ فَٱتَّبَعُوٓاْ أَمۡرَ فِرۡعَوۡنَۖ وَمَآ أَمۡرُ فِرۡعَوۡنَ بِرَشِيدٖ ﴿٩٧﴾

To Pharaoh and his supporters, but they followed
Pharaoh’s orders, and Pharaoh’s orders were misguided [97]
(The Quran, Hud: 97)

The word al-mala` refers to those who ‘fill’ the eyes. In other words those who are the center of attention, and are always the head of every assembly, One says, ‘fulan mil` al-`ayn’, meaning that people’s eyes are constantly focused on him because he is a celebrity. Thus, al-mala` refers to the great ones among the community; the elite. Usually, they are also the ones who reassure the tyrant that it is acceptable for him to belittle his subjects. The True Lord Glorified is He tells us how Pharaoh incited his entourage to levity, and how they obeyed him because they were depraved (az-Zukhruf: 54).

When the True Lord Glorified is He speaks about Pharaoh and his entourage, we find the He sets the entourage on one hand, and Pharaoh on the other. Then He also sets Pharaoh on one hand, and Pharaoh's people on the other. This means that the True Lord Glorified is He deals with each one of these three parties in a different way, Here Allah explains how the entourage followed Pharaoh's orders—his directives which the True Lord Glorified is He describes as, '…and Pharaoh's orders were misguided.' (Hud: 97) At the opposite of ar-rushd (guidance) comes al-ghay (misguidance) which means that Pharaoh's entourage did not scrutinize his directives carefully. For if they had thought it over carefully, they would have never followed these orders. The True Lord Glorified is He explains to us why Pharaoh's orders were by no means guided. He also reminds us of what is to become of him and his people (who followed him); Allah says:

يَقْدُمُ قَوْمَهُۥ يَوْمَ ٱلْقِيَـٰمَةِ فَأَوْرَدَهُمُ ٱلنَّارَ ۖ وَبِئْسَ ٱلْوِرْدُ ٱلْمَوْرُودُ ﴿٩٨﴾

He will be at the forefront of his people on the Day of Resurrection, leading them down towards the Fire. What a foul drinking place to be led to! [98] (The Quran, Hud: 98)

The root of the word yaqdum contains the letters 'q', 'd' and 'm'. When this root is used either in written or verbal forms, it indicates 'direct confrontation'. Thus, to say qadam qawm means that these people are all moving in one direction with their leader at the vanguard. Therefore, from this verse we understand that the entourage and elite had followed Pharaoh and that the people at large had followed Pharaoh and the entourage. Since they had (all) followed his lead in this world, they must also follow his lead in the afterlife. Allah relates to us clearly that He shall gather them and the devils together and set them on their knees around Hell. Then, He shall seize out of each group those who were most disobedient towards the Lord of Mercy, and that He knows best who most deserves to burn in Hell (Maryam: 68-70).

Thus, the True Lord Glorified is He will seize out of each group the most disobedient bullies, and then He will cast them in hellfire, for He knows best who is more deserving of hellfire. The True Lord Glorified is He also tells us that every single one of us will approach hellfire, and that this is a decree from our Lord which must be fulfilled. But He shall save the devout and leave the evildoers there on their knees (Maryam: 71-72). In the verse (Maryam: 71), the True Lord Glorified is He uses the word (minkum - us*)* and not (minhum - them*)* which mean that we are all addressed, not just the disbelievers apart from the believers.

But in the verse we are explaining the True Lord Glorified is He says, '…leading them down towards the Fire. What a foul drinking place to be led to!' (Hud: 98). When the Noble Book of Allah—which is the book revealed in a clear Arabic tongue—speaks of al-wurud in the verse (Maryam: 71), the term Allah uses signifies reaching the water, but not drinking from it. Had He wanted to include drinking from the water as well, He would have used the word wird; like in the verse we are explaining now. That is why, the True Lord Glorified is He says, '…What a foul drinking place to be led to!' (Hud: 98) meaning that they will feel miserable after seeing the water of Hell. Then they will drink from it. Therefore, the word al-wird is used to signify the act of drinking from a body of water. The word can also be used about those who move eagerly towards the water to drink from it. That is why the same term is used when Allah tells us that He will drive those who were lost in sin unto hell as a thirsty herd is driven to a well (Maryam: 86).

The pre-Islamic poet Zuhir ibn Abu Salma says:

Thus, when we came upon a body of blue water,

We laid down the staffs of (those in our) caravan.

Here, the poet is describing how the people of the caravan—upon seeing the pure, blue waters—laid down their walking sticks. It was customary in the old days for people to carry walking sticks when they walked. Musa (Moses) peace be upon him said to Allah, when He asked him about his staff, that he leans on it, uses it in herding the sheep and that he has many other uses for it (Ta Ha: 18).

Another poet says:

So, she set down her staff and settled upon her destination,

Like a traveller happy to come back to his abode.

Once the travelers saw 'blue' water, this would mean that the water is not stagnant, or polluted. We know that water is transparent and that, technically speaking, it has no colour. However, the attribute of being 'blue' is ascribed to it when it is free of pollutants, crystal-clear and reflective of the blue sky. So, what the poet is describing is that moment when the travelers arrived at this clear water, so they stopped and began setting up their camp.

Thus, we learn that al-worud signifies the act of moving towards water without drinking from it. Coming across the water lifts the souls with happiness and joy, but then we drink from the water to quench our thirst and hydrate all the organs of our bodies. But, the True Lord Glorified is He says, 'What a foul drinking place to be led to!' (Hud: 98)

This constitutes serious mockery because – when Pharaoh and his people will perceive the water they, will feel happy that their thirst will soon be quenched, but when they drink from the waters of hellfire, they will find it foul. First they will drink from it and then the will be filled with misery. Elsewhere Allah tells us that even when they beg for water, they will be given scalding water like molten lead which will scald their faces (al-Kahf: 29). In this latter verse, Allah uses the word yughathu (succoured) giving them a false impression that they will be succoured only to end up with the misery of the mocking truth in the form of water as hot as molten lead.

Imagine, for example, if someone invited you to the most delicious and gourmet foods. After you wash your hands, that person proposes desserts, and so you feel hopeful that it must be even better than what you ate. But your host tells the cook to mix hot chili with the desserts, and your mouth is set on fire. Is this not making fun of you? The True Lord Glorified is He talks about this water as if it is going to be a cool relief, but upon drinking it (their) insides will be on fire. In addition, the food eaten by the people in hellfire will have the same effect. The True Lord Glorified is He tells us that their food will be nothing but filth (al-Haqqa: 36). Thus, one disaster becomes a multitude of disasters.

Some people have understood the verse (Maryam: 71) to mean that we shall all go to hellfire. They forgot that the True Lord Glorified is He says just in the verse before it that He knows best as to which of them is most deserving of hellfire. (Maryam: 70) which means that the True Lord Glorified is He will present the scenes of hellfire to everyone. So, when the believers see the blazing fire, and are held back from it, they will know that it is their faith that saved them from it and they will praise Allah Glorified and Exalted is He and thank him for saving them from it.

After this, the True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَأُتۡبِعُواْ فِي هَٰذِهِۦ لَعۡنَةٗ وَيَوۡمَ ٱلۡقِيَٰمَةِۚ بِئۡسَ ٱلرِّفۡدُ ٱلۡمَرۡفُودُ ﴿٩٩﴾

They were pursued by God's rejection in this life and will be on the Day of Resurrection, too. What a foul gift to be given! [99] (The Quran, Hud: 99)

This means that this rejection persists, and that we Muslims have been, and are still, rejecting them until they come face to face with the great rejection of the Day of Resurrection, 'What a foul gift to be given!' (Hud: 99) Now the word ar-rifd means 'gift', so can this rejection really be considered a gift in the hereafter? This, in fact, is another mockery (a very bitter one). Just like when He says, 'What a foul drinking place to be led to!' (Hud: 98)

Then He says:

ذَٰلِكَ مِنۡ أَنۢبَآءِ ٱلۡقُرَىٰ نَقُصُّهُۥ عَلَيۡكَۖ مِنۡهَا قَآئِمٞ وَحَصِيدٞ ﴿١٠٠﴾

We relate to you [Muhammad] such accounts of earlier towns: some of them are still standing; some have been mown down [100] (The Quran, Hud: 100)

The True Lord Glorified is He has obliterated those past communities with His punishment because they had rejected their prophets. Such a verse is addressed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to comfort him and to give him courage. The True Lord Glorified is He shows him that the disbelievers shall not elude the suffering just as the peoples of earlier times were punished by Allah.

The True Lord's words, 'We relate to you' (Hud: 100) urge us to distinguish between the popular meaning of the word 'qasas' and its true meaning. Some people say that the Quran contains stories which, like many other stories, are dramatized for the sake of a catchy narrative. We say to these people: you have not grasped what the word qissa 'story' means in the Arabic language because, in our language, this word means being literally factual about every little detail of the events relayed.

In fact, this word is taken from the word qass al-athar which means to follow the tracks of someone or something until one arrives to the desired destination. Therefore, the story (al-Qasas) of the Quran contains factual events only. As for the popular concept of the word qasas, on which ensue fictional events and characters, these are called ruwayat (tales or fables), not qasas. The stories of destroying the disbelieving communities represent admonitions for the people, if only they would heed them. People know that the stories which the Quran relates are real and are corroborated by the ruins of the perished civilizations which have kept nothing behind but a few scattered rocks and carved tombstones.

The remnants of ancient civilizations contain some, still erect, carved pillars, and other fallen ones. According to another verse, the Lord says, ‘Verily, [to this day] you pass by the remnants of their dwellings at morning-time and by night. Will you not, then, use your reason?’ (as-Saffat: 137-138), i.e. you witness their remnants; some are still standing and others have been left in complete disarray. Regarding these ancient communities, the Lord says,

وَمَا ظَلَمْنَٰهُمْ وَلَٰكِن ظَلَمُوٓا۟ أَنفُسَهُمْ ۖ فَمَآ أَغْنَتْ عَنْهُمْ ءَالِهَتُهُمُ ٱلَّتِى يَدْعُونَ مِن
دُونِ ٱللَّهِ مِن شَىْءٍ لَّمَّا جَآءَ أَمْرُ رَبِّكَ ۖ وَمَا زَادُوهُمْ غَيْرَ تَتْبِيبٍ ﴿١٠١﴾

We did not wrong them; they wronged themselves. Their gods, which they called on beside God, were no use to them when what your Lord had ordained came about; they only increased their ruin[101] (The Quran, Hud: 101)

The Lord explains that when He destroyed these people, He did them no zhulm (injustice). Zhulm designates the violation of rights of anyone or acting unjustly against them. Those nations disbelieved in Allah and consequently received their due punishment. They did themselves injustice by setting up associates besides Allah. They belied all prophets who had come forth with irrefutable proof of the legitimacy of their prophecy and messages. The disbelievers wronged themselves. Evidently, the Lord never wrongs anyone.

When they associated others with Allah in Divinity, why did these supposed deities fail to act on behalf of their subjects and protect them?! The Lord tells us that the rocks they worshipped curse them. Those disbelieving souls were destined for hell and their rock-gods shall be fuel for their punishment. The Lord mentions the Hereafter saying, 'Then be conscious of the fire whose fuel is human beings and stones which awaits all who deny the truth!' (al-Baqara: 24) The people—who unreasonably worship equal human beings or idols—have deteriorated into a demonic ignorance and let themselves be obsessed with those human beings or stones which they venerated and prayed to. A Muslim poet once compared the caves of Hira`a and Thawr—both are made out of rock—and found that the cave of Hira'a witnessed the descent of revelation to the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him while the cave of Thawr had the honour of protecting the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him during his emigration from Mecca to Medina, when he sought refuge there with his companion Abu Bakr As-Siddiq Allah be pleased with him. The poet muses at how the cave of Thawr had envied the cave of Hira`a, saying:

> How we envied Hira`a when we saw the trustworthy Spirit pervading you with lights
> Well Hira`a and Thawr do currently stand equal and intercede for the community of stones

The cave of Hira`a had witnessed the descent of the Archangel Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him when he brought the Revelation (from Allah) to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him. However, the cave of Thawr also earned its prestige for having protected the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him during his emigration. The poet puts these words into the mouths of the [idolized] stones:

> They worshiped us while we are sincere slaves of Allah,
> Standing for prayers at the late part of night
> They ignorantly alleged that we are gods
>
> As did with the son of Maryam (Mary) and the pure ones
> For the extreme wrongdoers their punishment,
> But the falsely worshiped innocent ones will receive the Forgiving Lord's Mercy

They derive no good whatsoever from their idols, be they human or mineral. The idols were powerless to protect them from the world's sufferings and will be powerless to protect their subjects from the hellfire of the hereafter. If those people had venerated idols in lieu of Allah, the idols certainly did not come to their succour when they were punished. The Lord concludes this blessed verse by saying, '…and brought them no more than utter perdition' (Hud: 101), i.e. the idols, which they had set up as associates with Allah and worshipped instead of Allah, denied them. This desertion causes them even more psychological trauma because—in addition to 'perdition', the word 'tatbeeb' denotes being 'marooned' and 'cut-off'. The Lord says, 'Doomed are the hands of him of the glowing countenance, and doomed is he!' (al-Masad: 1) In a similar way, Allah has dealt with the people who rejected their prophets. That is why the Lord follows up with the following verse:

وَكَذَٰلِكَ أَخۡذُ رَبِّكَ إِذَآ أَخَذَ ٱلۡقُرَىٰ وَهِيَ ظَٰلِمَةٌۚ إِنَّ أَخۡذَهُۥٓ أَلِيمٞ شَدِيدٌ ١٠٢

Such is the punishment of your Lord for towns in the midst of their sins: His punishment is terrible and severe [102]
(The Quran, Hud: 102)

The way in which Allah dealt with the disbelieving communities, represents a warning to anyone who would disbelieve [i.e. they are in imminent danger of suffering the same fate]. The Lord says, 'Consider the daybreak and the ten nights! Consider the multiple and the One! Consider the night as it runs its course! Considering all this – could there be, to anyone endowed with reason, a [more] solemn evidence of the truth?' (al-Fajr: 1-5) Here, the Lord swears by these things. As such, those endowed with sound minds might realise the absolute necessity of having faith. Allah then cites some examples of the past perished nations, 'Are You not aware of how Your Lord has dealt with [the tribe of] `Ad, [the people of] Aram—the many-pillared? The like of whom has never been reared in all the land? And with [the tribe of] Thamud, who hollowed out rocks in the valley? And with Pharaoh of the [many] tent-poles [It was they] who transgressed all bounds of equity all over their lands, and brought about great corruption therein; and therefore Your Lord let loose upon them a scourge of suffering, for, verily, Your Lord is ever on the watch!' (al-Fajr: 6-14) Allah overcame and destroyed those sinful nations, as He is the Almighty and the Omnipotent.

Allah then says, 'And such is...' (Hud: 102), i.e. in the same way that the other nations were destroyed, the nations that denied their prophets and wronged themselves met the same end. Akhdh designates punishment for actual crimes. See how Allah relieved Prophet Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him and saved him from the punishment that the rest of his tribe suffered because of their injustices. Man is essentially pure and innocent. It is human actions which incur punishment. For example, when Allah told Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him 'Behold, he was not of your family; for, verily, he was unrighteous in his conduct' (Hud: 46). What put Nuh's (Noah's) son in this situation was his unrighteous conduct? That is why Nuh (Noah) should not say that he is my son. Punishment does not depend on one's personality, one's bloodline, or family. It is the concomitant of one's actions. For example, if somebody drinks alcohol, you would not hate him, but you hate his sins. When it comes to prophets, progeny is not determined according to biological criteria; it rather depends on works. We find that the Lord warns Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him against supplicating for all of his progeny. The Lord blessed Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him after trying him, 'And When Ibrahim (Abraham) was tried by his Lord with commands and he fulfilled them, [Allah] said, "Indeed, I will make you a leader for the people."' Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him then implored his Lord, 'And of my descendants?' [Allah] said, "My covenant does not include the wrongdoers."' (al-Baqara: 124) Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him wished that the leadership continues through his bloodline. In response, Allah says, 'My covenant does not include the wrongdoers' (al-Baqara: 124). This matter remained at the centre of Ibrahim's (Abraham's) peace be upon him consciousness. He came to know that, for prophets, progeny is not determined by bloodline but by actions. That is why Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him uttered the following supplications after leaving his family in a barren valley, 'O my Lord! Make this a land secure and grant its people fruitful sustenance' (al-Baqara: 126). Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him then added, 'such of them as believe in Allah and the Last Day' (al-Baqara: 126). Then the Lord points out Ibrahim's (Abraham's) misjudgement. Simply, sustenance is a grace bestowed by the Lord equally on the believers and disbelievers, obedient and disobedient. Do not confuse the Lord's sustenance to all human beings and His Divine Graces; the grace of the Lordship is for all whereas the grace of worship is a duty for humankind. The Lord says, '[Allah] answered, "And whoever shall deny the truth, him will I let enjoy himself for a short while – but in the end, I shall drive him to suffering through fire: and how vile a journey's end!"' (al-Baqara: 126)

O Ibrahim (Abraham)! You uttered a supplication for the sustenance of the believers, because your fervent emotions prevented you from deep reflection on the issue. There is a difference between the Gracious Divine Blessings involving Allah's Commands and the natural sustenance of Allah as the Lord and Creator. A disbeliever receives the sustenance from the Lord. He can enjoy worldly pleasures for a short while, but in the hereafter they will be held to account. Therefore, the Lord calls the unjust accountable for their disbelief. He deals with them justly and punishes them for their transgressions. The severe punishment depends upon the severity of the crime. Evidently, the Divine punishment consists with the Power and Might of the Omnipotent Lord. Punishment is a sign of Divine Justice; those who proved unjust to themselves and committed the gravest sin, i.e. disbelief. Doing injustice to oneself or others is sinful; when the Lord makes it unlawful for you to wrong others, He has also implicitly made it unlawful for you to wrong yourself. The Lord describes His dealing with the unjust as follows, 'Verily, His punishing grasp is grievous [and] severe!' (Hud: 102)

The pain of His punishment is proportional with His Attribute as the Omnipotent. Imagine that one person wrongs another. In this case, the True Lord has made it lawful for the victim to respond in kind to placate irritating sentiments and pressures. The Lord says, 'Hence, if you have to respond to an attack, respond only to the extent of the attack levelled against you' (an-Nahl: 126). In this manner, your bitter feelings do not fester inside you. For those who have a strong willpower and self-domination, they must look to the Lord's words, 'Those who hold in check their anger' (Al-'Imran: 134). There are two possible options; you may retaliate for a wrong in kind or you may suppress your anger in which case you do not translate your bitterness into retaliatory actions. Or else, one may transcend to the highest degree of virtue and forgive the wrongdoer; Allah loves those who exhibit the quality of forbearance.

When they asked Al-Hasan Al-Basri, “How does a person show kindness towards the one who has wronged them?” In response, he said, “If a servant of Allah wrongs you, will that not anger the Lord?” They said, “Yes.” He said, “When Allah is angry with the person who wronged you, will [the Lord] not stand by your side? Will you not then be kind to them who caused the Lord to stand by your side?” That is why it is said that when one of the righteous men heard that a person had backbitten him, he offered him and his servants a platter of fresh dates. Whereupon, the servant asked in astonishment: why are you gifting him dates when he has slandered you? The knower of Allah replied: convey my gratitude to him, for by slandering me he has gifted me with his good deeds; such charity on his part is, doubtless, worth far more than these dates. It is said that he who forgives is wiser than he who punishes; he who punishes can only punish in measure of his own strength. Whoever chooses to forgive leaves the punishment to be carried out by the Lord whose strength is infinite.

It is in this manner that we understand the Lord's words, ‘And such is Your Lord’s punishing grasp whenever He takes to task any community that is given to evildoing. Verily, His punishing grasp is grievous [and] severe!’ (Hud: 102) The severity of Allah's punishment is as great as is His Power. The shiddah (severity) designates the act of joining two things together insomuch that it is difficult to break them up and it is almost impossible to separate one from the other. In short, it is the most powerful knot of power.

The True Lord then says:

إِنَّ فِى ذَٰلِكَ لَءَايَةً لِّمَنْ خَافَ عَذَابَ ٱلْـَٔاخِرَةِ ۚ ذَٰلِكَ
يَوْمٌ مَّجْمُوعٌ لَّهُ ٱلنَّاسُ وَذَٰلِكَ يَوْمٌ مَّشْهُودٌ ﴿١٠٣﴾

There truly is a sign in this for anyone who fears the punishment of the Hereafter. That is a Day in which all people will be gathered together, a Day for all to see [103]
(The Quran, Hud: 103)

The verse relates the account of past nations and emphasizes—for those who fear the Day of Judgment—the need for faith and belief in the reckoning of human beings for their faith and deeds. He who hears the accounts of past nations and wisely reflects on the lessons contained therein is endowed with insightful vision. The life of past nations represents important signs for us. It is said that 'every verse begets new children—namely, the lessons drawn from it'. Therefore, he who has no faith will never benefit from the messages [provided by these verses]. The Lord says, 'But [then] – how many a sign is there in the heavens and on earth which they pass by [unthinkingly] and on which they turn their backs!' (Yusuf: 105). The Lord willed us to note these signs and draw lessons from them. As such, we might be among those who contemplate and will hopefully avoid being among those who have no fear of punishment. These bereft people endure disgraceful suffering in this world and suffer the endless punishment of hellfire in the Hereafter. That disgrace is witnessed by all of Allah's creatures. The Lord says, 'That Day on which all mankind shall be gathered together – that Day [of Judgment] which shall be witnessed [by all that ever lived]' (Hud: 103). The scandalous shame of that day will be seen by all human beings from Adam peace be upon him to the very last human being. The humiliation will be witnessed, not only by those people who used to know the person, but also by everyone else. The Lord says, 'That Day on which all mankind shall be gathered together' (Hud: 103). The word majmu` (gathered) require*s* 'someone who gathers', for the numbers of the gathered people depends on the power of the one who gathers them—the Lord and the Creator of the universe. On that day humankind will be gathered awake and attentive. The Lord says, 'He but grants them respite until the Day when their eyes will stare in horror' (Ibrahim: 42).

The Lord also says, 'The while the true promise [of resurrection] draws close [to its fulfilment]. But then, lo! The eyes of those who [in their lifetime] were bent on denying the truth will stare in horror' (al-Anbiya': 97). In this instance, the Lord says, 'That Day [of Judgment] which shall be witnessed [by all that ever lived]' (Hud: 103). In other words, all the creation shall be witness to the dishonourable scandal of those who did not consider the 'signs.' Regarding this fateful Day, the Lord says:

We are delaying it only for a specified period [104]
(The Quran, Hud: 104)

We learn that if the coming Day of Judgment is delayed, it does not mean that the day will not come. It will absolutely come, but every event has its appointed time. The fact that carious events follow each other in succession proves that the appointed time of events is determined by Allah. The Lord says, ‘and which we shall not delay beyond a term set [by us]’ (Hud: 104). To understand these words, we must know that al-ajal refers to the span of human life from birth to death. The Lord says, ‘Every age has had its fixed record’ (ar-Ra‘d: 38). Al-ajal is also used to denote the ‘final moment’ and the ‘term-limit’. The Lord says, ‘…and when [the end of] their term approaches, they can neither delay it by a single moment, nor can they hasten it’ (al-A’raf: 34). Let us realise that any affixed time—no matter how long—is always limited. As such, any duration of time, in reality, is short even though it might seem long. Finally, any finite period of time is ultimately short.

Then the Lord says:

يَوۡمَ يَأۡتِ لَا تَكَلَّمُ نَفۡسٌ إِلَّا بِإِذۡنِهِۦۚ فَمِنۡهُمۡ شَقِيّٞ وَسَعِيدٞ ١٠٥

And when that Day comes, no soul will speak except by His permission, and some of them will be wretched and some happy [105] (The Quran, Hud: 105)

The Lord brings everyone together under a single verdict. Thus, when Allah says, ‘…not a soul will speak…’ (Hud: 105), it means that no soul shall speak unless Allah permits it to do so. During their life on earth, they had been speaking freely since Allah had granted them the power to speak and graced them with faculties and senses. The Lord had created human bodily organs and had given human beings the power to control them. The Lord also wishes that a select number of His creatures to stand witnesses to His Power to deprive some of these organs and faculties. For example, you find a mute person who cannot speak, a paralyzed person who cannot move, or a blind person who cannot see. For human beings, these examples reinforce the plain truth that all that human control over bodily organs is a gift bestowed upon them from Allah. These capabilities are not innate to them. When the Lord says, ‘When that Day comes, not a soul will speak, unless it be by His leave’ (Hud: 105), He explains to us the true meaning of why, during our tenure on earth, our organs are placed under our command—for they are subject to our will. It is, indeed, the Divine Will that puts these organs under human control. No one ever speaks outside this general leave—the leave which allows our organs to subject to our will. To be sure, Allah could retract this permission such that our organs will no longer react to our will. For example, the Lord says:

- ‘None will speak but he to whom the Most Gracious will have given leave and [everyone] will say [only] what is right. (an-Naba’: 38)
- ‘[Since it will be too late,] they will turn upon one another, demanding of each other [to relieve them of the burden of their past sins].’ (as-Saffat: 27)
- ‘That Day on which they will not [be able to] utter a word, nor be allowed to proffer excuses!’ (al-Mursalat: 35-36)
- ‘[Be conscious, then, of] the Day when every human being shall come to plead for himself [alone].’ (an-Nahl: 111)
- ‘And halt them [there]! [And then,] behold, they shall be asked.’ (as-Saffat: 24)

Some might think that it is a contradiction in the Quranic verses. Some verses permit speaking and others deny the power of speech. In reply, we need to understand that the kind of speech that those miserable souls will utter on the Day of Judgment. Some will utter useless and irrelevant sophistry, e.g. accusing one another of evildoing. The Quran describes that scene, ‘They who [in their life on Earth] were bent on denying the truth will [thereupon] exclaim, “O our Lord! Show us those of the invisible beings and humans that have led us astray: we shall trample them underfoot”’ (Fussilat: 29). This kind of talk does not in any way benefit the speaker. Therefore, only the useful and beneficial speech is forbidden for them. The ranks of different souls are different on the Day of Resurrection. There is a time when they are talking and another when they are brought to account, at which point they are dumbfounded and speechless. The Lord then orders the organs and human limbs to speak and testify against them. The Lord distinguishes between two different types of human conditions: He says in the concluding part of the verse, ‘some will be wretched and some, happy’ (Hud: 105). Allah uses nouns to describe the permanence of wretchedness and happiness. The Lord goes into further detail and describes the conditions of those destined to suffering and misery and those set for happiness. He then shifts from the use of nouns to verbs as follows:

فَأَمَّا ٱلَّذِينَ شَقُوا۟ فَفِى ٱلنَّارِ لَهُمْ فِيهَا زَفِيرٌ وَشَهِيقٌ ﴿١٠٦﴾

The wretched ones will be in the Fire, sighing and groaning [106] (The Quran, Hud: 106)

Those who condemned themselves to misery by straying from the path of Allah will be reunited in their misery, but [in the end] they shall enter Hellfire individually or in groups. The Lord says, ‘And those who were bent on denying the truth will be urged on in throngs towards hell.’ (az-Zumar: 71) In another verse, Allah says, ‘Every time a host enters [the fire], it will curse its fellow-host’ (al-A’raf: 38). Thus, we learn that the disbelievers—since their description is fixed—are miserable. At the moment when they enter hellfire, they enter it as individuals. Indeed, they accompany the sinful Muslims who have disobeyed the Divine Orders and every one of them receives their punishment according to the sins and the transgressions they did. Each one suffers misery in proportion with their sins. They share misery, even if their suffering varies in nature and quantity according to their sins. Towards no one does the Lord act unjustly!

The Lord uses the verb shaqu (brought wretchedness) to emphasize the fact that it was they who chose misery and brought wretchedness upon themselves. The Lord has created His servants and given them freewill to choose. He revealed His Message for them to nurture their souls. For those who have chosen faith, the Lord expects them to be obedient and steadfast. Then, in the same verse, the Lord mentions the state of those who brought misery upon themselves, He says, '[They shall live] in the fire where they will have [nothing but] moans and sobs [to relieve their pain].' (Hud: 106) We know that he who breathes in hellfire shall inhale and exhale extremely hot air. The Lord continues describing the conditions of the miserable inhabitants of hellfire:

خَٰلِدِينَ فِيهَا مَا دَامَتِ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتُ وَٱلْأَرْضُ إِلَّا مَا
شَآءَ رَبُّكَۚ إِنَّ رَبَّكَ فَعَّالٞ لِّمَا يُرِيدُ ١٠٧

There to remain for as long as the heavens and earth endure, unless your Lord wills otherwise: your Lord carries out whatever He wills [107] (The Quran, Hud: 107)

The word khulood designates long residence in a certain place. Indeed, an endless tenure is eternal in confirmation that their stay is indefinite. Those who were disobedient shall enter hellfire, 'When that Day comes, not a soul will speak, unless it be by His leave' (Hud: 105). For the disbelievers, it is an endless suffering. The punishment of a deviant Muslim for their transgressions begins at the moment when their verdict is pronounced and will last until the appropriate period has elapsed, and then they are allowed to enter paradise. The Lord says, 'unless Your Lord wills it otherwise' (Hud: 107).

The Lord then reduces hellfire sentences for the believers; He is 'A sovereign doer of whatever He wills' (Hud: 107), and is not compelled by anything. No one has the right to question what Allah does. If He wishes to reduce the tenure of a disobedient person, He does so in the end. Therefore, this person's tenure in paradise is reduced because they only enter it after having received their due punishment in hell. When we conceive of the matter, we resolve that issue over which a hundred-and-fifty religious scholars once differed. Some had imagined that Allah closes the doors of hell on those whom He had put there and their suffering lasts forever. Those whom He decreed to paradise from the beginning will dwell there forever. Some of those scholars believe that Allah will never allow into paradise those who are guilty of major sins [no matter how much they dwell in hell]. This opinion equates major sins with outright disbelief, which is wholly inconceivable.

It clearly takes no account whatsoever of Allah's Mercy. Some religious scholars cited the verse of the chapter of al-Jinn in support of this view, ‘If I should fail to convey [to the world whatever illumination comes to me] from Allah and His messages. Now as for him who rebels against Allah and His Messenger – verily, the fire of hell awaits him, therein to abide beyond the count of time.’ (al-Jinn: 23)

Here, the Lord shows Mercy towards the disbeliever to believe and towards the offender to repent. This is part and parcel of Allah's Mercy. Eternalizing the suffering in hellfire is only mentioned twice in the Quran. It is evidence of the Greatness of Allah's Mercy and His Vast Compassion. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is even declared a mercy for the worlds; namely, for all things other than Allah. Thus, the Mercy is shown to disbelievers through the bounties granted to them by Allah in this world. We learn that Allah has Absolute Dominion over the physical laws of the universe. He did not leave them to operate on their own. Rather, He constantly controls them. Since He is the maker of the Divine Decree; He may alter it in any way He wishes. He is Lord over time, space and movement and the Lord of all things. He does what He wills. In this case, the eternity of time is subjected to His Will. When the Lord says, ‘as long as the heavens and the earth endure’ (Hud: 107), we understand that, for both heaven and for hell, there must be that which transcends them and towers above them.

They must exist above some ground or other. If one claims that the Lord says in the Quran that the sky shall be thrown into convulsion and shall break up, we say in response: Do not take a single Quranic verse without referring to other Quranic contexts. The Lord says, ‘On the Day when the earth shall be changed into another earth, as shall be the heavens’ (Ibrahim: 48).

The Lord allows whomsoever He wills to inherit Paradise, for it is He who quotes the believers saying, on the Day of the Resurrection, ‘…and has bestowed upon us this expanse [of bliss] as our portion, so that we may dwell in paradise as we please!’ (az-Zumar: 74) Noticeably, a man enjoys the services of the inanimate, plants and animals. Generally, human life spans might surpass the creatures which serve them but human life spans are ultimately shorter than that of the sun or the moon. Here, the Lord depicts the human lifespan in the next world. He cites the longest type of life span that we can possibly understand. He says, ‘As long as the heavens and the earth endure’ (Hud: 107). Thus, if Allah attaches importance to something, there must be a reason for it. The Lord is talking about the disbelieving dwellers of hell saying, ‘Verily, unto those who give the lie to Our messages and scorn them in their pride, the gates of heaven shall not be opened; and they shall not enter paradise any more than a twisted rope can pass through a needle's eye: for thus do We requite such as are lost in sin’ (al-A’raf: 40). A rope will never pass through a needle's eye! We must consider those things—to which Allah attaches importance—in light of His statement, ‘A sovereign doer of whatever He wills’ (Hud: 107).

In the Quran, `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him says, ‘If You cause them to suffer – verily, they are Your servants; and if You forgive them – verily, You alone are almighty, truly wise!’ (al-Ma‘ida: 118) From a contextual point of view, Allah should have said, ‘and if You forgive them, verily You are Much-Forgiving, Dispenser of Mercy’. However, this is to take a shallow view of the meaning of the Quran. It expresses the human view, but from the point of view of the eloquence of the Lord it is a different matter. For the question of punishment or forgiveness lies in the hands of Allah alone; it is nobody's right to question it. Here lies the true meaning of `izza. That is why Allah is indeed mighty. He is, moreover, Wise in all Judgments, punishment, or forgiveness. Allah concludes the verse in such a manner as to establish, beyond all doubt, that the issue of punishment and forgiveness is in His hands. Concerning the punishment of the disbelievers, He says, ‘A sovereign doer of whatever He wills’ (Hud: 107). For those who submitted to His Will and won paradise, Allah says:

وَأَمَّا ٱلَّذِينَ سُعِدُواْ فَفِي ٱلۡجَنَّةِ خَٰلِدِينَ فِيهَا مَا دَامَتِ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتُ
وَٱلۡأَرۡضُ إِلَّا مَا شَآءَ رَبُّكَۖ عَطَآءً غَيۡرَ مَجۡذُوذٖ (١٠٨)

As for those who have been blessed, they will be in Paradise, there to remain as long as the heavens and earth endure, unless your Lord wills otherwise – an unceasing gift [108] (The Quran, Hud: 108)

The Lord grants the believers their every wish. In this verse, He confirms that their stay in paradise shall be everlasting and His gifts to them shall be unceasing.

Then the Lord says:

فَلَا تَكُ فِي مِرْيَةٍ مِّمَّا يَعْبُدُ هَٰٓؤُلَآءِ ۚ مَا يَعْبُدُونَ إِلَّا كَمَا يَعْبُدُ
ءَابَآؤُهُم مِّن قَبْلُ ۚ وَإِنَّا لَمُوَفُّوهُمْ نَصِيبَهُمْ غَيْرَ مَنقُوصٍ ﴿١٠٩﴾

[Prophet], have no doubt about what these people worship: it is merely what their fathers worshipped before them, and We shall certainly give them their share in full, without any reduction [109] (The Quran, Hud: 109)

Was Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in any doubt or uncertainty? No! This is a general Divine Command of the All-Supreme to all; and the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him receives the Command as do all others. Elsewhere, the Lord says to His Prophet peace and blessings be upon him ‘Be constant in [your] prayer from the time when the sun has passed its zenith till the darkness of night, and [be ever mindful of its] recitation at dawn. For, behold, the recitation [of prayer] at dawn is indeed witnessed [by all that is holy]’ (al-Isra’: 78). Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him already used to pray but the words of the Lord are general to all. Similarly, the Lord also tells Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him ‘O Prophet! Remain conscious of Allah, and defer not to the deniers of the truth and the hypocrites. Allah is truly All knowing, Wise’ (al-’Ahzab: 1). The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him was conscious of Allah. The verse intends to perpetuate the remembrance of Allah. When Allah issues an order to be followed by the highest created being, this order becomes a general rule for all his followers to be conscious of Allah and to avoid hypocrisy and blasphemy. It is for the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and for his community as well to apply this command always.

Likewise, Allah says, ‘O you who have attained to faith!’ (al-Baqara: 153) It is a call to the believers who honour their faith, so whosoever of them hears this verse must strive to keep the faith perpetually. A believer who hears these words gets the honour of the Divine Address in affirmation of the lofty status of faith. When Allah mentions a certain quality which a person already possesses, He intends this quality to be perpetual. The perpetuity of such qualities indicates spiritual progress.

The Lord's words, '[O Prophet,] be not in doubt about anything that those [misguided people] worship' (Hud: 109). Actually, they do no real worship; true worship means that a worshipper receives orders from the True Lord. They worship idols and they do not supply their subjects with a doctrine to follow. However, the Lord has hereby confirmed that they worship idols. They had previously said, 'We worship them for no other reason than that they bring us nearer to Allah' (az-Zumar: 3). This is the form of faith that has lost its intellectual underpinning. We must mull over the question of faith with intellects. When we have faith, our minds are convinced. However, they adopted their idolatry in imitation of their forefathers. This imitation entails a withering away of the pure, primordial human state. There is no benefit whatsoever in such imitation. The Lord has infused the universe with a host of different 'qualities'. These qualities can be either positive or negative.

'…they but [thoughtlessly] worship…' (Hud: 109). Their worship of idols is not real worship; real worship requires prescriptions and proscriptions, but the idols cannot possibly furnish them. Their worship of idols is a mere imitation of the practises of their forefathers. That is why they said, 'Nay, we shall follow [only] that which we found our forefathers believing in and doing' (al-Baqara: 170). The Lord decides what their reward shall be, '…and, behold, We shall most certainly give them their full due [for whatever good or evil they have earned], without diminishing aught thereof' (Hud: 109). In other words, We shall give them their full, undiminished due, for their corruption in the universe. The Lord had given them the right of choice; to do it or not to do it. If choices are not made in a disciplined manner, the social equilibrium starts to falter. Man has the right to choose; if he chooses faith, the Lord has provided for him—from on high—a doctrine which comprises all the obligations of faith. By imitating their forefathers, they espoused a path which spreads corruption on earth. Then, the Lord promises to give them their full due of punishment. Normally, the term al-naseeb stands for blessings, but the Lord uses it ironically to describe their share of misery, then the Lord says:

مِن رَّبِّكَ لَقُضِىَ بَيْنَهُمْ ۚ وَإِنَّهُمْ لَفِى شَكٍّ مِّنْهُ مُرِيبٍ ﴿١١٠﴾

We gave Moses the Scripture before you, but differences arose about it and if it had not been for a prior word from your Lord, a decision would already have been made between them, though they are in grave doubt about it [110]
(The Quran, Hud: 110)

The chapter of Hud is the only chapter which highlights the account of Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him twice (Hud: 96-97; 110). The Lord first only mentioned His Command to Musa (Moses) to go forth and present the Divine Signs to Pharaoh. Then, it turns to the fate of Pharaoh, ‘He shall go before his people on the Day of Resurrection’ (Hud: 98). Simply, the context shifts the focus from the very beginning to the culmination of the story where, on the Day of Judgment, Musa (Moses) peace be upon him oversees the entry of Pharaoh and his people into the hellfire. Here, the Lord picks up the account of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him after the latter had begun his mission; Allah says, ‘and, indeed, [similar was the case when] We vouchsafed the Book unto Musa (Moses)’ (Hud: 110).

Musa (Moses) peace be upon him was mentioned in the beginning about Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him when Musa (Moses) came upon the water hole of the town of Midyan. What is strange is that when Allah brings up Shu`aib (Jethro), He does not also bring up the story of Musa (Moses) in his encounter with Shu`aib (Jethro). Rather, he mentions the story of Musa (Moses) with Pharaoh. We knew that Musa (Moses) peace be upon him had come to Pharaoh with a single goal in mind; he wanted to take the Children of Israel with him and relieve them form oppression. As for the events that later transpired, where people come to believe in Allah, they followed as natural consequences.

The message of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him was oriented solely towards the people of Israel. He comes to them with the Book to deliver the message, whereas in the previous episode, Allah was talking about the signs which He had charged Musa (Moses) to bring to Pharaoh. We know that the chapter of Hud talks about the long procession of messengers: Nuh (Noah), Hud (Eber), Saleh (Shelah), Shu`aib (Jethro) and Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon them. Two parts speak of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him. The first deals with Musa’s (Moses') account with Pharaoh and the second with Musa’s (Moses) story with the children of Israel. Every part has an important function in the context of the divine doctrine for human beings at large from the first human being Adam peace be upon him until the Day of Judgment. Whenever a prophet is mentioned, there is a process of healing of a specific ailment which torments a particular community. The common denominator of all prophetic messages can be summed up in Allah's words, ‘Worship Allah alone: you have no deity other than Him’ (al-A’raf: 59).

Thereafter, the details of messages diverge from one prophet to another. Some bid people to desist from the worship of idols while other prophets ask their people not to give short measure and weight. In every instance, the messenger heals one of the ailments which his community suffers. For Islam, it heals all social ills. That is why the Quran affirms all good virtues as a doctrine for the entire of humanity. The Lord does not recount these stories for entertainment, nor to kill time or as a history lesson. Indeed, it is for us to take heed of the examples of previous prophets as they delivered their healing messages to their respective communities. Since the community of Muhammad peace be upon him shall live to see an age of unprecedented inter-communal contact during which every kind of ill will be prevalent. For this reason, they must take heed of these lessons. The Islamic message contains all aspects of wisdom beyond time and place.

Here, the Lord says, ‘Indeed, [similar was the case when] We vouchsafed the Book unto Musa (Moses), and some of his people set their own views against it’ (Hud: 110). The grammatical structure of this sentence permits us to conclude that views were set against both the Divine Book and against Musa (Moses) himself. One cannot consider Musa (Moses) peace be upon him independently of the divine Book which Allah had revealed to him. The two issues intersect with one another: The Divine Message of the Holy Scripture and Prophet Musa (Moses) as divinely chosen. The Lord does not distinguish between the two issues, but rather frames them as one. The messenger is not to be regarded distinctively from his message. When the Lord says, ‘We vouchsafed the Book unto Musa (Moses)' (Hud: 110). This matter is related to Allah's 'actions'; Allah has His own Essence, Qualities and Actions. In Essence, Allah is far above any comparison and His Qualities are not like other qualities. For example, the Lord exists and you exist, but His Existence is primeval and eternal, whereas your existence is accidental and ephemeral. We understand what is related to Allah considering the verse, 'There is nothing like unto Him' (ash-Shura: 11). When the Lord speaks of His action, consider it in the context of His Infinite Power. Here, when Allah says, 'We vouchsafed the Book unto Musa (Moses)' (Hud: 110), we understand that His Action reveals Knowledge and Wisdom, Power, Forgiveness, Omnipotence and Dominance. There are many things that come together to bring about this revelation. A question may be raised: if the people of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him disputed over his message, why did the Lord not punish them as He did with the peoples of Nuh (Noah), `Ad, Thamud or the other peoples whom Allah had taken to task? In response, they did not escape Allah's punishment because of any power they had, but because the Lord postponed their punishment to the Day of Judgment. Allah says in the same verse, 'Had it not been for a decree that had already gone forth from Your Lord, judgment would indeed have been passed on them [then and there]' (Hud: 110). The Lord passed this decisive judgment, just as He had passed judgments on earlier peoples whose prophets were charged with the Divine Missions. The past prophets' mission was only to deliver the Divine Message and not to battle their nations for a call or right. It was Allah that always intervened and pronounced a final judgment. When it came to Musa (Moses) peace be upon him his mission was different. Allah willed to defer the reckoning of his people to the Day of Resurrection. The Lord says, '…for, behold, they were in grave doubt, amounting to suspicion, about him [who called them unto Allah]' (Hud: 110). They doubted the Day of Judgment—the day when all shall be brought to account. This doubt is similar to their doubts—mentioned by Allah in the beginning of the verse—which they harboured about Musa (Moses) peace be upon him and the Divine Book he brought them, Then the Lord says:

وَإِنَّ كُلًّا لَّمَّا لَيُوَفِّيَنَّهُمْ رَبُّكَ أَعْمَٰلَهُمْ ۚ إِنَّهُۥ بِمَا يَعْمَلُونَ خَبِيرٌ ﴿١١١﴾

Your Lord will give everyone full due for whatever they have done: He is aware of everything they do [111]
(The Quran, Hud: 111)

Before Musa (Moses), the disbelievers faced Divine Punishment. When Musa (Moses) peace be upon him began his mission, the Lord deferred the punishment until the Day of Judgment. However, never think that you may escape the delayed punishment on the Day of Judgment. Each and every one of us shall be given the full reward for their actions. Goodly rewards for the obedient and punishment for the disobedient, Allah's judgment is certainly coming. This compensation will depend on one's works, whether unbelief or belief, virtuousness or perversity, and the time of this remuneration is the Day of Judgment. There is a brief pause in the Quranic style, so that the meaning can be digested by those who do not have an innate aptitude for the classical Arabic language—unlike the ease with which the early Arabs understood it. Evidently, the old Arabs had no teachers. They just understood and articulated proper Arabic as hailing from a community gifted with highly complex linguistic style and outstanding eloquence. Language, as we know, is not a matter of gender or genetics. It is a social phenomenon. The society in which a child grows up determines their language. The child who grows up in an Arab society speaks Arabic.

And the child living in an English society speaks English. The language is articulated by tongue according to that which is heard by ears. In the old days, the Arab environment was usually isolated and those who grew up in this environment used to speak the language correctly and flawlessly. As for the Arab who lived in a community such as Mecca—the renowned centre of cultures, they used to receive visitors from every corner. As such, the people of Mecca used to send their newborn children out to the countryside to hear nothing but the pure, unadulterated Arabic tongue. In this way, they would not need to be re-taught sound Arabic later in life. Consider, for example, that in our own lives there are two predominant languages: the language used at home and in streets. It is the language we use to communicate with one another. It is the colloquial form of Arabic. There is also the language we learn in schools. It is the polished and refined language that stands for eloquence and correctness. The people of Quraysh used to send their children to the countryside so that their ears could develop a taste for the undiluted Arabic tongue. This pure idiom was the norm in the countryside. A child growing up there had no need of a teacher to learn it. The eloquence was all that his ear ever heard.

This was the language of excellence at that time. This language is different from the language which we acquire nowadays in schools. This latter is almost artificial. Here, what about the orientalists who did not learn Arabic before and only learn the language with an arrogant attitude. These people did not possess the purity of language. That is why they tried to undermine the Quran. Some even tried to claim that the Quran contains grammatical errors. They said this even though it was they who had learned the artificial language whereas those who received the Quran in the Prophet's time were men of unsurpassed eloquence. They did not find any faults with the Quran. Had they detected any linguistic imperfections in the Quran at that time, they would have pointed them out, because the Quran was revealed in a pure Arabic tongue. It was revealed to an eloquent community whose genius manifested itself in the language.

Allah had allowed the disbelievers of Quraysh and the Arabs to remain entrenched in their intense disbelief for a while. Had they discovered any imperfections in the language of the Quran during that time, they would have most certainly announced it. No one could say that he had become a believer and had concealed the imperfections of the Quran. If anyone had any critical remarks about the Quran, their disbelief would certainly motivate them to declare it. Is it possible for the orientalists who lived in the twentieth century to find grammatical mistakes in the Quran when they did not fully master the language (as the early Arabs had)? Rather, their learning of Arabic was mechanical. This precludes the possibility of an intuitive ‘feel’ of the language. For example, their failure to understand the subtleties of the verse in question, ‘and, verily, unto each and all will Your Lord give their full due for whatever [good or evil] they may have done: behold, He is aware of all that they do!' (Hud: 111), means that both believers who believe and honour the message, and disbelievers who denied it, shall receive their reward. Good rewards for the believers and punishment for the disbelievers. The word inna (verily) serves to emphasize something, especially if the audience is inclined to reject what follows after it. As we know, there are different levels of denial. If you want to inform someone about something new to them, you tell them, for example, 'so-and-so came to see me yesterday'. The listener comes to know about the news for the first time. If they were to tell you, 'but yesterday, so-and-so was somewhere else', you would tell them, inna (verily) so-and-so visited me yesterday'. When the listener answers you: 'but yesterday, I saw this person whom you are talking about in another place'. At this point, you might emphasize your words by saying, 'I swear by Allah, so-and-so was with me yesterday'. Therefore, you emphasize your words according to the degree to which your audience contest your claim.

When the Lord postpones the suffering of certain people while on earth, one who is inattentive might say: perhaps Allah is no longer punishing people. That is why the Lord emphasizes that all will be called into account be they obedient or disobedient: 'Verily, unto each and all will Your Lord give their full due for whatever [good or evil] they may have done' (Hud: 111). Those who do not have an innate 'feel' of Arabic, like orientalists who have a mechanical understanding of the language, paused at this verse and said: why is there tanween in the word kullan? They did not know that tanween stands for a complete sentence. When the Lord says, 'Why, then, when [the last breath] comes up to the throat [of a dying man] the while you are [helplessly] looking on' (al-Waqi'a: 83-84), the word kullan in the verse in question denotes that 'both' the obedient believer and the disobedient disbeliever shall be fairly compensated with either goodly rewards or punishment. The word lamma—in the same verse—is used to denote a time, a period, or a moment. When the Lord says, 'And when Musa (Moses) came [to Mount Sinai] at the time set by Us and his Lord spoke unto him' (al-A'raf: 143), and 'And as soon as the caravan [with which Ya`qub's (Jacob's) sons were traveling] was on its way, their father said [to the people around him], "Behold, were it not that you might consider me a dotard, [I would say that] I truly feel the breath of Yusuf (Joseph) [in the air]!' (Yusuf: 94) When they had left the city behind them and were well on their way out of the land of Egypt, their father said, ‘I truly feel the breath of Yusuf (Joseph) [in the air]!’ (Yusuf: 94)

The word lamma can also be used for negation. Allah says, ‘The Bedouin says, “We have attained to faith.” Say [unto them, O Muhammad], “You have not [yet] attained to faith”; you should [rather] say, “We have [outwardly] surrendered” – for [true] faith has not yet entered your hearts”’ (al-Hujurat: 14). In other words, faith had not yet taken root in their hearts.

The term lamma connotes the idea that faith shall be allowed to take root in their hearts at a later stage. When the word lamma is used in the sense of negation, it is similar to the term lam, but it is slightly different from the word lam because the latter speaks of the past time and its negation is not connected with the actual moment when the words are uttered, even if the situation might change. As for the term lamma, its negation is connected with the actual time during which the word is spoken and its use portends that the situation may change. Thus, we understand the words of the Lord, ‘Verily, unto each and all will Your Lord give their full due for whatever [good or evil] they may have done: behold, He is aware of all that they do!’ (Hud: 111) to mean that both the obedient and the disobedient shall be brought to account and rewarded or punished when the moment of remuneration comes to pass—the Day of Judgement.

The word lamma puts forth the notion that the punishment expected to occur in this world is divinely postponed for the disbelievers until the Day of Judgment. Then, you come upon the word la-yuwfiyannahum in which the letter la stands for a swearing article. The True Lord swears that He will compensate them fairly with either goodly rewards or punishments.

And Allah Glorified is He is fully Aware of His servants' actions, and He knows these actions before they happen, but when they take place, they cannot be forgotten or overlooked because they are known by the All-Aware Who possesses the precise knowledge. Being aware is different from being knowledgeable for the knowledgeable person might have a general picture of things, but the aware person is the one trained extensively in a specialized field. And that is why the Divine Names of ‘the Aware’ and ‘the Subtle’ usually appear together because ‘the Aware’ is He Who knows the location of things, and the 'the Subtle' is He Who knows how to arrive at the location of those things. For example, you might know the location where some man is hiding in a mountain. This knowledge and this information are not enough to reach the place where this man is hiding. This would require a little more; it would require precision and subtlety.

Allah Glorified is He talks about Musa (Moses) peace be upon him to cheer up Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him for some people who disbelieved in his Message said, 'If Allah tends to inflict those who reject His Message with a punishment, then why has He not brought a punishment upon us?' Thus, these particular verses of the chapter of Hud serve to inform the disbelievers that Allah Glorified is He will most certainly bring down punishment upon them. Therefore, be careful not to let them trick you—O Muhammad—in any way; do not let them chaffer with you over anything, such as when they said, 'We shall worship your God for a year, and you shall worship our deities for a year'. Allah Glorified is He has previously put an end to this particular matter when He has revealed His Words: 'Say [Prophet], "O Disbelievers! I do not worship what you worship, you do not worship what I worship, I will never worship what you worship...' (al-Kafirun: 1-4). Thus, the matter was decisively brought to an end—for there can be no bargaining when it comes to matters of faith. And we know that faith is a matter connected with the heart, and there can be no negotiation in such a matter, and the complete and final rupture of one's relationship with those who would seek to bargain on such an issue is obligatory, for there can be no chaffering when it comes to faith. It is not a case of human politics, rather, it is a matter that comes from the Lord and is completely dependent on Him. So Allah Glorified is He says, '...I do not worship what you worship, you do not worship what I worship, I will never worship what you worship...' (al-Kafirun: 2-4). These verses impart the listener and the reader with a strong sense that the disbelievers will remain steadfast in their worship of false deities, and that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him will remain steadfast in his worship of Allah Glorified is He. These verses also indicate that the Name of 'Allah' shall be raised high, for immediately following the chapter of al-Kafirun, Allah Glorified is He says, 'When Allah's help comes and He opens up your way [Prophet, and when you see people embracing Allah's faith in crowds, celebrate the praise of your Lord and ask His forgiveness; He is always ready to accept repentance.' (an-Nasr: 1-3)

Back to the chapter of Hud; Allah Glorified is He says:

فَٱسْتَقِمْ كَمَآ أُمِرْتَ وَمَن تَابَ مَعَكَ وَلَا تَطْغَوْاْ إِنَّهُۥ بِمَا تَعْمَلُونَ بَصِيرٌ ﴿١١٢﴾

So keep to the right course as you have been commanded, together with those who have turned to God with you. Do not overstep the limits, for He sees everything you do [112]
(The Quran, Hud: 112)

Al-istiqama (keeping to the right course) means not to swerve or to lean one way or the other—even by a hair—and this is not an easily achievable matter because the grey area—in between maintaining the right course and veering off course—can sometimes be very narrow. For example, when you look at a lighted area and a shaded area, sometimes the shaded area eats into the lighted area, and at other times the lighted area eats into the shaded area. It would be difficult indeed—no matter how precise the measuring equipment is—to determine the line that separates between the shaded area and the lighted one.

Thus, separating something from its opposite can be difficult. And that is why remaining steadfast on the right course is a truly arduous task. When these verses were revealed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him he said, 'The chapter of Hud and its sisters have turned my hair grey.' And had Allah Glorified is He not said in His noble Book, 'Be mindful of Allah as much as you can …' (at-Taghabun: 16), and had this verse not been revealed, Muslims would have been completely exhausted. This above-mentioned verse had been revealed after the following one, '...be mindful of Allah as is His due…' (Al-'Imran: 102). And this proved to be difficult for the companions of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. So, Allah Glorified is He revealed the following verse that relieved the burden of the ummah (followers of Islam) of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him 'Be mindful of Allah as much as you can …' (at-Taghabun: 16). Thus, the Divine Command to remain unwavering on the straight course requires the precise adherence to Allah's orders and proscriptions such that we veer neither to one side nor to the other. Thus, maintaining the straight course requires our full concentration.

We can never be inattentive or forgetful. So Allah Glorified is He says, ‘So keep to the right course as you have been commanded, together with those who have turned to Allah with you...’ (Hud: 112). This represents Allah’s command to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that he should not feel hopeless by the strong resistance of Quraysh to his message, for they will fall, one after the other, day after day.

Allah's words, ‘...Do not overstep the limits, for He sees everything you do.’ (Hud: 112) mean that we must not transcend the boundaries of righteousness, for to oppress others means to have overstepped these boundaries. Therefore, we learn that religion has determined the boundaries of things; however, the boundaries of Allah’s commands differ from that of His prohibition, for if Allah Glorified is He commands you to do something, He thereby orders you to remain steadfast to this practise and to never transgress it, as He says, ‘...these are the bounds set by Allah: do not overstep them…’ (al-Baqara: 229). These words concern Allah's commands, but concerning His proscriptions, He says, ‘…these are the bounds set by Allah, so do not go near them…’ (al-Baqara: 187); that is you should stay completely clear of those bounds. Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him says, ‘He who falls into doubtful things falls into that which is unlawful, just as a shepherd who grazes his cattle near a pasture declared prohibited (by the king); he is likely to stray into the pasture. Mind you, every king has a protected pasture and Allah's involved limit is that which He has declared unlawful.’(1) When Allah Glorified is He forbids us from approaching something, it amounts to a precautionary, preventive righteousness. In effect, it allows you to view things, which are not necessarily prohibited, as belonging in the category of forbidden things. Thus, for example, when it comes to the prohibition of alcohol, Allah Glorified is He orders us to shun it, that is, to stay clear of all that which has to do with alcohol so that a Muslim never finds himself in the same place where alcohol is to be found.

Allah Glorified is He also recommends us to be steadfast when it comes to matters of obedience, as He says, ‘...pay what is due on the day of harvest…’ (al-An‘am: 141). In this instance, Allah Glorified is He orders us not to give out too much to protect us from that moment when we recall how bountiful was our harvest, but how, at the present moment, we find that we have nothing to sustain us, for a man might give away much of his harvest if it happens to be plentiful, but then difficult circumstances arise and so he says, ‘I wish I had not given so much away’. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He safeguards us against a situation such as these. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him says, ‘Do good deeds properly, sincerely and moderately and know that your deeds will not make you enter paradise, and that the deed most beloved to Allah is the one that is regular and constant, even though it were little.’(1) So the religion is powerful and firm(2) and whoever makes the religion a rigour, it will overpower him.(3) Thus, we find that Allah Glorified is He and Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him are wise and more knowledgeable than us. Allah Glorified is He does not only order us against trespassing on that which has been forbidden but He also orders us not to overstep the boundaries of propriety when it comes to that which is lawful. Accordingly, He prescribes kindness, leniency, and clemency, and that a human being allows himself the freedom to choose. For example: a human being commits himself to praying twenty prayers every night, and he vows to perform this rite as a consecration to Allah Glorified is He, but when he actually starts practicing this vow, he realises how hard it is, and he draws the ire of his soul. That is why Allah Glorified is He orders us to remain steadfast and not to overstep the boundaries of propriety when it comes to Allah’s Commandments and Proscriptions. Thus, the precaution applied to matters of worship is more comprehensive for those who wish to be steadfast. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him says, ‘That which is lawful is clear and that which is unlawful is clear, and between the two of them are doubtful matters about which many people do not know. Thus, he who avoids doubtful matters clears himself in regard to his religion and his honour.’(4) And that is why Allah Glorified is He—the Wise, Issuer of Decrees—orders us to take preventive action, sometimes by going the extra distance—a positive preventive measure, and sometimes by keeping a safe distance—a negative preventive measure. For when you pray in a place other than the Sacred Mosque, it suffices that you orient yourself towards the Ka'ba, whereas when you pray inside the Ka'ba, you know that the Ka'ba is divided into two parts: one part is built high above the ground, and the other part is called al-hatim and that is a part of the Ka'ba, but the available funds at the time of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him were running short, so they did not build it. That is why you orient your vision towards the high structure that is definitely a part of the Ka'ba, and this is a form of negative prevention.

As for positive preventive measures, consider for example the circumambulation around the Ka'ba. People might be densely packed around the Ka'ba itself, and thus the circumstances would force you to make the circumambulation around the entire sanctuary. This would mean a longer circumambulation and, therefore, it is a form of positive prevention. Thus, when it comes to the prayer, one takes negative preventive measures, and when it comes to the circumambulation one takes positive preventive measures.

Therefore, we find that the nature of the preventive measure determines the meaning of the notion 'steadfastness'. Allah Glorified is He concludes the verse by saying, '...for He sees everything you do.' (Hud: 112) And in the previous verse He says, '...He is aware of everything they do.' (Hud: 111) We have come to understand what the word Al-Khabir (All Aware) means; as for the word Al-Baseer (All-Seeing), it means that Allah Glorified is He knows about every action performed in the religious context because the actions of worship are visual.

Then Allah Glorified is He says:

وَلَا تَرْكَنُوٓا۟ إِلَى ٱلَّذِينَ ظَلَمُوا۟ فَتَمَسَّكُمُ ٱلنَّارُ وَمَا لَكُم
مِّن دُونِ ٱللَّهِ مِنْ أَوْلِيَآءَ ثُمَّ لَا تُنصَرُونَ ﴿١١٣﴾

Do not rely on those who do evil, or the Fire may touch you, and then you will have no one to protect you from God, nor will you be helped [113] (The Quran, Hud: 113)

The disbelievers, as we know, had proposed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that he worship their deities for a year, and that they worship Allah for a year, but Allah Glorified is He had put a decisive end to this matter. And here this matter is emphasised when He says, ‘Do not rely on those who do evil...’ (Hud: 113).

Now the word ar-rukun means to incline towards something or someone. It means tranquillity, peace, and mercy. Thus, to incline towards one who is unjust means that you convince him that his power has sway over your calling. The word also means helping this unjust person and doing his bidding, also to justify his injustice to people. The great evil of the world is that people incline towards the unjust people because when people incline towards those who are unjust this encourages the latter to persist in their injustice, and intensify their efforts in being unjust. And the lowest rank when it comes to inclining towards those who are unjust is not preventing him from wronging another person. And the highest rank of inclining towards an unjust person is to convince him that his injustice is acceptable, and to convince other people that this injustice is acceptable. And if you were to research the state of injustice in the whole world, you would find that the evil that plagues human societies stems from inclining towards those who are unjust, but if you distance yourself from the unjust person, and if you cut off all ties with him, he will think that the reason why you avoid him is because you have confidence in some other sturdy pillar, and so he loses confidence in himself, and takes account of the power which you have sought refuge with. This represents a weakening of his power, isolation for him and a deterring factor so that he might give up his injustice.

To incline towards one who is unjust renders a man liable to be touched by the hellfire since this act of relying upon the unjust has negative consequences as Allah Glorified is He says, ‘Do not rely on those who do evil, or the Fire may touch you, and then you will have no one to protect you from Allah, nor will you be helped.’ (Hud: 113) Therefore, when you incline towards those who are unjust, you put yourself at odds with Allah's Doctrine; and thus, He abandons you and does not grant you victory, for there is no ally and there is no granter of victory except Allah Glorified is He.

Afterwards, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَأَقِمِ ٱلصَّلَوٰةَ طَرَفَيِ ٱلنَّهَارِ وَزُلَفًا مِّنَ ٱلَّيۡلِۚ إِنَّ
ٱلۡحَسَنَٰتِ يُذۡهِبۡنَ ٱلسَّيِّـَٔاتِۚ ذَٰلِكَ ذِكۡرَىٰ لِلذَّٰكِرِينَ ١١٤

[Prophet], keep up the prayer at both ends of the day, and during parts of the night, for good things drive bad away – this is a reminder for those who are aware [114] (The Quran, Hud: 114)

This is a command to do good deeds issued by Allah Glorified is He to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. We notice that these particular verses in the chapter of Hud include commands and prohibitions. The commands are always to do good deeds, and the prohibitions are always to stay clear of evil. And we notice that Allah Glorified is He says, ‘So keep to the right course as you have been commanded, together with those who have turned to Allah with you...’ (Hud: 112). Then He directs the prohibition to this ummah (The followers of Islam) as a whole, ‘Do not overstep the limits...’ (Hud: 112). Allah Glorified is He does not say, ‘Keep to the right course and do not overstep the limits’ because the command to do righteous deeds is directed at Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and his community, but in the prohibition of evil, the speech is addressed to the community only, and this emphasises the elevated status of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Likewise, Allah Glorified is He directs the address to the community of Messenger Muhammad saying, ‘Do not rely on those who do evil...’ (Hud: 113). And he does not say, ‘[Prophet] do not rely on those who do evil....’

And in the verse which we are currently reflecting on, Allah Glorified is He says to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and to his community, ‘Keep up the prayer ...’ (Hud: 114). And the word iqama (keeping up) means to execute the order correctly and perfectly, just as houses are erected, and to renders it conducive to the purpose that is asked for. One says, ‘aqam ash-shay` meaning one rendered it conducive to the goal to which it is assigned. And Allah Glorified is He says, ‘Keep up the prayer at both ends of the day.’ (Hud: 114) meaning, its ends from one side, and its other end from the other because at-taraf of something is its ends, or its sides, The two ends are determined by the middle area of a thing. In other words, the middle area is the buffer between the two extremities. Thus, all that which is to the right of the middle area is considered a taraf (one side), and all that which is to the left of the middle area is considered the other taraf (side). In fact, any area not pertaining to the middle area is considered a taraf.

The middle area is usually considered the point which marks the absolute middle. Everything to the right of this middle point is divided into ten portions, and everything to the left of it is divided into another ten portions, and every one of those segments on either side is considered a taraf. So, when Allah Glorified is He says, ‘Keep up the prayer at both ends of the day...’ (Hud: 114), we should realise that, for us, the day begins with the dawn of the early morning. This is the first portion of the day where we offer our fajr (dawn) prayers. Then comes adh-dhur (noon) prayers. If adh-zhur occurs before midday, we consider it as occurring before the middle of the day, and if it occurs after midday, we consider it as an occurrence pertaining to after the middle of the day. After adh-zhur comes al-`asr (afternoon), and this represents another portion of the day. Allah's Words, ‘... and during parts of the night...’ (Hud: 114) require that we understand that the word zulfa is the plural of zalfa which is taken from the verb azlf which means to draw close to something. Knowing that the plural form implies at least three or more; and we know that at night we have the maghrib prayer and the `isha` prayer; that is why we find that Imam Abu Hanifa Allah rest his soul considers the witr prayer an obligatory rite. He said that the `isha` prayer is a ‘must’, and the witr prayer is an obligatory rite. There is a difference between rites that are considered a ‘must’ and those that are considered obligatory.

Immediately following this, Allah Glorified is He says, ‘... for good things drive bad away...’ (Hud: 114). This remark places prayer at the top of the list of good deeds. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him has clarified this point when he said, ‘The five (daily) prayers and the Friday prayer to the Friday prayer expiate whatever minor sins may be committed in between, so long as major sins are avoided.’(1)

The religious scholars have different opinions when it comes to the definitions of sayye`a (a sin) and hasana (a good deed). Some of them maintain that the hasana is that for which Allah Glorified is He has prescribed a goodly reward, and a sayye`a is that for which Allah Glorified is He has prescribed a punishment. The very first hasana in the Islamic religion is that you testify that there is no other deity worthy of worship except Allah Glorified is He. This good deed expiates one's previous state of disbelief; for good deeds drive the bad ones away. That is why some of the religious scholars have said that a Muslim who has committed a minor or a major sin does not dwell eternally in Hellfire; for if the good deed of believing in Allah Glorified is He expiates the bad deed of disbelieving, then does his faith not have the power to expiate the sins lesser than disbelief? And thus, a Muslim's punishment is mitigated somewhat in that he receives his punishment in hellfire, but he does not stay there forever for we cannot equate one who believes in Allah with one who does not believe in Him. Belief in Allah Glorified is He is the highest kind good deed, and it is one that expiates the sin of disbelief; and it necessarily has the capacity to expiate lesser bad deeds. Some of the religious scholars have wondered: is it the obligatory acts which, in their capacity as good deeds, expiate the bad deeds? Other religious scholars replied: there are some sound hadith of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him which mention some good deeds which do not belong to the obligatory acts. Prophet Muhammad said that the fasting of the day of `arafa one year, then fasting on the day of `arafa the next year, expiates all sins that one had committed in that year. Prophet Muhammad said that a man who accepts Allah's blessings by saying, 'Praise be to Allah Glorified is He who has showered me profusely with His gifts, while I have no power nor any strength of my own; and praise be to Allah who clothed me, while I have no power nor any strength of my own.'; will expiate all his sins. Also, that if you utter the following prayer, 'Glorified is Allah, and praised, and there is no god but Allah, and Allah is the Greatest, and there is no power and no strength save with Allah the Highest, the Great'; will drive the sins away.

(1) [Narrated by Muslim]

Thus, the good deeds should be taken in an absolute sense if they be of the obligatory acts. These good deeds drive the bad deeds away. The bad deed is the action for which Allah has promised to punish its doer. Some religious scholars also wondered: the bad deed is an action, and when an action is performed it is registered and recorded, so how is it that a good deed can expiate a bad one? Others answered: driving the sin away occurs through the one who records your actions, and thus Allah Glorified is He erases it from your record of sins, or through Allah's Forgiveness; and thus, He does not punish you for the sin. Driving the sins away may also mean erasing the sinful actions and not recording what happened; or Allah Glorified is He records it if it happens because it is He who says, ‘He does not utter a single word without an ever-present watcher.’ (Qaf: 18) Allah Glorified is He also says, ‘Over you stand watchers, noble recorders who know what you do.’ (al-Infitar: 10-11) And thus driving the sins away occurs either by erasing them from your record of sins, or that they remain recorded in that record, but Allah Glorified is He forgives you for committing them such that you are absolved from the punishment. Allah Glorified is He says, ‘As for those who avoid grave sins and foul acts, though they may commit small sins, your Lord is ample in forgiveness.’ (an-Najm: 32) The avoidance of major sins does not prevent the small ones from occurring.

And Allah Glorified is He says, ‘…for prayer restrains outrageous and unacceptable behaviour…’ (al-’Ankabut: 45).

And when we look at the times of prayer, we find that they are five. Thus, whosever’s heart clings to the prayers, his heart will be preoccupied with the movements of the prayer whenever he prays, then night time comes and he sleeps. And the mind of those who commit a sin will be preoccupied with this for a time, and were it not for the coming of the prayer time, he would feel a sense of loss, but when the time of prayer comes, his heart concentrates on Allah Glorified is He and he asks for His forgiveness.

And when a sin is committed once, it might not be committed a second time; or that the prayer restrains outrageous and unacceptable behaviour by virtue of the time it takes to get oneself ready for it, for he who sets in the gatherings to gossip about others, or he who acts unjustly towards others, when such a person hears the call to prayers, he gets up and performs his ablution. During the time of making ablution, praying, and concluding his prayer, he ceases to harm people. There are many actions from among the obligatory acts and the good deeds which expiate one’s sins. A Muslim must busy himself with increasing his good deeds, and he should not busy himself with trying to erase past sins because for every one good deed performed, a person is rewarded with the reward of ten good deeds, and he may have it doubled many times if Allah Glorified is He wills. As for when a person commits a bad deed, it is written only as a single bad deed. Allah Glorified is He concludes the noble verse by saying, '...this is a reminder for those who are aware.' (Hud: 114) This means that keeping up prayer at the beginning and at the end of the day, and during the early watches of the night—constitutes good deeds which expiate sins. In such a practise, there is a reminder to the soul of that which had been forgotten. In other words, these thoughts existed in the past, but forgetfulness covered it over, and thus receiving the piece of news for the first time removed the ignorance, and receiving it for the second time, reminds you of the commandment because the ill which afflicts human beings is that the things which pass through the human psyche, one after the other, they pass from the centre of one's consciousness and are then pushed to the margins such that a man becomes forgetful of that which is located in the margins of his consciousness. Then, there is a real need for the coming of something new to remind him of what had been relegated to the margins of consciousness. For example, if you throw a stone into a pond, this stone becomes the epicentre of several concentric circles which form around it. These circles then spread out as far as the human eye can see. The proof is that a man might recall events that happened twenty years ago or more. The memory of these events existed in the man's subconscious, and then some new event occurred and brought these memories back. The human mind is like a photographic camera which can capture memories sometimes in the first try, and sometimes in the second try or more. To capture a memory from the first try occurs because the mind is, at that moment, clear of any thoughts. We find that, for those who lost their sight, Allah Glorified is He bestows other blessings upon them, namely, an immense capacity for memorising knowledge because when a blind person hears knowledge being spoken, his mind is not preoccupied with the visual stimuli which tend to distract one's centre of consciousness. As for the person who has ability to see, his centre of consciousness might be distracted by what is passing in front of him. Thus, he might have to listen to the knowledge being spoken more than once, until there comes a moment when the centre of consciousness is receptive and is free of distractions, and then the knowledge will have a chance to become fixed in the memory. This is how remembrance operates because it stirs memories that are latent in the subconscious and calls them up to the centre of consciousness. Thus, if you were distracted from obeying Allah Glorified is He by turning to disobedience, remembrance can remind you of the responsibility that comes with committing a sinful act, namely, punishment. That is why it is said that, ‘there is no goodness in a good action that leads to Hellfire, and there is no evil in an evil action that leads to paradise’.

Allah Glorified is He says in the verse which we are now examining, ‘[Prophet], keep up the prayer at both ends of the day, and during parts of the night...’ (Hud: 114). And when you look at the pillars of the Islamic faith, you will see that, first, you testify—that there is no God but Allah, and that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah—at least once during your lifetime. The second pillar is prayer, and this is a pillar that can never be waived, for it is required of us five times a day. While offering prayer, you utter the testament of faith, and you sacrifice a bit of your time, so that Allah Glorified is He blesses the rest of your time. In prayer, you also abstain from food and drink and all that which breaks the fast, and when you offer prayer, you turn to face Allah’s Sacred House. Thus, all the other rites of the Islamic faith manifest themselves in prayer. Indeed, prayer contains within itself some elements of the five pillars of Islam. That is why prayer can never be dropped, for if you cannot pray standing up, you can pray sitting down and if you are incapable of movement, you can even pray with moving your eyelids. And thus, you will find that in prayer are contained all the pillars of the faith, and due to its importance, it remains with a man until his very last breath. Due to the importance of prayer, it should be offered until the last moments of one's life. It assumed its importance in the Islamic legislation since it is an important part of the religious obligations. All Islamic obligations came about through revelation, except for prayer. The latter came directly from Allah Glorified is He Who summoned Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him so as to charge him with the commandment of prayer. It is thus a special compliment to the community of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him for it has been prescribed, whilst he was in intimate proximity to His Lord Glorified is He. That is why Allah Glorified is He has made prayer a means for Prophet

Muhammad's ummah (The followers of Islam) to get closer to Allah Glorified is He; therefore, prayer is the rite that will always remain. It is said that `Ali Allah be pleased with him approached a group of people and asked them, ‘Which verse in Allah's Book is dearest to you?’ meaning which verse in the Quran imparts a greater sense of hope, reassurance and glad tiding—that Allah Glorified is He will accept us, forgive us and have mercy on us. Some of them said that it is Allah's Words, ‘Allah does not forgive the worship of others beside Him—though He does forgive whoever He wills for lesser sins...’ (an-Nisa’: 116). `Ali Allah be pleased with him said that it is indeed a blessed verse, but it is not the one he had in mind. In other words, this verse truly does give us hope, reassurance and glad tiding, but it is not the one to which he was referring. Others then came forth and said that it is Allah's Words, ‘Yet anyone who does evil or wrongs his own soul and then asks Allah for forgiveness will find Him Most Forgiving and Merciful.’ (an-Nisa’: 110) `Ali again said that is indeed a blessed verse, but it is not the one he was looking for. Then others proffered the following verse, ‘My servants who have harmed yourselves by your own excess, do not despair of Allah’s Mercy. Allah forgives all sins: He is truly the Most Forgiving, the Most Merciful.’ (az-Zumar: 53) `Ali Allah be pleased with him said once more that it is a blessed verse indeed, but it is not the one he had in mind. Then others suggested the following verse, ‘those who remember Allah and implore forgiveness for their sins if they do something shameful or wrong themselves– who forgives sins but Allah?’ (Al-‘Imran: 135) `Ali Allah be pleased with him again replied that it is a blessed verse, but not quite the one he was looking for. Then the people became silent and stopped offering their suggestions, whereupon `Ali Allah be pleased with him, said ‘What are you thinking O Muslims?’ It is as if he was asking them why they had gone silent. They said, ‘We cannot suggest anything else.’ Thus, `Ali Allah be pleased with him, used the suspense as a basis on which he built up what he was going to say. They leaned towards him, ears perked, and he said, ‘I have heard my beloved Messenger peace and blessings be upon him say, ‘The most inspiring, hope-giving verse in Allah's Book is His saying, ‘[Prophet], keep up the prayer at both ends of the day, and during parts of the night, for good things drive bad away— this is a reminder for those who are aware.’ (Hud: 114)

Prophet Muhammad then said, ‘O `Ali, when any one of you finishes his ablution, his sins fall away from his limbs such that, by the time he turns to face Allah with a sincere heart, Allah forgives him for all of his sins, and he becomes in a clean state of sins as if his mother had just given birth to him. Then if he commits another sin in between prayers, it gets recorded.’ Then he counted the prayers one by one and said, ‘Between fajr (dawn) and zhuhr (noon), and between zhuhr and `asr (afternoon), and between `asr and maghrib (sunset), and between maghrib and `isha` (night), and between `isha` and fajr (dawn).’ Then he said, ‘O `Ali, verily the five prayers are, for my community, as a river running next to someone’s house. If there happened to be an impurity sticking to the body of any one of you, and then he were to bathe himself in the ocean, would there still be any impurities left on him? Indeed, by Allah, that is what prayers are for my community.’

That is why if we look at any righteous deeds, we will find that every deed has a period of time in the life of man. As for prayer, its time is the entire human lifespan. Afterwards, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَٱصۡبِرۡ فَإِنَّ ٱللَّهَ لَا يُضِيعُ أَجۡرَ ٱلۡمُحۡسِنِينَ ﴿١١٥﴾

Be steadfast: God does not let the rewards of those who do good go to waste[115] (The Quran, Hud: 115)

The word `isbir (be steadfast) serves to emphasise righteousness in all its aspects. Allah Glorified is He also says, ‘Order your people to pray, and pray steadfastly yourself...’ (Ta Ha: 132). There are two types of patience. In the context of religious observances, ‘patience’ is displayed towards the hardships of obedience such as getting up from bed early to perform the fajr prayer; one also demonstrates patience when it comes to refraining from carnal pleasures. And thus, we learn that patience is required in two kinds of ways: in an active way to perform our religious duties, and in a passive way to refrain from the carnal pleasures. And we know that the road to paradise is paved with arduous religious duties—therefore, perform them dutifully—while the road to Hell is paved with carnal pleasures—therefore, refrain from them. Imagine, for instance, that someone wants to enjoy a steak, but cannot afford it. He thus remains patient and refrains from begging. That is why the ascetics say that there is no such thing called 'pricey', but there is such a thing as 'cheapness' of soul. That is why we find those who say, 'If the price of something rises beyond my means, I will not buy it, and the cheapest it will be is when it is expensive'.

And Allah Glorified is He says, '…bear anything that happens to you steadfastly…' (Luqman: 17). And here He says, 'be steadfast: Allah does not let the rewards of those who do good go to waste.' (Hud: 115). It is they—through their own works—who earned themselves the rank of ihsan, that is, they obliged themselves to follow all that which Allah Glorified is He had prescribed, and they performed even more than what was been ordered. This includes prayer, fasting, giving of the prescribed alms and the pilgrimage to Allah's Sacred House because religious rites are not offered randomly from worshippers to the worshipped; rather, it is the worshipped that determines exactly how His worshippers can earn proximity to Him. Try not to attain to the status of ihsan through taking a vow because it can then become hard for you to carry out that which you have vowed to perform. Rather, you should make the time of supererogatory worship your own choice such that you do not take a vow to get closer to Allah Glorified is He and then you break it. That would be as if—Allah forbid—you had tried Allah's Kindness, but had not found it to be to your liking. This is indeed a transgression on your part.

If you see the abundant light of someone who has reached the stature of ihsan, do not deny it, or else you would equalise between one who stopped at what Allah Glorified is He has imposed upon him, and he who has done more than what Allah Glorified is He has imposed yet from the same kind of His obligations. Try this yourself, hold yourself to Allah's commandments by honouring the times of prayer, and rise in the early hours of the morning and pray the fajr at the mosque, then make sure to perfect your work, and when azh-zhuhr arrives, go and pray it at the mosque, and try to pray as many supererogatory units of prayer as you can, and you will find that the darkness deep inside your soul has left, and that spiritual light, beyond the perception of the senses, has filled that space. Therefore, do not envy those who engage in such spiritual practise when you find that their insight has been enlightened by Allah Glorified is He through His divinely gifted means of perception.

That is why we do not find anyone who has attained such stations of spiritual enlightenment and purity claiming something that he does not have. In fact, one of them might know certain things about another human being who is not religiously disciplined, but he does not tell him about it, because Allah Glorified is He has bestowed qualities upon him which he must not vainly show off. And when Allah Glorified is He presents this matter in the story of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him when he and his servant found the righteous servant, He wants to put limits on those who engage in this discipline and those who do not. Allah Glorified is He describes the righteous servant saying, '…one of Our servants – a man to whom We had granted Our mercy and whom We had given knowledge of Our own.' (al-Kahf: 65) And the righteous servant told Musa (Moses) peace be upon him 'You will not be able to bear with me patiently.' (al-Kahf: 67) Then the righteous servant respectfully explained to Musa (Moses) peace be upon him the reason why he might not be able to have patience, and said, 'How could you be patient in matters beyond your knowledge?' (al-Kahf: 68). But, Musa (Moses) peace be upon him responded, "God willing, you will find me patient. I will not disobey you in any way." (al-Kahf: 69) Whereupon the righteous servant said, 'If you follow me then, do not query anything I do before I mention it to you myself.' (al-Kahf: 71). But, events ensued; and Musa (Moses) peace be upon him was unable to remain patient, and so the righteous servant told him, 'This is where you and I part company...' (al-Kahf: 78). And this is an eternal ruling that those who practise the spiritual discipline—those who have attained to the rank of ihsan—cannot be equated with those who are not used to such a discipline. Those who do not practise the spiritual discipline should maintain a respectful attitude, as should those who do practise it; the latter should excuse those who do not practise the spiritual discipline as the former do not know what they know. And if those who engage in the spiritual practise excuse those who do not practise the spiritual discipline; and conversely, if those who do not practise the spiritual discipline maintain a respectful attitude towards those who do—the cosmic equilibrium would be restored.

Allah Glorified is He describes the status of ihsan and the reward of those who attain it, when He says, 'The righteous will be in Gardens with [flowing] springs. They will receive their Lord's gifts because of the good they did before.' (adh-Dhariyat: 15-16) And Allah Glorified is He explains the different stages of ihsan for us, and how they are categorised under what He has ordered; He says, 'They were sleeping only little at night.' (adh-Dhariyat: 17) Allah Glorified is He does not make it obligatory in Islam that a Muslim should abstain from sleep at night except for a little time at night, for the Muslim is required to pray the `isha` prayer, then he can sleep until fajr. Allah Glorified is He continues describing the stages of ihsan saying, 'They were praying at dawn for Allah's forgiveness' (adh-Dhariyat: 18). Allah Glorified is He does not make such practises obligatory for Muslims. However, those who wish to ascend to the station of ihsan should do so. Allah Glorified is He also says, '...They give a rightful share of their wealth to the beggar and the deprived...' (adh-Dhariyat: 19). Here, Allah Glorified is He does not indicate a precise amount. Rather, this is left undetermined. He only has obligated az-zakat (the prescribed alms) on the Muslim. However, he who aspires to the rank of ihsan gives out of his money to the beggars and the deprived. And thus, a Muslim ascends to the rank of ihsan and into the love and intimacy of Allah Glorified is He. Allah Glorified is He has the highest example, we, for example, find that when a person gives someone else, he gives him out of his own private wealth, and he showers him with his talents—whether this be knowledge or money—so what do we think of he who places himself in a position to receive Allah's love?

Then Allah Glorified is He says:

فَلَوۡلَا كَانَ مِنَ ٱلۡقُرُونِ مِن قَبۡلِكُمۡ أُوْلُواْ بَقِيَّةٖ يَنۡهَوۡنَ عَنِ ٱلۡفَسَادِ فِي ٱلۡأَرۡضِ إِلَّا قَلِيلٗا
مِّمَّنۡ أَنجَيۡنَا مِنۡهُمۡۗ وَٱتَّبَعَ ٱلَّذِينَ ظَلَمُواْ مَآ أُتۡرِفُواْ فِيهِ وَكَانُواْ مُجۡرِمِينَ ﴿١١٦﴾

If only there had been, among the generations before your time, people with a remnant of good sense, to forbid corruption on the earth! We saved only a few of them, while the unjust pursued the enjoyment of plenty, and persisted in sin [116] (The Quran, Hud: 116)

Allah Glorified is He points us to the fact that only substantial things can withstand the test of time, for time comes to erase those things which are insignificant and what is lower than them. The only remaining thing is the strong one because it transcends time altogether. Therefore, the word baqeyya means the good things which remain. Allah Glorified is He shows us that He has destroyed the communities that came before because no group among them had forbidden corruption on the earth. Thus, the destruction came when those who enjoin the good and forbid the evil stopped their resistance to the corruption on the earth.

And Allah Glorified is He gives us examples of that which is virtuous, that which can withstand the tide of time; for in the story of Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him Allah Glorified is He says, ‘and to Midyan, We sent their brother Shu`aib (Jethro). He said, “My people worship Allah. You have no god other than Him. Do not give short measure or short weight. I see you are prospering, but I fear you will have torment on an overwhelming Day. My people, in fairness, give full measure and weight. Do not withhold from people things that are rightly theirs, and do not spread corruption in the land. What lasts with Allah is best for you, if you are believers.”’ (Hud: 84-86) This means that giving short measure and short weight could give the trader more, but he pays no attention to that which he has in store. That is why Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him says, ‘My people, in fairness, give full measure and weight. Do not withhold from people things that are rightly theirs, and do not spread corruption in the land.…’ (Hud: 85).

So, if you look at something that has gone, and you possess the power to make use of it through your capacity of understanding, you would find it in store and waiting for you in the Hereafter. We have the best example in the attitude of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him with `Ai`sha Allah be pleased with her when he asked her about an ewe that was gifted to her. She knew that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him used to prefer the meat of its shoulder, so she gave away all ewe’s meat except for a part of the shoulder, so when he asked her, ‘What did you do with the meat of the ewe?’ She replied, ‘I gave it all away except for the shoulder.’ This is how realistically `Ai`sha Allah be pleased with her looked upon this situation; the only remaining part of the ewe was the shoulder, and she gave away the rest. So Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in a pious religious gesture said, ‘All of it remains except for the shoulder.’(1) This is how Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him conceived of the situation; he looked to the ultimate goodness of the part of the ewe which was given away. Corroborating this, there is another hadith in which Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘O son of Adam, is there anything that is your belonging except that which you have consumed and exhausted, or which you wore and was then worn out, or which you gave as charity and sent it forward.’(1) And the Quran emphasises this perspective, and reminds us of that which is stored away, so Allah Glorified is He says, ‘Wealth and children are the attractions of this worldly life, but lasting good works have a better reward with your Lord...’ (al-Kahf: 46). And Allah Glorified is He describes this reward that lies in waiting as, ‘...A better reward with your Lord and better grounds for hope...’ (al-Kahf: 46). And in another verse He says, ‘…and good deeds of lasting merit are best and most rewarding in your Lord’s sight.’ (Maryam: 76) Therefore, you must look at the good deeds of lasting merits because it is that which one can count upon. Allah Glorified is He mentions this more than once in the Quran; He says, ‘Even though the Hereafter is better and more lasting.’ (al-A‘la: 17) And He also says, ‘...that which is with Allah is better and more lasting...’ (al-Qasas: 60). Therefore, be wary of looking upon that which has gone and will never return, always look upon that whose value is everlasting. Whenever unfortunate events deprive the believer of something or another, we find that the one whose belief is superficial becomes agitated and worried over what has been taken away, but we find that the one with firm belief is thankful to Allah; Glorified is He for what is left over. Here we also have the example of `Abdullah ibn Ja`far Allah be pleased with him when he severely injured his leg on his way to Syria. Once he reached the royal castle, the doctors looked at his leg and said, ‘We must give you anaesthesia and amputate your infected leg. He said, ‘By Allah, I would not like to be oblivious about remembrance of Allah even for a blink of an eye.’ This meant of course that he would have to undergo surgery without anaesthesia. And when his leg was amputated, and they wanted to take it out to be buried—so that it may, Allah willing, enter paradise before the rest of him does—he asked them to bring it him, and so they did; and he held it with his hand and said, ‘O Lord! Even if it may be that I have been tested by suffering the loss of a limb, indeed I have been absolved from such suffering in many other limbs.' This is how the believer conceived of his situation.

(1) [Narrated by Muslim]

And when the Quran speaks about the degrees and stations of faith, it says of some people, '...these will enter Paradise...' (Ghafir: 40). And regarding others it says, 'These will be given blessings and mercy from their Lord...' (al-Baqara: 157). Paradise will remain everlasting because Allah Glorified is He will sustain its existence, whereas His Mercy will remain everlasting as He remains Everlasting. And thus, the station of mercy is higher and loftier than the station of paradise. And thus, you find in every situation that which can be called 'the everlasting'.

Here Allah Glorified is He says, 'If only there had been, among the generations before your time, people with a remnant of good sense, to forbid corruption on the earth! We saved only a few of them....' (Hud: 116), meaning were it not for a select few people who—unlike the rest—are good, faithful and have certitude and oppose the spread of corruption on earth; were it not for them, Allah Glorified is He would have caused the earth to swallow up all those who dwell above it. Thus, that which endures from everything is the result of our choices and the tests that we endure as Allah Glorified is He says, '...the froth disappears, but what is of benefit to man stays behind....' (ar-Ra'd: 17) And in the modern age we say, 'survival of the fittest'. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He allows life to go on because of these select few who forbid the spread of corruption on Earth; for they act in consideration of Allah's clear directives. To follow these directives adds nothing to Allah's dominion, nor does it enhance any of His Attributes, for He has created the universe and endowed it with all the perfect qualities inherent in it. The role that the Divine directives play is that they regulate the life of the cosmos and the beings living in it. And thus, the directives of heaven end up benefiting Allah's creatures, and not Allah Glorified is He Who has created the cosmos with His Perfect Attributes. Read, if you will, His Words, 'He has raised up the sky. He has set the balance so that you may not exceed in the balance.' (ar-Rahman: 7-8) Thus, just as Allah Glorified is He has raised the sky without using any pillars, and just as He has made things stable and balanced; you ought to apply the principles of moderation in matters where you can exercise your freedom of choice, and you ought to consider matters with a very fine balance, for when equilibrium is disrupted, life on earth becomes corrupted. One of the ways in which equilibrium can be disrupted is when the person who is unemployed usurps the daily bread of the hardworking person. Then people see the unemployed person, living in luxury through robbing the provisions of the hardworking person, and they, therefore, imitate him, and thus corruption starts spreading.

Then we start to see talented people receding into mediocrity, working only to satisfy their basic needs, for if they were to expend any extra effort, there would be no justice to guarantee the fruit of their labour. Thus, life on earth becomes corrupted, the principles of justice become eclipsed, and societies fail to keep up with the pace of life. So, Allah Glorified is He says, ‘If only there had been, among the generations before your time, people with a remnant of good sense, to forbid corruption on the earth!’ (Hud: 116) It was Allah's Will to make the community of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him the best of all human communities, on the condition that they enjoin what is right and forbid what is wrong. Allah Glorified is He says, ‘[Believers], you are the best community singled out for people: you order what is right, forbid what is wrong...’ (Al-‘Imran: 110). Allah Glorified is He has willed that Prophet Muhammad’s community be the very last, for no other divine messages are destined to come after that of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. The earlier divine messages used to be revealed after righteousness had diminished amongst communities, and within human souls. Allah Glorified is He has set the Doctrine for the very first human beings. So, the man had internal conscience so that if he committed a sin, he would turn to Allah Glorified is He in repentance after having reprimanded himself. However, if he gets accustomed to committing misdeeds, his own self-reproaching soul would give up and he falls under the influence of his evil whisperings. In this case, he will find support among the community, but if the latter also becomes corrupt, Allah Glorified is He intervenes by sending messengers, but the community of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is exempt from all this because Allah Glorified is He has guaranteed that it will always have—until the Day of Judgment—individuals who call on people to be good and who enjoin what is good, and forbid what is wrong. That is why no prophet is destined to come after Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. For this reason, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him emphasised this fact saying, ‘The scholars from amongst my community are tantamount to the prophets of the Children of Israel.’(1) The scholar is anyone who knows even one of Allah’s rulings; and he is obliged to communicate it to people. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him also said, ‘May Allah bestow a radiating glow on the face of him who, upon hearing my sayings, teaches them and conveys them to those who did not hear them; for many a transmitter [of knowledge] is wiser than the receiver [of the knowledge].’(2)

Allah Glorified is He says, ‘...people with a remnant of good sense, to forbid corruption on the earth! We saved only a few of them, while the unjust pursued the enjoyment of plenty, and persisted in sin.’ (Hud: 116) Allah Glorified is He has saved a few of those who forbid the spread of corruption on earth. We find an example of this in the town located by the sea; whose fish would surface for them on the Sabbath, which was the day that they forbade themselves to engage in any fishing activities; then on the other days, all the fish would be gone. Allah Glorified is He says, ‘when some of them asked [their preachers], “Why do you bother preaching to people Allah will destroy, or at least punish severely?” [the preachers] answered, “In order to be free from your Lord’s blame, and so that they may perhaps take heed.” When they ignored [the warning] they were given, we saved those who forbade evil, and punished the wrongdoers severely because of their disobedience.’ (al-A’raf: 164-165) And thus, Allah Glorified is He has saved those from among that village who forbid evildoing. We may find two elements in societies. The first is that society in which there is no group of people to counter the forces of corruption. The second is when the door of luxury opens for society, which has a debasing effect on human beings; for you might find a person whose means render him incapable of living the high-life of luxury that he desires, so he resorts to bribery, theft, and extortion to supplement his income. All this starts when a human being sees another human being enjoying the luxuries of life, whereas his own means do not allow him to indulge in such luxuries. Allah says, regarding the destruction of societies such as these, ‘When We decide to destroy a town, We command those corrupted by wealth [to reform], but they [persist in their] disobedience...’ (al-Isra’: 16). Some people do not understand the true meaning of this last noble verse. They understand that the disobedience was the result of an order from Allah Glorified is He; but the truth is that they had violated Allah’s Order; for He says, ‘Though all they are ordered to do is worship Allah alone, sincerely devoting their religion to Him...’ (al-Isra’: 16). This means that Allah Glorified is He has ordered the most privileged among them to follow His Path, whereby they violated, by their own choice, the Divine Laws; thus, they transgressed their Lord’s orders.

(2) [Narrated by Ahmad and Ibn Majah]

The holy verse which we are currently studying, ‘...while the unjust pursued the enjoyment of plenty, and persisted in sin.’ (al-Masad: 16) The word dhalamu (those who oppressed) which Allah Glorified is He uses, shows that the nature of the opulence which they enjoyed was obtained from wronging others, from usurping the rights of others and from sucking the life-blood of the destitute. The word taraf (luxury) denotes the bounty which a man enjoys. Therefore, the derivative term ataraf means to be corrupted by such abundant blessings, and to have succumbed to a state of forgetfulness regarding who the Bestower of these blessings really is. Atraf means that Allah Glorified is He has bestowed His blessings upon him only to seize him with all His Might and Power. Allah Glorified is He says, ‘So, when they had forgotten the warning they had received, we opened the gates to everything for them.’ (al-An‘am: 44) No one should ever think that he who takes hold of his enemy and then raises him is just caressing him. Rather, he raises him only to throw him down from a greater height, such that his pain becomes that much greater. It is as if Allah Glorified is He bestowed worldly blessings on the likes of these people so that they could demonstrate their tyranny. We must pay attention to the word al-fath which brings about the joyful expanse of the human soul. We must pay attention to whether it is a case of fatah `alayk or of fatah lak.

The Arabic word fath denotes ‘victory’, so mentioning it generally expresses good news. However, this is only when it is associated with the preposition ‘l’ (to or for). When it is associated with the preposition `ala (against), it denotes an affliction, even if disguised in the appearance of a blessing. Allah says, ‘Truly We have opened up a path to clear fath (triumph) for you [Prophet]’ (al-Fath: 1). In the verse we are currently reflecting on, the word fath is used in the negative sense. The verse mentions people whom Allah has opened up against whom blessings that are actually nothing but harm, blessings intended to immerse them more in the heedlessness of Allah. So, Allah has punished them in this life, for they have grown forgetful of Him. Allah concludes the verse by saying, ‘…and so lost themselves in sinning’ (Hud: 116). They violated that which must have been honoured. They disobeyed the ordinance of Allah which they were to abide by. In the original Arabic text of the verse, the word used to denote ‘persisting in sinning’ is mujrimeen. It is derived from the word jurm which means ‘severance. One who persists in disobedience severs his relationship with his Creator since he has strayed into heedlessness and neglecting His guidance. They have lost themselves by indulging in the finery of this worldly life and usurping the fruits of others’ labour.

Then, Allah says:

وَمَا كَانَ رَبُّكَ لِيُهْلِكَ ٱلْقُرَىٰ بِظُلْمٍ وَأَهْلُهَا مُصْلِحُونَ ﴿١١٧﴾

Your Lord would not destroy any town without cause if its people were acting righteously [117] (The Quran, Hud: 117)

Using ‘would not’ denotes that something is not proper or should not exist, not that it does not exist, There is a difference between stating that something does not exist and that something should not exist. Based on this understanding, this verse means that it is impossible that Allah will destroy any town unjustly. Injustice means usurping the rights of others for the benefit of oneself, and there is nothing whatever which human beings possess which could benefit Allah for it is Him Who bestows all blessings on His creatures. Therefore, injustice is completely out of the question when it comes to the relationship between the Exalted Creator and His servants.

It is worthy of mention that the word ‘town’, which is a noun referring to places, is used in the verse, but those addressed by it are the dwellers, not the place. This is also the case in other verses, as in: ‘And ask them about that town which stood by the sea…’ (al-A’raf: 163). Allah also says, ‘and ask (the people of) the town where we have been…' (Yusuf: 82). As the translation shows, 'the people of' is not part of the structure of the verse. In these two examples, as well as in the verse we are currently reflecting on, Allah refers to the place, while He means the residents of that place. Allah says, 'Your Lord would not destroy any town without cause if its people were acting righteously.' (Hud: 117) It means Allah is far above the possibility of destroying them unjustly. If He destroys any town, it is a punishment for the disobedience of its people. If wrongdoers did not receive punishment, the scale of justice would be deficient. For justice to be established, punishment or reward must be administered to those who deserve it. On the level of humans, when we bring an unjust person to justice and punish him, the suffering inflicted on him is a relief to all those who have suffered under his oppression. This is the true meaning of justice. One of the errors occurring in the justice systems applied by people is the delaying of sentences. It would take years before a criminal is sentenced for his crime. Such laxity in carrying out sentences is a failure of justice, for the longer the interval between committing a crime and administering justice, the less sensitive people are to the gruesomeness of the crime. There would be no deterrent to prevent people from sinning. That is why Islamic law is keen on shortening this interval as much as possible. Punishment must be administered while the community is still reeling from the shock of the crime. This is sure to generate general satisfaction from the punishment of the criminal. It also serves to remind everyone of the heinous nature of the crime.

In the verse, Allah says, 'Your Lord would not destroy any town without cause if its people were acting righteously.' (Hud: 117) In another verse, He says, 'Your Lord would not destroy towns for their wrongdoing if they had not been warned.' (al-An'am: 131) Therefore, Allah has sent prophets to convey to us the Truth that was revealed to them, to bring good news of reward to the obedient and admonition to those heedless of Allah's message. Allah would not punish people for anything unless He has made it clear for them that it is a sin and warned them against committing it.

Thus, Allah has conveyed to us the broad principles by which to manage our life on earth and left it to us to devise based on those principles and regulations to achieve reform and welfare. He says, 'Your Lord would not destroy any town without cause if its people were acting righteously (muslehun).’ (Hud: 117) The word islah literally means ‘reform’, and it has a rather deeper connotation than that conveyed by the word ‘righteous’. It is the act of employing the means and resources Allah has created for us to make our livelihoods and achieve wellbeing. Allah has made for us ample resources for sustenance and commanded us to develop creative inventions to promote our lives. He has secured for us the basic necessities of life- food, water, and air; they exist in abundance in the universe. He has also guaranteed preservation of kinds through reproduction by creating the male and female in living beings. Using these means and resources to achieve wellbeing is what the word islah means, and this is what Allah commands. We have previously pointed out that islah means maintaining that which is already good to derive more benefit from it and reforming that which is not so it can be useful too. A muslih is he who increases the quality or efficiency of something so it can be more suitable for answering human needs and reaching goals more easily. Allah would not destroy a community that commits itself to islah by following a system that governs life and manages people’s affairs rightly. In case this system is based on believing in Allah and accepting His religion, the result is harmony and balance between humankind and the universe. In this way, society can continue to exist and prosper. On the other hand, some societies have not accepted divine guidance, but they have devised a system of values that organizes their lives, for Allah does not prevent the human mind from establishing rules and systems to make life easier and more comfortable.

However, when people replace the Law of Allah by their own laws, they must go through difficulty and hardship until they manage to devise a system that governs life. Allah has sent down His guidance to us to spare us difficulty and hardship. He has revealed to us the perfect law that can best govern life without having to incur any effort or toil to devise our own laws. No matter how we try to render perfect the laws we make, there will be flaws and imperfections. Only the law of the All Knowing, All-Wise Creator can set life to rights and meanwhile spare us hardship and suffering from the first.

Thus, we understand that Allah does not destroy any society only because they are disbelievers. Allah would not strip a society from the right to live so long as it follows laws and values that establish the rights and obligations of its members, even though they would have to incur distress and pain in the process replacing the law of Allah. However, it is the inevitable duty of the believers to alert them to the ordinance of Allah. If they accept it, they thus guarantee happiness in this life and the other. If they reject it, let it suffice that, at the very least, they would not fight against the believers or try to block the way of faith before people.

That is why we find that in countries Muslims have ruled, there are people who have adhered to their religions; Muslims have not conquered countries to force their peoples to embrace Islam. Rather, Islam spread in those countries by the power of logic, justice and irrefutable proof. Allah the Exalted says, ‘and He does not forbid you to deal kindly and justly with anyone who has not fought you for your faith or driven you out of your homes; Allah loves the just.’ (al-Mumtahana: 8) Allah would not destroy a society that seeks reform and justice, even if it is a disbelieving society. Rather, He grants them the fruits they deserve in this worldly life. For as He Glorified is He says, ‘If anyone desires a harvest in the life to come, We shall increase it for him; if anyone desires a harvest in this world, We shall give him a share of it, but in the Hereafter he will have no share.’ (ash-Shura: 20)

In the following verse, Allah says:

وَلَوْ شَآءَ رَبُّكَ لَجَعَلَ ٱلنَّاسَ أُمَّةً وَٰحِدَةً ۖ وَلَا يَزَالُونَ مُخْتَلِفِينَ ﴿١١٨﴾

If your Lord had pleased, He would have made all people a single community, but they continue to have their differences [118] (The Quran, Hud: 118)

Allah has prepared the universe with all the basic necessities that sustain life before bringing humankind to it. He has created things whose only role is to be at the service of humankind so as to help the latter perform the mission they are created for as vicegerents on earth. These creatures have no will of their own and it is not their choice to accept or reject their role as servants to people, whether believers or disbelievers. Allah has brought humankind into existence and secured for them the sustenance required to maintain this existence. He has guaranteed for us preservation of life and kind. This is a gift Allah grants to His servants be they believers or disbelievers.

So as for sustenance, Allah grants it to all. As for guidance, it is a gift only to the believers. All people receive provisions from Allah whether they believe in Him or not, but only those who believe benefit from His guidance. Those who receive both Allah's provision and guidance are the happiest in both this life and the Afterlife. Allah, with His Infinite Power, compels all creation- except for human beings- to perform the roles they are created for, and they have no choice or free will respecting this. Had Allah so willed, He would have created a single community of human beings that never strays from His path- just as the sun, the moon, the air, or any of the other creatures which are completely subservient to His Will and have no will of their own.

Allah has made his creatures subservient to Him, never faltering in their servitude. This proves His Absolute Power over them. As for His servants' love for Him, this is demonstrated by those of His creatures He has given the freedom of choice: whether to obey or disobey Him. If a servant chooses to embrace faith and obey Allah, this is a proof that he loves Him. Thus, the creatures that have no will of their own and are compelled to remain subservient to Allah demonstrate His Divine Might and Omnipotence. As for those creatures Allah has given freewill, if they obey Him, this demonstrates love for Allah Who says, '… The truth has come from your Lord: let those who wish to believe in it do so, and let those who wish to reject it do so...' (al-Kahf: 29).

However, does freewill mean that we are absolutely free in every respect? No, beware of this self-deception. Besides the fact that this freewill is a bestowal from Allah and a manifestation of His Will, let us also remember that there are aspects where we have no choice. It is true Allah has given us the choice to worship Him or not, but it does not mean we have escaped His Control. Allah has power over the means that preserve human life. He strips us of the ability to choose in some respects to remind us of this absolute truth: we are His servants and He has Absolute Power over us all. He has created animals, plants and inanimate objects for our service and wellbeing and distinguished us from them by the gift we call the 'mind'.

Some fall into the mistake of taking words to have meanings quite opposite to what they are intended to convey. The word `aql (mind) is taken from the verb `aqala which means 'to tie' or 'to restrain' It denotes control, for the function of the mind is to rein in caprices and conceit, not to go beyond the limits Allah has set. Always remind yourself of the One in Whose Grasp you are and think of those aspects of your life where you have no choice. As long as there are realms where you have no freewill, and then be mindful of Allah in the areas where He has given you choice. Remain steadfast in faith and maintain the right attitude and conduct in relation to Him. Remember that it is He Who has given you the gift of life including the aspects where you have freewill and those where you do not. Allah teaches us lessons to remind us of His Omnipotent Power by stripping us of abilities we perhaps believe we have complete control over. One may lose control over his own leg or arm and fail to move them. If these abilities were solely under our control, they could never let us down. Rather, these abilities are bestowed from Him, and He can take them away if He wills. So long as this is the case, let everyone say to himself: do not become conceited if Allah has given you freewill on a certain level. Allah has only given us this freedom to test us regarding His ordinance. He has sent down to us His guidance which consists of His commands and prohibitions. So long as we are commanded to do something, it means we have the power not to do it. Likewise, prohibitions mean we have the power to do what we are prohibited from doing, or else the notion of obligation would be nonsensical. We have the choice to obey or disobey divine guidance, but in other matters, we have no choice. Had Allah so willed, He would have stripped us of freewill in all matters. Therefore, it befits people of understanding to discipline themselves with the Almighty Creator and show obedience to Him in matters where He has given people freedom of choice.

Allah says, ‘Man is ungrateful to his Lord’ (al-’Adiyat: 6). Indeed we are, for we sometimes forget that the first and foremost function of the mind is to make us realise our limits. We do not control the way our bodies function, nor can we modify them to make them resistant to natural laws, for example. Allah gives us no choice there, and in this is a constant reminder of His Might. Therefore, we should submit humbly to Him and abide by His ordinance in what He gives us freedom to choose.

It is worthy of mention that religious obligations and prohibitions constitute a very limited range of life’s activities, perhaps only 5% of them. The remaining 95% fall into the category of permissible things that are neither mandatory nor forbidden. Allah has made obligations and prohibitions to maintain healthy functioning of our life on earth. Compliance with them means setting this life to rights and reaping ample reward in the life to come.

Let us ponder this example. Islam commands the wealthy to give zakat (alms). Is it any form of transgression against their properties? No, but this obligation guarantees that they too will sure receive sufficient help if they turn poor. So is the case with all the commands of Islam. They are meant to cure ailments of society and solve problems with justice. They promote compassion and helpfulness among the members of society based on true faith in the Creator and devotion to His religion. Here is another example. Islam forbids one from prying into the private lives of others, so is this a restriction of one's freedom? No, but it is a guarantee that others too would not pry on one's private life. Therefore, if we think deeply about the nature and purpose of duties in Islam, we find that both obligations and prohibitions are to our advantage. In the verse we are reflecting on, Allah says, 'If your Lord had pleased, He would have made all people a single community...' (Hud: 118). There is a common misconception that this verse contradicts what Allah says in the following one, 'Mankind was a single community, then Allah sent prophets to bring good news and warning…' (al-Baqara: 213). The latter gives the impression, at first sight, that humankind were heedless of their Creator at the very beginning and it was only after Allah sent forth His prophets one after another that they took heed. As we said, this is a faulty understanding. Allah has guaranteed for humankind- ever since He brought Adam and his wife on earth- provisions that sustain their lives and guidance that keeps them on the straight path. People have known their Creator ever since their parents were ordered to descend to earth to perform their role as vicegerents. Allah says, '… Whoever follows My guidance, when it comes to you [people], will not go astray nor fall into misery' (Ta Ha: 123). Thorough consideration of the Quranic verses that deal with this matter would remove any misunderstanding. Allah says in the verse we are dealing with, 'If your Lord had pleased, He would have made all people a single community...' (Hud: 118). In the verse wrongly thought to contradict it, Allah says, 'Mankind was a single community, then Allah sent prophets to bring good news and warning, and with them He sent the Scripture with the Truth, to judge between people in their disagreements. It was only those to whom it was given who disagreed about it after clear signs had come to them, because of rivalry between them. So, by His leave Allah guided the believers to the truth they had differed about; Allah guides whoever He will to a straight path.’ (al-Baqara: 213) Divine guidance was revealed concurringly with the descent of Adam peace be upon him. After this first reminder, people strayed into heedlessness and disagreement regarding the issue of faith, so Allah sent forth His prophets to remind them of the Truth and judge between them. People were already on the straight path of Allah when He created them and brought them down to earth. Allah could have made them continue in a state of righteousness, all rightly guided and obedient to Him. However, He has chosen to give them freewill to choose their paths and, due to this freedom, they began to disagree regarding faith and will continue to disagree, ‘… but they continue to have their differences’ (Hud: 118).

In the following verse, Allah states an exception to this rule. He says:

إِلَّا مَن رَّحِمَ رَبُّكَ ۚ وَلِذَٰلِكَ خَلَقَهُمْ ۗ وَتَمَّتْ كَلِمَةُ رَبِّكَ
لَأَمْلَأَنَّ جَهَنَّمَ مِنَ ٱلْجِنَّةِ وَٱلنَّاسِ أَجْمَعِينَ ﴿١١٩﴾

Except those on whom your Lord has mercy – for He created them to be this way, and the word of your Lord is final: ‘I shall definitely fill Hell with both jinn and men’ [119]
(The Quran, Hud: 119)

So among the servants of Allah are the rightly guided whom He saves from disagreement respecting faith. Allah says about the creation of humankind, ‘I created jinn and mankind only to worship Me’ (adh-Dhariyat: 56). Worship means submission to Allah and adherence to His ordinance. However, people’s caprices and prejudices have caused them to disagree regarding faith and disobey divine commands. Allah has made us different. Were we all alike, there would be no such disagreement. Everyone has a different temperament and tendency. That is why some tend to be right wing or left wing in politics; some choose communism, others capitalism, some existentialism etc.

Therefore, human standards and inclinations cannot be the basis for the truth, as Allah says, ‘But if the truth were in accordance with their desires, the heavens, the earth and everyone in them would disintegrate…' (al-Mu'minun: 71). The world cannot be governed by the desires of people who forever disagree. Rather, harmony and righteousness can only be achieved when we all follow the law of the Creator and transcend our desires. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'None of you will attain to true faith until he makes his desires compliant with the message I have been sent with.'(1)

In our daily lives, the various professions and activities that help keep life going have been left to us to govern. In this realm, there is great variation based on the different powers and talents of people. Allah could have created us all geniuses in every aspect of life; He could have made us all talented poets, or doctors or philosophers, but who then would perform the other professions? Had we all been doctors or engineers, who then would perform the works of farming or trade? It is the Will of Allah that He has created us different in talents and capacities. This is for the world to be bound together through inter-relationships and inter-dependencies. Life cannot go only by the compassion and goodwill of people.

That is why Allah says, 'Are they the ones who share out your Lord's grace? We are the ones who give them their share of livelihood in this world and We have raised some of them above others in rank, so that some may take others into service…' (az-Zukhruf: 32). This verse states the wisdom for which Allah has made people different in rank and social status. This is not for the rich to exercise superiority or authority over the poor. Every human being is distinguished in his own station by the skills Allah has given him. Everyone is elevated by his good work in the particular field he masters. One's diligence is what gives him status, whatever his domain is.

This way, human beings all share in the benefits of each other's varying talents. Differences in human talents act as channels for cooperation and exchange of experiences and services. In terms of abilities and talents, everyone's share is just equal to everyone else's. The real worth of a person is determined by the things he masters whatever his field or profession is, and the only thing that makes one person superior to another is devotion to Allah.

(1) Cited by Ibn Abu `Asem in his As-Sunnah (12/1) on the authority of `Abdullah ibn 'Amr, and Ibn Rajab Al-Hanbali in his Jami` Al-`Ulum (460).

The rich owner of a luxury car is in need of a mechanic in dirty and ragged clothes, even though the latter is less wealthy and socially less advantageous. That is why I insist: if you see someone who is apparently below you in appearance or status, do not be conceited for what you have achieved or gained over him. Remind yourself that this person sure masters something you know nothing of; he sure excels over you in some domain or another. Allah has begot no child to prefer him above all the others and endow him with all talents and powers, leaving the rest powerless or devoid of talents that distinguish them.

Allah says, '… but they continue to have their differences, except those on whom your Lord has mercy– for He created them to be this way...' (Hud: 118-119). Differences concerning religion result in the existence of believers and disbelievers. The fact that some disbelieve in Allah contains a message in itself. Were it not for the existence of disbelievers, the believer would perhaps be unable to appreciate Allah's favour on them. Were disbelief completely pointless, Allah would have eliminated it from existence. As a matter of fact, disbelief is serviceable to faith. It shows the greatness of faith through the flagrant contrast between them. This is just as pain is serviceable to health; were it not for pain, the illness could not be discovered, diagnosed, or cured. In this sense, pain is like a messenger heralding the advent of good health.

So Allah says, '… but they continue to have their differences, except those on whom your Lord has mercy...' (Hud: 118-119). Difference is actually at the core of harmony, the means that leads to general agreement. Take this simple example. If all the members of a family preferred the same part of chicken, this similarity would entail disagreement and dispute. Agreement would be achieved when tastes and preferences vary. The same goes for professions and social statuses: variation leads to harmony whereas similarity would cause dispute. This poses a question: Are people created to be forever entrenched in their divergent views, or are they created for peaceful coexistence and mutual compassion? The answer is that we are created for both difference on the one hand and mercy on the other hand, since each has a role and a reason behind it and there is no contradiction.

Then Allah says in the same verse, '… and the word of your Lord is final, "I shall definitely fill Hell with both jinn and men."' (Hud: 119) One of the Attributes of Allah is Omnipotent Knowledge, so He has eternally known who of His servants would choose faith and who would reject it. This is what it means that '… the word of your Lord is final…' (Hud: 119). He has known in advance the choices His servants would make. He has known who would struggle to attain paradise and who would do evil and deserve to abide in Hellfire.

Let me again give the example I have frequently given. It is just for illustration, for Allah is above all comparison. Suppose the dean of a college asks the teachers that the best students of every class should be announced to be awarded for their excellence. Even though the teachers already knew those students, the dean ordered a test to be given before selection. The test results may or may not corroborate the teachers' expectations and knowledge of their students. Some of the students may be out of form due to sickness or the like, so he may not do well in the test. Thus, judgement of the teachers would be thrown into doubt. However, the Judgment of Allah is not subject to error, and what He has eternally known about His servants most certainly comes true. His word must be fulfilled. His Knowledge is eternal, and in several verses of the Glorious Quran, Allah challenges the disbelievers to alter His Judgement or prove it wrong. He says, for example, 'May the hands of Abu Lahab be ruined! May he be ruined too!' (al-Masad: 1) Abu Lahab heard this verse and still did not try to defy fate by declaring faith, or even hypocritically professing faith. Indeed '… the word of your Lord is final…' (Hud: 119). What Allah says must undoubtedly be fulfilled for there is none that can go against His Will. Allah commands us, when we promise or announce that we mean to do something, 'And never say about anything, "Behold, I shall do this tomorrow" without [adding], "if Allah so wills"' (al-Kahf: 23-24). This is showing respect for Allah and an acknowledgement of our limited scope. We are subject to the vicissitudes of fate. We have no control over events, their times, places, implications, reasons or results. Allah is the One Who possesses dominance over all things. Thus, acknowledging that one can only do a thing 'if Allah so wills' (al-Kahf: 24) protects one from being accused of breaching his promises in case any unexpected event turns up. However, when the Owner of the universe, in Whose Hand all Power rests, promises to do a thing, He is Capable of carrying out that which He has promised with absolute certainty.

It is also worthy of mention that, as we have pointed out before, the actions of Allah are independent of time. In the original Arabic text of the Quran, a verb expressing an action of Allah may be in the past, present or future tense. Still, these tenses encompass only human actions. Divine Actions are not measured by the same standards. When Allah decrees a matter, we must consider it fulfilled. He says, ‘Allah’s judgement is bound to come. Do not, therefore, call for its speedy advent! ...’ (an-Nahl: 1). So long as the matter has been decided upon, it will surely occur at its appointed time. No power is capable of preventing Allah’s Will from being executed, for His rule over His kingdom is absolute, uncontested.

Allah concludes the verse by saying, ‘I shall definitely fill Hell with both jinn and men’ (Hud: 119). Allah has created humankind and jinn for His worship and charged them with the heavy trust of faith and moral responsibility. Therefore, they will all be recompensed for what they do.

Allah says in the following verse:

وَكُلًّا نَّقُصُّ عَلَيْكَ مِنْ أَنۢبَآءِ ٱلرُّسُلِ مَا نُثَبِّتُ بِهِۦ فُؤَادَكَۚ
وَجَآءَكَ فِى هَٰذِهِ ٱلْحَقُّ وَمَوْعِظَةٌ وَذِكْرَىٰ لِلْمُؤْمِنِينَ ﴿١٢٠﴾

So [Muhammad], We have told you the stories of the prophets to make your heart firm and in these accounts truth has come to you, as well as lessons and reminders for the believers [120] (The Quran, Hud: 120)

This verse refers to all the prophets whose stories are told to the Prophet Muhammad by Allah in the Glorious Quran.

Some of the actions of Allah correspond to His Names and Attributes and some are not. For example, Allah has ‘created’ all things, and this action corresponds with His Name ‘the Creator’. On the other hand, some actions do not correspond to any of the ninety-nine Names of Allah. He says in the verse we are reflecting on, ‘… We have told you the stories…’, yet we can by no means ascribe to Allah the name of ‘story-teller’! Similarly, it is improper for anyone to say that Allah is ‘the Schemer’, even though He says, ‘…They schemed and so did Allah...’ (al-Anfal: 30). Allah also says, ‘The hypocrites try to deceive Allah, but it is He who causes them to be deceived…' (an-Nisa': 142). However, it does not mean we can call Allah 'the Deceiver'! Thus, we understand the proper way of speaking about Allah. We should show reverence for Allah by ascribing to Him only the Attributes of Majesty and Loftiness He ascribes to Himself. When the actions of Allah are described in the Quran using words that do not correspond to His Names, it is only for the purpose of suitability, yet they denote meanings different in quality and degree from those denoted by the same words when referring to human actions.

Allah says, 'So [Muhammad], We have told you the stories (anba`) of the prophets…' (Hud: 120). The Arabic word anba` means 'news of great moment', news capable of altering the state of the mind that receives and comprehends it, Stories of prophets who preceded Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him are mentioned in several chapters throughout the Glorious Quran. They tell news of the ailments of their peoples that they addressed by their messages and the hardships they had to endure from those who opposed them. Allah tells Prophet Muhammad these stories in the Quran to make firm his heart, for he too was going to encounter hardships in the course of his mission of calling for Islam. Allah says about one of the previous prophets and those who believed with him, '… they were so shaken that even [their] Messenger and the believers with him cried, "When will Allah's help arrive?"' (al-Baqara: 214)

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the Muslims encountered such difficulties too, as Allah says, '[Remember what you felt] when they came upon you from above you and from below you, and when [your] eyes became dim and [your] hearts came up to [your] throats, and [when] most conflicting thoughts about Allah passed through your minds.' (al-'Ahzab: 10). When events reach such a point, reassurance is most needed by firming up faith in the hearts of the believers. Allah has sent His prophet to deliver His message, so He would not let that Prophet peace and blessings be upon him fall victim to his adversaries. Great difficulties had to be faced, so Allah braced the heart of His prophet to be strong enough for them.

The heart is the centre of one's beliefs. The mind stores the information supplied by the senses. Perceptions are formed through the eyes that see, the ears that hear, the nose that smells, the mouth that tastes, and the skin that feels. Information is thus generated for the mind to start its process of storing and analysing them. When this information acquires approval and validation of the mind, they are passed to the heart, there to rest as certainties that doubt cannot interfere with. That is why the Arabic word used to express this meaning is `aqidah (creed). It comes from the word `uqdah meaning ‘knot’. When thoughts turn into beliefs, it is as if they are knotted to the very strings of the heart so they become inextricable. Once the mind has done its work and beliefs have been firmly rooted in the heart, they serve as the principles around which one’s life revolves. A young man thinking about his future career would consider the advantages and disadvantages of the different professions to choose the one that best matches his talents and aspirations. The senses gather the required information, the mind analyses them, and when results are crystalized, they are sent to the heart as beliefs that govern one’s conduct and choices in life. We all know for sure that fire burns, so where has this certainty come from? The senses encountered the experience which the mind stored and analysed. Due to this process, the heart has grown firm and unwavering in its conviction that fire burns. The heart is the vessel whose role is to be ready to receive the truth, heed reminders and warnings and accept the wise counsel revealed by its Lord. What comes from Allah is the Truth, and it is a quality true of truths that they never change. The Truth Allah has revealed to His servants is the source from which faith springs and based on which humankind are assigned their religious obligations. One must have confidence in the Wisdom of the One Who has decreed laws and obligations before he can accept to abide by them. That is why evidence for the Existence of the True Lord must be first provided so His Ordinance may be heeded. Obedience stems from faith in the Almighty Lord Who is never affected by any change or swayed by caprice or fancy. Religion may command one to commit himself to heavy duties from which he would like to refrain. Only true faith would urge one to comply in such a case. Devotion stems from firm belief that Allah is the One Who has created us, and it is therefore impossible for Him to cheat or deceive His creatures, so whatever He sends through His messengers is true, wise, and just.

One normally dislikes teachings or counsels when they are given by a human being like himself, for they are usually associated with a kind of perfection the advice-giver has and the advised person lacks. In case the former himself lacks that aspect of perfection to which his advice pertains, his addressee would only answer him: do not preach what you do not practise. That is why Allah says, 'Most loathsome is it in the Sight of Allah that you say what you do not do!" (as-Saff: 3). When someone preaches something he does not practise, this gives his addressee a pretext to reject his advice, for he would think to himself, 'if there were any good to be found in that advice, he would have applied it to himself'!

The verse we are examining explains the situation Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him faced and his need for reassurance and support. It also underlines the believer's need to be reminded that they too would face hardships as those who believed with the previous prophets.

As a matter of fact, hardships sometimes result from the seemingly arduous nature of religious obligations. This is the outcome of looking at these obligations on the surface and failing to comprehend their deep significance. For example, some perhaps consider the command to lower one's gaze (from looking at what is unlawful) is an unnecessary prohibition of an almost unavoidable pleasure. However, they do not realise that when others also commit themselves to this command, their own privacy would be secured against violation. Some may, likewise, see the obligation of giving zakat (alms giving) an injustice that causes to deprive him of some of his money. They do not realise that this obligation will in turn serve them in case they go through tough times and become poor themselves. If the giver of zakat becomes the one in need, his fellow believers will rally to his aid to protect him and his family from suffering under poverty. Thus, correct understanding of religious obligations is fundamental to faith. Allah says in the Quran, 'Will they not, then, try to understand this Quran?' (an-Nisa': 82) When you consider the matter more closely, you will see that religious obligations are not meant to be restrictions to your freedom. Rather, they are meant to guard your honour and dignity. Allah has enjoined such duties on you for your protection and prosperity, even though, outwardly, they may seem to benefit only others.

Besides religious obligations, among the difficulties the believers encounter is rejection and resistance of those who benefit from corruption. They are people who thrive on the spread of corruption and persecute anyone who oppose their interests. They would sure harbour hatred for those who resist the spread of corruption on earth. Therefore, the attitude of Prophet Muhammad's adversaries was natural, for in their folly, they defined their interests only in terms of the life of this world. They did not consider the possible consequences- of either reward or punishment- they were to incur in the Afterlife. Had they possessed sound judgement, they would have realised that it sure serves their best interests to have someone who calls them to be upright so they will not lose the Hereafter. Had they reflected rationally on the matter, they would have seen that, just as Prophet Muhammad's mission was to stand up for the weak and oppressed, it was also to stand up for them, wealthy and powerful as they were. Had they come to that essential realisation, they would have supported the Prophet's cause rather than oppose it. Had they heeded his admonition concerning the recompense they were to receive in the Hereafter for spreading corruption, they would have been grateful to him for warning them and helping them purify themselves.

Thus, Allah has assured Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that he was nothing new among the rest of His prophets, for every prophet has encountered difficulties as well in the course of their mission. Furthermore, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was sure to expect particularly severe trials and hardships, for he was the final messenger and the message he was sent with would not be followed by any other message. Since it was certain that he would go through trying times, Allah related to him stories of the difficulties faced by the previous prophets to make his heart firm; it was that heart which received the fundamentals of faith, starting from the essence of creed: ‘there is no god but Allah’, until every principle of faith became ingrained in it. Reassurances were therefore essential to make that heart firm and firm up faith in the hearts of the believers who followed him as well, for they too were destined to go through trying times.

Let us ponder what Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to al-ansar (helpers) when they swore allegiance to him at `Aqabah. They said, ‘If we honour our pledge to you, what will we receive in return?’ The Prophet did not tell them, for example, ‘You will rule over the world! Your dominion will stretch from Persia to the Mediterranean’! Instead, his reply to them was, ‘You will be rewarded with Paradise.’ He peace and blessings be upon him knew that some of them might die before the aspired victories would be achieved, so he did not promise them reward in this worldly life. Rather, he promised them that which everyone who dies as a believer will attain, whether he witnesses the victories of Muslims or passes away before they take place.

The verse we are reflecting on shows the reason why Allah mentions the stories of previous prophets in the Quran. By that, He meant to strengthen Prophet Muhammad’s heart to prepare him to receive the Truth and remind with it those who believed with him.

Now, what about the other party? Those who denied the message of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and fought against him? Allah also gives an account of them since the aforementioned verse is such that it makes the soul receptive to hearing about the other party that opposes the Truth. After speaking about firming up faith in the hearts of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and the believers at times when they are about to falter, Allah also speaks about the disbelievers and commands His Prophet peace and blessings be upon him to face them without fear. He says:

وَقُل لِّلَّذِينَ لَا يُؤْمِنُونَ ٱعْمَلُوا۟ عَلَىٰ مَكَانَتِكُمْ إِنَّا عَٰمِلُونَ ﴿١٢١﴾

Say to those who do not believe, ‘Do whatever you can: we too are doing what we can’ [121] (The Quran, Hud: 121)

Let the disbelievers do whatever they like, for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the believers relied on the solid basis of faith in Allah and therefore any preparation their opponents made did not deter them. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and his followers would not face their enemies alone, nor was their confidence derived from their numbers. Rather, they relied on the never-failing Power of Allah. Any military commander engaged in a battle would feel a surge of confidence when news of aids and supporting troops reach him from the nation for whom he is fighting. How much confidence do you think would be inspired then if help were to come from Him whose reserves are never depleted? The One Who compels all and none can compel?

This is how the prophets dealt with their enemies; they sought refuge with the All-Powerful Lord. When Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him was about to be overtaken by Pharaoh, when he realised that there was no possible escape where the sea laid in front and the enemy was at the back, his people cried out, '…We shall certainly be overtaken' (ash-Shu'ara': 61). However, Prophet Musa (Moses) reassured them, '…No, my Lord is with me, He will guide me' (ash-Shu'ara': 62). He knew he was backed by the power of faith, of reliance on Allah, not the material power of himself or his followers, so Allah rescued them with a miracle, 'Strike the sea with your staff' (ash-Shu'ara': 63). Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him did and the sea parted, each side like a huge mountain, and a narrow path of dry land appeared where Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him and his followers proceeded. It occurred to Musa (Moses) peace be upon him that he must strike the sea with his staff again so it would return to its natural, fluid state. He wanted to prevent his enemy and his soldiers from taking that passages, so Allah revealed to him, 'Leave the sea behind you parted and their army will be drowned' (ad-Dukhan: 24). Allah commanded Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him to leave the sea as it was so that it might deceive Pharaoh into attempting to tread upon that dry path. Then, Allah would cause the sea to suddenly return to its original state. Thus, the same thing that saved Prophet Musa (Moses) and his followers also destroyed Pharaoh and his soldiers. Only Allah the Exalted is capable of that. It is in such a manner that Allah grants the believers strength to stand up to the disbelievers.

Faith is a battle of challenge. The challenge of a prophet is to prove sincere as the conveyer of Allah's message who is supported by a miracle proving his truthfulness. The other challenge faced by a prophet and the believers is to gain victory against the disbelievers in spite of their relatively much smaller numbers and limited material powers. The power of faith is what brings that victory. Allah says, '…How often a small force has defeated a large army with Allah's permission! Allah is with those who are steadfast' (al-Baqara: 249). Thus, amid any battle where faith is at stake, an attitude of challenge and perseverance is widespread among those who fight for the Truth.

Every prophet was first supported by a miracle with which he challenged his opponents to prove his truthfulness. Then the role of the miracle would come to an end, and Allah would reveal to His prophet a doctrine to be delivered to his people. However, the case was quite different with Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him for the miracle associated with his advent is unique in that its role never comes to an end. Furthermore, it is the essence of his message for it contains the fundamentals of faith and the ordinance of Allah. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was sent with the timeless message addressed to all humankind for all times and places, so it was necessary to send with him a miracle that would stand until the Day of Judgement. Everyone who believes in Islam knows that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is Allah's messenger and the Quran is his miracle until the coming of the Hour.

Allah says in the verse we are considering, 'and say to those who do not believe: "Act according to your ability and way (makanatikum)...' (Hud: 121). The Arabic word makanah is derived from the same root of makan (place). Every creature has a physical form and a place occupied by this form. As for makanah, it denotes 'a prestigious status', a status among people that is indicative of the consequence and authority of its holder. When Allah says, '… Act according to your ability and way…' (Hud: 121), it is a challenge to the disbelievers: do all that your powers and numbers are capable of, for the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him is supported by the Almighty Lord Who has sent him and who would bring him victory. As we said, this is meant as a direct challenge, not a command. Allah would not address any commands to the disbelievers, for they do not believe in Him in the first place so that they would obey Him.

Were they to obey the commands of Allah, they would not be disbelievers anymore, for obedience necessarily entails faith. The challenge reaches a peak when Allah says at the end of the verse, 'We are acting (in our way)' (Hud: 121). Let them do what they can; their power is ever so limited, for they are mortals who are subject to vicissitudes. Allah too is acting, and His Power and Capacity to act are unlimited. He is the True Lord Who has ever existed with no beginning and no end and Who has Power over all things and nothing has power over Him. When He decrees something, none can counteract His Will.

Every power possessed by any of His creatures is bestowed by Him in the first place, but the Power of the Creator has eternally been His; it was bestowed by none and none can defeat it or eliminate it. The moment and influence of any action is measured by the power of him who acts. The mistake of most people is that they forget who the actor is when they consider an action. Human beings can well be opposed and their actions counteracted. However, if the action is performed by Allah, then people must humbly acknowledge the limits of their powers. A very good example of this mistake is the attitude of the disbelievers to Prophet Muhammad's Night Journey regarding which Allah says, 'Glory to Him Who made His servant travel by night from the sacred place of worship [in Mecca] to the furthest place of worship [in Jerusalem], whose surroundings We have blessed….' (al-Isra': 1) They wondered saying, 'It takes us a month to reach Jerusalem even when riding our fastest camels, so how did he reach it in a single night'?! They forgot that it was not the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him who made the journey from Mecca to Jerusalem by his own power. Rather, he was taken there by Allah. Measure, therefore, that miraculous act by the Power of Allah and not that of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

Allah says in the following verse:

وَٱنتَظِرُوٓاْ إِنَّا مُنتَظِرُونَ ١٢٢

And 'Wait: we too are waiting' [122]
(The Quran, Hud: 122)

In this verse, an even greater sense of threat and defiance is felt. The disbelievers only await fulfilment of the devil's promise to them, whereas the believers await fulfilment of their Lord's Promise to them. The believers will tell the disbelievers on the Day of Judgement, 'We have found what our Lord promised us to be true. Have you found what your Lord promised you to be true?' (al-A'raf: 44) Waiting of the disbelievers is a defiant threat to them, for they only wait for their due punishment. To the believers, contrarily, waiting is soothing and reassurance as they wait for Allah's victory.

Had the future events foretold in the Quran not come true, doubt would have crept to the hearts of the believers. The word of Allah must be fulfilled, so we can be sure that this threat, 'And "Wait, we too are waiting."' (Hud: 122) was given in full confidence that what Allah has promised would come true. Indeed, actual events did corroborate everything that has been foretold in the Quran. Did the True Lord the Exalted not say, ‘Their forces will be routed and they will turn tail and flee’ (al-Qamar: 45)? At the time this verse was revealed, the Muslims were still weak, and this prompted `Umar Allah be pleased with him to ask Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him ‘Which of the two groups will be defeated?’ He feared the word ‘forces’ referred to the believers for their wanting of material power then made him exclude the possibility of their being the victorious party. A Muslim then was unable even to protect himself. Later, when the Battle of Badr took place, the foretold news of victory came true. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had even marked the very spots on the land of the battlefield where some of the great leaders of Quraysh would meet their end! The Quran foretold even the body parts where some of them would be wounded. Allah has revealed to His Prophet, ‘We shall brand him on the snout!’ (al-Qalam: 16) Allah has foretold such events so that when they came true, this would be evidence for Prophet Muhammad’s truthfulness as His Messenger. Thus, Allah has always been on the side of those who follow His straight path. He has related in the Quran certain events from the stories of previous messengers to firm up his peace and blessings be upon him heart and grant him courage and strength to bear the burden of the message and help the believers remain steadfast in faith.

Allah concludes the chapter of Hud with the following blessed words:

وَلِلَّهِ غَيۡبُ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلۡأَرۡضِ وَإِلَيۡهِ يُرۡجَعُ ٱلۡأَمۡرُ كُلُّهُۥ
فَٱعۡبُدۡهُ وَتَوَكَّلۡ عَلَيۡهِۚ وَمَا رَبُّكَ بِغَٰفِلٍ عَمَّا تَعۡمَلُونَ ﴿١٢٣﴾

All that is hidden in the heavens and earth belongs to God, and all authority goes back to Him. So [Prophet], worship Him, and put your trust in Him: your Lord is never unaware of what you [people] are doing [123]
(The Quran, Hud: 123)

This verse in question addresses mankind and tells them that they previously knew nothing about those secrets presented to them in the verses of the Noble

Quran which have been revealed down to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

Here, we should consider that Allah Glorified is He out of the undeniable fact that He encompasses the knowledge of everything, guards this Quran so we will never be doubtful about the absolute truthfulness and veracity of the Quran.

As a matter of fact, there are undoubtedly a lot of secrets which man is still unable to uncover, that is, there are barriers between him and the uncovering of these secrets. One of these barriers may, for example, be that of time. Here, we heavily stress that whenever Allah Glorified is He tells us about any topic as well as Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him himself never previously knew about, this falls under the category of uncovering the secrets of the old past.

For this reason, scholars call some verses of the Quran ma kunnat al-Quran in reference to these verses which start with the words ma kunta (You were not…) such as the saying of Allah Glorified is He '…And you were not with them when they cast their pens as to which of them should be responsible for Maryam (Mary). Nor were you with them when they disputed.' (Al-'Imran: 44) In actuality, the Quran has many verses of this same stylistic form.

we should know that there were already certain people who had knowledge of the events that occurred long before the lifetime of Prophet Muhammad and his companions, yet the case is totally different with him peace and blessings be upon him; for Allah Glorified is He is the One Who uncovered the knowledge of these unseen secrets to him peace and blessings be upon him; that is, no human being told him peace and blessings be upon him about any of these secrets; an unshakeable fact which is established by the adversaries of Islam themselves. As such, we can clearly state that Allah Glorified is He has uncovered the unseen of time and place to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to the extent that he was informed of some of the secrets of the future. Once again, Allah Glorified is He is the One Who revealed these secrets to Prophet Muhammad.

Here, we should be fully aware of the fact that Allah Glorified is He has kept some secrets unknown up to the present time because people at the time of Messenger Muhammad would for sure be unable to understand them because understanding such secrets were beyond their mental capacity during that period of time. In the same connection, Allah Glorified is He spoke about the occurrence of future events which none of the contemporaries of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him could foresee.

Let us offer an example to fully illustrate this point; the two greatest empires during the lifetime of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him (the Roman Empire Persian Empires) were in permanent conflicts and wars with each other; each of them aimed at expanding the scope of their authority. During one of these wars, the Persians, worshippers of fire, defeated the Christian Romans. Even though those Romans did not believe in the message of Prophet Muhammad, he peace and blessings be upon him felt sad for their defeat because they at least believed in the existence of a god. Whereupon Allah comforted him peace and blessings be upon him by revealing down verses of the Quran in which He tells obviously that the Romans will for sure defeat the Persians. Allah says, 'Alif Lam Mim. The Romans are vanquished. In a near land, and they, after being vanquished, shall overcome. Within a few years, Allah's is the command before and after; and on that day the believers shall rejoice. With the help of Allah; He helps whom He pleases; and He is the Mighty, the Merciful. (ar-Rum: 1-5) These verses of the chapter of ar-Rum precisely define the time when the Romans would be given victory over the Persians; they state clearly that this will for sure take place within bida` sinin (a few years), that is, in a period of time from three to nine years, for this is the denotation of the Arabic term bida` sinin.

Yet, if someone claims that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is the one who predicted the occurrence of these events between these two empires, we answer him saying, 'How did Prophet Muhammad know about the military situation of each of these two camps? As a matter of fact, he peace and blessings be upon him previously knew nothing about the military and the political conditions of these two powers. In the same connection, we find that the Romans had already defeated the Persians exactly as has been mentioned in the Quran, a matter which is viewed as an act of unveiling the unseen secrets of time and place by Allah Glorified is He to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. In other words, Allah, the One Who has the knowledge of the absolute unseen, is He Who revealed this secret to Prophet Muhammad.

We should be perfectly aware of the fact that Allah Glorified is He is the One Who knows the 'absolute unseen'. That is to say, that no one has the ability to uncover it, nor will anyone be able to know about it except when Allah Glorified is He wishes; a fact which is definitively proved by the Quran in which Allah Glorified is He says, 'The Knower of the unseen! So He does not reveal His secrets to any, except to him whom He chooses as a messenger….' (al-Jinn: 26-27)

We should state that there is a difference between the 'absolute unseen' and the 'limited unseen', as follows: the secrets of the latter can be disclosed and unveiled on condition that man should carry out certain procedures and measures. Today's discovery of the secrets of the universe is a case in point. This point is crystal clear in the saying of Allah Glorified is He in which He says, 'Allah– there is no deity save Him, the Ever-Living, the Self-Subsistent Fount of All Being. Neither slumber overtakes Him, or sleep. His is all that is in the heavens and all that is on Earth. Who is there that could intercede with Him, unless it be by His leave? He knows all that lies open before men and all that is hidden from them, whereas they cannot attain to aught of His Knowledge save that which He wills [them to attain] ...' (al-Baqara: 255).

It is thus clear that all the discoveries—that have so far been made—have always existed in the universe but in a hidden form. In addition, we should fully realise that Allah Glorified is He has set a specific date for the discovery of each of these secrets; a point which is crystal clear in the fact that the discoveries of steam, electricity, atoms etc. had been made in different times. Here, we should consider that man will, by the Leave of Allah, be able to disclose more secrets of the universe in defined dates, all of which tell clearly about the Existence of Allah Glorified is He the All-Wise.

These discoveries may be the result of man's efforts in making researches, or they may even be made by chance. The Law of Buoyancy by Archimedes and the Law of Gravity are two cases in point, for they had been discovered by chance. Allah the Exalted allowed one of His servants to discover something, although mans' researches were not primarily meant with the discovery of this thing in particular, a point which clearly tells us why Allah Glorified is He ascribes to Himself the Attribute of 'All-Encompassing'.

Back to the verse in question, Allah Glorified is He says, 'All that is hidden in the heavens and Earth belongs to Allah, and all authority goes back to Him' (Hud: 123). We notice that Allah Glorified is He puts His saying, wa `ilayhi yurja`u al-`amru kulluh (and all authority goes back to Him) in the passive form to indicate that everything in the universe is run by due measure. In our daily life, we have numerous examples which are carefully and perfectly arranged such as the setting of an alarm to wake one up at a particular time. In the Quran, Allah Glorified is He plainly states that He runs the affairs of the entire universe by the rule mentioned clearly in the following verse of the chapter of Ya Sin in which He says, 'His Being alone is such that when He wills a thing to be, He but says to it, "Be" – and it is.' (Ya Sin: 82) Everything in the universe takes place according to what Allah has predestined.

Another possible interpretation for the word al-`amr (authority) is that it may have to do with the entire environment surrounding mankind. Here, we should realise that even though Allah Glorified is He is the Creator of all what is in the heavens and the earth, Allah Glorified is He allows man to get benefit from them. In other words, even though Allah the Exalted possesses all these creatures, He, out of His Infinite Mercy, allows man to benefit from them. Let us offer an example to illustrate this point; man gets benefit from the heat and temperature of the sun although none owns it except Allah the Almighty. Out of the undeniable fact that the sun is viewed as one of the most essential pillars of life, Allah Glorified is He does not grant man, whom He gave the free will to decide on matters, the right to own it so that the course of life will continue running smoothly.

In the same vein, He does not entrust the affairs of all the main constituents of life to any of His creatures, but all authority goes back to Him alone. Considering the earth with its elements, water, air etc., we find that Allah the Exalted does not grant any creature the right to own or to take control over these objects so that people will not corrupt the lives of one another. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He out of His Infinite Mercy allows none of His creatures to take control over these absolute necessities of life as man is subject to permanent change, which is why he will misuse his authority over these things from time to time.

We should know fully well that Allah Glorified is He has subdued all these basic needs of life to all His creatures including man; yet Allah the Exalted does not grant man the authority over certain creatures. As for man's power itself, Allah Glorified is He predestined that it should be subject to change, that is, the strong become weak, the poor become rich and so on.

As such, we reach the conclusion that all what we own in this worldly life is granted to us by Allah Glorified is He, that is, we possess nothing of our own will. In addition, all what we possess today will be under our authority for a particular period of time, and then it will be returned back to Allah Glorified is He on the Day of Resurrection; it is a point which is definitively proved by the saying of Allah Glorified is He '...With whom will sovereignty rest on that Day? With Allah, the One Who holds absolute sway over all that exists!' (Ghafir: 16) It is out of this Divine Absolute Sovereignty on the Day of Resurrection that man's body parts will confess all the sins committed by them in the life of this world.

Even though this verse in question reads, 'All that is hidden in the heavens and the earth belongs to Allah' (Hud: 123), Allah Glorified is He says elsewhere in the Quran, 'His is what is in the heavens and what is in the earth and what is between them two and what is beneath the ground.' (Ta Ha: 6) In this verse in the chapter of Ta Ha, Allah Glorified is He drives our attention to the importance of those treasures placed by Allah under the ground confirming meanwhile that they are His. It is obvious today, we, human beings, make use of these treasures.

As for the saying of Allah Glorified is He '…and all authority goes back to Him …' (Hud: 123), this implies that man must seek salvation, so as not to blame himself for being among the losers on the Day of Resurrection.

We should be fully aware of the fact that all what we enjoy in this worldly life are but blessings conferred upon us by Allah the Almighty the All-Powerful Who granted man power and the All-Wise Who granted him wisdom. Allah the Exalted out of His Bounty, grants man handfuls of these attributes, yet all the matter belongs to Him the Almighty.

Here, we should consider that when the Quran tells us about something you have no previous knowledge about, we should firmly believe in its veracity because the One Who has sent down this Quran is Allah the One Who does not lie. That is why we find Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him having full confidence that Allah would give him victory over the enemies of Islam, for all authority belongs to Him Glorified is He.

In this regard, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and his companions Allah be pleased with them were absolutely sure that the disbelievers would be punished in the Hereafter in case they were not tortured in this worldly life, that Allah Glorified is He would take over their properties which they owned in this life, and that Allah the Exalted would not allow the disbelievers to decide on matters in the Hereafter. Allah Glorified is He is the One Who will for sure inherit the earth and all what is on it. So, if this is the case, we must offer our acts of worship to Him the Almighty alone; we must have firm belief in all the events of the past He told us about, and we must be absolutely sure that all authority goes back to Him Glorified is He Alone.

Allah Glorified is He out of His Wisdom, divided time into three parts as follows: one part pertains to the period of time before the creation of Adam, whilst the second starts from the creation of Adam to the existence of any of us. As for the third part of time, it pertains to the endless future. As such, man experiences three different periods of time which are the past, the present, and the future. As a matter of fact, each of us has a due role to perform in this existence.

Logic states that man, having enjoyed existence in this life and having matured intellectually, is supposed to wonder about his ancient past that is, the history of mankind. When one wants to investigate such a topic, his acceptance to the narrations is subject to confidence in the speaker, that is, whether or not he speaks the truth, especially if the talk turns to the history of what happened before the creation of Adam peace be upon him. One should wonder, ‘None can tell me about what happened before the creation of Adam but the One Who created me’! This point is narrated in the Hadith of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in which he says, ‘There was Allah and nothing else before Him….'[1] This Hadith clearly indicates that Allah Glorified is He is the Only Who can tell us the absolute truth about what had happened before the creation of Adam. Yet, if someone wonders about his existence in a specific time in particular, we say to him, 'This happens based on the Will of Allah Glorified is He Who knows best what benefits man and what causes him harm'.

Yet, one must wonder about what he is supposed to do in this worldly life. The answer is crystal clear in the fact that he is supposed to take part in pushing the course of life forward, for it is undoubtedly this active engagement that marks the line between life and death, a point which is proved by the saying of Allah Glorified is He 'He brought you into being out of the earth, and made you thrive thereon' (Hud: 61).

Indeed, Allah Glorified is He has equipped man with a mind so as to reflect upon matters and with power by means of which he is able to act. Furthermore, Allah Glorified is He subdued the entire universe to man to get benefit from all the different kinds of provision in it. It is thus clear that everything in this universe needs one to exert effort, a matter which cannot be fulfilled except for when man receives power from Allah.

We should know for certain that offering the five prescribed daily prayers is the most important thing in man's life, for by doing so, one recharges his spiritual energy in such a way that makes him show absolute loyalty to Allah the Almighty. In this vein, we strongly stress that in case one sincerely offers these prayers to Allah, his future will be positively affected by this.

In the Quran, Allah Glorified is He giving us a striking example to illustrate this point, says, 'O you who believe! When the call is made for prayer on Friday, then hasten to the Remembrance of Allah and leave off trading; that is better for you, if you know.' (al-Jumu'a: 9) This particular kind of action

(1) Narrated by Imam Ahmad in his Musnad, 431/4; and by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih, Hadith no. 3191 on the authority of `Umran ibn Husayn who narrated that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'There was Allah and nothing else before Him and His Throne was over the water, and He then created the Heavens and the Earth and wrote everything in the Book.'

mentioned in this verse in the chapter of al-Jumu`a, i.e. hastening to the Remembrance of Allah, necessitates that man must receive spiritual energy from above. Then, the positive effect of this energy will be shown clearly in the following kind of action which is manifested in the saying of Allah, ‘But when the prayer is ended, then disperse abroad in the land and seek of Allah’s grace, and remember Allah much, that you may be successful.’ (al-Jumu‘a: 10)

For this reason, Allah Glorified is He concludes the verse in question with His saying, ‘…So [Prophet], worship Him, and put your trust in Him: your Lord is never unaware of what you [people] are doing.’ (Hud: 123) This part of the verse in question orders the believers to obey the divine commands. Man is supposed to offer the various acts of worship including the performance of prayers, the giving of the prescribed alms, the observing of fasting and making the pilgrimage to Mecca if one is able to do so. Having offered these acts of worship sincerely, one gets higher spiritual energy which enables him to do his due roles by means of which the course of life is run smoothly.

Amazingly enough, the efforts exerted by man in this worldly life helps him in one way or another receive spiritual energy from Allah, the Creator. Let us offer an example to illustrate this point. When one wants to offer prayers, he is in need of clothing to cover his private parts. We should consider that we, in pursuit of getting clothing, have to undergo a number of stages including agriculture, weaving, buying, and selling. In this way, one gets benefit from all the different sciences so as to be able to offer prayers and thus gets the spiritual energy from Allah the Almighty. As such, one is in constant movement; he receives spiritual energy from Allah and thus can run the affairs of the life normally; he, in the same connection, makes use of the elements of life what enables him to stand before Allah Glorified is He. Thus, it becomes clear that one’s life is based on two important elements: receiving spiritual energy from Allah Glorified is He and making use of the elements placed in the universe so that the course of life is run smoothly. For all this, one is supposed to worship Allah Glorified is He in the light of His Divine Way of Guidance sent down to mankind through messengers and prophets, considering that he will be faced with hardships and challenges. Yet, in case one undergoes any of these matters, he has to put his trust in Allah- a great benefit obtained from continuously showing loyalty to Allah Glorified is He. That is why we find Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him hastening to offer prayers at times of distress.(1)

As for the Arabic phrase hadhabahu (while in distress), it means that when he peace and blessings be upon him was no longer able to address the matter, he then turned to Allah, the Creator of reasons to ease this distress. If one worships Allah Glorified is He and places his trust in Him, Allah Glorified is He will undoubtedly help him get rid of this distress for Allah is not unaware of what we are doing.

This verse in question shows man the way to happiness in the present and the future. That is because when one obeys the orders of Allah and does good deeds, he will be rewarded with ten good deeds in return for the one good deed, and Allah Glorified is He multiples (the reward) for whom He pleases. As for the evil deed, out of the Mercy of Allah, it is recorded as one evil deed.

As such, it is perfectly clear that this verse under discussion has set the affairs of man in order throughout the entire life including the time before his existence, his present time and his future to the Day of Resurrection. In this vein, it is good to quote the following verse in which Allah Glorified is He says, ‘O you who have attained to faith! Respond to the Call of Allah and the Messenger whenever he calls you to that which will give you the life...’ (al-Anfal: 24). This means showing obedience to Allah and following the perfect, moral example of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

(1) Hudhayfa ibn Al-Yaman Allah be pleased with him narrated that ‘When anything distressed the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him he prayed.’ Narrated by Imam Ahmad in his Musnad, 5/388; and Abu Dawud in his Sunnan, Hadith no. 1319.

the chapter of

Yusuf

In the Name of God, the Most Merciful, the Dispenser of Mercy

الٓرۚ تِلۡكَ ءَايَٰتُ ٱلۡكِتَٰبِ ٱلۡمُبِينِ ١

Alif Lam Ra, these are the verses of the Scripture that makes things clear(1) [1] (The Quran, _Yusuf:_ 1)

We have previously shed light on the openings of the chapters of The Quran,(2) such as the chapters of al-Baqara, Al-`Imran, etc. In this regard, we confirmed that there are several chapters in the Quran that start with the ‘discrete letters’ stressing that these letters must be read in the full form to get the correct recitation of the verse. That is, it is not right just to pronounce the sound of the letter.

(1) This chapter is Meccan (revealed in Mecca) that is, before the migration of Prophet Muhammad to Medina. In his Al-Itqan fi `Ulum Al-Quran, Imam As-Suyuti says, 'Abu Hayyan opines that the entire chapter was revealed in Mecca before the migration of Prophet Muhammad, except for the first three verses, yet this opinion is very weak.' (See As-Suyuti, Al-Itqan; 1/40). The verses of this chapter count 111. It sheds light on several topics including the stories of the prophets, the righteous, the angels, the devils, mankind, livestock, birds, kings, kingdoms, traders, scholars, the ignorant people, men, and women. In addition, it reviews the topics of monotheism, jurisprudence, biographies, the interpretation of dreams, policy, coexistence and running the affairs of the state, as well as several topics by means of which one is prosperous in this worldly life and the Hereafter. (See Al-Qurtubi, Jame` Al-Bayan; 4/3441).

(2) Imam As-Suyuti who, in his Al-Itqan, is reported to have said, 'Know that Allah Glorified is He has opened the chapters of the Quran, using ten different styles, as follows:

First: Praising His Glory, which is divided into two kinds: praising Him the Almighty and declaring His Glory. Here, we should know that five chapters of the Quran start with praising him the Almighty*; two start with His saying, "Blessed is He"; there are yet seven chapters starting with declaring His Glory.*

Second: The discrete letters; there are twenty-nine chapters of the Quran starting with these letters.

Third: There are ten chapters in which Allah calls upon Prophet Muhammad or the ummah (followers of Islam), as follows: there are five chapters starting with calling upon him peace and blessings be upon him and another five in which Allah Glorified is He starts them with calling upon the ummah.

Fourth: There are twenty-three chapters in which Allah the Exalted starts with predicative sentences, such as 'They will ask thee about the spoils of war...' (al-Anfal: 1).

Fifth: There are fifteen chapters in which Allah starts with an oath. =

We should consider that every Arabic letter has both a specific name and a sound that it represents. Only the educated people are the ones who know the names of letters. As for the uneducated which are a majority, they do not know the names of the letters even though they pronounce the sounds represented by them in their daily speech; they are unable to pronounce the letters in their full form. For example, an illiterate person is neither able to spell a word nor to identify its letters because he did not learn how to read and write. In contrast, the literate person knows both the pronunciations and sounds represented by the letters as well as their corresponding names.

We know for certain that the Quran has been revealed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in hearing, which is why one must hear the recitation of the Quran before starting to read it himself, otherwise, he will mistakenly recite the opening of the chapter of al-Baqara in the same way as he recites the opening of the chapter of ash-Sharh. Yet, if one listens to the recitation of the Quran before he starts reading it himself, he will be fully able to read it the way Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him recited the verses to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saying, for instance, Alif Lam Mim instead of Alam(1).

= Sixth: There are seven chapters in which Allah Glorified is He starts with conditional statements, such as, ‘When that which must come to pass [at last] comes to pass.’ (al-Waqi‘a: 1)
Seventh: There are six chapters starting with Divine Orders, such as the saying of Allah, ‘Say, “He is the One God.’ (al-Ikhlas: 1)
Eighth: There are six chapters in the Quran starting with a question, such as the saying of Allah, ‘About what do they [most often] ask one another?’ (an-Naba’: 1)
Ninth: There are three chapters starting with a supplication, namely; al-Humaza, al-Mutaffifin and al-Masad.
Tenth: There is one chapter in the Quran in which Allah starts with giving justification, which is Quraysh. (See As-Suyuti, Al-Itqan, 3/316).

(1) Hearing prior to reciting is a necessary condition for correct and clear pronunciation of the words of the Quran. That is why Allah Glorified is He says, ‘Even as We have sent to you a messenger from among yourselves to convey to you Our Messages, and to=

Once again, I strongly stress this point in question which is that the recitation of the Quran cannot be done before first listening to its sound recitation from a well-versed scholar so that one is fully able to pronounce its words correctly. Having been well taught to do that, you then are able to recite the verses of The Quran, considering that every letter in it is used in a due measure.(1)

We know fully well that the verses of the Quran are divided into two kinds, namely; ayat muhkamat (clear verses) and ayat mutashabihat (unspecific verses).(2) As for the clear verses, they tell us about the rules that we are obliged to follow and carry out, that is, we will be punished for not carrying them out. As for the legal wisdom behind sending down of the unspecific verses of The Quran,(3) it is that they could, according to some scholars, be explained in

= cause you to grow in purity, and to impart to you revelation and wisdom, and to teach you that which you knew not.' (al-Baqara: 151) The following meanings are clear in this verse: one makes the first step by correct recitation; he then attains higher spiritual rank. As for education, it purifies the soul. The verse then tells that we should set everything in its due place.

(1) In his book entitled An-Nashr fi Al-Qira`at Al-`Ashr, Imam ibn Al-Jazri states, 'Undoubtedly, just as understanding the meanings of the verses of the Quran and abiding by its laws are acts of worship, its correct articulation is also viewed as an act of worship. Further, one is supposed to receive the correct articulation of its verses from those well-versed reciters who orally got the articulation from their teachers who, in turn, received it from their teachers, and so on till we reach the end of the chain, which is Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. In this vein, we stress that it is impermissible to recite the Quran in any way other than that received from him peace and blessings be upon him.' (See ibn Al-Jazri, An-Nashr fi Al-Qira'at Al-`Ashr, 1/210.)

(2) Allah Glorified is He says, 'It is He who has sent down to you, [O Muhammad], the Book; in it are verses [that are] precise - they are the foundation of the Book - and others unspecific. As for those in whose hearts is deviation [from truth], they will follow that of it which is unspecific, seeking discord and seeking an interpretation [suitable to them] And no one knows its [true] interpretation except Allah. But those firm in knowledge say, "We believe in it. All [of it] is from our Lord." And no one will be reminded except those of understanding.' (Al-'Imran: 7)

(3) The unspecific verses of the Quran refer to those verses whose meanings are not known to anyone but Allah Glorified is He. Another possible meaning for them is that they are those verses that are eligible to be explained in various ways; this meaning is yet deduced from the seventh verse in the chapter of Al-`Imran. As for the saying of Allah Glorified is He '…Allah has sent down the best statement: a consistent Book wherein is reiteration…' (az-Zumar: 23), it means that all the verses of the Quran are all true and consistent with each other. (See Abu Yahya Al-Ansari, Fath Ar-Rahman Bi Kashf Ma Yaltabis Fi Al-Quran, p. 60).

various ways, based on people's different abilities of understanding and perception. Here, we should consider that all people have the same body parts by means of which they can perceive items. For example, they all have eyes, ears, noses, tongues, and hands.

Yet, we should be fully aware of the fact that there are certain natural laws that govern man's sensory organs, as follows: One's eye, for example, is governed by principles which determine sight. Scientists believe that when the light falls on objects, it is reflected to the eye which is thus able to form an image for this object in its pupil. But, as the distance between the eye and the perceived object increases, the image gradually diminishes until it finally vanishes from sight. There are also physical laws that determine the sound waves which reach the hearing mechanisms inside one's ear. In the same connection, one's ability to smell is subject to certain laws, for he is unable to smell a flower that exists in a distant area. The same applies to the human mind, for it is also governed by certain laws.

As a matter of fact, Allah Glorified is He has already instructed man how to correctly use our senses. For example, Allah the Exalted does not prevent us from smelling the scent of a beautiful flower, yet Allah Glorified is He orders us to lower our gazes upon seeing women. As such, Allah Glorified is He tells about what we are obliged to do and about that from which we are prohibited. Likewise, the human mind may be able to understand a particular topic but not another. Here, we stress that being unable to understand a particular topic is viewed as an act of understanding.

Let us offer an example to fully illustrate this point; a high-school student who is presented with a college-level exercise in architecture by his teacher, will for sure respond to the teacher, saying, 'We did not learn the necessary mathematical rules by means of which we can solve this problem yet'; it is a matter which clearly indicates that the student is fully aware of his own abilities. In this way, Allah Glorified is He teaches us how to correctly use our senses. There are certain rules which man can easily understand and perceive by mind; yet there are also others which are beyond one's capacity of understanding, which is why he must unquestioningly obey them.

I often cite the following example in this regard; every room in a large hotel has its own unique key which does not open other rooms. However, each floor of the hotel has a master key that unlocks the doors of all the rooms. Only an expert in designing such keys can understand the intricate mechanisms that enable the master key to work. This is what the Quran does to mankind; it includes all what causes them prosperity in this worldly life and the Hereafter. In addition, it is a comprehensive Book about which Allah Glorified is He says, 'It is He who has sent down to you, [O Muhammad], the Book; in it are verses [that are] precise - they are the foundation of the Book - and others unspecific. As for those in whose hearts is deviation [from truth], they will follow that of it which is unspecific, seeking discord and seeking an interpretation [suitable to them] And no one knows its [true] interpretation except Allah. But those firms in knowledge say, "We believe in it. All [of it] is from our Lord." And no one will be reminded except those of understanding.' (Al-'Imran: 7)

This verse tells clearly that deviant people misuse these unspecific verses of the Quran to achieve their goal of denying the Message of the Truth, in one way or another. By doing so, they are given to arrogance. To such people, we declare that the Will of Allah Glorified is He decrees that some of the chapters of the Quran should start with these miraculous discrete letters which must be articulated in their full forms. In truth, these openings of the Quran in these forms are viewed as a means of testing the human mind, that is, whether or not it will accept and firmly adhere to the Divine Order although it might be unable to understand it. We should consider that Allah Glorified is He will for sure test man in all spheres of life. As for the topic in question, the sending down of these unspecific verses of the Quran is viewed as a test to man's means of perception, that is, Allah Glorified is He wants to know how the believers will deal with these verses.

As for the saying of Allah Glorified is He '…And no one knows its [true] interpretation except Allah. But those firms in knowledge say, "We believe in it. All [of it] is from our Lord.' (Al-'Imran: 7), it may be explained as follows: the well-versed scholars are the ones who know the explanation of these specific verses of The Quran, and thus they will for sure convey this knowledge to mankind. Yet, we should not forget a very important point, which is that the explanation to be given by these well-versed scholars is none but their saying, as mentioned clearly in The Quran, '…All [of it] is from our Lord...' (Al-'Imran: 7), they exerted their utmost efforts to make explanation for these verses, yet all the knowledge they get is from Allah Glorified is He in Whom they have firm belief. We can quote the Hadith of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in which he said, 'As for the unspecific verses of The Quran, you are obliged to believe in them.'(1)

Let us offer another example to fully illustrate this point; we are obliged, under the command of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to touch, or point to, or kiss the Black Stone. In addition, we are obliged to stone the rocks that symbolise Satan. Even though both are but rocks, we are obliged to firmly adhere to the Prophet's command out of devotion and faith.(2)

Attempting to judge every matter using the mind's discernment, one will for sure deviate from the right path, because there are undoubtedly certain matters that man's mind will never be able to reach the wisdom behind, which is why Muslims are obliged, under Islam, to act upon the rules of Allah the All-Wise. Here is a striking example so that we will correctly understand this point; if someone is told that drinking alcohol severely damages the liver and was meanwhile presented an ultrasound image, he will refrain from doing so because he fully realises the bad result of drinking on the liver.

Here arises a good question, 'Does man's abstention stem from his faith in Allah, or from his past experiences'? Undoubtedly, this man's behaviour is moulded by his experience. There is a great difference between him and a believer who unquestioningly obeys the commands of Allah and abstains from alcohol out of the fact that Allah the Exalted has declared it prohibited. One is not allowed, in a way or another to abstain from following the divine command until he realises the wisdom behind them.

(1) The full text of the Hadith reads, 'Most surely, the Quran was not revealed down so that its verses may contradict one another. Therefore, comply with that which you have understood from it. As for its unspecific verses, you are obliged to believe in them.' (See ibn Kathir, Tafsir Al-Quran Al-`Azhim, 1/346; the Hadith is narrated on the authority of ibn Mardawih from the authority of `Abdallah ibn `Amr ibn Al-`As.

(2) `Umar ibn Al-Khattab Allah be pleased with him said, 'I know that you are just a stone and that you can neither do any harm nor give benefit. Had I not seen the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him kiss you, I would not have kissed you.' (See Al-Bukhari, Sahih, Hadith no. 1610; this Hadith is narrated on the authority of ibn `Umar Allah be pleased with them.)

It is thus clear that we are obliged to firmly believe in these unspecific verses of the Quran despite the fact that the wisdom behind them is not clear to us. We cannot defer believing in these verses until we prove this wisdom.

I often reiterate that man must address the topics of faith in the same way he interacts with his doctor. That is, when an ill person goes to a doctor, he tells him about what causes him pain, whereupon the doctor will prescribe the necessary treatment. In the same way, man's mind has nothing at all to do with the matters of Divine Legislation.

We can quote the statement of some of the most righteous Muslims who used to say, 'The mind is like a riding animal; it delivers you to the door of the Sultan, but it does not pass through that door with you.' As such, we reach the conclusion that those who want to know about the wisdom behind all legislative matters will for sure be disputing with Allah in one of His Attributes, i.e. the All Wise; yet we know for certain that Allah Glorified is He has no counterpart. For this reason, we are obliged to believe in these miraculous discrete letters, considering that none will be unable to reveal their secrets but Allah the Almighty.(1)

Amazingly enough, all the verses of the Quran are linked together by connecting vowels. For example, Allah Glorified is He concludes the chapter of Hud with His saying, '…and your Lord [O Prophet] is not unaware of what you [people] are doing.' (Hud: 123)

Out of the fact that this part of the verse indicates the end of the chapter, the last letter of the sentence was supposed to be constant, which is not the case here; for we find the Arabic word ta`maluna (what you are doing) ending with a vowel on the last letter, and thus it is connected to the basmala (in the Name of Allah, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful).

(1) In his Tafsir Al-Quran Al-`Azhim, ibn Kathir says, 'The total number of letters mentioned in the beginnings of the chapters of the Quran–discounting those that are repeated–are 14: (Alif, Lam, Mim, Sad, Ra`, Kaf, Ha', Ya', `Ain, Ta, Sin, Ha', Qaf and Nun)–and together they form the following sentence: Nassun Hakimun Qati`un Lahu Sirr, that is, 'a wise and decisive text endowed with a secret.' (See ibn Kathir, Tafsir Al-Quran Al- 'Azhim, 1/37.)

Based on this abovementioned rule, we were supposed to recite these discrete letters in the beginning of the chapter of Yusuf this way, yet we did not, because Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him instructed us to recite them as Alif Lam Ra, that is, without the articulation of vowels. This point clearly indicates that the pronunciation of the words of the Quran has been taught to him peace and blessings be upon him through revelation, a matter which also points out that there is great wisdom behind all the Divine orders and commands.

I would like to remind you of the fact that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him used to recite the Quran one time in the month of Ramadan to the Archangel Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him yet when it was the year of his death, he peace and blessings be upon him recited it twice. It is thus that the Quran has been transmitted to us in the same way it has been revealed down upon the heart of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

Back to the verse in question, Allah Glorified is He says, 'Alif Lam Ra. These are the verses of the Scripture that makes things clear.' (Yusuf: 1) As for the Arabic pronoun tilka (these), it refers to what is mentioned after these discrete letters in the very beginning of the chapter that is 'the verses of the Scripture'. You, O believers, must believe that the verses of the Quran contain such letters. This is how some scholars understand the meaning of these discrete letters at the beginning of this chapter.

Let us give an example of our daily life to clarify this point; a tailor wanting to advertise his sartorial skills– displays in his shop window samples of threads that he uses in his work. Analogically speaking, Allah Glorified is He by opening some of the chapters of the Quran with these discrete letters, wants to tell us the words of the Quran are made up of miraculous letters like this, which is why you, O mankind, you will be unable to produce something similar to it, even if aided by the jinn.

Here, we should be fully aware of the fact that the miraculous nature of the Noble Quran does not stem from its linguistic style, but rather, from the fact that it is the Speech of Allah Glorified is He which is why it must be miraculous even though it uses the same letters we use in our speech.

An interesting observation is how could Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him pronounce these discrete letters in their full forms even though he was unlettered?! It thus goes without saying that his peace and blessings be upon him articulation of these letters in such a manner clearly tells that he has been actually taught to articulate them this way by Allah the Most High. As for the Arabic word al-kitab (the Scripture) mentioned in this verse is used to refer to the Noble Quran.(1)

As for the Arabic adjective al-mubin (that makes things clear), denotes that the Quran is the Book which elucidates everything to man, who is Allah's vicegerent on earth. Man will find the explanation of everything in The Quran, which is why it is believed that those who think that the Quran misses the mentioning of topic are wrong, for they do not carefully reflect upon it.

In this regard, it is narrated that Imam Mohammed 'Abdu(2) once met an orientalist(3) in Paris, who asked him the following question, 'O Imam, as long as you, O Muslims, have a verse in your Book that reads, '…No single thing have We neglected in Our decree[1]…' (al-An'am: 38), allow me to ask you the following question, 'how many loaves of bread does a dry measure of wheat yield?' The Imam, in response to the question, called for a baker and asked him how many loaves of bread can be made from a dry measure of wheat, whereupon the baker answered him the exact number. Yet, the orientalist protested and said, 'I asked you for an answer from The Quran, not from a baker!' Imam `Abduh then told him that Allah Glorified is He says in The Quran, 'So ask the people of the message if you do not know.' (an-Nahl: 43) Imam[2] 'Abduh was fully aware of the fact the human mind can in no way encompass all knowledge, and thus the All Great Wisdom of Allah Glorified is He decrees to distribute talents among people so that everyone will excel in a particular field of life.

(1) The word kitab has been mentioned 220 times in the Quran; it is used to impart various meanings including The Quran, the Torah, the Bible, and the Guarded Tablet. It may also be used to give the meaning of the Arabic word 'letter' which is deduced from the saying of Allah Glorified is He 'Go with this my letter and convey it to them; and thereafter withdraw from them and see what [answer] they return.' (an-Naml: 28) It may be further used to refer to the written account of deeds that man receives on the Day of Judgment. Allah Glorified is He says, 'And he will be told, "Read this your record! Sufficient is your own self today to make out your account!"' (al-Isra': 14)

(2) The Grand Mufti of Egypt at his time, Mohamed `Abdu ibn Hasan Khayrallah At-Turkumani. He was born in 1849 C.E. in the Al-Gharbiyyah governorate, Egypt, and was brought up in the village of Mahallat Nasr, Al-Buhyrah governorate. He received his education at Al-Ahmadi Mosque in Tanta, and then he pursued further education at Al-Azhar. Having reached the age of forty, he mastered the French language, which is why he in collaboration with Jamal Ad-Din Al-Afghani established the magazine of Al-`Urwa Al-Wuthqa in Paris. He died in 1905 in Alexandria, and was buried in Cairo. (See Az-Zirikili, Al-`Alam, 6/252.)

(3) Orientalists are western scholars who study the sciences, literatures, religions, and philosophies of the Orient. They are specialized in studying matters dealing with Oriental studies. Among them are those who treat Islam equitably, and those who dedicate their works to defaming it.

In the same connection, we refer the problems of inheritance to those who are well versed in this field of knowledge to exactly tell us how the share of each inheritor will be. Likewise, it is enough for an ordinary Muslim to know that he is obliged to perform pilgrimage. Yet, he should seek the advice of well-versed scholars on how to perform the rituals in the same way it was performed by Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

There are many other occasions when one is obliged to seek the advice of an expert in a particular field. When one wants to build a house, for example, it is not enough to possess the financial means. One must also consult an architect to prepare the necessary designs. It is thus crystal clear that man’s mind can in no way encompass all the knowledge of life, which is why Allah, out of His Bounty, distributed talents to people so that they are forced to complement each other.

[1] Commenting on this particular verse, Imam Al-Qurtubi said, 'Allah the Exalted recorded everything in the Preserved Tablet. This verse may also refer to The Quran, and thus it means that there is no one single matter of religion except is explicitly mentioned in The Quran, or is explained in detail by Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him or by consensus or by sound analogy, which is proved by the texts of the Quran.' (See Al-Qurtubi, Jame` Al-Bayan, 3/2505.)

[2] Imam Mohamed `Abduh is one of the great scholars of Islam. He was entitled 'the Renewer of Religion' of his time. He left his mark on Islamic thought and was the founder of a reformist school. He was a contemporary of Jamal Ad-Din Al-Afghani. He was of the opinion that to edify individuals and societies, it is necessary to begin by educating the individual. Although `Abdu's approach to reforming societies by starting with the individual differed from that of Al-Afghani, there are common features between them both

Allah says:

إِنَّآ أَنزَلۡنَٰهُ قُرۡءَٰنًا عَرَبِيّٗا لَّعَلَّكُمۡ تَعۡقِلُونَ ٢

We have sent it down as an Arabic Quran so that you
[people] may understand [2] (The Quran, Yusuf: 2)

There is a very important point which we should consider; sometimes Allah Glorified is He describes The Quran saying, ‘The Trustworthy Spirit has brought it down.’ (ash-Shu'ara’: 193); that is, Allah the Exalted states that the Archangel Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him is the medium through which the Quran has been revealed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him; other times Allah Glorified is He says, ‘And those who believe and do righteous deeds and believe in what has been sent down upon Muhammad…’ (Muhammad: 2); the process of revelation includes Allah Glorified is He, the Archangel Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him and the rest of angles. Yet, Allah the Exalted says elsewhere in The Quran, ‘And when it is said to them, “Believe in what Allah has revealed”’ (al-Baqara: 91), the rulings of The Quran, upon being revealed to Prophet Muhammad must be put in action by the ummah of Islam. This verse of al-Baqara refers to the fact that the Quran was revealed all at once from the Preserved Tablet to the heaven of this world, and then it was sent down piecemeal to give answers to all the questions offered to or by Muslims.

Once again, we state plainly that it is possible to say that the Quran has been sent down, or that the Archangel Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him, the Trustworthy Holy Spirit, had brought it down to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

In the chapter of al-Isra`, Allah Glorified is He says, ‘and as a guide towards the truth have We bestowed this [revelation] from above; with this [very] truth has it come down [to you, O Prophet]…’ (*Al-Isra’:*105). Allah Glorified is He sent the Quran down from the Preserved Tablet to the heaven of this worldly life, and then it was revealed down piecemeal to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to fulfil its mission in the world on the earth.(1)

As for the verse in question, Allah the Exalted says, '…We have sent it down as an Arabic Quran…' (Yusuf: 2), while the previous verse reads, '…These are the verses of the Scripture...' (Yusuf: 1); Allah the Exalted once described the Quran as an item which is being read, while another time Allah Glorified is He described it as an item which is written; it is a point which indicates the inimitability of the name itself.

Concerning the topic of the compilation of the Quran(2), we should know fully well that the scribe did not record any verse in it except what has already been written and unless two witnesses testify to its ultimate accuracy.

(1) One of these real examples tackled by the Quran is the case in which some companions stayed too long in the house of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Allah Glorified is He says, 'O you who have attained to faith! Do not enter the Prophet's dwellings unless you are given leave; [and when invited] to a meal, do not come [so early as] to wait for it to be readied: but whenever you are invited, enter [at the proper time]; and when you have partaken of the meal, disperse without lingering for the sake of mere talk: that, behold, might give offence to The Prophet, and yet he might feel shy of [asking] you [to leave]: but Allah is not shy of [teaching you] what is right….' (al-'Ahzab: 53)
In his Asbab An-Nuzul, Al-Wahidi narrated the following Hadith, `Anas said that he was ten years old when the Messenger of Allah came to Medina. He said, "My mother decided that I would serve him and I served him for ten years. He died when I was twenty. I am the person who knows best about the business of the veil. The first instance that was revealed occurred when the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him married Zaynab bint Jahsh Allah be pleased with her. He celebrated the wedding there, invited the people who came, ate and then left. A group remained with the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him. They stayed for a long time and then the Prophet went out and I went out hoping that they would leave. He walked and I walked with him until he came to the threshold of `A`isha's, room. Then, thinking that they would have left, he returned and I returned with him. He went to Zaynab, but they were still sitting there. He left again and I left with him until he once more reached the threshold of `A`isha's room. When he thought that they would have gone, he went back again and I went back with him. This time they had indeed left. The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him then put up a curtain between me and him, and the veil was revealed.' (See Al-Wahidi, Asbab An-Nuzul, p. 205)

(2) In his Al-Mustadrak, Imam Al-Hakim said, 'the Quran has been complied three times, as follows: the first time took place in the lifetime of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, whilst the second was done in the Caliphate of Abu Bakr=

Undoubtedly, man’s memory may not always be reliable and may differ with temperaments, but written lines cannot be altered.

Out of the fact that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was to convey his message to the Arabs, he must have been supported with a miracle that proves his veracity. Out of the fact that miracles imply challenge, the Quran must have been revealed in the Arabic language which Arabs fully mastered. Had the miracles been relating to a particular field, which is beyond the Arab’s capacity, they would not have accepted their incapability before it. They might have even said, ‘If we had learnt about this, we would have brought forth something which is better than it’. Arabs were masters of eloquence and poetry. They used to gather in markets (1) where poets would recite their poems and where and orators would give their eloquent speeches. They used to compete to select the best from among them in this regard. The Arabs encompassed all the skills of the Arabic language, to the extent that people in the markets were able to judge their rhetorical products. In short, they were masters of eloquence and rhetoric.

It is for this reason that Allah willed the miracle of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to be from the same field in which his people had excelled in. We should consider that the Arabs were the first people to = Allah be pleased with him. As for the third time, it occurred during the Caliphate of `Uthman Allah be pleased with him.’

Sheikh Sha’rawi Allah rest his soul refers in this regard to the second compilation of the Quran. In this respect, it is narrated that Abu Bakr had said to Zayd ibn Thabit Allah be pleased with him ‘You are a wise young man and we do not have any suspicion about you, and you used to write the Divine Inspiration for Allah's Messenger peace and blessings be upon him. So you should search for (the fragmentary scripts of) the Quran and collect it in one book’, whereupon Zayd said, ‘So I started looking for the Quran and collecting it from (what was written on) palm stalks, thin white stones and from the men who knew it by heart.’ It is narrated that he Allah be pleased with him did not write anything unless two witnesses testified to its veracity and accuracy. Commenting on this act of Zayd, Imam As-Suyuti said, ‘This clearly indicates that Zayd did not suffice with the already written verses unless those who heard them directly from Prophet Muhammad testified to their accuracy. He did this out of taking extra precautions, for he himself memorized the Quran by heart.’ (See As-Suyuti, Al-Itqan, 1/164-167).

(1) Arabs had several markets (gatherings), such as `Ukazh and Dhi Al-Majaz; it was in these markets that poets used to recite their poems by way of competing to choose the best from among them.

hear the Quran from him peace and blessings be upon him. Had the Arabs believed in the truthfulness of The Quran, the element of challenge would have made no sense for them.

It is of great importance to know that when the Quran was reavled, the Persians and Romans became fully aware that this Bedouin ummah had possessed the constituents by means of which its members could set up an unprecedented civlisation, although they were unlettered and their propeht himself was unlettered.

Moreover, when the Persians and Romans found that the Arabs, masters of eloquence, were unable to produce even one verse similar to that of The Quran, they became fully aware that their own civilisations became at risk because they had to face this advanced civilisation of Islam.

Once again, Allah Glorified is He out of His Will decreed that the Quran must be revealed in Arabic; for Allah Glorified is He did not send any messenger except in the tongue of his own people. Allah Glorified is He says, ‘And We did not send any messenger except [speaking] in the language of his people to state clearly for them…’ (Ibrahim: 4).

It is clear that the Quran is the miracle of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. We should stress that there is a difference between the Quran and the rest of all the heavenly-revealed Scriptures. The Quran encompasses both the two qualities of being a miracle and a Book that contains legal rulings of the religion, a point which is not provided in the rest of all the heavenly-revealed Scriptures.

The Quran will continue revealing the Divine Way of Guidance to Muslims to the end of time. I would like to drive your attention to the fact that the promise of Allah on the universality of the Quran has been actually fulfilled at the hands of the early generations of Muslims who went all over the corners of the world to disseminate the Message of Islam embodied in the Quran.

When the disbelievers seek to explain how Islam spread with such amazing speed, they discover that it did not spread through the power of those who believed in it, but rather by the might of those who were drawn to its consistence and cohesion- those who were extremely surprised by its impressive rulings which would, they thought, make them get rid of their problems and alleviate their distresses.

We heavily stress that the Quran contains rulings by means of which people could achieve their happiness. As well, it includes several predictions of what is going to take place in the universe in such a way that makes the believers know for sure that it does not neglect any topic.

An orientalist could pose the following question, ‘How can Muslims assert that the Quran was revealed in a clear and elucidating Arabic tongue when it contains non-Arabic words, such as Ameen (Amen)- a word indicating agreement to what the supplication made by the Imam- as well as other Roman(1) and Persian(2) words’? These orientalists are oblivious to the fact that Arabs, as a result of their intermingling with other communities, had used some of their vocabularies, to the extent that these words became already part of the Arabic language, exactly as we today ‘Arabise’ some foreign vocabularies, as long as we properly understand their meanings.(3)

(1) The following are examples of words from the Holy Quran that are derived from the Roman language:
- Ar-Raqim; Allah Glorified is He says, ‘...do you [really] think that [the parable of] the Men of the Cave and of [their devotion to] the scriptures – Ar-Raqim- could be deemed more wondrous than any [other] of Our Messages?’ (al-Kahf: 9). Commenting on this word in question, Imam As-Suyuti opines that it could be used to refer to the Preserved Tablet, the Book, or the inkwell. (See As-Suyuti, Al-Itqan, 2/112.)
- As-Sirat; the two great scholars An-Naqqash and ibn Al-Jawzi opine that it is a Roman word meaning the Path.
- Tafiqa; Allah Glorified is He says, ‘…and they both began to cover themselves with the leaves of the garden …’ (al-A'raf: 22).

(2) The following is a list of the Persian words that are used in the Holy Quran:
- Abariq; Ath-Tha`alibi, in his Fiqh Al-Lugha, is of the position that it is derived from the Persian language. Al-Jawaliqi, on his part, holds the position that it is an ‘Arabised’ Persian word meaning either water conduit, or the act of decanting water.
- Dinar; Allah Glorified is He says, ‘…and among them there are some such that if you entrust one (of them) with a dinar he shall not pay it back to you except so long as you remain firm in demanding it…’ (Al-‘Imran: 75). Al-Jawaliqi, among many other scholars, are of the position that it is a Persian word.
- Sijjil; Mujahid holds the position that it is a Persian word meaning stone or mud.

(3) In his Al-Itqan, Imam As-Suyuti states that scholars have different opinions concerning the various linguistic origins of these words. Having mentioned the proofs of each group, he said, `Abu ‘Ubayd Al-Qasim ibn Salam is of the position that both opinions =

Allah Glorified is He then concludes the verse with His saying, '…so that you [people] may understand…' (Yusuf: 2). Allah the Exalted wants people to make use of their minds to carefully reflect upon matters. Here, we should consider that truthful people are very keen on urging people to utilise their minds, unlike the liars who want them to set them idle. The same happens in our daily life. For example, when a vendor tries to sell his product, he touts it by means of proving that he is fully confident in its excellence and high quality. On the contrary, if the product at hand is substandard, then the merchant would not induce you to deeply consider the purchase you are about to make, that is, he would not give you the chance to discover his cheating.

Allah Glorified is He then says:

نَحۡنُ نَقُصُّ عَلَيۡكَ أَحۡسَنَ ٱلۡقَصَصِ بِمَآ أَوۡحَيۡنَآ إِلَيۡكَ هَٰذَا
ٱلۡقُرۡءَانَ وَإِن كُنتَ مِن قَبۡلِهِۦ لَمِنَ ٱلۡغَٰفِلِينَ ٣

We tell you [Prophet] the best of stories in revealing this Quran to you. Before this you were one of those who knew nothing about them [3] (The Quran, Yusuf: 3)

This verse tells that when the subject matter is a Divine Act, Allah Glorified is He employs the plural personal pronoun 'We'. The reason for this is that His acts are done in the light of the existence of a number of Divine Attributes including Knowledge, Wisdom, and Power etc.

We strongly stress that Allah Glorified is He is the Only One Who has such Attributes that can do anything at any time. None but Him the Almighty has such Attributes, which is why Allah Glorified is He is the Only One Who has these Attributes which can do anything at any time.

We should be aware of a very important point which is that when Allah the Exalted talks about His Oneness, He does not use the plural pronoun, a fact

---

= concerning the origin of these words are true, confirming that even though these words are of non-Arabic origin, they were used by the Arabs and thus became 'Arabised'. So, when the Quran was revealed, these words had been used by the Arabs, which is why the two group of scholars are true. As a matter of fact, Al-Jawaliqi and ibn Al-Jawzi, among many others, support this opinion.' (See As-Suyuti, Al-Itqan, 2/105-108.)

which is clear in His saying, 'Surely I am Allah, there is no god but I, therefore serve Me and keep up prayer for My Remembrance.(1)' (Ta Ha: 14)

In the verse in question, Allah Glorified is He sheds light on a number of acts which cannot be performed except by Him; Allah the Exalted says, '…We tell you [Prophet] the best of stories …' (Yusuf: 3). This part of the verse tells that Allah Glorified is He is the One Who recounts these stories to Prophet Muhammad. We stress that we are not allowed to derive Names for Allah Glorified is He from all the acts attributed to Him the Almighty unless these acts are derived, in essence, from His Most Beautiful Names.

We are obliged to pay great respect to Allah, His Names, and His Attributes. We know nothing about His Divine Essence except that about which Allah the Exalted told us. For this reason, it is not right to derive a Name for Allah from the verb Qassa (recount), that is, we cannot say that Allah the Exalted is qassas (narrator).

All told, we may address Allah with the Names that He attributes to Himself. However, we cannot call Him by a name that is derived from a verb corresponding to a Divine Act.

Back to the verse under discussion; Allah Glorified is He says, '…We tell you [Prophet] the best of stories…' (Yusuf: 3). As for the Arabic verb qassa (narrated), it gives the meaning of 'following one another', which is why some scholars believe that the word 'story' is given this name because words within it follow each other. It also may give the meaning of 'tracing', that is, following the footprints of someone so that one knows the correct way in such a way that causes him not to lose the way of the person who preceded him in it. This meaning is deduced from the saying of Allah, 'And so she said to his sister, "Follow him," and [the girl] watched him from afar, while they [who had taken him in] were not aware of it.' (al-Qasas: 11)

(1) Adh-Dhikr means invocation and meditation with the heart. It gives several meanings including the speech, the story, the Quran, and all the heavenly revealed books. Allah Glorified is He says, 'Behold, it is We Ourselves who have bestowed from on high, step by step, this reminder – (dhikr) –: and, behold, it is We who shall truly guard it [from all corruption].' (al-Hijr: 9) It may further be used to the great honour of a person; a point which is clear in the saying of Allah, 'And [have We not] raised thee high in dignity – (dhikrak) –?' (ash-Sharh: 4)

It is thus clear that the true meaning of al-qass is to trace the events that took place in the past and not for words to follow each other in sequence. In The Quran, Allah Glorified is He gives us another striking example to illustrate this point. He says, ‘He said, “Did you see when we took refuge on the rock? Then I forgot the fish, and nothing made me forget to speak of it but Shaitan (Satan), and it took its way into the river; what a wonder!” He said, “This is what we sought for”; so they returned retracing their footsteps.’ (al-Kahf: 63-64)

In these verses of Al-Kahf*,* the meaning of al-qass is to retrace the footsteps of someone. Thus, we conclude that the word al-qass means to trace the events and accidents that took place in the past in such a manner that is identical to reality.

Divinely revealed narratives are not akin to works of modern fiction and literature in which the author adds fictitious scenes for the sake of formulating a tightly knit plot. The modern author seeks to create a riveting story that will attract his reader’s attention. Yet, the case is totally different with stories of The Quran which are historical accounts that detail real incidents with the aim of serving as a source of moral teachings(1) for man. Furthermore, they were revealed either to inform us of the events of the past or to strengthen the heart of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

I repeathere that the stories of the previous prophets, with the exception of the story of Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him, were deliberately revealed to console and fortify the heart(2) of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

(1) This fact is clear in the saying of Allah Glorified is He ‘…Indeed, in the stories of these men there is a lesson – (‘Ibra) – for those who are endowed with insight…’ (Yusuf: 111). The Arabic word `ibra connotes something which serves as a guiding moral for man. It gives the same meaning of al-idhah. In The Quran, Allah Glorified is He says, ‘…There is surely a lesson – (`ibra) – for all who have eyes to see!’ (an-Nur: 44) Allah the Exalted also says, ‘…Learn a lesson, then, O you who are endowed with insight!’ (al-Hashr: 2) (See Al-Qamus Al-Muhit, 2/4.)

(2) Allah Glorified is He says, ‘and [remember] out of all the accounts relating to the [earlier], messengers we convey to you [only] that wherewith we [aim to] make firm your heart: for through these [accounts] comes the truth to you, as well as an admonition and a reminder to all believers.’ (Hud: 120), the accounts of the Quran were revealed down to make the heart of Prophet Muhammad firm while delivering the Message. See Al-Qurtubi*,* (Jame’ Al-Bayan, 4/3435.)

Allah Glorified is He mentioned the story of Prophet Yusuf peace be upon him in full, which is why whoever claims that the Quran is unable to come forth with a complete and comprehensive narrative is wrong. One can examine the story of Yusuf peace be upon him from two different angles; the first, the story of characters that revolve around an event. The second, the events that revolve around a single character

In other words, it is not only the riveting plot that makes the Quranic account of Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him unique. This story combines two themes: firstly, an event around which people's lives is centred, and secondly, a person around whom events unfold.

This chapter sheds light on the story of Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) and the events that marked his life: his dream, the machinations of his jealous brothers, attempts by the wife of the sovereign to seduce him into debauchery, his imprisonment, his interpretation of dreams in prison, assuming the authority, meeting with his brothers and finally meeting with his father.

Therefore, the saying of Allah Glorified is He 'We tell you [Prophet] the best stories' (Yusuf: 3) is a fitting description for the narrative of Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him which was also recounted by the previously revealed books. Interestingly, when the Jewish rabbis read the Quran's narrative of the story of Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him, they gave up their own books and relied on what has been mentioned in the Quran in this regard.

The Jews did so for the following reasons: the events that took place in this story are vividly depicted. In addition, the narration masterfully illustrates human psychological states, exposes the secrets of the human psyche, and tells about the fulfilment of the prophecies. All these themes are woven into a plot that is clear in its delivery and is impossible to be challenged. These facts definitively prove that what has been mentioned in the Quran about the story of Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him is the 'best of narratives'. Another possible explanation for this point is that it is the best of narratives because it encompasses numerous lessons, including friction between childhood and senility, rivalries between jealous siblings, rebellion, Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him being thrown in the well, his brothers' machinations, his unjust imprisonment, his reaction to those who mistreated him, his support for the truth until he was granted power and victory, how Allah Glorified is He cast love down upon him, so that whoever met with him peace be upon him loved him and how he peace be upon him protected the legacy of prophethood by pardoning the sins committed by his brothers against him; a fact which is proved by the Quran in which Allah says, '…No reproach shall be uttered today against you. May Allah forgive you your sins' (Yusuf: 92)

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is narrated to have said something like this to the people of Mecca on the Day of Opening. Ibn Ishaq narrated that he peace and blessings be upon him said to them, 'Leave freely, for no harm will afflict you.'(1)

Once again, this chapter is a source of admonition because of the events it sheds light on including the imprisonment of Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him unjustly, his later release and finally his assuming of authority. It for this reason that it is regarded the best of narratives. Another possible explanation for the fact that it is the best of narratives is that it had precisely told us about the events of this story in the same way it took place and in agreement with what has been mentioned in the previous Scriptures, but in a way which is stunningly attractive. A third possible explanation for the fact that it is the best narrative is that it had completely covered man's different aspects of life including childhood, mental maturity, and emotional maturity.

As for the news of other previous prophets, they are scattered in the Quran in such a way which proves its inimitability. It is thus clear the fact that this chapter includes the best of the narrative stems from the miraculous style of The Quran, which none can produce anything like it.

(1) Ibn Ishaq said, 'Some scholars told me that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him stood up on the door of the Ka`ba and proclaimed, "None has the right to be worshipped but Allah; He is one and has no partner. All kingdoms are for Him, and all the praises are for Him, and He is Omnipotent. We are returning with repentance, worshipping, prostrating, and praising our Lord. He has kept up His promise and made His slave victorious, and He Alone defeated all the clans of disbelievers." Then, he peace and blessings be upon him said to them, "What do you think I am going to do with you?" They responded, "We think that you will treat us virtuously, for you are a generous man, and the son of a generous brother," whereupon he peace and blessings be upon him said to them, "Leave freely, for no harm will afflict you."' (See ibn Ishaq, Sirat ibn Hisham, 4/412.)

Allah Glorified is He says, ‘We tell you [Prophet] the best of stories in revealing this Quran to you. Before this, you were one of those who knew nothing about them.’ (Yusuf: 3) As for the word min al-ghafilin (one of those who knew nothing about them), it means that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was unlettered who did not master making eloquent speeches or even composing poetic verses, and that he peace and blessings be upon him was only known for his great moral conduct characteristics that must be met in anyone who is supposed to deliver the Divine Message to people. Here arises a very good point; as long as he peace and blessings be upon him did not previously tell a lie to people, he would not fabricate a lie against a lie. It was impossible for him peace and blessings be upon him to tell a lie before the mission or even after it. Here, we can quote the example of Abu Bakr As-Siddiq Allah be pleased with him who firmly believed in his Message from the first moment, without hesitation. Upon being told about this message of Prophet Muhammad, he Allah be pleased with him said to him, ‘You told the truth.’

Also, when the miracles of al-`israa' and al-mi`raj (Night Journey and Ascension) took place, the people of Mecca wondered how this could happen, especially if we consider that they used to make this long journey within a month! But Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him had a different position, for he said, ‘Muhammad has told the truth.’(1)

In the same connection, some people during the lifetime of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him were unable to understand the wisdom behind some of the decisions made by him peace and blessings be upon him which is why Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him used to say to them, ‘Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah’. Let us offer an example to illustrate this point. When Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him signed the Treaty of Al-Hudybiya with the polytheists of Mecca, he accepted their unjust terms and conditions, whereupon 'Umar ibn Al-Kattab Allah be pleased with him who was reluctant to this Treaty, wondered why Prophet Muhammad did something like this. It is narrated that 'Umar Allah be pleased with him said, 'are we not fighting for the Truth and they for falsehood? Why should we then put a blot upon our religion?'

(1) Commenting on this incident, ibn Hisham says, ‘On the morning of his return from Jerusalem, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him imparted the great news of his nocturnal voyage to Quraysh, but his narrative was met with incredulity. Having heard the Prophet’s account, a group of the disbelievers went to Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him to communicate the news. At first, he Allah be pleased with him accused them of ‘fabricating canards’, but they insisted, ‘What we say is true. In fact, he is at this moment in the (Sacred) Mosque recounting details of this voyage.’Abu Bakr then rejoined, ‘By Allah, if he said so, then it is true. And why such are you so astounded? By Allah, he tells me that news is revealed to him from Heaven, be it night or day, and I believe him. This (revelation) is more extraordinary than this journey that has so amazed you.’

'Umar posed the same questions to Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him who answered 'Umar saying, 'O 'Umar. Adhere firmly to his (Prophet Muhammad's) instructions and decisions, for he peace and blessings be upon him is the Messenger of Allah'.(1) Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him wanted to draw 'Umar's attention to the fact that Prophet Muhammad did not do anything due to his own desire. Here, we should clarify that the statement of Abu Bakr is based on full confidence in the undeniable fact that Prophet Muhammad was permanently guided by the Support of Allah; that is, it was not a matter of blind obedience.

Back to the verse in question; Allah the Almighty says: '…Before this, you were one of those who knew nothing about them (al-ghafilin)' (Yusuf: 3). The Arabic word 'al-ghafil' is used to refer to a person who knows nothing about a particular matter simply because he does not bother to think about it. Another possible explanation for this particular part of the verse is that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him out of the undeniable fact that he was unable to read or write, was not able to learn or hear anything, from any source, about the story of Prophet Yusuf. Yes, this is true, for we all know for certain that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not receive any kind of knowledge before the revelation. In this vein, it is even recorded that this chapter of Yusuf was not revealed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him until the Jews urged the disbelievers of Mecca to ask him peace and blessings be upon him why the sons of Prophet Ya'qub (Jacob) left for Egypt?(1)

(1) This Hadith is narrated by Imam Ahmad in his Musnad on the authority of Al-Miswar ibn Makhramat Az-zuhari and Marwan ibn Al-Hakam. The full version of the Hadith reads, ''Umar approached Abu Bakr and said, "Abu Bakr, are we not fighting for Truth and they for falsehood?" He replied, "Yes". 'Umar asked, "Are those not killed from our side in Paradise and those killed from their side in the Fire?" He replied, "Of course?" 'Umar (then) said, "Why should we then disgrace our religion and return while Allah has not yet decided the issue between them and ourselves?" Abu Bakr said, "Son of Khattab, truly, he [Prophet Muhammad] is the Messenger of Allah, and Allah will never ruin him"'. See Ahmad, Musnad, 4/323-325.

As a matter of fact, telling Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him about the events of this story in such minute details is a kind of miracle, for it offers firm and concrete evidence that Allah the Almighty is the One Who revealed this to him peace and blessings be upon him. We previously explained that the act of revelation is a disclosure of something that was previously concealed. Concerning this, we should take into account that Allah Glorified is He reveals matters to His creatures, including the angels, as Allah Glorified is He says: 'When your Lord revealed to the angels: I am with you, therefore make firm those who believe…' (al-Anfal: 12), those whom He the Almighty chooses from among mankind as He Glorified is He says: 'And when I revealed to the disciples, saying, "Believe in Me and My Messenger", they said, "We believe and bear witness that we submit (ourselves)"' (al-Ma'ida: 111); the mother of Prophet Musa (Moses) who was inspired by Him the Almighty to cast her child into the river, when Allah says: 'When We revealed to your mother what was revealed, saying, "Put him into the chest, then cast it down into the river, then the river shall throw him on the shore; there he shall be taken up by one who is an enemy to Me and enemy to him. And I cast down upon you love, from Me, and that you might be brought up beneath the care of My eyes' (Ta Ha: 38-39); the inanimate earth as the Lord Glorified is He says: 'Because your Lord will have inspired her' (az-Zalzala: 5); and the bees when Allah says: 'And your Lord revealed to the bee saying, "Make hives in the mountains and in the trees and in what they build. Then eat of all the fruits and walk in the ways of your Lord submissively." There comes out from within their bodies a beverage of many colours, in which there is healing for men; most surely there is a sign in this for a people who reflect' (an-Nahl: 68-69).

(1) In his Tafsir of the Quran, Al-Qurtubi quoted the following statement of An-Nahhas, 'It is narrated that the Jews said (to the disbelievers of Mecca), "Ask him, i.e. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him about the reason why the family of Prophet Ya'qub moved from Ash-Sham to Egypt; and ask him also about the story of Prophet Ya'qub", whereupon Allah the Almighty sent down this chapter in Mecca in accordance with what has been mentioned in the Torah and more than this'. See Al-Qurtubi, Jame' Al-Bayan, 4/3440.

It is thus clear that Allah the Almighty inspires and reveals whatever He wants to whomever He wants including inanimate objects, plants, animals, mankind, etc. He Glorified is He addresses them in accordance with the particular means of perception placed in each of them.

Allah the Almighty then says:

إِذۡ قَالَ يُوسُفُ لِأَبِيهِ يَٰٓأَبَتِ إِنِّي رَأَيۡتُ أَحَدَ عَشَرَ
كَوۡكَبٗا وَٱلشَّمۡسَ وَٱلۡقَمَرَ رَأَيۡتُهُمۡ لِي سَٰجِدِينَ ﴿٤﴾

Joseph said to his father, 'Father, I dreamed of eleven stars and the sun and the moon: I saw them all bow down before me' [4] (The Quran, Yusuf: 4)

This verse in question is the beginning of the story of Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him; it states clearly that he called upon his father, Prophet Ya'qub (Jacob), saying, 'O Father!' Here, we should take into account that the following Arabic words 'Abi', 'Abati', 'Abatah' and 'Abat' all give the same meaning of 'father', although each of them is used in a particular context. Everyone has undoubtedly observed the sun and the moon, and has noticed that they have particular times when they rise and set. Likewise, we have all witnessed the limitless number of stars that dot the night-sky. But we should stress that the dream of Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him had a special character which is that he peace be upon him saw both the sun and the moon at the same moment, and that he saw only eleven stars. How could this happen? As a matter of fact, the statement of Yusuf which is stated in The Quran clearly indicates that he peace be upon him was able to count them, and that this sun and moon, as well as the eleven stars had special characteristics. In addition, the verse shows that Yusuf peace be upon him had seen them all bow down before him. This means that he, first of all, saw them in their natural, original state and then he saw them bowing down to him. At that point, we stress heavily that their prostration to Yusuf peace be upon him was a matter of surrendering to the Will of Allah the Almighty. The verb 'saw' (ra'ayt) has been mentioned twice in this verse to indicate the original state and also the bowing of these heavenly bodies.

In the same vein, we notice that the word Sajidin (prostrating) is written in the normal masculine plural form. Here, we should be aware that nothing can be written in this form but the masculine, animate, and rational subject. We should take into account that the mind enables a person to make choices. The true believer is the person who makes choices that are in accordance with the Divine Way of Guidance. And the apex of surrender to Allah is apparent when one prostrates before Allah the Almighty. As for the family of Prophet Yusuf peace be upon him they bowed down before him peace be upon him in obedience to the Divine Order; that is, they fully understood how to obey this Divine Command.(1)

We can thereby compare the obedience of the stars in Yusuf's vision to the obedience of the sky which will fully understand how to obey the Command of Allah the Almighty on the Day of Judgment, a fact which is recorded in the Quran in which Allah the Almighty says: 'When the sky bursts asunder, and gives ear to [the Command of] its Lord, and it must [do so]' (al-Inshiqaq: 1-2). That is to say the sky about which Allah the Almighty says: 'Do they not then look up to the sky above them, how We have made it and adorned it and there are no gaps in it?' (Qaf: 6) will, on the Day of Resurrection, understand and obey the Order of Allah, as Allah says: 'And gives ear (Adhinat) to [the Command of] its Lord, and it must [do so]' (al-Inshiqaq: 2). In other words, we can say that it is equipped with the sense of hearing, for the Arabic word Adhinat ('obeys' or 'gives ear') is linguistically derived from the word Udhun (ear); that is, once the sky hears the Divine Command, it responds immediately by bursting asunder.(2)

(1) Commenting on this verse in question, Al-Qurtubi said, 'Al-Khalil and Sibawaih opined that when Allah told us that these things obeyed Him by prostrating, which is an action that is carried out by animate, rational beings, He indicates that they can understand His Orders'. See Al-Qurtubi, Jame' Al-Bayan, 4/3443.
As for the late Imam Sheikh Ash-Sha'rawi, he opined that this verse clearly shows the high rank of Prophet Yusuf among his family members and in the sight of Allah. It also indicates that they will eventually recognise his virtue. Here, we should take into account that the characteristics of dreams are totally different from the normal sense of seeing, for the former gives details of what will happen in the future.

(2) The following verse fully illustrates this point; Allah the Almighty says: 'Then He directed Himself to the sky and it was a vapour. And He said to it and to the earth, "Come both, willingly or unwillingly". They both said, "We come willingly"' (Fussilat: 11).

As such, we notice that mankind(1) is but one community among many other communities in the world. And we know for certain that people can communicate with each other by virtue of a shared language through using sign language, though seeking the help of a translator or even by learning the language of others.

But man is not able to apprehend the language of inanimate beings, plants, and animals unless Allah the Almighty enables him to do so. The mountains' repetition of the Praise and Glory of Allah with Prophet Dawud (David) is a case in point. In this instance, man–the most exalted creature on the surface of the earth–and the mountains–inanimate objects–form a harmonious union, for the man, i.e. Prophet Dawud peace be upon him used to praise the Glory of Allah first, and then the mountains repeated after him. We know fully well that everything in the universe glorifies Allah the Almighty but in a manner that we cannot understand.(2)

However, Allah may choose some from among mankind who He teaches the language of other creatures. Prophet Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him is a case in point. Allah the Almighty says: 'And Sulaiman was Dawud's heir. And he said, 'O men! we have been taught the language of birds, and we have been given all things; most surely this is a manifest grace' (an-Naml: 16).

This aforementioned verse in the chapter of an-Naml clearly tells us that birds have their own language by means of which they can communicate with each other. It also affirms that Prophet Sulaiman peace be upon him was taught this language of birds by Allah the Almighty. In the same connection, the Quran tells us that Allah Glorified is He has also taught Prophet Sulaiman the language of ants. He the Almighty says: 'Till, when they came upon a valley [full] of ants, an ant exclaimed, "O you ants! Get into your dwellings, lest Sulaiman (Solomon) and his hosts crush you without [even] being aware [of you]!"

(1) This point is proved by the saying of Allah the Almighty: 'and there is no creature on [or within] the earth or bird that flies with its wings except [that they are] communities like you' (al-An'am: 38).

(2) Allah the Almighty says: '…and there is not a single thing but it glorifies Him with all praise, but you do not understand their glorification; surely, He is Forbearing, Forgiving' (al-Isra': 44).

Thereupon [Sulaiman] smiled joyously at her words, and said, "O my Lord! Inspire me so that I may forever be grateful for those blessings of Yours with which You have graced me and my parents, and that I may do what is right [in a manner] that will please You; and include me, by Your Grace, among Your righteous servants!'" (an-Naml: 18-19)

Clearly, every community of creatures has its own language by means of which its members can understand the Divine Orders. In addition, we now realise that Allah teaches these languages of different creatures to whomever He wants from mankind. Based on this, we know for certain that when the sun, the moon and the eleven stars prostrated before Prophet Yusuf peace be upon him in his dream, they did this as they had understood it to be a Divine Order.(1) Allah the Almighty then says:

قَالَ يَٰبُنَيَّ لَا تَقۡصُصۡ رُءۡيَاكَ عَلَىٰٓ إِخۡوَتِكَ فَيَكِيدُواْ
لَكَ كَيۡدًاۖ إِنَّ ٱلشَّيۡطَٰنَ لِلۡإِنسَٰنِ عَدُوّٞ مُّبِينٞ ٥

And he replied, 'My son, tell your brothers nothing of this dream, or they may plot to harm you — Satan is man's sworn enemy [5] (The Quran, Yusuf: 5)

Referring to the way how fathers call upon their sons, the Quran uses the diminutive form 'ya bunayy' (O my dear son!) which shows a father's deep affection and love for his son.(2)

Yet, when fathers speak of matters regarding their son, we find the Quran using the form 'i'bni' (my son); this fact is clear in the saying of Allah the Almighty '…Surely, my son (ibni) was of my family…' (Hud: 45) This statement was, in fact, made by Prophet Nuh (Noah) about his disbelieving son. Here, we stress that the style 'ya bunayy' will be very helpful for us in understanding the following events of the story and how his father loved Yusuf peace be upon him very much.

(1) We should stress that the main purpose behind the creation of the entire universe is to offer worship to Allah the Almighty.

(2) This special form of calling upon sons has been mentioned six times in The Quran, as follows: three times in the chapters of Hud, Yusuf and as-Saffat, one time in each of them, and three times in the chapter of Luqman.

Furthermore, using this style in particular indicates that Yusuf peace be upon him during that period of time was still a young boy, which is why Prophet Ya'qub (Jacob), the father of Yusuf, showed him deep love. In addition, this style tells us clearly that Yusuf peace be upon him was not qualified yet to decide on matters himself, and that is why he was supposed to follow the instructions of his father; a point which is perfectly clear in the fact that when he, i.e. Prophet Yusuf peace be upon him was in distress, he used to hurry to his father whom he peace be upon him viewed as the best one who was able to alleviate his distress. Further, when Yusuf peace be upon him related his dream to his father, the latter advised him, saying: '…My son, tell your brothers nothing of this dream …' (Yusuf: 5).

As for the Arabic word 'ru'ya' (dream), it refers to a series of events or images that happen in one's mind while sleeping; this is because the sun, the moon, and the stars never bow down before anyone in real life. This actually indicates the ultimate accuracy of the words used in the Quran. Here, we should differentiate between the following two words, namely; 'ru'ya' (dream) and 'ru'yah' (seeing). We have already given the meaning of the first. As for the latter, it refers to what one is able to see while awake.

As such, the two words are derived from the same linguistic root, which is (r-a'-a), yet each imparts a different meaning,; for one of them is used to refer to dreams coming to the mind of a person who is asleep, while the other is used to refer to what one sees while awake. Grammatically speaking, both of them are feminine words, as the three Arabic letters by means of which the word can be changed from masculine into feminine are: ta' marbutah ('ah' sound), an elongated alif (written with an alif) and a shortened alif (usually written with the letter ya).

Concerning these two words in question, the word 'ru'yah' (seeing) ends with a ta' marbutah, while the other word, i.e. 'ru'ya' (dream) ends with an elongated alif. I would like to draw your attention to the fact that the word 'ru'ya' (dreams) in all places in the Quran refers to what the person sees when he is asleep, except in one verse when Allah the Almighty mentions Prophet Muhammad's miraculous Ascension into the heavens: 'And We made the vision (al-ru'ya) which We showed you as a trial for mankind…' (Al-Isra': 60). Some people claim that this miraculous Ascension into the heavens was shown to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in a dream. Yet, we say to them, ‘You are unable to properly understand the meaning of this verse, for it means that what happened was a miracle, not just something which was imagined or seen in a dream; it was something that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him actually experienced. This is proved by the fact that Allah the Almighty describes the Night Journey and Ascension as a trial to mankind. As such, if Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had declared that he had seen these events in a dream, none will have accused him of fabricating lies. However, he declared that he experienced the events of this journey in reality, and that is why the Quran says that it was a trial for the people’.

Back to the verse in question; Ya’qub (Jacob) peace be upon him advised his son Yusuf (Joseph) not to tell his brothers about the dream he had seen. As a matter of fact, the main reason behind Ya’qub’s worry was that he felt the rest of his sons, driven by grudge and envy, might harm Yusuf; a matter which was later fulfilled. As for Ya’qub peace be upon him himself, he wanted his son not to be harmed, which is why he advised him not to tell the story to them.(1)

Here arises the following question, ‘Why were the brothers of Prophet Yusuf so jealous of such a dream?’ The answer to this question is clear from the fact that Ya’qub peace be upon him must have known the interpretation of this dream; he knew for certain that it was a prophecy which will be inevitably fulfilled. In addition, Ya’qub peace be upon him must have known that the rest of his sons, i.e. Yusuf’s brothers, had the ability to interpret this dream too, and if Yusuf had told them about it, they will have known its explanation and as a result will have plotted to harm him.

Furthermore, we should not forget the fact that they, i.e. Yusuf’s brothers were already jealous of him, although he was still a young boy; from this we realize they will have been bitterly jealous if they had known about this dream in question.

(1) Commenting on this verse, Al-Qurtubi said, ‘This verse clearly indicates that one should not tell his dream to anyone but one who loves him or is able to explain it’. See Al-Qurtubi, Jame‘ Al-Bayan, 4/3447.

Yet, those brothers of Prophet Yusuf cannot be judged as evildoers, for they are Al-Asbat (heads of the Jewish tribes). Here, someone might reject this idea and say, 'If they were not truly evildoers, why did they plot to harm Yusuf peace be upon him?' We answer this question, saying, 'Their jealousy was a natural human feeling which resulted from their father's deep love for Yusuf; they were not truly evildoers. This is because evildoers are extremely insistent on pursuing their wrong ways, but the anger of the doers of good calms down with time'.

Let us offer a example to fully illustrate this point; an evil person might want to slap someone on the cheek. However, this initial desire to inflict harm might increase, and he might want to hit him twice. Then, he might think that two slaps are insufficient, and therefore he threatens his foe with a gun. As a matter of fact, this example shows us clearly how the evildoers are extremely insistent on doing evil, in one way or another.

The case is yet totally different with the doer of good, for we find that he is not insistent on committing evil. For example, a good person might want to hit someone who has harmed him. The good person's vindictive intentions might soon allay, to the extent that he might suffice with only slapping him twice instead of beating him up. With time, however, he might calm down and pardon his foe completely.

If we review the situation of Yusuf's brothers, who are the fathers of the twelve Jewish tribes, (1) in the light of the aforementioned two cases, we will find that their anger evaporated step by step; this shows that they were not evildoers by nature. Here is the explanation of this point: first of all, they plotted to kill Yusuf peace be upon him; a fact which is recorded in the Quran; Allah reports them as saying: '…Slay Yusuf (Joseph)…' (Yusuf: 9).

Yusuf's brothers were resentful of Ya'qub's love for his youngest son. However, they soon gave up this malicious tone and moved to a lower level of wrong; a fact which is also recorded when Allah the Almighty relates them as saying: '…Or banish him to another [faraway] land, and your father's attention will be free to return to you [alone]…' (Yusuf: 9).

(1) The word 'Al-Asbat' has been mentioned five times in the Quran. In four citations, it is used to refer to Prophets. As for the fifth citation, it has been used to impart the meaning of 'the heads of the Jewish tribes'. Here, we should know that Ya'qub's sons are themselves 'Al-Asbat' of the Jewish tribes.

However, they were not bold enough to oust him to a remote land, which is why they moved to an even lower level of wrong, deciding to cast Yusuf peace be upon him in the dark depth of the well. Referring to this fact, Allah the Almighty states that they said: '…Cast him into the dark depths of this well, [where] some caravan may pick him up…' (Yusuf: 10). This plainly shows that those brothers of Prophet Yusuf peace be upon him had given up the idea of killing him and decided to do something which is less harmful instead, indicating that they took his safety into account.

The verse under discussion continues with Allah the Almighty saying: 'Ya'qub (Jacob) replied, "My son, tell your brothers nothing of this dream, or they may arrange a harmful plot for you …' (Yusuf: 5). It is worth noting that the Arabic word 'al-kayd' (plot) is a stealthy machination devised by someone unable to confront his enemy. Clearly, such schemes are weapons of the weak, since someone who is powerful is capable of overtly confronting his foe, hence the popular saying, 'Women's insidious plots are great because their weakness is even greater'.

Allah the Almighty then concludes the verse with His saying: '…Satan is man's sworn enemy' (Yusuf: 5). This animosity between man and Satan is not a secret. We all know that Satan was expelled from paradise, for he was cursed by Allah Glorified is He. As for Adam, Allah the Almighty accepted his repentance, which is why Satan swore by the Might of Allah that he will misguide the sons of Adam, except for the purified slaves among them.(1)

That is why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is narrated to have said, 'There is none among you who does not have a comrade from among the jinn (devil)'. They (the Companions) said, 'Allah's Messenger, with you too?' Thereupon Prophet Muhammad replied, 'Yes, but Allah helps me against him and so I am safe from his hand, and he does not command me but to do good'.(2)

---

(1) Allah the Almighty says: 'He said, "Then by Your Might I will surely misguide them all, except Your slaves from among them, the purified ones' (Sad: 82-83).

(2) See Ahmad, Musnad, 1/385

In the verse in question, we notice that Allah the Almighty describes Satan as a sworn enemy to man; that is, he (Satan) desperately tries to tempt man by all possible means. This fact is painstakingly recorded in The Quran, as Allah the Almighty tells us about the statement of Satan, saying: ‘And [I] shall most certainly assault them from before them as well as behind them, and from their right and from their left...’ (al-A’raf: 17).

Here, there is a very important point that we should take into account which is that Allah the Almighty in the aforementioned verse in the chapter of al-‘Araf, does not mention that Satan will come to man from below or from above him; this is because those purified slaves who are permanently connected to the earth below them in Prayer and the Divine Way of Guidance that came from above cannot be approached by Satan in anyway. Concerning this point, we notice that Allah the Almighty tells us about Ya’qub’s advice to his son, saying: ‘…or they may plot to harm you …’ (Yusuf: 5) meaning that the plotting of the brothers will be for the good of Yusuf peace be upon him because the Quran does not use the expression ‘fa yakiduka’ (they will harm you) for this means that their plotting will surely harm Yusuf peace be upon him. This is not the intended meaning. This point is crystal clear in the Saying of Allah the Almighty: ‘…In this way did We plan for Yusuf [to attain his heart’s desire]…’ (Yusuf: 76).

Allah the Almighty subsequently says:

وَكَذَٰلِكَ يَجْتَبِيكَ رَبُّكَ وَيُعَلِّمُكَ مِن تَأْوِيلِ ٱلْأَحَادِيثِ وَيُتِمُّ نِعْمَتَهُۥ عَلَيْكَ وَعَلَىٰٓ
ءَالِ يَعْقُوبَ كَمَآ أَتَمَّهَا عَلَىٰٓ أَبَوَيْكَ مِن قَبْلُ إِبْرَٰهِيمَ وَإِسْحَٰقَ ۚ إِنَّ رَبَّكَ عَلِيمٌ حَكِيمٌ ﴿٦﴾

This is about how your Lord will choose you, teach you to interpret dreams, and perfect His blessing on you and the House of Jacob, just as He perfected it earlier on your forefathers Abraham and Isaac: your Lord is all knowing and wise [6] (The Quran, Yusuf: 6)

That is to say that just as Allah Glorified is He has conferred His Favour upon you, O Yusuf, by allowing you to see this dream, He the Almighty tells you that you will attain a superior rank, for He the Almighty will choose you from among your brothers. In addition, the Lord Glorified is He will make their plot for your good. Furthermore, He will teach you the interpretation of dreams in such a way that will attract the attention of those people in authority.

As for the Arabic word 'ta'wil' (interpretation), it refers to understanding the concealed meaning of something. Here, we should take into account that not all people are able to interpret dreams, with the exception of those whom Allah the Almighty has granted the talent to do so. That is to say that it is not a field of knowledge which is based on rules and maxims, but rather, it is a matter of Divine Inspiration.

The Blessings of Allah the Almighty on Prophet Yusuf peace be upon him will not end at that point, for the Lord the Almighty will entrust Yusuf peace be upon him with running the affairs of the treasury of Egypt. Furthermore, He Glorified is He will make Yusuf peace be upon him the chief of Egypt.

As for the Saying of Allah the Almighty: '…and perfect His Blessings on you …' (Yusuf: 6), it refers to the blessings of this worldly life topped by being elected as a Messenger. Another possible interpretation for this part of the verse is that Allah the Almighty will permanently confer His Blessings on Yusuf peace be upon him. This explanation may be viewed in the light of the fact that Yusuf peace be upon him will be appointed as a chief of Egypt; although it is a position from which he might be ousted, for one reason or another.

A third possible explanation is that the Lord the Almighty will confer His Blessings on Yusuf peace be upon him in the next life in the same way He conferred them upon him in the life of this world.(1) As for the Saying of Allah the Almighty: '…and the House of Ya'qub (Jacob), just as He perfected it earlier on your forefathers Ibrahim (Abraham) and Ishaq (Isaac): your Lord is All Knowing and All-Wise' (Yusuf: 6), it is a Divine Instruction to Yusuf peace be upon him not to harbour any enmity towards his brothers for Allah Glorified is He will also perfect His Blessings on them in the same way He the Almighty previously perfected them on their forefathers, i.e. Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) and Ishaq (Isaac) peace be upon them by taking the first as a friend[1] and by appointing the second as a Messenger. That is to say that Allah the Almighty out of His Great Wisdom knows best who deserves to be assigned the mission of delivering the Divine Message to mankind. He arranges everything for it to be in the correct state.

(1) Commenting on this particular part of the verse, Imam Al-Qurtubi said, 'The saying of Allah the Almighty: '...and perfect His Blessings on you ...' (Yusuf: 6) may be explained in the light of the fact that Yusuf has been elected a Messenger, or in the light of the fact that his brothers had driven him away. It yet might mean that Allah the Almighty has saved you from all harm'. See Al-Qurtubi, Jame' Al-Byan, 4/3450.

He Glorified is He then says:

لَّقَدۡ كَانَ فِي يُوسُفَ وَإِخۡوَتِهِۦٓ ءَايَٰتٞ لِّلسَّآئِلِينَ ٧

There are lessons in the story of Joseph and his brothers for all who seek them [7] (The Quran, Yusuf: 7)

This verse tells us clearly that the entire events of this story will revolve around Prophet Yusuf peace be upon him a point which is deduced from using the Arabic preposition 'fi' (in) which indicates a sequence of events.[2]

Being of a non-Arabic origin, the name Yusuf is non-declinable (i.e. cannot take some case endings), which is why the verse in question cannot be read as 'fi Yusufin'.

As for the saying of Allah the Almighty: 'There are lessons (ayat) in the story of Yusuf and his brothers for all who seek [the Truth]' (Yusuf: 7), it means that the events of this story of Prophet Yusuf and his brothers clearly indicate the Omnipotent Power of Allah Glorified is He; for the story states that Yusuf peace be upon him was thrown in the dark depths of the well from which he was taken to be raised up in the house of one of the Egyptian leaders.

As for the Arabic word 'aya' (singular for 'ayat', meaning 'lessons' or 'signs'), it is used to refer to extraordinary matters which attract the attention of people. Yet, it is used in the Quranic context to impart three different meanings, as follows: first of all, it is used to refer to the signs in the universe, such as the sun, the moon, the day, the night, etc. As a matter of fact, these signs produce conclusive evidence on the Existence of Allah the Almighty. That is, if we contemplate how the affairs of the universe are run with such absolute order, we will come to the conclusion that there has to be a Creator of this perfectly balanced universe. Second, this word in question (aya) can also be used to give the meaning of 'the miracles' given to Prophets and Messengers that prove their veracity and truthfulness. The fire(1) which did not harm Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him and the Red Sea which was divided into two huge mountains before Musa (Moses) are two cases in point. This word in question, i.e. 'aya', is further used to refer to a verse of the Quran.

(1) Commenting on this particular part of the verse, Imam ibn Kathir said, 'Allah the Almighty says: "...And Allah took Ibrahim as a friend" (an-Nisa': 125). That is because Allah Glorified is He loves Ibrahim peace be upon him very much because he showed total obedience to Him the Almighty'. See ibn Kathir, Tafsir Al-Quran Al-'Azhim, 1/560.

(2) In his Mughni Al-Labib, ibn Hisham Al-Ansari said, 'The Arabic preposition 'fi' (in) can be used to impart ten different meanings including its reference to time and place– two meanings which are clear in the saying of Allah the Almighty: "Alif Lam Mim. The Romans are vanquished, in (fi) a near land, and they, after being vanquished, shall overcome, within (fi) a few years" (ar-Rum: 1-4)'.

Back to the verse in question; it tells us clearly about the events of the story of Prophet Yusuf with his brothers and how their plotting to harm Yusuf peace be upon him was eventually turned into a blessing for him. It is important here to take into account that Allah the Almighty has sent down these verses of the chapter of Yusuf as a comfort for His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and to strengthen his heart. That is to say that Allah the Almighty instructs Prophet Muhammad not to pay attention to all the abuses and plots of the disbelievers of Mecca, for they will be in no way able to harm him peace and blessings be upon him.

In other words, Allah Glorified is He tells Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him not to despair, for He the Almighty is his Supporter and Protector, which is why Prophet Muhammad and his Companions should not think that Allah’s Victory has been delayed. Allah the Almighty says: ‘[But] do you think that you will enter paradise without having suffered like those [believers] who passed away before you? Misfortune and hardship befell them, and so shaken were they that the Messenger and the believers with him exclaimed, "When will Allah’s Succour come?" Oh, verily, Allah’s Succour is [always] near!’ (al-Baqara: 214).

(1) Commenting on this miracle of Prophet Ibrahim, Imam ibn Kathir said that Allah the Almighty says: 'They said, "Burn him and help your gods, if you are going to do (anything)". We said, "O fire! Be cool and [a means of] safety for Ibrahim"' (al-Anbiya': 68-69). The Arabic word 'bard' (cool) is the opposite of hotness. Imam 'Ali ibn Abi Talim opined that the fire did not harm Ibrahim peace be upon him. Ibn 'Abbas and Abu Al-'Aliya, on their part, said, 'Had Allah the Almighty not made the fire a means of safety for Ibrahim, he will have been hurt by its coldness'. Juwaiber narrated that Ad-Dahhak explained this verse, saying the town of Ibrahim had made up their minds to collect a huge pile of wood and they set fire to it from all directions, but Ibrahim peace be upon him was not harmed'. See Ibn Kathir, Tafsir Al-Quran Al-'Adhim, 3/184.

The events of the story continue until Yusuf’s dream come true. They tell us how Yusuf peace be upon him was persecuted by his brothers and how Allah the Almighty turned their plot into a blessing for Yusuf peace be upon him. Some scholars opined that the dream of Yusuf peace be upon him came true within forty to eighty years.(1)

At that point, we can affirm that a dream of good tidings takes a long time to come true, while a dream portending an ominous future will not come true according to the Hadith of Prophet of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in which he says: ‘Good dreams are from Allah, so if any one of you sees which he likes he should not disclose it but to one whom he loves. But if he sees something which he does not like he should spit on his left side thrice and seek refuge with Allah from the mischief of Satan and its mischief (i.e. of the dream), and he should not relate it to anyone. Then it will not harm him’.(2)

Here, we should also be aware of the fact that evil, in general, happens quickly and has only one form, while goodness takes time to happen and can take many forms. If we apply this to the interpretation of good dreams, a person can imagine many ways of how he may receive the good.

An example of a supplication for evil to happen is clear in the supplication made by Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him against the people of Pharaoh; a fact which is recorded in the Saying of Allah the Almighty: ‘Our

(1) Abu ‘Uthman An-Nahdi narrated that Sulaiman was of the opinion that the time span between Yusuf’s dream and its fulfilment was forty years. Al-Hasan, on the other hand, said, ‘Yusuf was separated from Ya’qub for a total of eighty years. During this period, sadness never left Ya’qub’s heart, and tears never ceased to stream down his cheeks’. This latter opinion is identical to that of Ibn Kathir. See Ibn Kathir, Tafsir Al-Quran Al-‘Azhim, 2/491.

(2) Narrated by Imam Muslim

Lord! Destroy their riches and harden their hearts so that they believe not until they see the painful punishment' (Yunus: 88). This supplication for evil was answered quickly.

Back to the verse in question; Allah the Almighty says: 'There are lessons in the story of Joseph and his brothers for all who seek [the Truth]' (Yusuf: 7). The word 'ayat' ('lessons' or 'signs') indicates that all of the events of this story are viewed as signs and lessons. Yet, according to another mode of recitation, the word 'ayat' is read in the singular 'aya' which thus means that the entire events of the story are viewed as one amazing and wonderful sign. This last meaning is supported by another Quranic verse in which Allah describes both 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him and his mother as one 'aya' (wonderful sign); the Lord Glorified is He says: 'And We made the son of Maryam and his mother a sign (ayah)…' (1) (al-Mu'minun: 50).

That is to say that we can understand the story of Prophet Yusuf peace be upon him in the light of the fact that it is one wonderful sign that includes different events, or that each event in it represents a single sign.

Allah then concludes the verse with His saying: '…for all who seek [the Truth]' (Yusuf: 7). This saying of Allah might be interpreted in two different ways; it may be used to refer to the polytheists of Mecca sent by the Jews(2) to ask Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him about Yusuf's story.

(1) Commenting on this verse, Imam Ibn Kathir said, 'Allah the Almighty made them, i.e. 'Isa and his mother, a wonderful sign that indicates Allah's Omnipotent Power, for He the Almighty has created Adam out of nothing, created Eve from a male when there were no females and created 'Isa peace be upon him from a female, although she never had any relationship with men'. See Ibn Kathir, Tafsir Al-Quran Al-'Azhim, 3/246.

(2) Commenting on this verse in question, Imam Al-Qurtubi said, 'This saying of Allah established the veracity and truthfulness of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him for the Jews had urged the polytheists of Mecca to ask him peace and blessings be upon him about a prophet whose son was driven away by his brothers from Ash-Sham to Egypt, and who consequently went blind. Whereupon Allah the Almighty sent down the chapter of Yusuf all at once; it contains all the information mentioned in the Torah and even adds further details. That is to say that this miracle was of the same magnitude of 'Isa's (Jesus Christ's) miracle of reviving the dead'. See Al-Qurtubi, Jame' Al-Bayan, 4/3450.

The second possible explanation for it is that it refers to those Muslims who seek wisdom and admonition from the stories of previous nations, which is why Allah the Almighty revealed this chapter in such a miraculous way which cannot be brought by mankind.

Reading this chapter of Yusuf (Joseph) from the very beginning to the end might take you a total of twenty minutes. Here a good question arises, which is 'Who can continuously speak for about twenty minutes without even forgetting one word of his speech?' It goes without saying that none can do this, yet the case is totally different with Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him for Allah Glorified is He promised that He will teach him peace and blessings be upon him so he will never forget. Allah says: 'We will make you [Muhammad] recite so you shall not forget' (al-A'la: 6). Thanks to Divine Help, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him committed to memory all that was revealed to him from his Lord. He recited the verses of the Quran to his Companions and recited them in the prayers. It is worth mentioning that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him never made a mistake while reciting The Quran, although it is full of verses that are very similar to each other.

Here is a list of some of the verses of the Quran which are very similar to each other; Allah the Almighty says: '…and bear patiently that which befalls you; surely these are among (min) the acts that require diligent resolve' (Luqman: 17); However He the Almighty in another verse, says: '… surely these are indeed among (lamin) the acts that require diligent resolve' (ash-Shura: 43). Another example is when Allah the Almighty says: 'Surely those who guard (against evil) shall be in the midst of gardens and fountains' (al-Hijr: 45), although in another position, He the Almighty says: 'Surely those who guard (against evil) shall be in gardens and bliss' (at-Tur: 17).

This makes one wonder how this unlettered Prophet (Prophet Muhammad) was able to recall all of these verses; it is impossible unless Allah the Almighty enabled him to do this.

Allah the Almighty subsequently says:

إِذْ قَالُوا۟ لَيُوسُفُ وَأَخُوهُ أَحَبُّ إِلَىٰٓ أَبِينَا مِنَّا وَنَحْنُ عُصْبَةٌ إِنَّ أَبَانَا لَفِى ضَلَٰلٍ مُّبِينٍ ﴿٨﴾

The brothers said [to each other], 'Although we are many, Joseph and his brother are dearer to our father than we are — our father is clearly in the wrong' [8] (The Quran, Yusuf: 8)

It is important here to discuss this verse in the light of the different bonds of brotherhood. We know fully well that there are sibling brothers, paternal brothers and maternal brothers. Prophet Ya'qub (Jacob) peace be upon him had a total of twelve(1) children; six of them were delivered by one woman, four were the children of Zulfa and Balha, and Yusuf and Benyamin (Benjamin) were the children of Rahil.

The verse in question starts with the Saying of Allah the Almighty: 'The brothers said [talking among themselves], "Although we are many*, Yusuf* and his brother are dearer to our father than we are …"' (Yusuf: 8). Here, we should know that using the Arabic the particle 'lam' before the name of Yusuf denotes emphasis and intensity; that is, the brothers of Yusuf said, 'By Allah! Truly! Our father loves Yusuf and his brother more than the rest of us!' In the same connection, we should be aware that emphasis is used when one wants to deny the opposite case.

This clearly indicates that they, i.e. the brothers, disagreed about Yusuf and also how they should deal with him peace be upon him; this is also derived from the fact that some of them suggested to kill him while others thought of just casting him down in the depths of a dark well. They, however, eventually reached the conclusion that Yusuf peace be upon him was dearer to their father than them.

(1) Commenting on the number of Ya'qub's children, Imam Al-Qurtubi said, 'Ya'qub first married Liyya bint Liyyan, his uncle's daughter. She gave birth to six children including Rubil, the eldest of Ya'qub's sons, Sham'un, Lawi, Yahudha, Zayalun and Yasakher. Ya'qub peace be upon him then married two slave girls who gave birth to four children, who were Dan, Niftali, Jad and Ashar. After the death of Liyya, he married her sister Rahil, who bore him Yusuf and Benyamin (Benjamin). Therefore the total number of his sons was twelve. As-Suhili, on his part, opined that the mother of Ya'qub was called Rafqa, adding that Rahil had died shortly after giving birth to Benyamin (Benjamin)'. See Al-Qurtubi, Jame' Al-Bayan, 4/3451.

As a matter of fact, careful reflection upon the statement of those brothers plainly indicates that they were somewhat fair, for they admitted that their father loved them as well. That is to say that if they had carefully examined the matter, they will have reached the main reason why their father loved Yusuf and his brother more than them.

First of all, Yusuf peace be upon him and his brother were young when their mother died.(1) Ya'qub peace be upon him therefore had to compensate for the loss of their mother by providing them with more love and affection. Furthermore, it is Allah the Almighty who filled Ya'qub's heart with this deeper love for both Prophet Yusuf and his brother Benyamin (Benjamin). Here, we stress that Ya'qub had nothing to do with this matter, i.e. showing deeper love for Yusuf and his brother, for Allah Glorified is He is the One Who plants this affection in people's and animals' hearts alike.

Out of His All-Wise Will, He Glorified is He dispenses affection among His creatures according to their need for it. A cat, for example, attacks anyone that approaches its kittens.

It is for this reason that when the ancient Arabs were asked which child was dearest to them, they replied, 'The youngest until he becomes adult; the absent until he returns; and the sick until he recovers'.

We also witness this phenomenon in our daily life. Consider the example of a mother of two sons; one of whom was provided with abundant provision while the other barely meets his needs. The wealthy brother takes care of his mother's needs, and perhaps even financially supports his brother. Yet, the mother always displays more affection to the poor son. We therefore contend that love is a matter of emotions, which cannot be regulated or controlled according to a certain rule or law; a fact which is proved by the Quran which clearly states that 'love' and 'hatred' are nothing but natural feelings, which is why one is allowed to love whomever he wants and to hate whomever he wants on condition that he should not commit injustice against people for the benefit of the person whom he loves. In addition, one is not allowed to commit injustice against whom he hates. This point of maintaining justice in all cases is crystal clear in the saying of Allah the Almighty: '… and let not hatred of a people incite you not to act equitably; act equitably, that is nearer to piety. And be careful of (your duty to) Allah; surely Allah is Aware of what you do' (al-Ma'ida: 8).

(1) In his exegesis, Imam Al-Qurtubi stated that their mother, Rahil died shortly after giving birth to Benyamin.

Someone may yet cite the Hadith of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him 'None of you truly believe until I am more beloved to him that his own self' in opposition to this point.

We contend that the full form of this Prophetic Hadith provides the answer to this question. 'Umar Allah be pleased with him is narrated to have responded to Prophet Muhammad, saying, 'O Prophet Muhammad, you are truly more beloved to me more than any property and children, but not more than my own self'. Thereupon, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him reiterated, 'None of you truly believes until I am more beloved to him than his own self'.(1)

At that moment, 'Umar Allah be pleased with him understood that the love of Prophet Muhammad is a binding Divine Commandment, and that what is meant by this love is following his guidance (intellectual love), and not emotional love.

We previously explained that 'intellectual love' entails man fully realising that which is beneficial and acting upon it. For example, when you take bitter medicine, you are doing this out of intellectual love, seeking to be cured by the Permission of Allah.

Likewise, the Muslim loves Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him because he knows that without the Prophet's advent, he will have never savoured the gratifying sweetness of Faith. In fact, the Muslim may cultivate his love of Prophet Muhammad until the bond becomes an emotional one as well.

(1) The grandfather of Zuhra ibn Ma'bad related the following account, 'We were in the company of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who was holding the hand of 'Umar ibn Al-Khattab Allah be pleased with him when 'Umar said, "By Allah, Oh Messenger Muhammad, you are truly dearer to me than everything except my own self". Thereupon, Prophet Muhammad replied, "By He who holds my soul in His Hand, none of you truly believes until I am dearer to him than his own self", whereupon 'Umar replied, "Now, by Allah, you, O Messenger of Allah, are dearer to me than my own self". Then Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, "Now, Oh 'Umar (you have attained complete faith)"'. See Imam Ahmad, Musnad, 4/336.

It is thus clear that the incident of ‘Umar ibn Al-Kattab Allah be pleased with him has clearly shown the difference between the two acts of emotional love and intellectual love. Let us offer another example to fully illustrate this point. A man who had slain ‘Umar’s brother walked past the companions. When someone sitting next to ‘Umar remarked, ‘This is the man who murdered your brother’, ‘Umar Allah be pleased with him replied, ‘And what am I to do? He has embraced Islam’. He Allah be pleased with him then directed his gaze away from the murderer, who approached him and asked, ‘Why do you turn your face away from me?’ ‘Umar responded, ‘Because I do not love you, for you killed my brother’. When the man asked, ‘Does your lack of love for me deprive me of any of my rights?’ ‘Umar said, ‘No’. The man then exclaimed, ‘You may love whom you want, and hate whomever you want. Only women cry out of love’.

Concerning the story of Prophet Yusuf, his brothers should have realised that Ya’qub’s profound love for his two youngest sons was a natural reaction to the death of their mother.

The events of the story, consisting of good and evil aspects, continue, but here arises a question, which is, ‘Why was the brothers’ anger directed to only Yusuf?’ Some scholars opined that either they wished to make their father not feel the pain of losing both of his favourite sons–Yusuf and Benjamin–or that the contents of Yusuf’s dream had leaked out.

As for the Saying of Allah the Almighty ‘…we are many (‘Usba)…’ (Yusuf: 8), it indicates that their number was more than ten; this is understood from the Arabic word ‘‘Usba’ (many). Another possible meaning for this word ‘’Usba’ is that it refers to a group of people whose members support each other, whether they are right or wrong. Because Ya’qub peace be upon him had become very old, he was unable to run the affairs of the family, and as a result his sons played this role instead. With this burden on their shoulders, they whispered, ‘Since we are the ones responsible for the family’s affairs, we should be the dearest to our father’. Little did they realise that their father did in fact love them, partly because they were a tightly knitted group, but he gave more care to his youngest sons because they were not members of any tightly knitted group. Sadly, the brothers remained unable to discern matters properly to the extent that they said: ‘…our father is clearly misguided [about this]’ (Yusuf: 8).

To recap: the brothers’ conclusion was based on flawed reasoning because Yusuf peace be upon him and Benyamin (Benjamin) were bereft of their mother, and for this reason were in great need of their father’s deeper and warmer affection. Moreover, his love for them did not exclude his love for the self-reliant older brothers.

As for the Arabic word ‘dalal’ (misguided) mentioned in the verse in question, some people might mistakenly understand it in its general sense. Yet, we stress that there are two types of dalal, namely: misguidance which is committed intentionally and another which is done unintentionally. As for the first, it is when a person deviates from the path of righteousness to that of wrong. As for the second, it can be seen in the example of a man who unintentionally follows a road that does not lead him to his intended destination. It could also refer to a person forgetting the true state of any matter. This second meaning is clear in the saying of Allah the Almighty: ‘…So that if one of them should forget (tadil), the other can remind her…’ (al-Baqara: 282); and in His saying: ‘And find you unaware [searching for the right way] (dala) and then guided you?’ (ad-Duha: 7) Clearly, the reprehensible act of misguidance is to deviate from the right to that which is wrong.

In short, both the brothers’ assessment of their father’s love for the two youngest sibling brothers as well as the conclusion they reached were wrong. The conclusion is erroneous because they based their reasoning on false precepts. Had they examined their initial assumptions very carefully, they will not have arrived at the wrong conclusion that led them to state, as mentioned in the Quran: ‘…our father is clearly misguided [about this]’ (Yusuf: 8).

Allah Glorified is He continues to relate what the brothers had said, stating:

ٱقۡتُلُواْ يُوسُفَ أَوِ ٱطۡرَحُوهُ أَرۡضٗا يَخۡلُ لَكُمۡ وَجۡهُ أَبِيكُمۡ وَتَكُونُواْ مِنۢ بَعۡدِهِۦ قَوۡمٗا صَٰلِحِينَ ٩

[One of them said], ‘Kill Joseph or banish him to another land, and your father’s attention will be free to turn to you. After that you can be righteous’ [9] (The Quran, Yusuf: 9)

This verse in question tells us plainly that they first thought of killing Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him. However, being the founding fathers of the twelve Israelite tribes, they moved to a lower level of evil, a point which is clear in Allah's saying: '…or banish him to another land …' (Yusuf: 9). It is as if they feared the consequences of committing murder. Nevertheless, they deemed that with Yusuf's absence, Ya'qub's love will be theirs completely, an idea which is deduced from the saying of Allah the Almighty: '…and your father's attention will be free to turn to you …' (Yusuf: 9).

The Arabic word 'wajh' (face)–here translated as 'attention'–refers to the body organ primarily concerned with showing how man interacts, smiles, and expresses affection or repulsion.

This particular part of the verse means that the attention of your father will be totally free for you, that is, there will be no barrier between them and their father, Ya'qub peace be upon him. And as for Allah's saying: 'After that you can be righteous' (Yusuf: 9), it may be explained in three ways, as follows: it may give the meaning that they were fully aware of the value of righteousness and thus fully realised that their plot was contrary to the standards of rectitude, which is why they intended to repent once the plot had been carried out. But, what guarantees that they will live long enough to repent?! This reasoning neglects the fact that our appointed time of death is concealed for this particular reason, that is, to prevent us from committing grave sins.

Another possible explanation of the verse is that they, having gotten rid of Yusuf, will be able to pursue the activities of their daily life in a good way, and will not destroy their relationship with their father anymore. According to their reasoning, when their father's attention will be theirs alone, he will finally treat them fairly and devote his love to them.

A third possible explanation is that once the brothers do away with Yusuf, they will no longer be engrossed in this ordeal. Only then will their situation become good and they will be able to get on with their daily lives.

As such, we can reach the conclusion that the actions of Yusuf's brothers were steered by their own understanding of the concept of goodness and righteousness and the concept of life.

Allah the Almighty then says:

قَالَ قَآئِلٞ مِّنۡهُمۡ لَا تَقۡتُلُواْ يُوسُفَ وَأَلۡقُوهُ فِي غَيَٰبَتِ ٱلۡجُبِّ
يَلۡتَقِطۡهُ بَعۡضُ ٱلسَّيَّارَةِ إِن كُنتُمۡ فَٰعِلِينَ ١٠

[Another of them] said, ‘Do not kill Joseph, but, if you must, throw him into the hidden depths of a well where some caravan may pick him up’ [10] (The Quran, Yusuf: 10)

This verse in question indicates that Yusuf’s brothers had moved to a lower level of evil, for one of them suggested the idea of throwing him peace be upon him in the dark depths of a well instead of killing him. Here, we should take into account that Allah the Almighty does not specify the speaker in order to protect all the brothers from any low opinion that might be held of them.

The Arabic word ‘al-jubb’ (well) is used to refer to a well that is not stone-lined. We know that once the well’s shaft reaches the underground reserves, water continually streams into its chamber. To prevent the well from collapsing and to ensure that its waters are always accessible, the shaft is often reinforced with stone. This kind of well is referred to in Arabic as ‘bi’r mutawwa’.

As for the Arabic term ‘ghayabt al-jubb’ (hidden depths of a well), it refers to the hidden part of a well, usually just above the water, and whose contents cannot be spotted with the naked eye. This statement conjures the following question, which is ‘How could a caravan that happened to pass by a well notice a child hidden in its dark depths?!’ We maintain that this statement indicates another form of respite on the part of the brothers, for they refused the act of killing and had replaced it with driving Yusuf peace be upon him away, but yet they again rejected this idea, which is why one of them proposed the suggestion in question. Having voiced his opinion, the speaker(1) showed deep sympathy for his brother Yusuf peace be upon him, a point which is clear in Allah’s saying: ‘…if you must…’ (Yusuf: 10). That is to say that he expected his brothers to reject his proposition.

(1) Commenting on this part of the verse, Imam Al-Qurtubi said, ‘Ibn ‘Abbas opined that the speaker was Ya’qub’s eldest son, Yahudha. Other scholars are yet of the opinion that the speaker is Rubil, Yusuf’s maternal cousin, while another group of scholars are of the opinion that the speaker was none but Sham‘un’. See Al-Qurtubi, Jame‘ Al-Bayan, 4/3452.

As such, Allah the Almighty explains how the inimical brothers were mollified. The speaker did not remonstrate vehemently against the idea of killing Yusuf or banishing him to a faraway land, but rather he placated their indignation gradually and tactfully. Here, we should realise that the mere uttering of Yusuf's name, when Allah reports the speaker as saying: 'Do not kill Yusuf', is bound to make them show compassion and sympathy for him peace be upon him.

It is as though this unidentified speaker from among the brothers hoped that they will abandon the scheme altogether.

Allah the Almighty then says:

قَالُواْ يَـٰٓأَبَانَا مَا لَكَ لَا تَأۡمَ۬نَّا عَلَىٰ يُوسُفَ وَإِنَّا لَهُۥ لَنَـٰصِحُونَ ﴿١١﴾

They said to their father, 'Why do you not trust us with Joseph? We wish him well [11] (The Quran, Yusuf: 11)

Having agreed to the suggestion of casting young Yusuf into a well, they started to implement their plan. One of them speaks to the father while they were all present, saying: 'Why do you not trust us with Yusuf (Joseph)?' (Yusuf: 11)

At that point, we should consider the fact that when a person uses the plural form in the presence of others, this means that they all agree on what he is saying, either tacitly or by gesture. To fully illustrate this point, let us read the Saying of Allah the Almighty in which He Glorified is He tells us about the supplication made by Prophet Musa (Moses) against Pharaoh: 'Our Lord! Destroy their riches and harden their hearts so that they believe not until they see the painful punishment' (Yunus: 88). Here, let us wonder how Allah responded to that call of Musa. As a matter of fact, He accepted it, saying: 'The supplication of you both has indeed been accepted …' (Yunus: 89), that is to say that even though this supplication was made by Musa, Harun (Aaron) agreed on it.

In the same way, we understand that the rest of Yusuf's brothers agreed on what the speaker said to their father in this regard. In addition, this Saying of Allah under discussion indicates that they had previously tried to convince their father to allow Yusuf to accompany them, yet he had refused. As for Allah's saying: '…We wish him well' (Yusuf: 11), it means that Ya'qub should be rest assured because the brothers will look after Yusuf and protect him from all harm.

Allah the Almighty then continues telling us about what the brothers of Prophet Yusuf had said:

أَرْسِلْهُ مَعَنَا غَدًا يَرْتَعْ وَيَلْعَبْ وَإِنَّا لَهُۥ لَحَٰفِظُونَ ١٢

Send him with us tomorrow and he will enjoy himself and play–we will take good care of him [12] (The Quran, Yusuf: 12)

In order to persuade Ya'qub peace be upon him into entrusting them with their younger sibling, the brothers needed a compelling argument, as they themselves were herdsmen, and as such they used to go out to look after the cattle. They proposed to take Yusuf to the fields to play, for playing was allowed and even encouraged for the young Yusuf since he was not yet mature or legally responsible. That is to say that no harm could afflict the young boy from recreation and merriment.

Concerning this point, we should take into account that the Islamic Sharia prefers that the child should practise some kind of sport which will benefit him in the future such as swimming, wrestling, or shooting. In this sense, we can state that the term 'la'ib' unlike 'lahw', is used to refer to entertainment activities which do not prevent one from fulfilling his duties.(1) There are certain games that are played in groups which engross the competitors even to the point of preventing them from performing Prayers on time. In this case, 'lahw' has distracted them from carrying out an obligation. Had they stopped their games to pray, they will have had no negative repercussions.

Allah the Almighty then says:

---

(1) Ibn 'Abbas Allah be pleased with them narrated that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him passed by some people who were shooting (arrows) and said, 'Shoot, Banu Isma'il, for your father was an archer'. See Al-Bukhari, Sahih, Hadith no. 2899.

قَالَ إِنِّي لَيَحْزُنُنِيٓ أَن تَذْهَبُواْ بِهِۦ وَأَخَافُ أَن يَأْكُلَهُ ٱلذِّئْبُ
وَأَنتُمْ عَنْهُ غَٰفِلُونَ ١٣

He replied, ‘The thought of you taking him away with you worries me: I am afraid a wolf may eat him when you are not paying attention’ [13] (The Quran, Yusuf: 13)

Surely, the father’s answer displeased the brother’s much because it revealed his deeper love for Yusuf peace be upon him. This love, as well as his concern for Yusuf’s safety, made it difficult for Ya’qub peace be upon him to allow the young boy to go with them. Ya’qub peace be upon him then told them, as shown clearly in this verse in question, another reason for not wanting to allow the boy to go. Ya’qub is quoted as saying: ‘And I am afraid a wolf may eat him when you are not paying attention’ (Yusuf: 13).

Relying on this verse, a group of scholars (1) have voiced that Ya’qub himself was the one who (unintentionally) gave them the excuse they later used.

In the same connection, we should take into account that Ya’qub peace be upon him wanted to remind them of the rights of brotherhood, which is why he said: ‘I am afraid a wolf may eat him when you are not paying attention’, and not ‘I am afraid a wolf may eat him when you are resting’. That is to say that Ya’qub peace be upon him tried to remind them of the rights of brotherhood under which they are obliged to protect their brother from any harm that might afflict him.

Furthermore, we should know that the brothers were unable to come up with a reply that could dispel the father’s anxiety. That is because his deeper love for Yusuf is what gave rise to their resentment against the young boy in the first place. The only answer the brothers concocted is what Allah makes clear in the following verse:

(1) Commenting on this verse in question, Imam Ibn Kathir said, ‘They, i.e. the brothers of Yusuf, got the idea from Ya’qub and used his words to justify their acts’. See Ibn Kathir, Tafsir Al-Quran Al-‘Adhim, 2/470.

قَالُوا۟ لَئِنْ أَكَلَهُ ٱلذِّئْبُ وَنَحْنُ عُصْبَةٌ إِنَّآ إِذًا لَّخَٰسِرُونَ ﴿١٤﴾

They said, ‘If a wolf were to eat him when there are so many of us, we would truly be losers!’ [14] (The Quran, Yusuf: 14)

In this verse, the Lord the Almighty tells us how they attempted to reassure Ya’qu*b* and convince him to hand over Yusuf. The conspirers affirmed that a wolf will not devour Yusuf since they were numerous. They added that were an evil to befall him, they will not only be troubled by their conscious, but they will also be disgraced publicly. Such an ignominy, the brothers affirmed, is indeed too high a price to pay.

Allah the Almighty then says:

فَلَمَّا ذَهَبُوا۟ بِهِۦ وَأَجْمَعُوٓا۟ أَن يَجْعَلُوهُ فِى غَيَٰبَتِ ٱلْجُبِّ ۚ وَأَوْحَيْنَآ
إِلَيْهِ لَتُنَبِّئَنَّهُم بِأَمْرِهِمْ هَٰذَا وَهُمْ لَا يَشْعُرُونَ ﴿١٥﴾

Then they took him away with them, resolved upon throwing him into the hidden depths of a well – We inspired him, saying, ‘You will tell them of all this [at a time] when they do not realize [who you are]!’ [15] (The Quran, Yusuf: 15)

Allah’s saying: ‘(They) resolved to throw him into the hidden depths of a well’ (Yusuf: 15) indicates that the brothers came to their final decision after discussion and debate.(1)

Through inspiration, Allah Glorified is He told Yusuf peace be upon him that he will tell his brothers what they did to him.

This fact is demonstrated later on in the story; for once Yusuf assumes reign over Egypt, and the brothers enter upon him, he will tap on a goblet with his fingers and tell them, ‘Listen to what the goblet has to say: it says that you have a brother, and that you did such and such a thing to him’.(1)

(1) Commenting on this verse in question, Imam Al-Qurtubi said, ‘Ya’qub did not entrust the brothers with Yusuf until he took from them a solemn oath that they will look after him. When they did this, he handed Yusuf to Rubil and said, “Oh Rubil, he is young, and you know how dear he is to me. Therefore, if he becomes hungry, feed him; if he becomes thirsty, give him water; and if he becomes tired, carry him. Bring him back to me as soon as possible”. The brothers thus took turns carrying him on their shoulders’. See Al-Qurtubi, Jame‘Al-Bayan, 4/3462.

Some commentators opine that Allah the Almighty inspired Yusuf that he will tell them what they did with him and his brothers did not notice this. We assert that divine inspiration is revealed subtly, and only its recipient can sense its presence. This explains why they were only aware of what was inspired to Yusuf after the latter assumed power over Egypt. In fact, they did not even realise that Yusuf was their brother at that time; this is clear in Allah’s saying: ‘…If he has stolen, a brother of his did indeed steal(2) before…’ (Yusuf: 77).

(1) Commenting on this story, it is related on the authority of Ibn Abi Hatim and Ibn Jarir that Ibn ‘Abbas Allah be pleased with them said, ‘When the brothers met up with Yusuf, he recognised them, but they did not recognise him. Then a goblet was placed in Yusuf’s hand, which he tapped to produce a clinking sound. He peace be upon him then said, “This goblet informs me that you had a paternal brother. His name was Yusuf and he had the same religion as you. The goblet tells me that you took him away and cast him into the dark depths of a well. After that, you went back to your father alleging that the wolf had devoured him. Along with this claim, you brought forth his shirt spattered with false blood”. After listening to Yusuf, the brothers said to each other, “Truly, this goblet informs him of our deeds!”’. See As-Suyuti, Ad-Durr Al-Manthur, 4/511.

(2) Here, the brothers are referring to Yusuf peace be upon him. Commenting on this verse, Sa‘id ibn Jubayr narrated that Qatada said, ‘Yusuf stole a statue from his maternal grandfather and broke it’. Mohammed ibn Ishaq narrated that ‘Abdullah ibn Abi Nujayh narrated that Mujahid said, ‘I have been informed that Yusuf’s first tribulation came as a result of his aunt, Ishaq’s (Isaac’s) oldest child. In those days, inheritance was reserved for the eldest child, and she had inherited Ishaq’s belt. It had been agreed upon that whoever stole this belt will be enslaved by the person it belongs to. After Yusuf was born, his aunt nursed him and eventually fell in love with the child. Her love for him was so profound that no one was dearer to her than him. A few years later, Ya’qub’s longing for Yusuf was overpowering and as a result he went to her and said, “Oh sister, return Yusuf to me for, by Allah, I cannot bear to be separated from him one more hour”. She responded, “By Allah! I will not leave him”. Then she added, “Allow me to keep him for a few more days. Perhaps living within his proximity a bit longer and looking at him more will help me overcome his loss”. When Ya’qub left, she took Ishaq’s belt and wrapped it around Yusuf’s waste, under his clothes. Then she cried out, “I’ve lost Ishaq’s belt. Who took it?” She then inspected Yusuf and said, ‘Uncover Yusuf, Oh people of the house”. They uncovered him and found the belt wrapped around his waist, whereupon she declared, “By Allah! He is my captive, and I can do with him what I please”. When Ya’qub returned, she conveyed the news to him. Ya’qub replied, “If he took the belt, then he is indeed your captive, and there is nothing I can do”. And in this way she took him, and there was nothing Ya’qub could do to return him until she died’. See Ibn Kathir, Tafsir Al-Quran Al-‘Adhim, 486/2.

It is important to clarify that what is meant by inspiration in this verse in question is companionship and support during times of hardships. Revelation is therefore divinely bestowed and cannot be thwarted by Satan. Furthermore, these types of inspirations are imparted unto individuals who do not have any prophetic function, such as the aforementioned example of Musa's mother who was inspired by Allah to cast her son into the river.(1)

As such, it is clear that the human soul does not refuse such Divine Inspiration. In this regard, we know that Allah the Almighty revealed to Yusuf peace be upon him what comforted him after being thrown in the dark depths of the well, an act by means of which he peace be upon him was deprived from his father's and brother's love and compassion, and which caused him to live in a land far away from where he was brought up and an environment very different from what he was used to.(2)

It was therefore necessary that a heartening heavenly message be revealed, 'Yusuf, what has befallen you is not intended to alienate you. Rather, it is to prepare you to face more important matters. Your resentful brothers will one day be forced to knock on your door for help, asking for provisions, and you will recognise them but they will not recognise you'.

So far the story has addressed Yusuf's situation and the well into which he has been cast. The story must yet address the brothers' encounter with Ya'qub.

Allah the Almighty then says:

---

(1) Allah the Almighty says: 'When We revealed to your mother what was revealed, saying, "Put him into a chest, then cast it down into the river, then the river shall throw him on the shore…"' (Ta Ha: 38-39).

(2) In his Tafsir, Al-Qurtubi said, 'Ad-Dahhak narrated that Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him descended upon Yusuf while he was in the well and told him, "Shall I not teach you words, if uttered, will make Allah hasten your escape from this well?" Yusuf responded, "Yes". Then Jibril said, "Oh Creator of all created things, Oh Compeller of all those who have been defeated, Oh Witness of all secrets, Oh One Who is present in every congregation, Oh Dispeller of all troubles, Oh Escort of every stranger and Oh Companion of every forsaken person, grant me relief and hope, and infuse desire for You in my heart for me to desire none but You". When Yusuf repeated this supplication throughout the night, the next morning he was rescued by Allah from the well'. See Al-Qurtubi, Jame' Al-Bayan, 4/3465.

وَجَآءُوٓ أَبَاهُمۡ عِشَآءٗ يَبۡكُونَ ١٦

And at nightfall they returned to their father weeping [16] (The Quran, Yusuf: 16)

This verse reveals the Quran's extraordinary ability to convey in detail impulses of the human psyche. How are Yusuf's brothers to confront their father whom they deceived?! Even worse: they double-crossed their brother and threw him into a well despite Ya'qub's great love for him, and despite the fact that the latter had grudgingly entrusted them with the young boy.

In situations like these, mental distress cannot be fully concealed by anyone. The brothers therefore conclude, 'We will delay our encounter with father until nightfall'. This is because when darkness fully sets in, facial features are undetectable and it will be easier for the brothers to hide their disturbance as well as the contradictions rolling off their tongues. Clearly, they will not confess to their father what truly happened; instead, they will recount a factitious tale. In other words, they might be belied by their fake gestures, uncontrollable stuttering, or other signs of dishonesty in front of their father. Therefore, they thought, 'At night our faces will be more shrouded than during the day, for night hides such shameful acts. So, when we enter upon our father at night, he will not detect our agitation'.

The brothers carefully chose a time to inform their father of their crime. Allah the Almighty says: 'And at nightfall they returned to their father weeping' (Yusuf: 16). The act of weeping is a natural or innate impulse that is inborn in man, in fact, it is uncontrollable. However, to feign this act is referred to in Arabic by the verb 'tabaka'. One feigns crying either by rubbing or by applying some saliva to his eyes.

However, the light must be dim for these fake tears to be passed off as being genuine. And so, the brothers came to their father pretending to be weeping after nightfall.(1)

(1) Commenting on this verse, Imam Al-Qurtubi said, 'Scholars affirm that this verse proves that weeping does not confirm the veracity of the weeper, for there is a possibility that his tears are feigned. Indeed, some people are able to feign crying while others are not. It has also been said that false tears do not completely mask the person's insincerity, as a wise poet once said, =

When Allah the Almighty speaks of His Unique Attributes which only He possesses, He informed us that it is He Who causes death and grants life. Also, it is He Alone Who causes man to laugh and to weep. He Glorified is He says: ‘And that it is He Alone Who causes [you] to laugh and to weep, and that it is He Alone Who gives death and grants life’ (an-Najm: 43-44).

Clearly, there is no fundamental difference between the laughter and crying of an Englishman and an Arab, nor is there a difference between the death and birth of a Chinese man, an Arab or a Frenchman. Why? Because these attributes are shared by all of humanity.

When one pretends to laugh, he is referred to in Arabic as performing ‘y*atadahak’;* and when he pretends to cry, he is referred to as performing ‘yatabaka’, that is, to simulate laughter or crying. Finally, it is daytime that exposes false laughter or crying from genuine expressions of happiness or sadness.

History (1) bears witness to a multitude of acts that were concealed by the obscurity of night. Take the example of Imam Al-Hussayn Allah be pleased with him when the events in Karbala’ took place. He noticed that the enemy had encircled him, and he was also abandoned by the locals after they had invited him to pledge their allegiance to him. In the end, very few were steadfast. Imam Al-Hussayn Allah be pleased with him had a great sense of honour and did not let his few followers be slain in an unbalanced battle which he Allah be pleased with him was determined to fight.

So, after nightfall, he gathered his followers and said, ‘If you feel ashamed of abandoning me during daylight, then night has come and its darkness has given you cover. Whoever wants to depart let him do so. You may leave me here alone’.(2)

(1) The story of Imam Husayn with his follower on the night before the battle of Karbala’.

(2) In his book, Ibn Kathir cited that Al-Husayn ibn ‘Ali Allah be pleased with him told his companions, ‘Whoever desires to return to his people tonight, I have given him permission because those people want only me. The darkness of this night has veiled you from their sight, so flee expediently, and let each man take a member of my household surreptitiously to his localities and cities, for those people want only me. If they capture me, that will at least distract them from trying to capture other members of my =

The Lord Glorified is He then relates what happened shortly after Yusuf's brothers faced their father:

قَالُوا۟ يَـٰٓأَبَانَآ إِنَّا ذَهَبْنَا نَسْتَبِقُ وَتَرَكْنَا يُوسُفَ عِندَ مَتَـٰعِنَا
فَأَكَلَهُ ٱلذِّئْبُ ۖ وَمَآ أَنتَ بِمُؤْمِنٍ لَّنَا وَلَوْ كُنَّا صَـٰدِقِينَ ﴿١٧﴾

They said, 'We went off racing one another, leaving Joseph behind with our things, and a wolf ate him. You will not believe us, though we are telling the truth!' [17] (The Quran, Yusuf: 17)

As for the Arabic word 'nastabiq' (to race), it denotes that someone outran someone else in a race. The purpose of this race is to see which runner is fastest. So, when two runners compete to outrun one another, this is called 'al-istibaq' (racing).

This word in question, however, may also denote a contest to measure one's skill at using a firearm such as a gun. Two people compete to see who can shoot more accurately and whoever strikes closest to the target proves his superiority in that field.

Al-Istibaq may also denote a contest to measure one's skill in archery. The shape of the bow is known to all: it is a flexible branch which can bent and to which a cord is tied to both ends. The arrow, which is placed in the middle of the taut cord, is drawn by the archer and then released for it to fly directly to the target.

The accuracy of the archer is determined by the type of arrow used and the speed at which the arrow is launched. The act of evaluating the archer's precision is called 'tahdid al-hadaf' which refers to the archer's ability to hit the target.

Sometimes the winner of archery contests is determined by the maximum length the arrow covers. This type of contest gauges the archer's strength.

Such competitions can take different forms, all within the scope of what is lawful. This is understood as the competitors in the chapter of Yusuf were the founding fathers of the twelve Israelite tribes and the children of Ya'qub Allah be pleased with him.

There is nothing wrong in playing a game, as long as it does not distract the person from his duties. In fact, such past-times may sometimes prove useful–especially if one faces an enemy. At that moment, his skill in archery or throwing a javelin or any other weapon will be useful. In short, any kind of past-time that does not prevent the person from offering acts of worship to Allah the Almighty and which is useful during times of conflict is lawful.

There are certain past-times which people might think are of no use, such as football. But football involves strength and the implementation of clever techniques on the part of the player in order to keep the ball away from his goal.

However, love for football must not divert one's attention from his duties. A case in point is when the call to prayer is made; we must not defer prayer in order to finish the football game. Needless to say, the players should not wear clothes that expose the private parts of their body.

The sons of Ya'qub said, as is stated in the Quran: '…leaving Yusuf behind with our things…' (Yusuf: 17). By supposedly leaving Yusuf peace be upon him behind with their things, the brothers violated their agreement with Ya'qub peace be upon him since the latter entrusted them with Yusuf peace be upon him only after they had pleaded: 'Send him with us tomorrow and he will enjoy himself and play….' (Yusuf: 12) Further, they assured him peace be upon him by saying: 'We wish him well' (Yusuf: 11), and also by saying: 'We will take good care of him' (Yusuf: 13). Here arises a question, which is 'Did the brothers of Yusuf peace be upon him take him out with them that he may enjoy himself, play, eat fruits and be safeguarded by them–or to watch over their belongings while they were racing?!'

This is the brothers' first lie, as well as their first violation of the condition stipulated by their father to entrust them with Yusuf peace be upon him. The brothers' excuse is reminiscent of the aphorism which declares that 'the suspect all but incriminates himself'. To continue, they said: 'and a wolf ate him. But you will not believe (bimu'min) us, though we are telling the truth!' (Yusuf: 17)

That is, they said this because they fully knew that their father will not believe them, no matter what they say.

The Arabic word 'aamana' (from the word 'mo'mun' in 'bimo'mun' which means 'to believe' or 'to safeguard') can be associated with the object of the sentence, such as in the phrase 'Allah has safeguarded him from hunger'. An example of this from the Quran is Allah's saying: '…and gives them security (aamanahum) against fear' (Quraysh: 4).

The word 'aamana' can also be followed by the letter 'ba' and thus denote 'to believe or have faith in', or it can also be followed by the particle 'lam' and thus denote 'accept what someone says as true'.

In the verse in question, the brothers accused their father of doubting their claim, although they were telling the truth, as they said. However, they knew fully well that they were untruthful, but they mentioned the word 'truth' to conceal their dishonesty. Allah the Almighty then says:

وَجَآءُو عَلَىٰ قَمِيصِهِۦ بِدَمٖ كَذِبٖۚ قَالَ بَلۡ سَوَّلَتۡ لَكُمۡ أَنفُسُكُمۡ
أَمۡرٗاۖ فَصَبۡرٞ جَمِيلٞۖ وَٱللَّهُ ٱلۡمُسۡتَعَانُ عَلَىٰ مَا تَصِفُونَ ١٨

And they showed him his shirt, deceptively stained with blood.
He cried, 'No! Your souls have prompted you to do wrong!
But it is best to be patient: from God alone I seek help to bear
what you are saying' [18] (The Quran, Yusuf: 18)

This verse plainly indicates that when they returned to their father, they brought Yusuf's shirt with them. It has been said that Ya'qub peace be upon him upon seeing the false blood stains on the shirt, deduced that the wolf had been clement to Yusuf peace be upon him since it had devoured Yusuf's flesh without tearing his shirt. It is as though he fully realised that there had been a plot against Yusuf peace be upon him and that Allah the Almighty will reveal it to him.(1)

(1) In his exegesis, Al-Qurtubi cited what is narrated from Ibn 'Abbas Allah be pleased with him and others, 'When Ya'qub peace be upon him examined the shirt and did not find any tears or marks that suggested a wolf had attacked Yusuf, he fully realised that the brothers were lying. He expostulated, 'How is it that this wolf happened to be a wise wolf? It ate Yusuf without tearing his shirt!' See Al-Qurtubi, Jama' Al-Bayan, 4/3471.

Interestingly, certain scholars refer to Yusuf's story as 'The Story of the Shirt'. This is because the brothers presented Yusuf's shirt splattered with false blood. In the middle of the chapter of Yusuf, (1) Yusuf's shirt again plays a central role. As we shall see, the shirt will provide evidence indicating the guilt of the governor's wife; having been torn from behind, the shirt will conclusively prove that she was the one who had tried to seduce Yusuf peace be upon him.

Towards the end of the same chapter,(2) the brothers deliver Yusuf's shirt to Ya'qub peace be upon him and the latter's sight is restored.

Therefore, the word 'shirt' has taken on a symbolic significance in the eyes of scholars and men of letters alike.

What the people said about the battle that was waged between 'Ali and Mu'awiya Allah be pleased with them may be viewed as a case in point. Mu'awiya grasped the shirt of 'Uthman ibn Affan Allah be pleased with him demanding 'Ali to take revenge for the assassination of 'Uthman. For this reason, people referred to, 'The shirt of Uthman' to indicate the vested interest of Mu'awiya', that is, to rule in place of 'Ali ibn Abu Taleb, Allah be please with them all. That is, 'the shirt of 'Uthman' symbolised hidden ulterior motives.

Back to the verse in question; Allah the Almighty says: 'And they showed him his shirt, deceptively stained with blood(3)...' (Yusuf: 18).

The brothers had Yusuf's shirt, and they had smeared it with false blood. Clearly, blood does not lie, but the one who smeared the shirt with goat's blood did indeed lie!

Here, we should take into account that Allah Glorified is He uses the gerund 'kadhib' when describing the act of lying to indicate their insistence on telling the lie, as if the blood itself had lied. For example, the person who is just is described as 'the very personification of justice', implying that he is the very embodiment of justice. One might also say, 'so-and-so commits evil', but the listener retorts, 'in fact, he himself is evil'. These two expressions are examples that intensify the act.

(1) The Lord Glorified is He says: 'But he said, "She tried to seduce me". A member of her household suggested, "If his shirt is torn from the front, then it is she who is telling the truth and he who is lying, but if it is torn from the back, she is lying and he is telling the truth' (Yusuf: 26-27).

(2) The Lord Glorified is He states Yusuf peace be upon him saying to his brothers: 'Take my shirt and lay it over my father's face: he will recover his sight...' (Yusuf: 93).

(3) This is a form of metaphorical speech, suggesting that the blood was contrived.

But this makes us ask, 'Is it possible to describe blood as being "honest"?' We opine that such a statement could be possible if the wolf had actually eaten Yusuf peace be upon him and if the shirt was ripped and stained with Yusuf's blood. However, this did not take place; in fact, in this story, dishonesty itself almost cries out, 'I am a liar!'

Had the wolf eaten Yusuf peace be upon him the blood will have come out from the inside of the shirt to the outside. However, the brothers brought forth the shirt smeared only on the outside with the goat's blood. If the wolf had actually eaten Yusuf peace be upon him, surely its fangs will have torn the shirt to shreds!

In this connection, various accounts relate that when their father discovered their dishonesty, one of the brothers made a discreet gesture and whispered to the rest, 'Tell your father that bandits had besieged Yusuf and killed him'. Upon hearing this, Ya'qub peace be upon him replied, 'Surely, the bandits wanted to steal his shirt rather than just his blood!'(1)

This incident clearly illustrates Ya'qub's remarkable astuteness–a quality which any investigator should have in order to solve a murder case. As a matter of fact, the investigator needs this quality when he interrogates the culprits and witnesses because he knows that a liar's answers are not based on reality; rather, they are devised by a person's imagination. At that point, we can quote the following proverb, 'The inveterate liar must have a good memory!'

In our story, the Lord Glorified is He tells us what Ya'qub said to his sons, saying: 'He cried, "No! Your souls have prompted (sawwalat) you to make up a tale! [For me] patience is good and most fitting: from Allah alone I seek help to bear what you are saying"' (Yusuf: 18).

(1) Commenting on this point, Al-Qurtubi mentioned the brothers' attempts to justify Yusuf's absence to their father, saying, 'It has been related that the brothers told Ya'qub peace be upon him "In fact, bandits killed him", but their narrations were conflicting, which is why Ya'qub replied accusingly, "You claim that the wolf ate him, but had it done so, his shirt will have been torn before his flesh. However, I see no tears in the shirt. Also, you claim that the bandits killed him, but had they done so, they will have stolen his shirt. Do the bandits want anything apart from his clothes?!"' See Al-Qurtubi, Jame' Al-Byan, 4/3472.

As for the Arabic word 'as-sawl' (from 'sawwalat', translated as 'have prompted' in the verse), it denotes 'relaxation', for when a person is overwrought, he is only at ease physically and emotionally after relaxing for some time. As such, the verb 'sawalat' implies that Yusuf's brothers found certain ease and relief when their souls prompted them to make up the tale. As for Ya'qub peace be upon him his appropriate response to this situation was to patiently endure the difficulty.

Concerning this, adversaries of Islam ask the following question, 'Is it possible to describe patience as being "good"?!' In our response to them, we say that they are unaware of the fact that if the Arabic word 'sabr' (patience) is followed by the preposition ''an' (to be away from), then this patience concerns a desire that could have negative repercussions. This is an example to illustrate this point; when you order someone to control himself from drinking alcohol, gambling or practicing usury, you order him to be patient in avoiding these things.

On the other hand, when the word 'sabr' (patience) is followed by the preposition ''ala', it indicates being patient over a particular thing is painful, As a matter of fact, patience can be good when the person does not complain or tear his clothes etc. in grief.

Similarly, Allah the Almighty commands Prophet Mohammad peace and blessings be upon him saying: '...and avoid them with a dignified avoidance' (al-Muzzammil: 10).

We stress that those who eagerly look for inconsistencies or contradictions in the Quran are people who do not know how to study the Scripture and properly grasp its meanings. Ya'qub peace be upon him clearly shows us that good patience is that in which a person does not complain about his difficulties to the people; a point which is proved by the Saying of Allah the Almighty: 'He said, "I only complain of my grief and sorrow to Allah, and I know from Allah what you do not know"' (Yusuf: 86). As such, it becomes clear that there is a difference between complaining about something to Allah Glorified is He and complaining about what Allah has predestined for you. That is why Ya'qub peace be upon him says in the verse in question: '[For me] patience is good and most fitting...' (Yusuf: 18) The Lord continues to state what Ya'qub says: '…from Allah alone I seek help to bear what you are saying' (Yusuf: 18).

From this verse, we may infer that the good type of patience is hard for the human soul to bear. In fact, Ya'qub peace be upon him was unable to believe what his sons told him; for how could he believe such lies? How could he possibly face his sons with what they had done? After all, they are also his children, and as such he could not confront them with their lies.

With regards to this, we can quote the following lines of a poem in which the poet commenting on the reaction of a man who was told that his son had killed the man's brother, said:

'I say to myself, "[Such] sadness and grief!
One of my hands has assailed me, but my soul
Does not want to charge either one for the crime
This one I call brother, and that one I call son"'.

Such situations are difficult and call for compassion, since the one who experiences them does not know whether to be severe or merciful. How can one possibly merge such conflicting positions? Such situations are indeed distressing to all men, and concerning them, one must seek refuge with Allah the Almighty. That is why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him told us that when anything distressed him (hazanahu amr), he used to pray. (1)

As for the expression 'hazanahu amr' (when anything distressed him), it means to be faced with a matter that is beyond human ability to surmount. In this case, the person afflicted must seek relief from Allah the Almighty the One Who creates all means. That is why Ya'qub peace be upon him said: '…from Allah alone I seek help to bear what you are saying (tasifun)' (Yusuf: 18).

The Arabic word 'tasifun' (what you say) implies that Ya'qub's sons were not saying the truth; rather, they were telling him something which does not conform to reality. This is similar to Allah's saying: 'and do not say what your tongues describe (tasifu): the lie, "This is lawful and this is unlawful"...' (an-Nahl: 116). That is, your very tongues reveal the falsity of your words. In this connection, the Lord Glorified is He says: 'Glory be to your Lord, the Lord of Honor, above what they describe (tasifun) (ascribing partners to Him)' (as-Saffat: 180). This means that those who described Him in such (false) ways were not telling the truth and that their lies were bound to be exposed.

(1) Hudhayfa ibn Al-Yaman Allah be pleased with him related, 'When anything distressed Prophet Muhammad, he used to pray'. This Hadith is narrated by Imam Ahmad in his Musnad 5/388, and Imam Abu Dawud in his Sunnan, No. 1291.

Back to the verse in question; the Lord Glorified is He relates what Ya'qub said to his sons: '…from Allah alone I seek help to bear what you are saying' (Yusuf: 18). That is how Ya'qub peace be upon him expressed himself, for although his wounds might not have been outwardly visible, his heart was full of pain and worry, and he longed for peace. Due to this unrest, it was necessary for him to take recourse in Allah the Almighty.

In fact, Allah Glorified is He has taught us in the chapter of al-Fatiha to say: 'You alone do we serve and You alone do we ask for help' (al-Fatiha: 5).

As you stand in worship before the Lord Glorified is He worldly matters might distract you from worship. Therefore, you should ask for your Lord's Help to make you sincere in your worship.

After presenting the situation of Ya'qub peace be upon him with his sons, Allah the Almighty turns our attention to the situation of Yusuf in the well.

He Glorified is He says:

وَجَآءَتۡ سَيَّارَةٞ فَأَرۡسَلُواْ وَارِدَهُمۡ فَأَدۡلَىٰ دَلۡوَهُۥۖ قَالَ يَٰبُشۡرَىٰ
هَٰذَا غُلَٰمٞۚ وَأَسَرُّوهُ بِضَٰعَةٗۚ وَٱللَّهُ عَلِيمُۢ بِمَا يَعۡمَلُونَ ١٩

Some travellers came by. They sent someone to draw water and he let down his bucket. 'Good news!' he exclaimed. 'Here is a boy!' They hid him like a piece of merchandise – God was well aware of what they did [19] (The Quran, Yusuf: 19)

Here arise two questions that are: 'Where were the travellers coming from?' and 'Where were they heading?' But the Lord Glorified is He does not answer these questions in the chapter in question.

As for the Arabic word ‘sayyara’, it denotes a group of expert travellers, such as the people of Quraysh who used to undertake summer and winter journeys in order to carry out trade and import goods. As a matter of fact, not all the travellers went to the well; rather, they sent one person to bring them water from that well. Such a person is called ‘al-wared’ (water-drawer) because he brings water for the rest. Here, we should know that Arabs tie a rope to the bucket, and they call this rope ‘ar-risha’’. When the rope was within reach, Yusuf clung to it and the water-drawer felt the weight of the boy’s tug. Upon looking down, he, i.e. the water-drawer, found a young boy clinging to his rope. Elated, he cried out: ‘Good news! Here is a boy!’ (Yusuf: 19)

In other terms, the water-drawer was saying, ‘What good news! This is your lucky moment!’ It is as though he were relating good tidings to his people, for not only did he pull water out from the well, but he also brought them a young boy. The Lord says: ‘They hid him like a piece of merchandise–but Allah was well aware of what they did’ (Yusuf: 19). That is, they concealed him and treated him as though he were a piece of merchandise. Fearing that he might be a runaway slave who was sought after by his master, the travellers did not allow Yusuf peace be upon him to walk beside them, as they wanted to sell him peace be upon him to take a profit.

Allah the Almighty then concludes the verse with His saying: ‘But Allah was well aware of what they did’ (Yusuf: 19). This part of the verse refers to those who hid Yusuf peace be upon him like a piece of merchandise; they are these same travellers who later sold Yusuf.

Allah the Almighty subsequently says:

وَشَرَوۡهُ بِثَمَنِۭ بَخۡسٖ دَرَٰهِمَ مَعۡدُودَةٖ وَكَانُواْ فِيهِ مِنَ ٱلزَّٰهِدِينَ ﴿٢٠﴾

And then sold him for a small price, for a few pieces of silver: so little did they value him [20] (The Quran, Yusuf: 20)

We know clearly that the travellers themselves did not buy him, but rather found him. We also know that the word ‘shiraa” in this verse indicates the act of selling. In other words, we are told that they sold him for a small, paltry price. In those days, the slaves were evaluated by money.

As for the Arabic word 'bakhs' (small price), it indicates a lack of quantity or quality. For example, a boy is worth one hundred Dirhams, but was sold for only twenty. Slaves of Yusuf's young age were sold for a high-price, but they sold him for less than he was worth. The Lord Glorified is He sheds further light on this point, saying: '…for a few pieces of silver: in such low estimation did they hold him' (Yusuf: 20). The travellers' were content with a small price, selling Yusuf peace be upon him for only a few pieces of silver, for they feared that Yusuf's father or friend might come searching for him. They thought to themselves, 'Any price that this child brings us is a gain for us'.(1)

Allah the Almighty then says:

وَقَالَ ٱلَّذِى ٱشْتَرَىٰهُ مِن مِّصْرَ لِٱمْرَأَتِهِۦٓ أَكْرِمِى مَثْوَىٰهُ عَسَىٰٓ أَن يَنفَعَنَآ
أَوْ نَتَّخِذَهُۥ وَلَدًا ۚ وَكَذَٰلِكَ مَكَّنَّا لِيُوسُفَ فِى ٱلْأَرْضِ وَلِنُعَلِّمَهُۥ مِن تَأْوِيلِ
ٱلْأَحَادِيثِ ۚ وَٱللَّهُ غَالِبٌ عَلَىٰٓ أَمْرِهِۦ وَلَٰكِنَّ أَكْثَرَ ٱلنَّاسِ لَا يَعْلَمُونَ ﴿٢١﴾

The Egyptian who bought him said to his wife, 'Look after him well! He may be useful to us, or we may adopt him as a son.' In this way We settled Joseph in that land and later taught him how to interpret dreams: God always prevails in His purpose, though most people do not realize it [21]
(The Quran, Yusuf: 21)

Yusuf peace be upon him was purchased by the Egyptian to be the servant of his wife who was childless and had often urged her husband to seek treatment. Most accounts relate that the buyer was weak in terms of his sexual desires for women.

(1) Commenting on this verse in question, Al-Qurtubi said, 'some scholars explained Allah's saying: '…in such low estimation did they value him' (Yusuf: 20) to refer to Yusuf's brothers, the travellers or the water-drawers. In all cases, Yusuf peace be upon him was not a source of joy for them–not for the brothers because the object of their plot was to separate him from his father, not to get money by selling him, and not for the travellers, for they feared that Yusuf's brothers may claim him as their runaway slave. The Arabic word 'az-zuhd' (holding in low estimation) denotes a lack of desire for something. Yusuf was also not a source of joy for the water-drawers, as they did not want to share the money they received from selling Yusuf with the rest of the travellers. Consequently, the water-drawers thought that a paltry price that is not divided among many was more profitable than a high price that is shared among many'. See Al-Qurtubi, Jame' Al-Bayan, 4/3479.

As a matter of fact, this incident in the story reveals the immorality that may ensue within households that adopt a child. The parents did not have any foresight as to what might happen when the child, who is used to being coddled and kissed by his adopter, attains adulthood. The adopter may easily become intimate with the boy, and at a certain point it is hard for her to control herself with him. Consequently, as the child grows into a mature man, he may easily fall into the realm of sin.

As for Allah's saying: 'The Egyptian who bought him said to his wife, "Look after him well! He may be useful to us, or we may adopt him as a son"' (Yusuf: 21), it means that she should keep his lodging clean, which necessarily means that she should take care of the boy himself, hoping that one day they will benefit from him.

Here arises the following question, 'How could the boy be of benefit to a man who is the governor of Egypt and for whom everyone works?' We reply, 'Benefit in this case denotes a sentimental bond which differs from the gain that the potentate derives from the employees who work under his and his wife's command. By virtue of being raised as a son in a household, the bond between both parties changes. That is, one might say that the governor benefitted from Yusuf peace be upon him on an emotional level. In reference to this emotional rapport of the Egyptian, Allah says: '…or we may adopt him as a son' (Yusuf: 21). The significance of this verse becomes clear once we learn that, according to accounts of the Prophets, the couple were not blessed with children.'(1)

(1) In his exegesis of The Quran, Al-Qurtubi narrated that Ibn 'Abbas said, 'He was infertile and thus childless'. Likewise, Ibn Ishaq said that he could not sleep with women and did not bear children. If it were said, 'How could he propose to adopt Yusuf peace be upon him as their son when Yusuf was his slave, especially if we take into account that slavery and fatherhood are contradictory?' One could answer in the following way, 'He could manumit him, and then he could adopt him peace be upon him as his son. Adoption was known among his people, as it was in the early days of Islam'. See Al-Qurtubi, Jame' Al-Bayan, 4/3482.

In the same verse, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘in this way we settled Joseph in that land that We might teach him how to interpret dreams: For Allah has full power and control over His affairs, though most people do not know’ (Yusuf: 21).

Yusuf’s earthly empowerment began the moment he entered the house of Egypt’s governor where he began to live a good life. Moreover, Allah Glorified is He taught Yusuf peace be upon him how to interpret dreams, that is, He the Almighty granted him the ability to explain visions and dreams. As such, Allah has full power and control over His affairs and what He wills.

Had the group of brothers known what became of Yusuf peace be upon him they will have realised that their intent was not achieved, and that Allah’s Aim to honour Yusuf prevailed. Moreover, had they known this, they will not have cast him down in the dark depths of the well. This is the case for all evildoers. Thus we contend, ‘Had the evildoer known what the Lord Glorified is He had in store for the oppressed, he surely will have renounced his misdemeanour’.

As for Allah’s saying: ‘For Allah has full power and control over His affairs, though most people do not know’ (Yusuf: 21), it is a decisive statement, meaning that only Allah the Almighty can command something to ‘Be’ and ‘It is’. Further, there is no god other than Him; Glorified is He, who can oppose His Will. That is why we previously said Allah the Almighty Himself bears witness that there is no god but He.(1) He possesses the absolute proof confirming the non-existence of a god other than Himself. Indeed, to Him belongs the dominion of everything, and it is He Who has Power over all things.

In fact, only the lowly nature of certain human beings paints the illusion that they are capable of deceiving and beguiling others. They forget or disregard the fact that Allah, the Ever-Watchful, is fully aware of their actions, and that He Glorified is He is never overtaken by slumber or sleep. Were these human beings to contemplate such realities, they will know that Allah the Almighty empowers those who have been oppressed over their oppressors.

(1) This fact is recorded in the Saying of Allah the Almighty: ‘Allah bears witness that there is no god but He, and (so do) the angels and those possessed of knowledge. [He always] maintains His creation in justice; there is no god but He, the Mighty, the Wise’ (Al-‘Imran: 18).

Throughout our history and our life, we have witnessed how oppressors insisted on oppressing others, which is why they were eventually severely punished.

Subsequently, Allah the Almighty says:

وَلَمَّا بَلَغَ أَشُدَّهُۥٓ ءَاتَيۡنَٰهُ حُكۡمٗا وَعِلۡمٗاۚ وَكَذَٰلِكَ نَجۡزِي ٱلۡمُحۡسِنِينَ ﴿٢٢﴾

When he reached maturity, We gave him judgement and knowledge: this is how We reward those who do good [22] (The Quran, Yusuf: 22)

As for the Arabic word 'bulugh' (maturity), it denotes attaining one's final objective, and therefore Allah's saying: 'When he reached maturity (balagha)....' (Yusuf: 22), means that Yusuf peace be upon him reached the final state of adult maturity. Furthermore, the juristic term 'bulugh' is derived from the verb 'balagha', that is, to attain puberty. A person becomes fully responsible once he reaches puberty, when he is able to have a child.

In this vein, when a person such as Yusuf peace be upon him who was raised in a house full of luxuries, attains maturity, he could easily become foolish and lax in his morals. Only wisdom and knowledge can safeguard him from such baseness, and that is why the Lord Glorified is He preserved him by giving him wisdom and knowledge.

As for the Arabic word 'hukm' (the derivative 'hukman' being used in the verse, meaning 'wisdom'), it denotes an ability to distinguish between truth and falsehood; two matters which are antithetical and in opposition to each other. As a matter of fact, as long as Allah Glorified is He has given Yusuf peace be upon him wisdom, the latter will be able to discern between right and wrong.

Furthermore, Allah the Almighty granted Yusuf peace be upon him knowledge which he was able to communicate to others. A part of the granted knowledge is his ability to interpret the visions as well as the skills manifested when he was in charge of Egypt's repository.

At this point in the story, Yusuf peace be upon him had attained full manhood and Allah the Almighty had safeguarded him with both wisdom and knowledge.

Allah the Almighty then concludes the verse with His saying: '…this is how We reward those who do good' (Yusuf: 22). When man devotes himself thoroughly to what is placed before him, the Lord Glorified is He rewards him with the fruits of his diligent labour. Let us offer an example to fully illustrate this point; when a poor person does not complain about what Allah predestined for him, and instead tries to perfect and refine his work, Allah Glorified is He rewards him for his work. It is as though the Lord Glorified is He tells him, 'You have accepted what I have appointed to you, and you have perfected your work, so here is your good reward'. Such is the case of the great men of this world.

Thus, Allah's saying: '…this is how we reward those who do the good' (Yusuf: 22) does not only apply to Yusuf peace be upon him but also to anyone who gratefully accepts Allah's Decree. This is due to the fact that when Allah the Almighty issues a specific Decree, and then generalises it, then this Decree is not specific; rather it applies to all mankind. That is, even if Allah Glorified is He presents this Decree as a response to a specific incident, He confirms that He gives wisdom and knowledge to anyone who does the good.

As for Allah's saying: 'When he reached maturity....' (Yusuf: 22), it reveals that Yusuf peace be upon him had reached the prime of his life, a period which clearly marks the beginning of his troubles in the palace of the Egyptian governor. As a child, the governor's wife saw him as a beautiful young boy. Clearly, as a young boy, he did not possess the manly traits that aroused her. However, once he reached puberty, the nature of her affinity for Yusuf peace be upon him began to change. She started to realise his charms, and her imagination indulged in matters that were not possible, that is, her heart started to be filled with burning desires. After these two stages comes the third one of the practical fulfilment of her desires. Here, we should take into account that this wife of the governor of Egypt will not have fallen prey to her negative emotions had she veiled herself from Yusuf peace be upon him.

This incident brings to light the merits of lowering one's gaze away from sexual temptation. If you do not lower your gaze, your imagination will run unchecked–and you will eventually find what you are looking for. Your last resort will be marriage or simply repressing your carnal urge by virtue of chastity. If you repressed yourself, you might suffer from anxiety and inner tension, and if you fail to have the virtue of chastity, you will commit transgression against other peoples’ honour.

For this reason, Allah the Almighty commands women to reveal their beauty only to certain people whom He Glorified is He specifies in the following verse: ‘And say to the believing women that they should lower their gaze and guard their private parts and not display their ornaments except what appears thereof, and they should wear their head-coverings over their bosoms, and not display their ornaments except to their husbands or their fathers, or the fathers of their husbands, or their sons, or the sons of their husbands, or their brothers, or their brothers' sons, or their sisters' sons, or their women, or those whom their right hands possess, or the male servants who do not have any sexual desire, or the children who have not attained knowledge of what is hidden of women...’ (an-Nur: 31). The ‘male servants’ referred to in the aforementioned verse are those who have reached a certain age where they no longer have a sexual attraction to women.

Back to the story of Yusuf; the governor’s wife regarded him peace be upon him differently after he had reached puberty. Allah the Almighty makes this matter clear in the following verse in which He says:

وَرَٰوَدَتۡهُ ٱلَّتِي هُوَ فِي بَيۡتِهَا عَن نَّفۡسِهِۦ وَغَلَّقَتِ ٱلۡأَبۡوَٰبَ وَقَالَتۡ هَيۡتَ لَكَۚ
قَالَ مَعَاذَ ٱللَّهِۖ إِنَّهُۥ رَبِّيٓ أَحۡسَنَ مَثۡوَايَۖ إِنَّهُۥ لَا يُفۡلِحُ ٱلظَّٰلِمُونَ ٢٣

The woman in whose house he was living tried to seduce him: she bolted the doors and said, ‘Come to me,’ and he replied, ‘God forbid! My master has been good to me; wrongdoers never prosper’ [23] (The Quran, Yusuf: 23)

The verb ‘rawada’ (to seduce) used in the beginning of this verse implies that two parties are involved in the action in question. For instance, one may say, ‘Sharaka Mohamed ‘Ali’, that is, Mohammad collaborated with ‘Ali and ‘Ali also collaborated with Mohammad. Mohammad and *‘*Ali are both subject and object.

As for the Arabic word ‘al-murawada’, it is used to kindly and gently ask a person for something. Logically, if the matter sought after is easily granted, then the suppliant’s cajoling more or less comes to an end. However, if the second party withholds what is sought after, then the seducer’s seduction only ceases when the desired object is granted.

In the same way, the governor’s wife sought to seduce Yusuf peace be upon him cajoling him gently and tenderly and speaking in an enticing voice to convince him to satisfy her desire.

We should take into consideration that as a boy, Yusuf peace be upon him was merely her servant, and that she, i.e. the wife of the Egyptian governor, saw him as a child. Once he reached puberty, however, the matter totally changed. Suppose that she asked him to bring her something, and once he brings it to her, she tells him ‘Why do you stand so far away from me?! Come Near!’ Obviously, it was difficult for Yusuf peace be upon him to free himself from her because he is in her house. The governor’s wife has authority over him for she is the queen of the castle.

Upon analysis, we see that Yusuf peace be upon him was in a complex situation. After all, he was raised in her house, and she cared for him and showed him affection, but when the aspects of the relationship changed, he understood her objective.

Thus, the Lord Glorified is He fully and carefully explains the case from the very beginning to the very end. He the Almighty says: ‘she in whose house he was living tried to seduce him: she bolted the doors...’ (Yusuf: 23).

The expression: ‘she bolted the doors’ highlights this incident or refers to repeated acts, that is she closed more than one door. Let us give an example to illustrate this point; suppose that you want to ensure that a door has been closed properly, what do you do? Of course, you bolt the door and turn the key in the lock. There is a difference between just closing a door and bolting it. By shutting the door with a bolt, we are ensuring that the door cannot be opened from outside. Hence, you describe what you have done as bolting the door. Since great mansions have multiple entrances, the governor’s wife not only closed several doors but also bolted them. When visiting a head of state, for example, you do not find him waiting for you at the entrance of the first door. Rather, a person must pass through many gates before reaching the host.

In this connection, history has preserved the story of the man who refused to give allegiance to Mu‘awiya Allah be pleased with him in Medina and therefore Mu’awiya Allah be pleased with him summoned him to his palace in Damascus.

This palace was previously visited by ‘Umar ibn Al-Khattab Allah be pleased with him who found it excessively grandiose, whereupon Mu‘awiya justified the matter for ‘Umar saying that this extravagance was necessary to display the power of the Arabs to the neighbouring Romans. This justification indicated Mu’awiya’s wisdom which made ‘Umar keep silent about it.(1)

When Mu‘awiya invited the man, he was escorted through the main entrance by a retinue of guards. The man presumed that he will meet Mu‘awiya upon passing through the main entrance, but the guards escorted him through more doors. Instead of being impressed by such lavishness, the visitor calmly entered upon Mu‘awiya. He refused to call him ‘the Commander of the Faithful’, instead, he exclaimed, ‘Peace be upon the Messenger of Allah (Mohammad) peace and blessings be upon him’. At that moment, Mu‘awiya Allah be pleased with him fully realised that the visitor’s statement was a refusal to give him a pledge of allegiance.

Back to the verse in question; being well aware of the gravity of her sin and seeking to hide it from others, the governor’s wife bolted the doors. She chose a discrete location that was far from the workers and inhabitants of the palace. We infer that her seducing of Yusuf peace be upon him has taken some time, but it is clear that he was not responsive to her.

When the governor’s wife said: ‘Come to me,’ (Yusuf: 23), she moved from seduction to bluntly requesting her desire. Simply, she was saying, ‘I have adorned myself for you’ but Yusuf’s response was: ‘Allah forbids (ma’atha)!’ (Yusuf: 23)

(1) In his book, Abu ‘Ali Al-Qali narrated that Al-Mughira ibn Shu‘ba said, ‘Whenever ‘Umar looked at Mu‘awiya, he said, “Here stands the Khosrau of the Arabs”’. See Al-Qali, Al-A’mali, 2/136.

The Arabic word 'ma'atha' is used to refer to one in whom one seeks refuge. As a matter of fact, you only seek refuge if all solutions have been exhausted and if you have no other alternative. When desperate, you can only hope for someone to save you. It is as if the situation weighed so heavily on Yusuf peace be upon him that his only refuge was Allah Glorified is He.

As a matter of fact, none can face such a trial but those who have been safeguarded by Allah the Almighty and who have wisdom and knowledge that is granted by Him Glorified is He. Allah the Almighty grants those people the ability to discern between what is permitted and what is prohibited.

To fully illustrate the gravity and power of the act of seeking refuge in Allah the Almighty, it is worth relating the following story from the biography of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him regarding his marriage with the daughter of a certain king.(1) The story relates that some of the Prophet's wives were jealous of the new bride's magnetic attraction, which led one of them–perhaps 'A'isha Allah be pleased with her to exclaim anxiously, 'If he marries her and he consummated his marriage, he might prefer her over the rest of us'. Having said this, she approached the new bride and told her that Prophet Muhammad loves anyone who utters a specific phrase(2) to him. Upon hearing this, the girl asked what phrase it was, and 'A'isha replied, 'If he approaches you, say, "I seek refuge in Allah from you!"' When Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him heard this, he forsook her and said, 'You have sought refuge with Him in whom refuge is sought!'(3) Prophet Muhammad then divorced her in a becoming manner.(4)

(1) At-Tabari related that this woman in question was either Malika bint Dawud Al-Laythi or Fatima bint Ad-Dahhak Al-Kelabyya. See Al-Tabari, Tarikh Al-Umam Wa Al-Muluk, 3/123 and 3/139.

(2) In his book, Ibn Hajar said that in At-Tabaqat, Ibn Sa'd related that the first time she entered upon 'A'isha and Hafsa, they combed and dyed her hair. One of them told her, 'Verily, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him loves the woman he enters upon to tell him, "I seek refuge in Allah from you"'. See Ibn Hajar, Fath Al-Bari, 9/359.

(3) See Al-Bukhari, Sahih, Hadith no.5255.

(4) From the Proofreader: The Hadiths which mention that the reason Prophet Muhammad peace be upon him divorced the daughter of a certain king was that Aisha or another of the Mothers of the Believers Allah be pleased with them told the new bride that Prophet Muhammad loves anyone who says, 'I seek refuge in Allah from you' are false. One of = Another case in point is the story of Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her when the angel appeared to her in the form of a well-made man. She said: ‘Surely I fly for refuge from you to the Beneficent Allah, (do not come near me) if you are one who guards (against evil)’ (Maryam: 18). Mary sought refuge with Allah the Almighty: the Only One Who could save here.

Returning to the verse of our discussion, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘…he replied, “Allah forbid! My master has been good to me; wrongdoers never prosper”’ (Yusuf: 23).

From this verse we may derive two meanings:

First, Yusuf peace be upon him did not succumb to her after she had revealed her intent. The second is that he peace be upon him sought support from Allah the Almighty for it was none other than the Lord Glorified is He Who rescued him from the plot of his brothers and from the well, and Who granted him the finest of Egypt’s houses to be raised in. Upon attaining manhood, Allah Glorified is He also granted him knowledge and wisdom. After the bestowal of such blessings, is it possible that Yusuf peace be upon him responds by disobeying Allah the Almighty? Of course, it is not,

Another possible interpretation is that Yusuf peace be upon him said: ‘…My master has been good to me...’ (Yusuf: 23) to remind the wife of the governor that she has a husband, and that this husband was generous to him. After all, it was this man, i.e. the governor of Egypt, who told her to: ‘Look after him well! He may be useful to us, or we may adopt him as a son’ (Yusuf: 21).

= the narrators in the Hadith stated here in the discussion of the chapter of Yusuf used to make-up Hadiths. See fatwa. islamweb.net. The authentic Hadith cited by Al-Bukhari states that Abu Usaid said, ‘We went out with Prophet Muhammad, peace and blessings be upon him, to a garden called Ash-Shaut till we reached two walls between which we sat down. The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said, “Sit here”, and went in (the garden). The Jauniyya (a lady from Bani Jaun) had been brought and lodged in a house in a date-palm garden in the home of Umaima bintun- Nu`man bin Sharahil, and her wet nurse was with her. When Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him entered upon her, he said to her, “Give me yourself (in marriage) as a gift”. She said, “Can a princess give herself in marriage to a commoner?” The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him raised his hand to pat her so that she might become tranquil. She said, “I seek refuge with Allah from you”. He said, “You have sought refuge with One Who gives refuge”. Then the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him came out to us and said, “O Abu Usaid! Give her two white linen dresses to wear and let her go back to her family”,’ without any mention of any of the Mother of the Believers.

This situation is very difficult for several reasons. To begin with, she was inviting Yusuf peace be upon him to be intimate with her. Secondly, she has a husband; that is, she is not even a single woman. To make things worse, this husband asked her to look after Yusuf peace be upon him and to choose quarters for him when he was a boy that were fitting for a son. After being treated so generously, Yusuf peace be upon him could not return these favours with betrayal and ingratitude. As such, when Yusuf peace be upon him said: ‘…my master…’ (Yusuf: 23), he was referring either to Allah the Almighty or to the sovereign of Egypt.

As a matter of fact, encompassing a wide array of meanings is one of the Quranic distinctive features. Here, we should take into account that just as Allah Glorified is He rewards those who do good deeds, as He says: ‘This is how We reward those who do good’ (Yusuf: 22), He the Almighty punishes those who commit misdeeds, and thus they will not succeed. That is to say these two matters are opposite sides of the same coin, a point which is clear in Allah’s saying: ‘This is how We reward those who do good’ (Yusuf: 22); and His Saying: ‘…wrongdoers never prosper’ (Yusuf: 23).

Allah the Almighty then says:

وَلَقَدْ هَمَّتْ بِهِۦ ۖ وَهَمَّ بِهَا لَوْلَآ أَن رَّءَا بُرْهَـٰنَ رَبِّهِۦ ۚ كَذَٰلِكَ
لِنَصْرِفَ عَنْهُ ٱلسُّوٓءَ وَٱلْفَحْشَآءَ ۚ إِنَّهُۥ مِنْ عِبَادِنَا ٱلْمُخْلَصِينَ ﴿٢٤﴾

She made for him, and he would have succumbed to her if he had not seen evidence of his Lord – We did this in order to keep evil and indecency away from him, for he was truly one of Our chosen servants [24] (The Quran, Yusuf: 24)

As for the Arabic word ‘al-hamm’ (from which the word ‘hammat’ is derived, meaning ‘she desired’), it denotes the act of inwardly debating over whether one should seek a certain matter or not. In this vein, it is out of Allah’s Mercy towards His creatures that when we think about performing an evil deed and then renounce the ill intention, we are rewarded and Allah the Almighty writes it down as a good deed.(1)

At that point, this expression, i.e. 'al-hamm' addresses her attempts to seduce Yusuf peace be upon him and his refraining from her enticements, a matter which implies a reciprocal struggle between the two parties. One of these two parties is the wife of the governor about whom Allah the Almighty says: 'She desired him...' (Yusuf: 24) and the other is Prophet Yusuf peace be upon him.

In the preceding verse, Allah the Almighty reveals to us her affinity for Yusuf peace be upon him as she said: 'Come to me' (Yusuf: 23), and Yusuf's steadfast attitude came to light when he responded: '…Allah forbid...' (Yusuf: 23). Here, it is clear that the idea of desiring her passed through Yusuf's mind, and consequently Yusuf was similarly tempted. However, Yusuf peace be upon him soon understood the evidence and reasoning of his Lord. Thus, we may opine that had Yusuf peace be upon him not seen the sign and evidence or reasoning of his Lord, he will have also desired her as well. The Arabic particle 'lawla' used in this verse implies a negation of something. We could use this word in the following manner, 'Were Zayd not at your place, I will have passed by'.

Here arises a question, which is 'How could those who maintain that Yusuf desired her be heedless about the negation implied in this verse? Also, why does Allah the Almighty not say that she desired him, but he did not desire her to avert this possible confusion of meanings?'

We say that Allah the Almighty relates the story as such for an intended meaning, as the governor's wife desired him; and had He Glorified is He revealed this verse as 'she desired him, but he did not desire her', we will have thought that Yusuf peace be upon him was impotent. In such a case, a logical conclusion will be that he lost his libido.

(1) It is narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayra that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'He who intended to do good but did not do it, one good is recorded for him, and he who intended to do good and also did it, ten to seven hundred good deeds are recorded for him. And he who had a fleeting intension to do evil but did not commit it, no entry was made against his name, but if he committed that (evil), it is recorded'. See, Muslim, Sahih, Hadith no. 206.

In short, had Allah Glorified is He stated that he did not desire her, then we might conclude that he lacked desire for biological reasons, or that he was so embarrassed by this woman, who was his master, that he lost all desire for her. That is why the Lord Glorified is He wants to clarify that Yusuf's physique was normal, and that he had reached manhood and maturity. Furthermore, had he not seen the sign and evidence of his Lord, he will have desired her.

Clearly, it is not out of lack of normal feelings that Yusuf refrained doing what was asked of him, nor was it that he lost his sexual urge unexpectedly because he was caught by surprise as this is sometimes what happens to grooms on their wedding night. In fact, the groom may even unable to approach his bride, and days pass by before he restores his balance and finally approaches her.

As such, had the Quran wanted to indicate a total lack of desire on Yusuf's part, the verse will have stated, 'She desired him, but he did not desire her.' One might also add that the phrase 'she desired him but he did not desire her' negates there was any seduction, and it does not prove Yusuf's chastity and infallibility; it might suggest that Yusuf peace be upon him did not desire the governor's wife since he was lacking in some way. Moreover, this expression will lead us to equate Yusuf peace be upon him with one of the mansion's servants, since a servant shies away from the beautiful girls of the family that he works for. More often than not, servants might fall in love with a maid that works for his neighbours. This is because emotions are reciprocated between those who have a lot in common.

Out of kindness for His creatures, the Lord Glorified is He sparks reciprocal sentimental connections between people who have a similar social status. Rarely will a servant feel emotions for one of the daughters of his master. But he might, on the pretext of going to buy something from the shop, ask permission to go outside with the hope of meeting the neighbour's maid! Perhaps the servant reckoned that were he to desire one of the girls of his employer's household, he will be fired and lose his source of happy livelihood. Thus the Lord Glorified is He has willed to distribute these matters in an orderly and harmonious manner.

Back to the verse in question; Allah the Almighty says: 'She desired him, and he will have desired her if he had not seen a sign and the evidence of his Lord...' (Yusuf: 24). Thus, seeing the sign and evidence or reasoning of his Lord preceded his desire for her, that is, having been imparted with such an understanding in his heart, which he knew from the very beginning, Yusuf peace be upon him did not succumb to his passions.

In this way, the dispute over this point ends, and it is useless for people to wonder about trivial details. One such triviality is the allegation that he 'sat between her legs',(1) and he did not refrain from doing the act except when the face of his father, Ya'qub, appeared to him, reproaching him for what he was doing.(2) If caught in this situation by his father, even the most dissolute person on earth will surely faint.

Curiously, when you discuss with someone who holds such opinions, he says his interpretation is meant to uphold and prove Yusuf's sexual potency, since he desired her but resisted his own desire. To those who hold this opinion, we ask, 'Are you speaking of the Lord Glorified is He or of Satan?!' Upon close analysis, you will conclude that the wife of the governor, Yusuf peace be upon him, the governor himself, the witness–who admitted that Yusuf peace be upon him tried to extricate himself from the wife–and the women whom the governor's wife invited to admire Yusuf's beauty are the main characters of this story. Furthermore, it is the Lord Glorified is He Who protected Yusuf peace be upon him from sinning.

All these characters in the story bear witness to the fact that Yusuf peace be upon him was never guilty of misconduct. Yusuf peace be upon him himself said: 'She tried to seduce me…' (Yusuf: 26), and the governor's wife asserted in agreement: 'I tried to seduce him and he wanted to remain chaste…' (Yusuf: 32) Moreover, the wife also exclaimed: 'now the truth is out: it was I who tried to seduce him–he is indeed one of the honest. [Yusuf said, 'This was] for my master to know that I did not betray him behind his back...' (Yusuf: 50-51).

(1) It is narrated that Prophet Muhammad said, '"When (a man) sits between the four parts of his wife's body, then Ghusl becomes obligatory'. The phrase 'shabatayha al-a'rba'' (four parts) denotes her two arms and legs. It has also been said that this expression denotes her legs and the area bordering her vagina, and implies inserting the penis inside the vagina. See Ibn Mandhur, Lisan Al-'Arab, under the root 'sha'aba'.

(2) Commenting on this point, Al-Qurtubi narrated that Qatadah, Al-Hassan, Ad-Dahhak and Sa'id ibn Jubair said, 'On the wall, he saw a picture of Ya'qub peace be upon him biting his fingertips and threatening him. At this point, Yusuf peace be upon him calmed down and his desire left him from his fingertips'. See Al-Qurtubi, Jame' Al-Bayan, 4/3492.

Concerning the women, Yusuf said: '…what happened to those women who cut their hands—my Lord knows all about their treachery' (Yusuf: 50). Yusuf also proclaimed at that moment: '…If you do not protect me from their treachery, I shall incline (asbu) to them and do wrong' (Yusuf: 33).

In the aforementioned verse, the Arabic word 'asbu' (incline) is used to give the meaning of thinking about committing a particular act which proves that Yusuf peace be upon him was sexually potent, but Allah the Almighty protected him from misguided inclinations, for Allah Glorified is He says: 'His Lord answered his prayer and protected him from their treachery' (Yusuf: 34).

Considering the scene in which the women were gossiping about the governor's wife and her story with Yusuf peace be upon him did not they say: '…He cannot be mortal! He must be a precious angel'?! (Yusuf: 31) This verse tells us that when Yusuf peace be upon him entered upon them, all eyes were turned to him. Here, we should be fully aware of the fact that eyes and human impulses communicate subtle messages. Otherwise, why did Yusuf peace be upon him say: 'If You do not protect me from their treachery…' (Yusuf: 33).

Thus, we know that the other women coveted Yusuf peace be upon him just as the governor's wife had. Furthermore, they thought that the governor's wife might fire him and hoped that Yusuf peace be upon him will then be theirs. Such are the habits of those in corrupted households.

As a matter of fact, there is no house more corrupt than that of the governor, for after the witness testified that it was the wife who tried to seduce Yusuf peace be upon him the governor brushed the story away, saying: 'Yusuf, overlook this; but you [wife], ask forgiveness for your sin–you have done wrong' (Yusuf: 29). At this point, the governor sought to protect his reputation from being slurred.

In the same connection, when the witness asked the women, what was their answer? Allah Glorified is He states that the women acknowledged:

'…We know nothing bad of him!' (Yusuf: 51) In fact, He the Almighty kept the devil–who always incites evil–away from Yusuf peace be upon him. At that point, we should take into account that Satan never combats the Lord Glorified is He; he only fights His creatures. Allah the Almighty records the oath taken by Satan when Allah relates him saying: 'Then by Your Might I will surely misguide them, all, except Your slaves from among them, the purified ones' (Sad: 82-83). As such, Satan himself maintains that he cannot approach or mislead those whom the Lord Glorified is He elects as His purified slaves.

And finally the witness, who is a relative of the governor's wife and who was assigned by the governor to uncover the truth of the matter, concluded: '…but if the shirt is torn from the back, then she is lying and he is telling the truth' (Yusuf: 27). Thus, after presenting all the aforementioned proofs, no one has the right to ask whether or not Yusuf peace be upon him was on the verge of succumbing to the governor's wife.

Back to the verse under discussion; Allah the Almighty says: '… if he had not seen a sign and the evidence of his Lord...' (Yusuf: 24). As a matter of fact, the evidence is what substantiates a judgment, as Allah the Almighty says: '…nor do we punish until we send a Messenger (to warn)' (al-Isra': 15). In another verse, Allah the Almighty says: '(We sent) Messengers as the givers of good news and as warners, so that people should not have a plea against Allah after the (coming of) Messengers; and Allah is Mighty, Wise' (an-Nisa': 165). We deduce from these verses that Allah Glorified is He necessarily sends a Messenger to his people. Moreover, this Messenger should be supported by a miracle that convinces his people to believe in Allah's Divine Way of Guidance for them to live in spiritual harmony and for Allah the Almighty to save them from the punishment in the Hereafter.

The Lord Glorified is He then concludes the verse in question by affirming: '…We did this in order to keep evil and indecency away from him, for he was truly one of Our chosen slaves' (Yusuf: 24). In this verse, the Arabic word 'al-fahshaa'' (indecency) refers to committing adultery, while the word 'as-su'' (evil) denotes the possibility of succumbing to the wife.

Some moderate interpreters said that after attempting to make him yield to her, her enticement escalated to the point of insanity. As they rushed to the door, the wife considered killing Yusuf peace be upon him. However, the latter sensed her intention and even tried to kill her in self-defence. But had he done this, he will have been prosecuted as a murderer.(1) That is, the Lord Glorified is He turned him away from the idea of murder which is what Allah the Almighty here means by ‘evil’. However, I am personally inclined to understand ‘evil’ as the idea of succumbing to the wife’s enticements, which is an impulse that precedes the act.

At that point Allah the Almighty affirms that Yusuf peace be upon him is one of the purified slaves of Allah the Almighty. In a sense, this declaration is a response to Satan who had said: ‘Except Your slaves from among them, the purified ones (al-mukhlaseen)’ (Sad: 83). Here, Allah’s saying: ‘…for he was truly one of our chosen slaves (al-mukhlaseen)’ (Yusuf: 24) emphasises Satan’s assertion that he will not come near Allah’s chosen slaves. There is a difference between the two Arabic words ‘mukhliseen’ (sincere) and ‘mukhlaseen’ (chosen). As for the sincere slave, he is one who struggles and attains the level of truly obeying the Lord Glorified is He, while the chosen slave is one who struggles in the Way of the Lord Glorified is He and who is finally chosen by Him Glorified is He.

That is, on the one hand, there are people who, by obeying Allah the Almighty are blessed by His Grace. On the other hand, there are those who receive Allah’s Grace and as a result they obey Him. Let us offer an example to illustrate this point, although Allah is beyond any comparison. Someone asking you to give him from what the Lord Glorified is He has given you might knock upon your door, whereupon you invite him in and treat him generously. On a different occasion, however, you might be walking down the street and this time you call upon someone and give him some of the bounty Allah has bestowed on you. As such, there are those who ask and are granted their demands, while there are others whom you seek out in order to offer charity.

(1) Commenting on this point, Al-Qurtubi mentioned that among the possible interpretations of the thoughts that crossed Yusuf’s mind regarding the governor’s wife was to strike her and push her away from him. However, the evidence and reasoning of his Lord turned him away from doing this, for had he hit her, he will have been accused of sexually harassing the woman. Moreover, it will appear that she refused him and consequently Yusuf peace be upon him struck her. See Al-Qurtubi, Jame‘ Al-Bayan, 4/3488.

After discussing the wife's trials to tempt, entice, and coax, the Lord Glorified is He describes what took place next, saying:

وَٱسۡتَبَقَا ٱلۡبَابَ وَقَدَّتۡ قَمِيصَهُۥ مِن دُبُرٖ وَأَلۡفَيَا سَيِّدَهَا لَدَا ٱلۡبَابِۚ
قَالَتۡ مَا جَزَآءُ مَنۡ أَرَادَ بِأَهۡلِكَ سُوٓءًا إِلَّآ أَن يُسۡجَنَ أَوۡ عَذَابٌ أَلِيمٞ ٢٥

They raced for the door – she tore his shirt from behind – and at the door they met her husband. She said, 'What, other than prison or painful punishment, should be the reward of someone who tried to dishonour your wife?' [25]
(The Quran, Yusuf: 25)

We previously explained that both of them raced to the door, trying to arrive there before the other. At that point, we should take into account that Allah the Almighty only mentions the existence of a single door, but that the governor's wife had previously bolted several doors. However, Allah's saying: 'And at the door they met her husband…' (Yusuf: 25) proves that she caught up with Yusuf peace be upon him at the last door. That is, she raced after Yusuf peace be upon him until they reached the last door. The wife wanted to shut this door, thereby locking his last possible exit. Here, we should take into account that each of them was racing for a different reason: the governor's wife was chasing after Yusuf peace be upon him, while the latter was running away from her. That is how she tore his shirt from the back.

The fact that she tore his shirt from the back proves that he outran her to the door. In fact, the shirt was torn in her hand, and the witness–who was a member of her own household (1)–used this as evidence to show what had truly happened.

Allah Glorified is He says: 'And at the door they met her husband…' (Yusuf: 25). This means that both of them were surprised when the governor of Egypt appeared suddenly before them. Therefore, the situation turned into a three-person scenario: the governor's wife, her husband, and Yusuf peace be upon him.

(1) This is referred to in Allah's saying: 'A member of her household suggested, "If his shirt is torn from the front, it is she who is telling the truth and he who is lying, but if it is torn from the back, she is lying and he is telling the truth' (Yusuf: 26-27).

At this moment, the woman accused Yusuf peace be upon him by posing a question that implies her innocence, thus evading her guilt and turning Yusuf peace be upon him into the culprit; a point which is recorded in the saying of Allah the Almighty: ‘She said, “What is the [fitting] punishment of someone who tried to dishonour your wife?”’ (Yusuf: 25) Then, she specified the form of punishment: ‘[What] other than prison or a painful punishment?’ (Yusuf: 25)

Afterwards, The Lord Glorified is He relates the response of Yusuf: ‘But he said, “She tried to seduce me”. A member of her household suggested, “If his shirt is torn from the front, then it is she who is telling the truth and he who is lying”’ (Yusuf: 26). Here, the governor of Egypt finds himself faced with two contradictory claims: each accuses the other of sexual harassment. It is therefore necessary for someone who is judicious and discerning in such matters to evaluate the two claims.

Allah the Almighty continues:

قَالَ هِيَ رَٰوَدَتۡنِي عَن نَّفۡسِيۚ وَشَهِدَ شَاهِدٞ مِّنۡ أَهۡلِهَآ إِن كَانَ
قَمِيصُهُۥ قُدَّ مِن قُبُلٖ فَصَدَقَتۡ وَهُوَ مِنَ ٱلۡكَٰذِبِينَ ٢٦

But he said, ‘She tried to seduce me.’ A member of her household suggested, ‘If his shirt is torn at the front, then it is she who is telling the truth and he who is lying [26]
(The Quran, Yusuf: 26)

As for the Arabic word ‘shahida’ (to witness), it takes on many meanings in the Quran. At times, this verb denotes the act of being present, as in Allah’s saying: ‘…and let a party of the believers witness (yash-had) their punishment.’(1) (an-Nur: 2) In some cases, this verb concerns knowing something, as in Allah’s saying: ‘…and we do not bear witness (shahidna) except to what we know….’ (Yusuf: 81) It may furthermore be used to mean ‘to assess and make a judgment’, that is, the witness weighed their differing claims to deduce the truth of the matter. In the verse in question, the Quran asserted that the witness was a member of the household of the governor’s wife, who is the culprit. Were he a relative of Yusuf peace be upon him, his judgment will have been rescinded.

(1) This verse refers to the chastisement of the adulterer and the adulteress, and how the punishment should be carried out. This is stated in Allah’s saying: ‘(As for) the fornicatress and the fornicator, flog each of them (giving) a hundred stripes, and let not pity for them keep you from (carrying out) this Law of Allah, if you believe in Allah and the Last Day. And let a party of the believers witness their punishment’ (an-Nur: 2).

To continue we say the scene now involves four people: the governor’s wife, Yusuf peace be upon him, the governor of Egypt and the witness. The verse in question relates half of the witness’s comments: ‘If his shirt is torn from the front, then it is she who is telling the truth and he who is lying’ (Yusuf: 26). We can deduce from this statement that had Yusuf peace be upon him been the one who approached her, his shirt will have fallen to the ground, and when he supposedly stumbled, it will have become torn. But clearly this contradicts what really happened.

Allah the Almighty continues with the witness’s remarks, saying:

وَإِن كَانَ قَمِيصُهُۥ قُدَّ مِن دُبُرٖ فَكَذَبَتۡ وَهُوَ مِنَ ٱلصَّٰدِقِينَ ٢٧

But if it is torn at the back, then she is lying and he is telling the truth [27] (The Quran, Yusuf: 27)

The verse indicates that if Yusuf’s shirt was torn from the back, then he is speaking the truth and the governor’s wife is lying. Concerning this, we should take into account that the witness made this remark before seeing the shirt. In fact, it is on the basis of this statement that the witness will inspect the shirt. That is to say that he was establishing the basis to substantiate his verdict.

The following makes this crystal clear, for Allah the Almighty says:

فَلَمَّا رَءَا قَمِيصَهُۥ قُدَّ مِن دُبُرٖ قَالَ إِنَّهُۥ مِن كَيۡدِكُنَّۖ إِنَّ كَيۡدَكُنَّ عَظِيمٞ ٢٨

When the husband saw that the shirt was torn at the back, he said, ‘This is another instance of women’s treachery:
your treachery is truly great [28] (The Quran, Yusuf: 28)

Allah’s saying regarding the judging witness: ‘When he saw that the shirt’ definitively proves that he had established a criterion of judgment and had decided on the principles prior to examining the shirt; that is, he did not see the shirt except after laying down these principles. Thus, his reflections prior to examining the scene are his basis for evaluating the case at hand. In charging the governor's wife, the witness said: 'This is another instance of women's treachery: your treachery is truly great' (Yusuf: 28).

It is worth noting that the Arabic word 'al-kayd' ('treachery' or 'plot') denotes a stealthy machination devised by someone unable to confront his enemy. Due to the fact that women's weakness is great, their plotting is even greater.

Afterwards, the verses of the chapter of Yusuf turn to shed light on the reaction of Egypt's governor; Allah the Almighty states the governor's response to the incident, saying:

يُوسُفُ أَعۡرِضۡ عَنۡ هَٰذَاۚ وَٱسۡتَغۡفِرِي لِذَنۢبِكِۖ إِنَّكِ كُنتِ مِنَ ٱلۡخَاطِـِٔينَ ﴿٢٩﴾

Joseph, overlook this; but you [wife], ask forgiveness for your sin – you have done wrong [29] (The Quran, Yusuf: 29)

With this statement of the governor, Allah Glorified is He puts an end to this four-member scene in which the governor ruled that his wife was at fault, and in which he asks Yusuf peace be upon him to overlook what happened and to keep it a secret.

As a matter of fact, the governor's reaction clearly shows how the elite people address the problems that face them in their houses. This phenomenon continues in our contemporary time. This matter is clear in the case of a powerful man turning a blind eye to malefactions committed by his own family. In fact, a potentate will refuse to let outsiders know of events–such as the one at hand–and he will try to hide his family's blunders. In short, the governor has been disgraced and does not want to be humiliated by his foes and enemies.

Here, we should take into account that the matter of faith is still rooted even in the hearts of deviants and those who conceal sinful acts. This fact is clearly manifested when the governor of Egypt told Yusuf peace be upon him: '…overlook this…' (Yusuf: 29); and when he told his wife: '…but you [wife], ask forgiveness for your sin–you have done wrong' (Yusuf: 29). In saying this, the governor is asserting the fact that a sin had taken place; an acknowledgement that he could not make without being aware of the Divine Way of Guidance. In fact, the governor's only choice is to ask her to plead for forgiveness from Allah the Almighty.

At first, the scene included four individuals, as follows: Yusuf peace be upon him the wife, the governor and the witness who solved the case and made the judgment. Afterwards Allah the Almighty broadens the scope, casting light on the social class in which the case took place.

This proves that there is no such thing as a secret within a palace, since 'secret' events that take place within palaces are always spied on by stealthy observers. Moreover, people always speak of these secrets. That is why no one should think that he can stop his crime from becoming known. Inevitably, the secret will be disclosed, no matter how well the owner of the secret covers it up and conceals it. In the incident under discussion, some of the servants of the palace had spied on its people and told the story to others until the women began to speak of it. The Quran describes this situation in the following manner:

وَقَالَ نِسْوَةٌ فِي ٱلْمَدِينَةِ ٱمْرَأَتُ ٱلْعَزِيزِ تُرَٰوِدُ فَتَىٰهَا عَن
نَّفْسِهِۦ ۖ قَدْ شَغَفَهَا حُبًّا ۖ إِنَّا لَنَرَىٰهَا فِي ضَلَٰلٍ مُّبِينٍ ٣٠

Some women(1) of the city said, 'The governor's wife is trying to seduce her slave! Love for him consumes her heart! It is clear to us that she has gone astray' [30] (The Quran, Yusuf: 30)

As for the two Arabic words 'niswah' and 'nisaa'' which refer to women, they are used to refer to the plural. However, the roots of these two words completely change when transformed into the singular form, as their singular form is 'imra'ah' (a woman). Interestingly, this singular form has a dual form, namely 'imra'atan' (two women), but it does not have a plural in Arabic. Simply put, we refer to a group of women as 'niswah' or 'nisaa'', and to one single woman as 'imra'ah'.

(1) In his exegesis of The Quran, Al-Qurtubi narrated that Ibn 'Abbas and others said, 'The women referred to in the verse are the wives of the governor's cupbearer, his baker, his shepherd and his prison guard. It is also said that among the women was the doorkeeper's wife'. See Al-Qurtubi, Jame' Al-Bayan, 4/3498.

In the verse in question, the women said: ‘The governor’s wife is trying to seduce her slave!...’ (Yusuf: 30). In fact, these women said the truth, but they were not saying it out of love for truth or virtue. Allah Glorified is He willed to negate that they upheld truth and virtue, and therefore He discloses the ulterior objectives behind their words when He says: ‘When she heard their malicious talk, she prepared for them a cushioned couch (to lie on at the feast) and sent for them, and [then] gave each of them a knife. She said to Yusuf (Joseph), “Come out and show yourself to them” and when the women saw him, they were stunned by his beauty and cut their hands, exclaiming, “Allah preserve us! He cannot be mortal! He must be a gracious angel!” She said, “This is the one you blamed me for…”’ (Yusuf: 31-32).

The Arabic word ‘al-makr’ (malicious talk) implies disguising a matter behind something else. At this point, Allah the Almighty tells us that the motivation behind the malicious talk of the women was not to uphold the truth or for the love of virtue. Rather, they sought to harm the governor’s wife and expose her dishonourable act to the public’s attention. Furthermore, they wanted to injure the pride of the governor’s wife by making her blunder known to everyone. In this way, they showed that they wanted to uphold the truth but in reality they wanted the opposite–an evil which is only carried out by the most uncouth characters.

After all, she is the wife of the governor, and therefore the most important female figure in society. However, her high standing as the wife of the victorious governor that could not be overcome had been shaken.

It is interesting to note that the Arabic word ‘al-‘aziz’ (governor) is derived from a word that has a tangible, physical meaning. For example, one can describe the earth as being ‘al-i‘zaz’ (cannot be overcome), that is, a ground that is rocky and difficult to walk upon.

It is debasing for the governor’s wife to be the subject of gossip. Even worse, she tried to seduce her slave-boy, which makes the rumour more ignominious and disgraceful because a slave-boy is among the lowest of the low.

The women also said: ‘Love for him consumes her heart!’ (Yusuf: 30) As a matter of fact, there are different stages of love, the first of which is ‘al-hawa’ (attraction). This stage can be likened to a sprouting plant. It is said, ‘He saw something and was attracted (hawa) to it’. In some cases, attraction ceases at the moment the person encounters the other individual. However, if a person becomes attached to that individual, then a relationship forms. After forming this relationship, one’s fondness for the other person grows deeper, that is, the person seeks to achieve what is demanded in the relationship. After deep fondness, love manifests itself and both parties’ reciprocally express their feelings. At this point, both parties express their deep fondness to each other and that is why they are referred to as ‘lover and beloved’. After these stages of love comes the stage of ‘at-tadlih’ which denotes being on the verge of losing one’s sanity. At this point, the body itself becomes physically affected, and the person loses himself completely in love. In the next stage, man burns and becomes totally consumed by passionate love. This stage is called ‘al-huyam’ in which the lover becomes an aimless wanderer with no particular destination. If this leads to committing a crime, then this stage is called ‘jawa’.

These are the different degrees and stages of love that the heart may pass through.(1) As we know, the heart, i.e. the physical organ, is considered to be the place of firm creeds; those which man has already investigated and believed in.

As a matter of fact, the human being perceives things with his external senses; he sees, smells, hears tastes and feels. When he grasps certain matters, the mind assesses them and selects the soundest idea. Following this assessment, the selected ideas are transferred to the heart where they remain as inviolable creeds.

Concerning concepts that pertain to the mind, they can be removed by other different concepts. That is why things firmly settled in the heart are called ‘beliefs’ (aqa’id), and they derive their meaning from the word ‘ma‘qud’, that is, something which is tied tightly and cannot be unfastened. In the same connection, beliefs that settle in the heart are reflected in one’s behaviou because when an idea is rooted in the human soul, all the person’s actions take place within the fold of these beliefs.

(1) In his book, Ibn Al-Qayyim mentioned around sixty names for love, each name corresponding to a special stage or level of love. See, Ibn Al-Qayyim, Rawdat Al-Muhibbin, p. 25.

Therefore, we are now fully aware of the various stages that belief goes through before taking root in the soul. The first thing that occurs is the perception of ideas,(1) then comes the stage of reasoning, and finally man reaches the stage of believing in these ideas, which then are reflected in all of the person's actions.

Back to the verse in question; the saying of Allah the Almighty 'Love for him consumes her heart (ash-shaghaf)!' (Yusuf: 30) means that the emotions evolved from a simple perception to an acute mental awareness, and finally the feeling became fixed in the heart of the governor's wife. Interestingly, the Arabic word 'ash-shaghaf' (consumes her) refers to the thin skin that envelops the heart. This expression therefore denotes that love had completely seized her heart.

Concerning the women's words: 'It is clear to us that she has gone astray' (Yusuf: 30), this was a true statement but was uttered with wicked intentions. That is why Allah the Almighty discloses their malevolent intentions saying:

فَلَمَّا سَمِعَتْ بِمَكْرِهِنَّ أَرْسَلَتْ إِلَيْهِنَّ وَأَعْتَدَتْ لَهُنَّ مُتَّكَـًٔا وَءَاتَتْ كُلَّ
وَٰحِدَةٍ مِّنْهُنَّ سِكِّينًا وَقَالَتِ ٱخْرُجْ عَلَيْهِنَّ ۖ فَلَمَّا رَأَيْنَهُۥٓ أَكْبَرْنَهُۥ وَقَطَّعْنَ
أَيْدِيَهُنَّ وَقُلْنَ حَٰشَ لِلَّهِ مَا هَٰذَا بَشَرًا إِنْ هَٰذَآ إِلَّا مَلَكٌ كَرِيمٌ ﴿٣١﴾

When she heard their malicious talk, she prepared a banquet and sent for them, giving each of them a knife. She said to Joseph, 'Come out and show yourself to them!' and when the women saw him, they were stunned by his beauty, and cut their hands, exclaiming, 'Great God! He cannot be mortal! He must be a precious angel!' [31] (The Quran, Yusuf: 31)

Here arises a good question, which is 'How were they informed of the private incident that occurred between Yusuf peace be upon him and the governor's wife?' The only people present during the palace incident were the governor, his wife, Yusuf peace be upon him and the witness. Therefore, the one who related the happenings to the people from outside the palace must have had a relationship with both the people living in the palace and the people outside it.

(1) Imam Ash-Sha'rawi's opinion is further corroborated by psychologists who affirm that when choosing anything, one must first perceive it, then an impulsive reaction takes place, and finally one makes a selection.

In this vein, scholars have looked into the social contacts of the women who disclosed the secret happenings. They generally opine that there were five women who were responsible:(1) the cupbearer's wife, the baker's wife, the chamberlain's wife, the stable keeper's wife, and the jailer's wife. Here arises another question, which is 'Who disclosed the palace secrets to these women who live inside their respective houses?' Without a doubt, one of their husbands was talking to his wife casually, and he happened to relate the situation of the governor's wife with Yusuf peace be upon him and then his wife spread the news to the other women.

When the governor's wife became fully aware that the women were spreading gossip and became aware of how they maliciously talked about her: 'She prepared for them a cushioned couch (muttakana) and sent for them, and [then] gave each of them a knife…' (Yusuf: 31).

As for the Arabic word 'muttaka'' (from which the word 'muttakana' is derived), it denotes a comfortable cushioned couch which prevents one from becoming bored of sitting down.

This verse is therefore implying that the meeting will be long. Furthermore, the governor's wife planned to reveal how they will react upon seeing Yusuf peace be upon him and that is why she gave them all knives which also suggested that food will be served.

Allah the Almighty continues: 'She said to Yusuf, "Come out and show yourself to them!" and when the women saw him, they were stunned by his beauty (akbarna)…' (Yusuf: 31).

The expression 'akbarta ash-shay'' (to be stunned by something) from which the word 'akbarna' is derived, is used to refer to the case when the object is depicted in a beautiful way by your imagination before you actually see it, but when you see the object, you find that it is even grander than the picture you had previously imagined. Let us offer an example to illustrate this point. Someone might speak to you of another person in high terms, but when you encounter him, his positive qualities outshine even your highest expectations.

---

(1) This is mentioned by Ibn 'Abbas and others. See Al-Qurtubi, Jame' Al-Bayan, 4/3498.

A poet once said:

When I asked Ja‘far ibn Habib’s retinue about the man’s outstanding virtues,

I was related an almost complete description.

But by Allah, when we met, the sight of him was even more splendid

Than the good accounts that I had heard.

However, there is a counter proverb to this expression, which is, ‘It is better to hear descriptions of someone from the tribe of ‘Ma’add’ than to see him for yourself!’(1) In other terms, it is better if you only heard of a person without ever encountering him because when you meet him, you will be disappointed because your expectations were too high.

Back to the verse in question; when the women were causing damage to the wife’s reputation by spreading news of her attempts to seduce Yusuf peace be upon him they imagined that he had a rather attractive appearance. Nevertheless, when they saw him, they were astounded because his beauty far outshone their expectations. The first stage of amazement is bewilderment when you forget what you were doing at that moment; you might even drop whatever is in your hand. That is how the women cut their hands with the knives which were given by the governor’s wife for the purpose of paring fruit or cutting food that was served to them. Concerning this matter, Allah the Almighty says: ‘...and when the women saw him, they were stunned by his beauty and cut their hands’ (Yusuf: 31). Could there possibly be a depiction that describes this scene with more accuracy?(2) Allah the Almighty continues:

(1) This maxim is said with regard to someone whose reputation exceeds his worth. For example, a man might be renowned or he may even be a celebrity, but when you meet this person, you despise him. The word ‘Ma‘add’ denotes a neighborhood or the name of a tribe. This expression is generally used to undermine the subject concerned. See. Ibn Mandhur, Lisan Al-‘Arab, the root ‘Ma’ad’.

(2) In his Tafsir of the Quran, Ibn Kathir said, ‘More than one scholar have mentioned that she told the women, after they were each given a knife, “Do you want to see Yusuf peace be upon him?” to which they responded “Yes”. Then she sent for him and ordered =

'…exclaiming, "Allah preserve us! He cannot be mortal! He must be a gracious angel!"' (Yusuf: 31)

The expression: 'Allah preserve us' (Yusuf: 31) is a way of exalting Allah Glorified is He; that is to declare that He the Almighty is great enough to be able to create such ideal beauty. Another possible interpretation is that the women recognised that Yusuf peace be upon him is too noble to commit an indecent or vile deed with the governor's wife.

A third possible interpretation could be that the appearance of Yusuf peace be upon him was more handsome than any human they had ever known,(1) which is why they exclaimed that he could only be a gracious angel. At this point, we should take into account that the image of the angel is a figment of our imagination, as images correspond to impressions within the human mind. Similarly, when we envisage Satan, we visualise the most hideous image. In fact, ugliness itself is conceived differently by different people; what you consider to be ugly might not be seen as such by others, since the criterion of beauty and ugliness differ from one community to another.

Let us give an example to properly understand this point; men from central parts of Africa consider a woman with very fat lips or frizzy and wavy hair to be beautiful. In passing, it is interesting to note that modern society confirms that this is a type of beautyto which men are sometimes attracted. In fact, some women with smooth hair go to a hair stylist to make their hair curly.

Thus, we might say that beauty is measured by people's tastes. What one person perceives as beautiful is seen differently by another, and another person's

= him to appear in front of them, and when they saw him, they started to cut their own hands. While the women were still slashing their hands, she ordered him to go back inside. When they finally felt the pain, they began to wail. The governor's wife then retorted, "You do all of this after only one gaze, so why am I to be blamed?"' See Ibn Kathir, Tafsir Al-Quran Al-'Azhim, 2/476.

(1) Al-Qushayri Abu Nasr said, 'The women mentioned that Yusuf's physical appearance was more beautiful and perfect than that of any human. In fact, they said that he looked like an angel'. But Allah Glorified is He says: 'We create man in the finest state' (at-Tin: 4). When these two verses are considered together, one may infer that their exclamation 'Allah preserve us' confirms that Yusuf peace be upon him did not succumb to the enticements of the governor's wife'. See Al-Qurtubi, Jame' Al-Bayan, 4/3505.

understanding of beauty might not be shared by someone else. Furthermore, Allah the Almighty makes the human soul appreciate some beauty to which this person normally tends to be attracted. For this reason, one sometimes hears the following expression in rural Egypt, ‘For every bean, there is a particular person who is attracted to it’

Let us offer an example to clarify this matter; one may find a young man who proposed to a woman and, upon seeing her, became revolted by her. However, another young man might go to ask for the same woman’s hand in marriage and as soon as he sees her, he falls in love with her and hurriedly marries her. This suggests that the criterion of beauty of the latter differs from those of the former.

When Allah the Almighty wills to join two individuals, no one is able to stop the attraction they both have for each other from developing. We are not able to understand how this phenomena happens since it is Allah Glorified is He Who decrees this affinity. He does so by uncovering a beauty in the woman that attracts one man but not another. Clearly, this also applies to women.

Back to the verse under discussion; when the women saw Yusuf peace be upon him they exclaimed: ‘He cannot be mortal! He must be a gracious angel!’ (Yusuf: 31) We can deduce from this statement that Yusuf peace be upon him represented the highest form of human beauty, and that such magnificence cannot be found in any other individual.(1)

Following this incident, Allah the Almighty mentions the wife’s response to the stunned women, saying:

(1) Anas Ibn Malik narrated that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘Yusuf and his mother were endowed with half of (all the) beauty (in the world)’. See, Imam Ahmad, Musnad, 3/286; Al-Hakim, Mustadrak, 2/570. In his book, As-Suyuti narrated that Ibn Mas‘ud Allah be pleased with him said, ‘Yusuf’s countenance was like a flash of lightning. Whenever a woman approached him for a certain matter, he covered his face lest she be drawn to him’. As-Suyuti attributed this narration to Al-Hakim At-Tirmidhi in his Nawadir Al-Usul, as well as Ibn Al-Mundhir, Ibn Abu Hatim, Abu Ash-Sheikh and At-Tabarani’. See As-Suyuti, Ad-Durr Al-Manthur, 4/532.

قَالَتْ فَذَٰلِكُنَّ ٱلَّذِى لُمْتُنَّنِى فِيهِ ۖ وَلَقَدْ رَٰوَدتُّهُۥ عَن نَّفْسِهِۦ فَٱسْتَعْصَمَ ۖ
وَلَئِن لَّمْ يَفْعَلْ مَآ ءَامُرُهُۥ لَيُسْجَنَنَّ وَلَيَكُونًا مِّنَ ٱلصَّٰغِرِينَ (٣٢)

She said, 'This is the one you blamed me for. I tried to seduce him and he wanted to remain chaste, but if he does not do what I command now, he will be put in prison and degraded' [32] (The Quran, Yusuf: 32)

After the women had admitted that Yusuf peace be upon him has been granted a beauty which has no likeness among humans, the governor's wife found in this acknowledgement a justification for her attempts to seduce Yusuf peace be upon him.

The saying 'fadhalikunn', that is, 'This is the one ...' (Yusuf: 32) which the governor's wife utters includes the demonstrative pronoun 'this' which refers to Yusuf peace be upon him, but the entire word 'fadhalikunn', addresses the women.

What concerns us here is the linguistic style used by the speaker because when words are uttered or even written for reading purposes, they may take on different forms and styles. Sometimes, the words simply make up prose devoid of any rhythm or rhyme. Other times, ideas may be expressed either in loosely rhyming prose, or even as disciplined, rhythmical, and rhyming poetry.

There are examples of rhyming prose in The Quran, and the following saying of Allah the Almighty is a case in point: 'By the mountain,(1) by a Scripture inscribed in unrolled parchment, by the much-visited House' (adh-Dhariyat: 1-4). These aforementioned verses are an example of loosely rhyming prose, each verse ending with the same sound 'or'. In this connection, when you read or hear a text, the more eloquently sounding the prose the more you can visualise the scene portrayed. And when you move from one text to another, your ear notices the stylistic difference between both texts.

(1) The mountain referred to in the verse is called 'At-Tur' which is located in Sinai, where Musa (Moses) peace be upon him stayed with his people after they were driven out of Egypt. Allah Glorified is He says: 'We made the mountain (At-Tur) tower high above them…' (an-Nisa': 154). It is also called 'Tur Sayna', as in the following verse: '…Mount Sinai…' (al-Mu'minun: 20) and also called 'Tur sini'n' in Allah's saying: 'And Mount Sinai' (at-Tin: 2). See Al-Qamous Al-Qawim, 1/407.

A good example of a change from one style to another can be found in the letters in which Ibn Zaydun(1) implored Ibn Jahwar, ‘The painful consequences of this criticism are worthy of praise, for this hardship exalts (the individual) only after having debased (him). My high esteem for you, my lord, will not diminish if the cause (of this criticism) is protracted or delayed, for you are not sparing and never withhold things (from those who regard you in high esteem). And so I (shall) lower my water drawer and fill it with bounty (that is like) the heaviest roaming cloud that I can recall. Each day is tied to the next, and each appointed moment is recorded in the Book. Praise be to Allah for putting us to the test, and never (should He be) criticised for His Leniency.

For if one of His Actions saddened me,
His Actions that delight us are thousands’.

In this communication, you can clearly notice Ibn Zaydun’s transition from straightforward prose to poetry. However, when reading The Quran, you can hardly distinguish between poetry and prose as you move from standard prose to loosely rhyming prose, and then to rhyming and rhythmic poetry.

Let us give an example from the verse under discussion: ‘This is the one you blamed me for…’ (Yusuf: 32). This part of the verse has a rhythm, but one is almost entirely oblivious to the fact that the verse has transferred from prose to poetry. In another verse, Allah the Almighty also says: ‘Allah guides whoever He wills to a straight path(2)…’ (an-Nur: 46). He Glorified is He also says: ‘[Prophet], tell My slaves that I am the Forgiving, the Merciful…’ (al-Hijr: 49). These verses come after prose as well which proves that there is no dissonance in the intonation of The Quran, be it verse, poetry or prose. In fact, the style of the Quran is so harmonious that it appears as one single flow of words. Such eloquence can only emanate from the saying of Allah the Almighty. In fact, you may not even be aware of these poetic subtleties if no one were to bring them to your attention. However, in ordinary human speech, however, your ear easily feels the transition from rhyming words that are followed by prose. The same is true when you read prose and then move to poetry. In both cases, the ear of the reader easily senses the shift from one form of expression to another.

(1) He is Ahmad ibn Abdullah ibn Zaydun Al-Khawarizmi Al-Andalusi, Ab Al-Walid. He was a minister, author and a poet from Cordoba. Born in 394 AH, he served as ambassador for Ibn Jahur (a king of one of the confederate states of Andalusia) who sent him to different parts of Andalusia. He died in Seville in 463 AH in the reign of Al-Mu‘tamid ‘Alallah Ibn Al-Mu‘tadid. Paraphrased from Al-A‘lam by Az-Zirikli 1/158.

(2) Al-Azhari said, ‘Ibn Kathir, Nafe‘, Abu ‘Amr, Ibn ‘Amir, ‘Asim, and Al-Kisa’i read the verse: “Guide us to the Straight Path” (al-Fatiha: 6) pronouncing the word ‘as-sirat’ with the letter ‘sad’ instead of the letter ‘sin’. Ya‘qub, on the other hand, read this word with the letter ‘sin’, and explained that the letter ‘sad’ in this word is derived from the letter ‘sin’ but the word was pronounced with a ‘sad’ to ease the pronunciation because of its proximity to the letter ‘ta’. Al-Jawhari said, ‘‘As-siraṭ’ with the letter ‘sin’, and ‘as-sirat’ with the letter ‘sad’ are both legitimate ways of reciting this word’. See Ibn Mandhur, Lisan Al-‘Arab the root ‘sarata’.

Back to the verse in question; Allah the Almighty says: ‘She said, “This is the one you blamed me for. I tried to seduce him and he wanted to remain chaste...”’ (Yusuf: 32). The governor’s wife uttered this statement audaciously only after noticing the impact Yusuf’s presence had on the women. Moreover, she declared that he had remained chaste which implies that he restrained himself and repressed his carnal desire with great effort. Furthermore, this statement proves that Yusuf’s manhood is in no way lacking, for he struggled against his own ego to prevent himself from performing the dissolute act. Further the wife is related to have continued saying: ‘… but if he does not do what I command now, he will be put in prison and degraded’ (Yusuf: 32). We should take into account that she proclaimed this with the tone of someone who was decreeing orders. She is declaring to the listeners–who were stunned by Yusuf peace be upon him when they saw him–that if he refuses to obey her and satisfy her desire, she will surely imprison, disgrace and dishonour him.

As for the women who heard her, each one of them secretly wished that the governor’s wife will expel Yusuf peace be upon him from the palace so that one of them could be alone with him.

That is why Allah the Almighty narrates Yusuf’s response, saying:

قَالَ رَبِّ ٱلسِّجْنُ أَحَبُّ إِلَيَّ مِمَّا يَدْعُونَنِيٓ إِلَيْهِ ۖ وَإِلَّا
تَصْرِفْ عَنِّي كَيْدَهُنَّ أَصْبُ إِلَيْهِنَّ وَأَكُن مِّنَ ٱلْجَٰهِلِينَ ﴿٣٣﴾

Joseph said, 'My Lord! I would prefer prison to what these women are calling me to do. If You do not protect me from their treachery, I shall yield to them and do wrong' [33] (The Quran, Yusuf: 33)

Here arises a question, 'Why did Yusuf peace be upon him use the plural form (women) in his statement?' After all, he did say: 'I prefer prison to what these women are calling me to do...' (Yusuf: 33) despite the fact that it is only the governor's wife who said: '… but if he does not do what I command now, he will be put in prison and degraded' (Yusuf: 32). Here, we should stress that there is no doubt that Yusuf peace be upon him had sensed the innuendos or winks from the women. Through these insinuations, the women were advising him to avoid the complicated situation that will lead to his imprisonment. That is why Yusuf peace be upon him included the female guests in his speech about the governor's wife. It is the women who gave him discreet signs and hints for him to avoid imprisonment.

One may suppose that more than one woman looked at him and attempted to earn his affection.(1) Indeed, eyes, physical gestures and facial expressions communicate better than words, and perhaps the signs given by their eyes told Yusuf peace be upon him of the intentions of each and every one of them. In such meetings, eyes play a great role in communicating ideas and intentions. Let us offer an example to clarify this point; there is an account of the poet Abu Dalama who sat in the court of a caliph. Abu Dalama was famous for his prowess in ridiculing others through his satiric poetry. Knowing this, the Caliph asked him to deride one of them for fun.

(1) In his exegesis of the Quran, Al-Qurtubi said, 'Each woman asked to be alone with Yusuf peace be upon him and to give him advice on how to act with the governor's wife. Their ulterior motive, however, was to rebuke Yusuf peace be upon him and ask him to succumb to her rather than to the wife. With the hope that Yusuf peace be upon him might be open to their allures, each woman went up to him peace be upon him inviting him and inveigling him by saying, "Yusuf, fulfill my need, for I am better than your mistress". Yusuf peace be upon him responded, "O Lord, she was one and now there are many!"' See Al-Qurtubi, Jame' Al-Bayan, 4/3507.

The eyes of the people present began circulating around the room, and all of the attendees stealthily indicated to Abu Dalama that they will shower him with gifts if he spared them public derision. Since Abu Dalama was known for his greediness, and he feared being denied any of the gifts that were being tacitly offered to him, he decided that he will deride himself. He said:

In reality, the most hideous of your company is Abu Dalama, for he is neither of the generous nor of the noble-hearted.
When he dons a turban he resembles a monkey, and a pig when he takes it off!'

In this way, the poet fulfilled the oath of the Caliph and also gained the gifts that he was promised by those who were attending the gathering.

In the verse under discussion, we find that Yusuf peace be upon him included the women with the governor's wife when he said: 'My Lord! I prefer prison to what these women are calling me to do...' (Yusuf: 33). In other words, imprisonment was more preferred to Yusuf peace be upon him than to agree to commit the sinful act with the governor's wife, or to consent to the women's advice to free himself from prison by answering the wife's desire and then staying with them outside the castle.

Instead, Yusuf peace be upon him called to his Lord, saying: 'If You do not protect me from their treachery, I shall yield to them and do wrong' (Yusuf: 33). Here, someone may ask, 'Why did Yusuf peace be upon him not say 'O Allah', instead of 'My Lord'?' After all, Yusuf peace be upon him knows for certain that Divine Obligations which come in the form of 'Do' and 'Do not do' are a result of Allah's Divinity which is represented in His Name 'Allah'.

We contend that Yusuf peace be upon him wanted to call Allah the Almighty using the Name 'Lord' as he wanted to acknowledge Allah's Bounty and Generosity towards him. Indeed, He, Glorified is Him, is the One Who protected him and took care of him. By invoking Allah by the Name 'My Lord', Yusuf peace be upon him is asking Allah not to forsake him in this calamitous situation.

Yusuf peace be upon him was aware that he was weak, like every human being, and he knew that unless his Lord turns away their guile from him, he might succumb to their request, thereby becoming one of the ignorant who ignore the consequences of their acts. Despite the fact that prison is a detestable place to be, he still prefers it to disobeying his Creator. Moreover, since Yusuf sought refuge in the Primary Protector, Allah Glorified is He answered his peace be upon him plea. Allah the Almighty then says:

فَٱسۡتَجَابَ لَهُۥ رَبُّهُۥ فَصَرَفَ عَنۡهُ كَيۡدَهُنَّۚ إِنَّهُۥ هُوَ ٱلسَّمِيعُ ٱلۡعَلِيمُ ٣٤

And his Lord answered his prayer and protected him from their treachery – He is the All Hearing, the All Knowing [34] (The Quran, Yusuf: 34)

Clearly, Allah Glorified is He Who created, nurtured and safeguarded Yusuf peace be upon him has once again bestowed His Bounties upon him by freeing him peace be upon him from the threat of their guile. This threat came in the form of both asking him to give in to the wife's demand as well as their subtle demands and insinuations. As a matter of fact, their enticement is clear in the Saying of Allah the Almighty: 'The king asked the women, "What happened when you tried to seduce Joseph?" They said, "Allah forbid! We know nothing bad of him!"' (Yusuf: 51) This way, Allah the Almighty saved Yusuf peace be upon him from the evil scheming of the women, for He Glorified is He is All-Hearing and All Knowing; nothing is hidden from Allah the Almighty. Moreover, He Glorified is He surely answers the pleas of the truthful.

Allah the Almighty then says

ثُمَّ بَدَا لَهُم مِّنۢ بَعۡدِ مَا رَأَوُاْ ٱلۡأٓيَٰتِ لَيَسۡجُنُنَّهُۥ حَتَّىٰ حِينٖ ٣٥

In the end they thought it best, after seeing all the signs (1) of his innocence, that they should imprison him for a while [35] (The Quran, Yusuf: 35)

Thus, the signs proving Yusuf's innocence became clear to the governor and his royal advisors. Moreover, the wife's aberration and her audacious and foolhardy insistence that Yusuf peace be upon him commit the sordid act with her also became clear. That is why the governor and his advisors deemed it necessary to put Yusuf peace be upon him in prison and thus separate the latter from his wife. In this way, the scandal will be forgotten and people will be convinced that Yusuf peace be upon him was responsible for the indecent act at the palace.

(1) In his Tafsir of the Quran, Al-Qurtubi quoted Ibn 'Abbas as saying: 'The shirt is one of the signs; the testimony of the witness is one of the signs; the women's cutting their hands is one of the signs; and the women's exaltation of Yusuf peace be upon him is also one of the signs'. See Al-Qurtubi, Jame' Al-Bayan, 4/3508.

However, the Arabic word 'layasjununnahu', that is: '…that they should imprison him...' (Yusuf: 35) reveals a certain affection that the governor had for Yusuf peace be upon him. After all, the governor did not order him to be executed or exiled to a distant land. Rather, he just kept him away from his wife who adamantly wanted to betray him and from the people who were constantly talking about these shameful events.

Prison, as we know, is a place that confines one's movements in this world. A judge may deem it necessary for a person to be put in confinement as a punishment to disgrace the guilty, or to protect society from his wickedness. Furthermore, we know that a man only breaks a law when he thinks or is certain that he has the power to do so with impunity. Afterwards, a judge or a ruler announces the end of this transgressor's power and might, and orders him to be imprisoned. In prison, a jailer ensures the transgressor's confinement and the latter might even be beaten or disgraced.

This is prison according to both ancient and modern times. It is a place where the detainee is detached from society. Perhaps some members of society might feel compassion for the detainee. Maybe some of his relatives will even visit him and bring food or other needed provisions.

In the same connection, there is also what might be called a 'religious prison' which was established by Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him when he alienated three people from the believing society. In fact, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him prevented anyone from speaking to these three individuals(1) who had failed to appear for battle under insubstantial pretexts. This isolation was intensified to the point where their own kin did not speak to them, until Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him ordered this seclusion to be lifted after its objectives had been accomplished.

(1) These three are: Ka'b Ibn Malik, Marara ibn Ar-Rabi' Al-'Amri and Hilal ibn Umayya Al-Waqifi. In his Sahih, Muslim related the Hadith of Ka'b who narrated their entire story of failing to go to battle with Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in Tabuk. See Imam Muslim, Sahih, Hadith no. 2769.

To continue, we ask: what happened to Yusuf peace be upon him in prison?

Allah the Almighty subsequently says:

وَدَخَلَ مَعَهُ ٱلسِّجۡنَ فَتَيَانِۖ قَالَ أَحَدُهُمَآ إِنِّيٓ أَرَىٰنِيٓ أَعۡصِرُ خَمۡرٗاۖ وَقَالَ ٱلۡأٓخَرُ إِنِّيٓ أَرَىٰنِيٓ
أَحۡمِلُ فَوۡقَ رَأۡسِي خُبۡزٗا تَأۡكُلُ ٱلطَّيۡرُ مِنۡهُۖ نَبِّئۡنَا بِتَأۡوِيلِهِۦٓۖ إِنَّا نَرَىٰكَ مِنَ ٱلۡمُحۡسِنِينَ ٣٦

Two young men(1) went into prison alongside him. One of them said, 'I dreamed that I was pressing grapes'; the other said, 'I dreamed that I was carrying bread on my head and that the birds were eating it.' [They said], 'Tell us what this means – we can see that you are a knowledgeable man' [36]
(The Quran, Yusuf: 36)

Two individuals accompanied Yusuf peace be upon him when he entered the prison, allegedly the baker and the cupbearer. It has also been alleged that the reason for their imprisonment was the governor's desire to distract the people from the great scandal which had broken out in the palace; namely, his wife's enticement of Yusuf peace be upon him and the latter's refusal to succumb to her. The governor wanted to distract the people by spreading the news that the cupbearer and the baker had plotted against the governor and were caught while trying to poison him. (2)

---

(1) In his exegesis of the Quran, Al-Qurtubi said, 'Al-Mawaridi opined that Allah the Almighty says 'Fatayan' (two young men) because they were slaves and the slave is referred to a 'fata', be he young or old. Al-Qushayri said that perhaps it was customary to call a slave 'fata', as in Allah's saying: "The governor's wife is trying to seduce her slave (fataha)!" (Yusuf: 30)'. See Al-Qurtubi, Jame' Al-Bayan, 4/3511.

(2) On this subject, it has been said that the king was upset with his baker and the wine maker. These two had lived under the rule of the king for such a long time that they longed to see him replaced by someone else. However, while the baker agreed to poison the king, the wine maker changed his mind and told the king of the conspiracy. The king, in turn, ordered both plotters to be incarcerated, and the two joined Yusuf peace be upon him in prison. Abridged from Al-Qurtubi's Jame' Al-Bayan, 4/3511.

After spending some time with Yusuf peace be upon him in prison, and after living with him on a daily basis, the two became fully aware that Yusuf peace be upon him was a righteous man. It happened that each one of them saw a dream, and they asked him to interpret their dreams. As a matter of fact, a prisoner is often inclined to be anxious since he has no guarantees for the future. This is perhaps why they entreated Yusuf peace be upon him to interpret their dreams, saying: ‘One of them said, “I dreamt that I was pressing grapes”. The other said, “I dreamt that I was carrying bread on my head and that the birds were eating it.” [They said], “Tell us what this means–we can see that you are one of those who do good”’. (Yusuf: 36)

From this verse, we have two persons who had seen dreams; the first saw himself pressing wine, while the second saw himself carrying bread on his head from which birds were eating. As such, both of the prisoners addressed Yusuf peace be upon him perhaps each one separately asking him for an interpretation of this dream.

Moreover, the reason why they sought Yusuf’s advice specifically is clear in their saying: ‘We can see that you are one of those that do good (Al-Muhsineen)’ (Yusuf: 36). This verse ascertains that ihsan (goodness) is something known to all people even malicious souls. Clearly, no one can deem another person to be a Muhsin (‘righteous’, plural ‘Muhsineen’) except if his actions are in accordance with the criterion of ihsan (goodness) conceived in the evaluator’s mind.

As a matter of fact, each soul knows what is evil as well as what is good. However, people tend to judge good and evil according to their own needs and benefit. But, had they considered these two qualities from a holistic point of view, where all creatures of the world are considered, and had they deemed a matter that concerns someone else to the same level as something that concerns them directly, they will have realised that what is considered good is the same for all people.

Let us offer an example to illustrate this matter; we may come across a thief who is not disturbed when he steals from someone, but who is greatly bothered when someone steals from him. Thus, we see that he is able to recognise goodness in his heart when he himself is targeted by evil.

Ironically, he acknowledges the true value of goodness only when he is hurt. However, when he is stealing–thus channelling evil from himself towards other people–he is somehow oblivious to the meaning of goodness. In short, if you want to know the value of ihsan (goodness) concerning virtues and righteous behaviour, you must understand it when it results in both negative and positive consequences for you.

In the same connection, I always give the following example: if you consider it normal to violate the religious limits by looking at women who are forbidden to you, you should consider normal the case when all eyes are turned to your female relatives. To recap, if you want to evaluate your actions in a sensible manner, you must consider the impact other peoples' deeds have on you, without neglecting the impact that your acts have on others. Also, examine the inner inclination of your soul; therein you will find an accurate and reasonable judgment of matters. I often stress that when Allah Glorified is He has forbidden you from stealing, He has not constricted your freedom. On the contrary, Allah the Almighty has constricted the freedom of millions of others, lest they steal from you–a matter which is in your interest. Hence, he who is aware of the value of ihsan considers the repercussions of both other peoples' actions on him and his own actions on others. By doing this, this person takes everything into consideration. In short, just as a person hates to be harmed by others, he should also hate to harm others.

Back to the verse under discussion; the two prisoners were innately aware that Yusuf peace be upon him was among those who do good deeds in this world. Furthermore, Yusuf peace be upon him recognised that the two prisoners also understood the value of goodness, and that is why he agreed to answer their questions. Moreover, he seized this chance to extract what he sought from the former while granting them what they had asked for. As we said, Yusuf peace be upon him recognised gleams of goodness in these two men, for they trusted virtuous people. Moreover, there was no reason that prevented him peace be upon him from benefitting from this situation to attain what he wanted from them before he gave them what they wanted.

It is as if Yusuf peace be upon him was telling the prisoners, 'What do you see in my virtuous behaviour? Have you not seen how benevolently I have treated you? Perhaps one of you has recognised my righteous way of speaking! Perhaps neither of you knew that I possess–thanks to Allah's Grace–even greater qualities!' This is what Allah the Almighty refers to in the following verse in which He says:

قَالَ لَا يَأۡتِيكُمَا طَعَامٞ تُرۡزَقَانِهِۦٓ إِلَّا نَبَّأۡتُكُمَا بِتَأۡوِيلِهِۦ قَبۡلَ أَن يَأۡتِيَكُمَاۚ ذَٰلِكُمَا مِمَّا
عَلَّمَنِي رَبِّيٓۚ إِنِّي تَرَكۡتُ مِلَّةَ قَوۡمٖ لَّا يُؤۡمِنُونَ بِٱللَّهِ وَهُم بِٱلۡأٓخِرَةِ هُمۡ كَٰفِرُونَ ٣٧

He said, 'I can tell you what this means before any meal arrives: this is part of what my Lord has taught me. I reject the faith of those who disbelieve in God and deny the life to come [37] (The Quran, Yusuf: 37)

In this verse, Yusuf peace be upon him makes it clear that the two prisoners are only cognisant of his external demeanour, and that there are still other hidden realities which they are unaware of. Moreover, it is as if Yusuf peace be upon him were inculcating in them an awareness of his great spiritual position, the excellence of his character and also his ability to inform them of their upcoming meal before it even arrives.(1)

This gift of foretelling future events is not an intrinsic attribute of Yusuf peace be upon him; rather, it emanates from the knowledge he received from Allah the Almighty. In other words, unveiling certain secrets before their eyes is something that Allah Glorified is He grants to His righteous slaves. In fact, these two prisoners could be like Yusuf peace be upon him if they had only perfected their belief in Allah the Almighty. Hence He Glorified is He relates Yusuf as saying: '…this is some of what my Lord has taught me. I reject the faith of those who disbelieve in Allah and deny the life to come' (Yusuf: 37).

(1) In his exegesis of The Quran, Al-Qurtubi said, 'The statement "…before any meal arrives…" (Yusuf: 37) means that before any food comes to you from your homes, "I can tell you the interpretation…" (Yusuf: 37). In other words, this prediction of your upcoming meal will give you certainty that my interpretation of your dreams is correct. The latter are some of the knowledge of the unseen that Yusuf peace be upon him was given. Moreover, he peace be upon him explicitly said that this knowledge is Allah's Gift, since he abandoned the religion of a people who do not believe in Allah. Note that the religion that Yusuf peace be upon him is referring to is the king's religion'. See Al-Qurtubi, Jame' Al-Bayan, 4/3512.

Through this response, Yusuf peace be upon him was guiding the prisoners to the path of the virtuous who are given some Divine Gifts by virtue of which they can see things that others cannot.

Hence, when a believer sees in a man a glimmer of goodness, let him cultivate this goodness so the man will do more good deeds. By doing so, the believer will not keep this goodness he sees in another limited, but he will make it grow to achieve more good. Moreover, by recognising–potential and actual–virtues in others, the believer encourages these people to improve until they then become guides for others who will then seek Allah's Pleasure in order to, like them, receive His Great Blessings.

That is why Yusuf peace be upon him made it clear to the prisoners that he had rejected the religion of a people whose beliefs are not befitting Allah the Almighty. Moreover, these people believed neither in the Resurrection nor in the Final Judgment which bring about the rewards of Paradise or the torments of the Fire.

Allah the Almighty continues relating what Yusuf said to the prisoners:

وَٱتَّبَعۡتُ مِلَّةَ ءَابَآءِيٓ إِبۡرَٰهِيمَ وَإِسۡحَٰقَ وَيَعۡقُوبَۚ مَا كَانَ لَنَآ أَن نُّشۡرِكَ بِٱللَّهِ مِن
شَيۡءٖۚ ذَٰلِكَ مِن فَضۡلِ ٱللَّهِ عَلَيۡنَا وَعَلَى ٱلنَّاسِ وَلَٰكِنَّ أَكۡثَرَ ٱلنَّاسِ لَا يَشۡكُرُونَ ٣٨

And I follow the faith of my forefathers[1] Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. Because of God's grace to us and to all mankind, we would never worship anything beside God, but most people are ungrateful [38] (The Quran, Yusuf: 38)

In this way, Yusuf peace be upon him made it clear that he rejected the religion of the people who worship others beside Allah and those who denied that there was a Hereafter, stressing that he chose to follow the faith of his forefathers Ibrahim, Ishaq and then Ya'qub peace be upon them all. These three

(1) Abu Hurayra narrated that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'The honorable, the son of the honorable, the son of the honorable (was) Yusuf (Joseph), the son of Ya'qub (Jacob), the son of Ishaq (Isaac), the son of Ibrahim (Abraham)'. See Imam At-Tirmidh, Sunnan, Hadith no. 3116; Imam Ahmad, Musnad, 2/332, 416; and Al-Hakim, Al-Mustadrak, 2/346.

figures were sent by Allah the Almighty to guide people to believe in His Oneness, and also to believe in the Hereafter which entails being rewarded with Paradise or punished by the Fire.

It is out of the Benevolence of Allah the Almighty that He revealed this Divine Way of Guidance. Moreover, thanks to His the Almighty Grace, He assigned the great honour of prophecy to Yusuf's forefathers; and he who knows all this has no right to worship anything besides Allah Glorified is He for polytheism denotes taking recourse in other false gods.

In the same connection, Allah the Almighty says: 'Never did Allah take to Himself a son, and never was there with him any (other) god-in that case each god will have certainly taken away what he created, and some of them will certainly have overpowered others; glory be to Allah above what they describe!' (al-Mu'minun: 91) We can deduce from this verse that were there any other gods aside from Allah, each will have created something which the other gods were incapable of doing. Moreover, there will be a conflict among these differing gods in the end.

Yusuf peace be upon him explains that out of His Mercy, Allah the Almighty has bestowed His Divine Way of Guidance on the Prophets–among whom are Yusuf's forefathers Ibrahim, Ishaq, and Ya'qub peace be upon them–to deliver this Way to Allah's creation. The Prophets, on their part, did not restrict this Merciful Guidance emanating from Allah the Almighty to them; instead, they faithfully delivered it to their respective peoples.

Allah Glorified is He then concludes the verse by saying: 'But most people are ungrateful' (Yusuf: 38). When you come across phrases such as '…are ungrateful' (Yusuf: 38), you should take into consideration that the object one is ungrateful about is something one should justly and rightly, according to a man's innate nature and sound mind, be grateful for. As a matter of fact, gratefulness is only expressed in return for a blessing.

Were people to contemplate on the matter of sending Prophets to guide them, they will be grateful to the Prophets and Messengers for Allah's Way of Guidance that they communicated to them. Indeed, the Divine Way of Guidance teaches man how to successfully manage his worldly affairs, and, moreover, it guides him to paradise.

Allah the Almighty continues to state Yusuf's discourse with the prisoners, saying:

يَٰصَٰحِبَيِ ٱلسِّجۡنِ ءَأَرۡبَابٞ مُّتَفَرِّقُونَ خَيۡرٌ أَمِ ٱللَّهُ ٱلۡوَٰحِدُ ٱلۡقَهَّارُ ٣٩

Fellow prisoners, would many diverse gods be better than God the One, the All Powerful? [No indeed!] [39]
(The Quran, Yusuf: 39)

As for the Arabic word 'sahib', it denotes a companion or fellow. As we know, Yusuf peace be upon him and the prisoners are linked by a common bond: prison. In this vein, the word 'sahib' denotes something that links two or more things together, as when it is said, 'So-and-so is my fellow pilgrim or student'. Clearly, a thing which binds two or more individuals together is attributed either to a particular place or to a circumstance which binds a particular group in friendship.

In the verse in question, Yusuf peace be upon him posed the following question: 'Are many diverse gods better–or Allah, the One, the All Powerful?' (Yusuf: 39) When Yusuf peace be upon him asked this question, he knew fully well in advance the listener's response. He knew that the prisoner will acknowledge that the diverse gods were not better than only one God. Thus, Yusuf peace be upon him was sure that their answer could only be, 'Worshiping a single God is better'. In fact, Yusuf peace be upon him only posed this question as he was sure that, after considering the matter, they will answer him the way he wanted.

Both prisoners had worshipped various gods. However, were these gods real, it will have been reasonably unnecessary for the prisoners to resort to the only one God. That is, while plurality on the human plane brings about wealth and achieves success in one's work, associating partners with Allah Glorified is He renders a person's worship null and void.

Concerning this there is the Sufi saying, 'Devote your works to Allah Alone, and He will satisfy all your needs'. That is why Yusuf peace be upon him told his follow prisoners: 'Are many diverse gods better…' (Yusuf: 39).

Clearly, if the essence of these gods differed from each other, they will be imperfect and unworthy of worship. Furthermore, if they were multiple yet identical, then their existence will be redundant. Finally, if they had different abilities, then each of them will have both strong and weak points, and this multiplicity will be a sign of the deficiency of the gods.

Consequently, out of His Mercy toward us, the believers, Allah the Almighty commands us to worship Him Alone, as He says: ‘Allah sets forth a parable: a slave belonging to (several) partners [who] are at variance with one another, and a slave belonging entirely to one man. Are the two equal [as regards to their condition]? (All) praise is due to Allah. Nay! Most of them do not know’ (az-Zumar: 29).

Indeed, Yusuf peace be upon him tried to guide the prisoners to worship Allah the Almighty Alone. He also told them what Allah the Almighty says in the following verse:

مَا تَعۡبُدُونَ مِن دُونِهِۦٓ إِلَّآ أَسۡمَآءٗ سَمَّيۡتُمُوهَآ أَنتُمۡ وَءَابَآؤُكُم
مَّآ أَنزَلَ ٱللَّهُ بِهَا مِن سُلۡطَٰنٍۚ إِنِ ٱلۡحُكۡمُ إِلَّا لِلَّهِۚ أَمَرَ أَلَّا تَعۡبُدُوٓاْ إِلَّآ
إِيَّاهُۚ ذَٰلِكَ ٱلدِّينُ ٱلۡقَيِّمُ وَلَٰكِنَّ أَكۡثَرَ ٱلنَّاسِ لَا يَعۡلَمُونَ (٤٠)

All those you worship instead of Him are mere names you and your forefathers have invented, names for which God has sent down no sanction. Authority belongs to God alone, and He orders you to worship none but Him: this is the true faith, though most people do not realize it [40] (The Quran, Yusuf: 40)

We should take into account that up to this point Yusuf peace be upon him has not spoken to the prisoners about their request: namely, the interpretation of their dreams. Had he first interpreted their dreams, he will have lost their attention since each one will be thinking of his personal needs rather than the lasting universal truths that concern each aspect of human life and for which Yusuf peace be upon him was calling.

In this way, Yusuf peace be upon him shows altruistic behaviour towards the prisoners. Rather than simply addressing the secondary matters which they were asking about, he peace be upon him wanted to bring to their attention the essential issue of Faith. In other words, he sought to correct their worldview and turn their gaze to a religion which teaches man how to live every aspect and facet of his life correctly. Needless to say, Yusuf's strategy ensues from altruism rather than selfishness. At this point, Yusuf isquoted saying: 'All those you worship instead of Him are mere names you and your forefathers have invented...' (Yusuf: 40). In other words, the gods that you worship other than Allah are nothing but meaningless names that do not indicate any actual being in reality. These gods are just names that you either have inherited from your forefathers or invented yourselves. Accordingly, you have disbelieved in Allah the Almighty by having concocted these names of unreal deities, just as your forefathers disbelieved by either forgetting the Divine Obligations or turning their backs on them.

As a matter of fact, a name is used to refer to the named object. When we utter a name, we mentally envision the image of the named object. That is why when a baby is born, he is given a name that distinguishes him from his other siblings and therefore when his name is called, it only refers to his entity. Moreover, when the same name is given to many different people, it is necessary to distinguish between the identical appellations; otherwise, it will be difficult to differentiate between the named individuals.

Let us give an example to further clarify this point. When a father from the Egyptian countryside is particularly fond of the name 'Mohammad', he calls all of his children by this name. However, he distinguishes between them by saying 'old Mohammad', 'middle Mohammad', and 'young Mohammad'.

Returning to our verse under discussion, it is unreasonable and unacceptable to give a name to something that is unreal. Yet, the people that Yusuf peace be upon him were addressing had given a name to non-existent gods. In other words, they based their faith on names of illusory entities. On the Day of Judgment, these people will be asked: '"Where now are those you called upon besides Allah?" They will say, "They have abandoned us: those we called upon before were really nothing at all". This is how Allah leaves disbelievers to go astray' (Ghafir: 73-74). That is, on the Day of Judgment the people will admit that they were no gods; they were only empty names. That is why Allah the Almighty says in the verse in question: 'All those you worship instead of Him are mere names you and your forefathers have invented...' (Yusuf: 40).

It is as if Yusuf peace be upon him was asking, ‘If you have a need of something from heaven, why will you ask these names that, in reality, do not stand for any actual being? Do these empty names show you any favour?’ Yusuf peace be upon him knew that a God that deserves to be worshipped cannot be an empty name. Furthermore, Yusuf peace be upon him knew for certain that Allah, the only One worthy of worship, has a Name which He has communicated through His Messengers, and through those to whom He reveals His Divine Way of Guidance which comes in the form of Commands and Prohibitions. These people, on the other hand, had given a name to non-existent gods, while non-existent beings cannot reveal any way of guidance, nor can they satisfy peoples’ dire needs. That is why the Quran narrates Yusuf’s discourse with the prisoners about these names, saying: ‘All those you worship instead of Him are mere names you and your forefathers have invented, names for which Allah has sent down no sanction...’ (Yusuf: 40). We deduce from this verse that Allah Glorified is He has not given any justification for such an act.

In the verse, Yusuf continues saying: ‘Authority belongs to Allah alone, and He orders you to worship none but Him...’ (Yusuf: 40). In other words, Yusuf peace be upon him said to them, ‘If you hear me saying anything, I am simply communicating Allah’s Decree. The words I speak do not ensue from myself or from my desires. It is Allah Himself Who ordered mankind to worship only Him; that is, do not obey any order or keep away from any prohibition except Allah’s Orders and His Prohibitions–commandments which have been laid down in His Divine Way of Guidance’.

Allah the Almighty then concludes this verse by saying: ‘This is the true faith, though most people do not realise it’ (Yusuf: 40). In other words, this faith is the only religion that guides to the Right Path. Most people, however, do not realise this; that is, Messengers have communicated Allah’s Way of Guidance, but most people have not applied these teachings in their lives and actions.

Then, Yusuf peace be upon him began to interpret the dream for them as they had demanded.

Allah the Almighty then mentions what Yusuf said:

يَٰصَٰحِبَيِ ٱلسِّجۡنِ أَمَّآ أَحَدُكُمَا فَيَسۡقِى رَبَّهُۥ خَمۡرٗاۖ وَأَمَّا ٱلۡأٓخَرُ فَيُصۡلَبُ
فَتَأۡكُلُ ٱلطَّيۡرُ مِن رَّأۡسِهِۦۚ قُضِىَ ٱلۡأَمۡرُ ٱلَّذِى فِيهِ تَسۡتَفۡتِيَانِ ﴿٤١﴾

Fellow prisoners, one of you will serve his master with wine; the other will be crucified and the birds will peck at his head. That is the end of the matter on which you asked my opinion [41] (The Quran, Yusuf: 41)

At this point, Yusuf peace be upon him returned to the initial question of the prisoners. He explained that the prisoner who had dreamt of himself pressing grapes will be freed from prison and will return to the palace to pour wine for his master. As for the other prisoner, he will be crucified and birds will peck at his head. The image of a bird pecking at his head is metaphorical and means that his head will be food for birds.

As for the interpretation of dreams, it is a type of knowledge that Allah the Almighty sends into the hearts of those whom He taught the interpretation of dreams. In other words, it is the art of deciphering the coded language of dreams and it is only granted to those whom Allah the Almighty chooses.

Yusuf peace be upon him informed the prisoner who had said: ‘I dreamt that I was pressing grapes…’ (Yusuf: 36) that, according to his dream, he will be granted absolution. As for the other dreamer, the birds will peck at his head; that is, he will be crucified, according to the interpretation of his dream.

We should take into consideration that Yusuf peace be upon him was completely absorbed in assessing the two dreams of the prisoners. This indicates that the mind of the judge must focus intently on giving a verdict, and not on the person to be judged. Consequently, Yusuf peace be upon him while listening to both parties, did not prematurely conclude who will be found innocent and who will be punished. Accordingly, he peace be upon him detached himself emotionally from the prisoners’ cases, thus preventing any feelings from negatively affecting his judgment. This is because sentiments can make a decision maker biased. What is even more alarming is that once feelings become involved in a case, they cannot be tempered or ignored. That is why it is absolutely necessary for a judge to be free from any desires or emotional inclinations when he issues his decree.

Allah the Almighty teaches us this lesson by revealing the story of Prophet Dawud (David) peace be upon him in the Quran: ‘And has the story of the litigants reached you, when they climbed over the wall of the private chamber? When they entered in upon Dawud (David) and he was frightened of them. They said, “Fear not; [we are] two litigants, one of whom has wronged the other. Therefore decide between us with justice, and do not act unjustly, and guide us to the right path. This is my brother; he has ninety-nine ewes and I have a single ewe, but he said, ‘Entrust it to me’, and he overcame me in the argument”. He [Dawud] said, “Surely he has been unjust to you in demanding your ewe (to add) to his own ewes; most surely most partners act wrongfully towards one another, save those who believe and do good, and very few are they”. And [suddenly] Dawud was sure that We had tried him, so he sought the Forgiveness of his Lord, fell down bowing [in prostration] and turned time after time (to Him)’ (Sad: 21-24).

In these aforementioned verses, the speaker who mentioned the number of ewes that his brother owned was not only trying to depict his brother’s transgression but also attempting to earn Dawud’s sympathy and pull him to his side. Thereupon, Dawud peace be upon him decreed that the one who had taken the ewe was the transgressor. However, he, i.e. Prophet Dawud peace be upon him then felt that his judgment was not completely sound because he, in his decree, only considered the fact that the one who had many ewes sought to pull the sole ewe from his brother; that is, Dawud did not consider the case in detail. In Prophet Dawud’s eyes, the fact that he took the other brother’s sole ewe was the only reason for deeming the brother–who had appropriated his brother’s right–to be guilty. For this reason, Prophet Dawud peace be upon him considered this case to be a test that he failed, and that is why he sought Allah’s Forgiveness by bowing down and repenting.

Back to the verse in question; Yusuf peace be upon him by contrast, had passed a wise judgment when he interpreted the dreams because he detached himself completely from the case. Yusuf peace be upon him concluded his interpretation of the dreams by stating: ‘The matter on which you asked my opinion has been decided [by Allah]’ (Yusuf: 40). Yusuf’s statement implies that there is no space for reassessing or reconsidering whether or not his interpretation will take place because his interpretation of the dream was in accordance with divinely revealed teachings.

There are many narratives which allude to the hardships which Yusuf peace be upon him had to bear, even before being cast into the well and before being imprisoned. For instance, there are accounts of his aunt–the daughter of Ishaq (Isaac) and the eldest of his children–who raised Yusuf peace be upon him after his mother's death; the aunt grew more and more attached to him so that she loved him more than anyone she had ever loved.

With time, however, Ya'qub's longing for Yusuf peace be upon him became unbearable and he went to the aunt to take Yusuf peace be upon him back. However, the woman responded, 'By Allah, I cannot bear to be away from him for an hour and I will not abandon him'.

Therefore, when Ya'qub peace be upon him left her house, she fetched an heirloom(1) that she had inherited from Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him and which was inherited only by the eldest of his family. The aunt then strapped the heirloom under Yusuf's clothes.

During that time, it was common law that if someone was caught guilty of stealing something, he was no longer free but instead became the slave of the owner of the object. Consequently, when Ya'qub peace be upon him and his son Yusuf were returning home, the aunt announced that she had lost the heirloom that her father Ishaq peace be upon him had given her. She inspected Yusuf peace be upon him and found her lost heirloom. The aunt said, 'By Allah, he is my slave!' As we have already mentioned, it was common law that whoever steals something becomes the slave of the owner of the stolen object. In this way, Yusuf peace be upon him stayed with his aunt and was separated from his father for some time, and his father was unable to reclaim him peace be upon him until the aunt died.

After that, Yusuf was tested by being cast into the well. This was followed by the attempts of the governor's wife to seduce him and, despite the governor being certain of Yusuf's innocence, him being thrown into prison. Yusuf peace be upon him was known in prison for his benevolence, trustworthiness, veracity of speech, rightfulness in both worldly and spiritual actions, intense piety, his ability of interpreting dreams and his kindness towards the prisoners.

(1) In his Tafsir of the Quran, Ibn Kathir said that the heirloom was Ishaq's belt. See Ibn Kathir, Tafsir Al-Quran Al-'Azhim 2/486. Al-Mantiqa (belt) is anything that straps around the waist. The verb 'intataqa' means 'to strap a belt around the waist'. See Ibn Mandhur, Lisan Al-'Arab, the root 'nataqa'.

When these two young men were put in prison with Yusuf peace be upon him they grew close to him and began to love him very much. They said, ‘By Allah, we love you very much’. As such, he responded, ‘May Allah bless both of you. But, verily, all those who have loved me have harmed me in one way or another. My paternal aunt loved me and I was hurt because of her love; my father loved me and I was harmed because of his love; and the governor’s wife loved me and I was harmed by her love as well’.

That is to say that Yusuf peace be upon him was harmed by the governor’s wife’s love for him since he was imprisoned with the two young men for no valid reason. The prisoners replied, ‘Our love for you is beyond our control’.(1)

Afterwards, Yusuf peace be upon him is quoted saying to the prisoner who he thought will be released from prison:

وَقَالَ لِلَّذِى ظَنَّ أَنَّهُۥ نَاجٍ مِّنْهُمَا ٱذْكُرْنِى عِندَ رَبِّكَ فَأَنسَىٰهُ
ٱلشَّيْطَـٰنُ ذِكْرَ رَبِّهِۦ فَلَبِثَ فِى ٱلسِّجْنِ بِضْعَ سِنِينَ ﴿٤٢﴾

Joseph said to the one he knew would be saved, ‘Mention me to your master,’ but Satan made him forget to do this, and so Joseph remained in prison for a number of years [42]
(The Quran, Yusuf: 42)

In this verse, Yusuf peace be upon him addressed the prisoner who saw himself pressing grapes in a dream. This man was the person to whom Yusuf

---

(1) In his exegesis of the Quran, Al-Qurtubi said that the prison supervisor loved Yusuf peace be upon him and this is why he made his cell more spacious. The admirer exclaimed, ‘Yusuf, I love you more than anyone I have ever loved’ whereupon Yusuf peace be upon him retorted, ‘I seek refuge in Allah from your love!’ When the former asked why, Yusuf explained, ‘My father loved me, and because of this my brothers did with me what they did. Moreover, my master’s wife loved me, and you see what has happened to me as a result’. See Al-Qurtubi, Jame‘ Al-Bayan, 4/3511.

peace be upon him interpreted the dream predicting that he will be released and will thus resume his job as cupbearer for his master.

As for Allah's saying: 'Yusuf said to the one he thought will be saved...' (Yusuf: 42), it implies that this man's release from prison was not yet certain. At this point, Yusuf peace be upon him asked the prisoner: '…Make mention of me to your master…' (Yusuf: 42).

As for the Arabic word 'dhikr' (make mention), it means to recall something, and it is specifically used with recalling something in the future. Al-Dhikr is to recall a matter that you know, stored in the memory, forgot for a while, and then recalled it once again. That is, we understand that man has the ability of storing and recalling certain pieces of information. Such pieces of information do not dwell in man's immediate consciousness at all times because the mind is only capable of focusing on one thing at a time. For this reason, when another topic or idea comes up, the mind pushes aside the first object to the sub-consciousness for the new topic to settle in one's consciousness.

I often give an example of this process referring to the image of ever-expanding and growing concentric circles that result when you throw a rock into still water. Man's consciousness when processing new data can be compared, analogically speaking, to these ripples. To further clarify this point, we say that the new centre of attention has the effect of distancing other mental thoughts from the centre to the sub-consciousness. Eventually, however, one comes across something that is reminiscent of a fact at the fringe of one's consciousness and, consequently, recalls it in details. As a matter of fact, the human memory has two primary functions: it both stores and recalls information.

Back to the verse in question; Yusuf peace be upon him addressed the man he thought will be freed, saying: '…Make mention of me to your master…' (Yusuf: 42). In other words, tell your master what a good and righteous person I am. In the same vein, some Quranic exegetes said that when Yusuf peace be upon him uttered these words, the Lord the Most High willed for him to remain in prison for a few more years. The reason is that as a Messenger, he should not have deputed another person to tell others of his virtues, even if this man has the power to free Yusuf peace be upon him from prison.

As a Messenger of Allah, Yusuf peace be upon him receives knowledge through revelation, as he told the two prisoners: ‘I can tell you what this means before any meal arrives: this is some of what my Lord has taught me...’ (Yusuf: 37). Yusuf received his inspiration directly from Allah the Almighty and as a result he should have kept relying only on this Divine Source of inspiration. Allah Glorified is He continues: ‘But Satan made him forget to do this, and so Yusuf remained in prison for a number of years’ (Yusuf: 42).

The freed man’s forgetfulness is a form of a punitive action for Yusuf peace be upon him; it may also be viewed as a way of educating him. Interestingly, we find that Satan–who caused the freed man to forget Yusuf’s request–himself plays a role in fulfilling Allah’s Will regarding His creation.

This explains why Yusuf peace be upon him remained in prison for several years. The Arabic word ‘bida‘’ (some) ranges from three to ten years. However, some scholars exactly pinpointed the numbers of years that he remained in prison, namely seven years.

The Lord Glorified is He then says:

وَقَالَ ٱلْمَلِكُ إِنِّىٓ أَرَىٰ سَبْعَ بَقَرَٰتٍ سِمَانٍ يَأْكُلُهُنَّ سَبْعٌ عِجَافٌ وَسَبْعَ سُنۢبُلَٰتٍ
خُضْرٍ وَأُخَرَ يَابِسَٰتٍ ۖ يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلْمَلَأُ أَفْتُونِى فِى رُءْيَٰىَ إِن كُنتُمْ لِلرُّءْيَا تَعْبُرُونَ ﴿٤٣﴾

The king said, ‘I dreamed about seven fat cows being eaten by seven lean ones; seven green ears of corn and [seven] others withered. Counsellors, if you can interpret dreams, tell me the meaning of my dream’ [43] (The Quran, Yusuf: 43)

The story of Yusuf peace be upon him took place in Egypt. This is deduced from Allah’s saying: ‘The Egyptian who bought him said to his wife, “Look after him well!”’ (Yusuf: 43)

At this point, we should take into account that the Quran states that in Egypt–at that time–there was a king and there was also a governor. But we know that the ancient rulers of Egypt were called pharaohs. However, after the Rosetta Stone was discovered and the hieroglyphic language was deciphered, we found out that the rule of the pharaohs disappeared for a while. This temporary disappearance of the pharaohs happened when the kings of the herdsmen–called Al-Huksus–conquered Egypt. During this period, Yusuf peace be upon him and his brothers worked for these kings. When the pharaohs once again re-took power in Egypt, they expelled Al-Huksus and killed those who had supported their rule.

Clearly, the Quran mentioning the existence of a king in Egypt during the time of Yusuf peace be upon him is an example of one of the miracles of the Quran.

When we read Allah's saying: 'The king said, "I dreamt about seven fat cows being eaten by seven lean ones..."' (Yusuf: 43), we learn that the king had a dream in his sleep which he asked to be interpreted. In this verse, the Arabic word 'seman' (fat) means that the cows which the king dreamt about were plump and healthy. As for the Arabic word 'i'jaf' (lean), it indicates that the cows were scrawny and weak, as the laymen say, 'skin and bones'. Here arises a question, which is, 'How could the lean cows eat the fat ones? Is not the opposite more conceivable?'

The king also added: '…seven green ears [of grain] and [seven] others withered....' (Yusuf: 43) However, the king did not specify any action related to the ears of grain. The king then consulted the leading figures of his people who often frequent his royal gatherings, saying: 'Counsellors, if you can interpret (ta'burun) dreams, tell me the interpretation of my dream' (Yusuf: 43).

The Arabic word 'ta'burun' (you can interpret), literally means to cross. Arabs used to say, ''Abartu an-nahr', that is, 'I crossed a river from one shore to the other'. Here, the king was asking them about the meaning embedded or hidden in his dream.

In addition, the Arabic words 'i'brah' (beneficial experience) and 'al-i'barah' which means to express an idea that is buried within the mind, are both derived from the Arabic word 'a'bar' (to cross). Furthermore, the word 'al-a'barah' is also derived from the verb 'a'bar' and denotes a tear that one sheds to express a certain emotion, be it happiness or sadness. We should note that all these words revolve around the idea of identifying unknown matter through something already known.

Because of this, we understand that interpreter of dreams crosses from imagination to reality by deciphering the meaning of the images in dreams.

However, members of the king’s entourage were incapable of explaining the meaning behind the dream he had seen.

In the following verse, Allah the Almighty mentions their response to the king, saying:

قَالُوٓاْ أَضۡغَٰثُ أَحۡلَٰمٖۖ وَمَا نَحۡنُ بِتَأۡوِيلِ ٱلۡأَحۡلَٰمِ بِعَٰلِمِينَ ﴿٤٤﴾

They said, ‘These are confusing dreams and we are not skilled at dream-interpretation’ [44] (The Quran, Yusuf: 44)

Thus, they proclaimed that the king’s dream was confusing and devoid of any meaning. As for the Arabic word ‘adghath’ (confusing), it is related to the word ‘addaghath’ which refers to a bouquet assortment of different plants. This description indicates that the kings’ retinue were unqualified to explain the hidden meaning behind dreams, and that they could not interpret the king’s dream.

At this point, we should take into consideration that it is a sound attitude for the king’s retinue not to say something they were ignorant of. In fact, it is not shameful that anyone admits his ignorance of something he does not know. By admitting one’s ignorance to a questioner, the former encourages the latter to inquire about his question somewhere else. However, if the person who is asked provides any sort of answer, perhaps the questioner’s curiosity will be satisfied and he will not search for the correct answer.

In order to encourage the scholars to give correct fatwas (religious rulings), scholars have stated that if one says, ‘I do not know’ (regarding a religious ruling), then this itself is a fatwa because by acknowledging his ignorance, the scholar thereby pushes the questioner to search and ask others.

The Lord the Almighty then says:

وَقَالَ ٱلَّذِى نَجَا مِنۡهُمَا وَٱدَّكَرَ بَعۡدَ أُمَّةٍ أَنَا۠ أُنَبِّئُكُم بِتَأۡوِيلِهِۦ فَأَرۡسِلُونِ ﴿٤٥﴾

but the prisoner who had been freed at last remembered [Joseph] and said, ‘I shall tell you what this means. Give me leave to go’ [45] (The Quran, Yusuf: 45)

The released prisoner was listening to the king’s request and the retinues’ response which made him recall what had happened to him in prison, that is, the dream he had seen and how Yusuf peace be upon him had interpreted it. As for Allah's saying: 'But the prisoner who had been freed and remembered after a period of time...' (Yusuf: 45), it indicates that he made a concerted mental effort to recall the incident of Yusuf's interpretation of his dream, as a considerable amount of time had passed since he had last seen him.

As for the word 'ummah', it signifies a period of time, a point which is clear in Allah's saying: 'If We defer their punishment for a determined time (ummah), they are sure to say, "What is holding it back?" But on the Day it comes upon them, nothing will divert it from them; what they mocked will be all around them' (Hud: 8).

In the same connection, the word 'ummah' can also denote a group of people, or even a man, who embodies all virtuous qualities. The latter meaning of this word is used to describe Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him in Allah's saying: 'Ibrahim (Abraham) was truly an example (ummah): devoutly obedient to Allah and true in faith. He was not an idolater' (an-Nahl: 120). This verse means that every sort of virtue was found in Ibrahim peace be upon him and upon our Prophet Muhammad.

Back to the verse under discussion; after struggling to recall his memories of prison and of the time he had a dream which Yusuf peace be upon him interpreted, the cupbearer said the following to the retinue and the king about the latter's dream: 'I shall tell you what this means. Send me (to Yusuf)' (Yusuf: 45). In this way, the cupbearer excused himself and sought out the person who could interpret the king's dream.

When the cupbearer said: 'Send me (to Yusuf)' (Yusuf: 45), he was indicating that he himself could not interpret dreams, but he knew a person who was capable of doing this.

We should notice that the Quran does not explicitly state the man whom the cupbearer will seek to interpret the dream, as the person referred to is known not only by the cupbearer but also by us–readers who are reading the chapter of Yusuf.

The Quran then moves from relating that the cupbearer sought permission to meet Yusuf peace be upon him to relate their meeting together. The Quran relates the cupbearer's conversation with Yusuf peace be upon him in the following verse:

يُوسُفُ أَيُّهَا ٱلصِّدِّيقُ أَفْتِنَا فِي سَبْعِ بَقَرَٰتٍ سِمَانٍ يَأْكُلُهُنَّ سَبْعٌ عِجَافٌ
وَسَبْعِ سُنۢبُلَٰتٍ خُضْرٍ وَأُخَرَ يَابِسَٰتٍ لَّعَلِّيٓ أَرْجِعُ إِلَى ٱلنَّاسِ لَعَلَّهُمْ يَعْلَمُونَ ﴿٤٦﴾

'Truthful Joseph! Tell us the meaning of seven fat cows being eaten by seven lean ones, seven green ears of corn and [seven] others withered [46] (The Quran, Yusuf: 46)

Describing Yusuf peace be upon him as 'as-siddiq' (man of truth) implies that the cupbearer tested him in many situations and verified his truthfulness. His truthfulness does not only include his speech, all his actions and how he acts in every situation, but the meaning of truthfulness is broader than that in the case of Yusuf peace be upon him; it signifies that truthfulness always accompanies his words and actions, i.e. it is something inborn in him. Yusuf's veracity of speech was plainly evident, since what he uttered was subsequently corroborated by other incidents. As for his veracity of actions, it was substantiated when his deeds were in conformity with his words. Such a person merits the description of 'siddiq' (man of truth).

In this vein, we know that man's deeds in life are divided into two categories: words and actions. Words are expressed by the tongue, while actions are conveyed by all of the parts of the body.

Thus, there are two fundamental types of deeds: those that are performed physically, and those that are expressed verbally. Both, however, can be categorised as 'human actions'. Thus, speaking is an action, seeing is an action, hearing is an action and similarly touching with one's hands is an action. However, speaking is an action that is specifically carried out by the tongue, while the other actions are performed by other parts of the human body. It is through speech that the speaker communicates with the listener.

From this, it is clear that human deeds are divided into two categories: verbal and bodily.

Concerning the word 'as-siddiq', it refers to someone who speaks the truth, and what he utters corresponds to reality. In addition, he is sincere in his actions, that is, he never says something upon which he does not act. That is why The Lord Glorified is He says: 'It is most hateful in the sight of Allah that you say that which you do not do' (as-Saff: 3).

Back to the verse in question; we know that the king's cupbearer had experienced two unique incidents with Yusuf peace be upon him. The first experience is when the cupbearer and the baker accompanied him in prison. At this stage, they told him: 'We can see that you are one of those who do the good' (Yusuf: 36). This statement was their justification for seeking Yusuf's interpretation of their two dreams which were as follows: 'One of them said, "I dreamt that I was pressing grapes." The other said, "I dreamt that I was carrying bread on my head and that the birds were eating it." [They said], "Tell us what this means–we can see that you one of those who do the good' (Yusuf: 36). As for the second experience that the cupbearer had with Yusuf peace be upon him it is when the soundness of the latter's dream interpretations were confirmed by the subsequent events. That is why the cupbearer tells Yusuf peace be upon him in the verse in question: 'O Yusuf, O man of truth! Tell us the meaning of seven fat cows being eaten by seven lean ones, and seven green ears [of grain] and [seven] others withered. That I may return to the people and that they may know' (Yusuf: 46). In other words, tell us about the meaning of a dream in which seven fat cows were being eaten by seven lean ones, and in which seven green ears of grain appeared next to seven others that had dried up. If you tell me the interpretation of this dream, I can go back and inform the people of the court that they may know its significance.

When the cupbearer said: '…Tell us the meaning of....' (Yusuf: 46), he was making it clear that the dream he was enquiring about was not his dream; rather, it was the dream of someone he did not identify. However, the reader knows that it was the king's dream.

Moreover, when the cupbearer says: 'That I may return to the people and that they may know' (Yusuf: 46), he is being cautious and circumspect because he is referring to an unknown future event (him returning to the people) whose fulfilment depends on what Allah has destined for him. The inquirer is using a cautious tone so as not to appear a liar since he knows that he does not have the power to return to his people unless Allah the Almighty decrees this.

That's why Allah the Almighty teaches us this lesson in the following verse: 'Do not say of anything, "I will do that tomorrow", without adding, "Allah willing", and whenever you forget, remember your Lord and say, "May my Lord guide me closer to the right course"' (al-Kahf: 23-24).

By definition, the moment you say 'in shaa' Allah' (if Allah wills), you will avoid lying. As long as you invoke Allah the Almighty in your speech, He will guide you to the correct choice, no matter in what circumstance you may find yourself. By saying 'in shaa' Allah', Allah the Almighty teaches His slaves to protect themselves from sinning by being truthful in their speech and actions. For, no matter how much you plan for something, you are planning using a mind conferred by Allah Glorified is He. Moreover, when you carry out even the smallest of actions, it invariably involves different and numerous factors that you have no power over. That is why you must attribute all matters to the One Who owns all things. At this point, the cupbearer said: 'That I may return to the people' (Yusuf: 46). With this statement, Allah the Almighty teaches us not to be overly confident regarding future events.

Moreover, He Glorified is He mention the man's wish: '…and they may know' (Yusuf: 46). It is as if the cupbearer knew that he had no way of predicting the people's reaction regarding Yusuf's interpretation of the dream when he returned to them; will they be receptive to the interpretation of the dream, or will they dispute regarding it? Will they accept Yusuf's explanation as being true and thus recognise his supreme spiritual rank, and consequently free him from the torments of prison?

Allah's saying: 'That I may return to the people and that they may know' (Yusuf: 46) may make someone ask the question, 'Who ordered the cupbearer to go to Yusuf peace be upon him? Was it the king himself, or was it his retinue?'

We contend that the answer lies in the cupbearer's all-embracing statement which included both the king and his court.

Allah says:

قَالَ تَزۡرَعُونَ سَبۡعَ سِنِينَ دَأَبٗا فَمَا حَصَدتُّمۡ فَذَرُوهُ فِي سُنۢبُلِهِۦٓ إِلَّا قَلِيلٗا مِّمَّا تَأۡكُلُونَ ﴿٤٧﴾

Then I can return to the people to inform them.' Joseph said,
'You will sow for seven consecutive years as usual. Store all that you reap, left in the ear, apart from the little you eat [47]
(The Quran, Yusuf: 47)

Thus begins the interpretation of the king's dream. The Arabic word 'ad-da'ab' (as usual) denotes constancy. It is as if Yusuf was asking the people of Egypt to farm industriously and without indolence.

Afterwards, the Lord continues to relate what Yusuf peace be upon him said: 'Store all that you reap, leaving it in the ear, apart from the little you eat' (Yusuf: 47). In other words, you should eat only a little portion of what you harvested through diligent and hard labour, and store the remainder of the untouched ears of grain.

The fact that Yusuf specifies that the ears should be preserved untouched indicates the miraculous nature of the Quran and of the Omniscience of Allah the Almighty Who revealed this Holy Book. Moreover, this sheds light on the great amount of knowledge Allah the Almighty conferred on Yusuf peace be upon him concerning all aspects of life. This knowledge ranged from economic issues to ways of storing grains, in addition to other fields.

As for the matter of storing grains, modern science has proved that if the ears of grain are stored in their entirety, the grain is protected and safeguarded from grain-eating weevils. Some scholars explained that this verse implies the grain should be stored not only in untouched ears, but also while the stems are attached. I contend, however, that the meaning of this verse is to leave only the ears untouched because the stems are used as animal fodder.

We know that a grain of wheat has two covers, as follows: the protective wrap which is separated from the seed during the process of threshing and the chaff which is then removed through winnowing. In fact, the grain of wheat also has a cover which unwraps and is separated from wheat during grinding. This wrap is called 'ar-radah' and appears in two different forms: a rough wrap, and a smooth wrap.

Some people separate 'ar-radah' from the flour, but they neglect or are ignorant of the scientific studies which have proven that eating bread that is made of white flour from which 'ar-radah' has been removed can cause stomach problems. This covering that wraps around the grain not only protects the grain but also has great nutritional value.

The wealthy class in the Egyptian countryside used to remove ar-radah from the flour, and they called this 'ad-daqeeqah al-'alamah' (pure flour). However, if you were to put this refined flour in your mouth, you will feel that it is unwholesome. On the other hand, you do not have the same feeling when you put whole-wheat flour in your mouth.

In this vein, Allah the Almighty refers to His Bounty on His slaves in His Saying: 'Its husked grain, its fragrant plants' (ar-Rahman: 12).

Modern scientists have discovered the value of grinding wheat while preserving the outer covering. They have found evidence to prove that those who consume bread that is made from refined white flour suffer from nutritional imbalance and must eventually eat bread that is made from only the husk of wheat, 'al-khubz as-sin', to restore the body's nutritional balance.

In the verse in question, Allah says: 'Store all that you reap, leaving it in the ear, apart from the little you eat' (Yusuf: 47). Thus, Yusuf peace be upon him told the cupbearer, who asked him to interpret the king's dream, that they must save as much harvest as possible during the upcoming seven fruitful years in preparation for seven years of drought. They should do this while eating the bare minimum during the first seven years of saving: '…apart from the little you eat' (Yusuf: 47). Allah continues to state Yusuf's interpretation of the king's dream:

ثُمَّ يَأۡتِي مِنۢ بَعۡدِ ذَٰلِكَ سَبۡعٞ شِدَادٞ يَأۡكُلۡنَ مَا قَدَّمۡتُمۡ لَهُنَّ إِلَّا قَلِيلٗا مِّمَّا تُحۡصِنُونَ ٤٨

After that will come seven years of hardship which will consume all but a little of what you stored up for them [48]
(The Quran, Yusuf: 48)

In this way, Yusuf peace be upon him predicted the seven years of drought that will follow seven years of productive and work-demanding harvest.

When Allah the Almighty describes the seven years as entailing '…hardship...' (Yusuf: 48), He implies that the years of drought will be taxing on the people and could even lead to famine if no portion of the harvest from the first seven productive years is stored. Furthermore, people are advised to eat only what is necessary during the first seven years so as to ensure their wellbeing during the following years of drought.

As a matter of fact, man depends on breathing, eating and drinking to survive, and food nourishes man and gives him the power to go through life. However, we eat food out of pleasure; most of what we eat is not consumed for energy. Obviously, if man wanted only to satisfy his hunger, he will be satisfied with boiled food, or simple bread and sauce dishes. However, we eat for enjoyment.

Referring to this fact, Allah Glorified is He says: '…then eat it with enjoyment and good cheer' (an-Nisa': 4). In other words, He the Almighty tells the believers in Paradise to enjoy the food and not be worried about harmful side effects, nor about having to seek recourse to medicines to digest the food properly. This is what is meant by Allah's saying: '…with enjoyment...' (an-Nisa': 4). As for: '…good cheer' (an-Nisa': 4), it strictly refers to food that is both energising and beneficial to the body, but is not necessarily very tasty.

Back to the verse in question; the Lord Glorified is He says: 'after that will come seven years of hardship which will consume all but a little of what you stored up for them' (Yusuf: 48). Obviously, the years of hardship did not literally consume what is stored; rather, it was the people who lived at that time. We clearly understand this because every event involves a time and place. Moreover, the action is sometimes attributed either to a time or to a place. Let us offer an example to illustrate this point; in the following verse, the action is attributed to a place: 'Ask(1) [in] the town where we have been; ask the caravan we travelled with…' (Yusuf: 82). Clearly, we understand from this verse that what is intended is questioning the residents of the town that they were in as well as the members of the caravan that were accompanying them. On the other hand, the verse under discussion ascribes the action to a particular period. The people of Egypt will eat all their storage during the difficult years, except for a little, because after eating, they must save a certain amount of grains to be used as seeds in the year that follows the seven difficult and dry years.

(1) Al-Jurjani opined that this command is metaphorical in which there is an ellipsis. See Al-Jurjani, Dalai'l Al-I'Jaz.

In Allah's saying: '…what you stored up (tohsinoon) for them' (Yusuf: 48), the Arabic verb 'tohsinoon' (you store) is derived from 'hasana' which denotes abstention. The noun is 'hisn' which is literally used to refer to a stronghold which prevents the attack of the enemies. One can say, 'They dwelled within a fortification ('al-hisn')' to mean that they were protected by an impenetrable stronghold from the assailing enemy.

Furthermore, Allah the Almighty says: 'And all married women (muhsanat)…' (an-Nisa': 24). The word 'muhsanat' comes from 'hasana' and refers to the married women who abstain from committing fornication. Allah Glorified is He also says: 'And [remember] she who guarded (ahsanat) her chastity…' (al-Anbiya': 91). This verse refers to Maryam (Mary), al-batul (the virgin)(1), peace be upon her, who guarded her chastity. Therefore, it is clear that 'hisn' implies abstention.

Afterwards, Allah the Almighty continues to state what Yusuf told the cupbearer by saying:

ثُمَّ يَأۡتِي مِنۢ بَعۡدِ ذَٰلِكَ عَامٞ فِيهِ يُغَاثُ ٱلنَّاسُ وَفِيهِ يَعۡصِرُونَ ٤٩

After that will come a year when the people will have abundant rain and will press grapes [49] (The Quran, Yusuf: 49)

We should take into account that what Yusuf peace be upon him said in this verse is not a part of the interpretation of the dream, for the king's dream consisted of seven emaciated cows that were eating seven fat ones, as well as seven green ears of grain and seven dried ones. Therefore, after concluding his interpretation of the dream, Yusuf peace be upon him informed the cupbearer of what will logically happen after the years of hardship; namely, the lands will be productive and fruitful once again.

(1) The Arabic word 'al-batul' describes a woman who is a virgin and who does not have a husband. It is used to refer to that woman who has detached herself from this world and attached herself to Allah the Almighty. See Ibn Mandhur, Lisan Al-'Arab, root 'batala'.

This phenomenon can be called 'al-ghawth' (rescue), as one sometimes says, 'Agheth fulan (help that person)' when he is in need of aid. Interestingly, the Arabic word 'ghaith' refers to rain which brings a drought to an end. As such, Allah's saying: '…will have abundant rain (yughath)...' (Yusuf: 49) implies that they will suffer in the seven years of hardship from a lack of indispensable Divine Bounty from which they derive their nourishment and sustenance.

He the Almighty concludes this verse by stating: 'After that will come a year when the people will have abundant rain and will press grapes' (Yusuf: 49). That is to say that they will press their grains and crops such as sesame, olives, grapes, sugarcane, and dates. Clearly, you only press such grains or fruits when there is enough to feed yourself and your dependants. In this way, Allah the Almighty has made it clear to us that they will be showered with bounties more than what was necessary to save them from the drought and what will give rise to a plentiful harvest that they can store.

The past few verses concerning the dream and its interpretation shed light on the dialogue between Yusuf peace be upon him–the man of truth–and the king's cupbearer. Furthermore, we have seen how the Quran made a transition from the scene in which the retinue was unable to unveil the hidden meaning of the dream, to the cupbearer asking permission to seek the interpretation of this dream, and finally to the conversation between Yusuf peace be upon him and the cupbearer.

Next, the Quran narrates what happened after the king knew about Yusuf's interpretation of his dream. Allah the Almighty says:

وَقَالَ ٱلْمَلِكُ ٱئْتُونِى بِهِۦ ۖ فَلَمَّا جَآءَهُ ٱلرَّسُولُ قَالَ ٱرْجِعْ إِلَىٰ رَبِّكَ فَسْـَٔلْهُ
مَا بَالُ ٱلنِّسْوَةِ ٱلَّٰتِى قَطَّعْنَ أَيْدِيَهُنَّ ۚ إِنَّ رَبِّى بِكَيْدِهِنَّ عَلِيمٌ (٥٠)

The king said, 'Bring him to me,' but when the messenger came to fetch Joseph, he said, 'Go back to your master and ask him about what happened to those women who cut their hands – my Lord knows all about their treachery' [50] (The Quran, Yusuf: 50)

This verse implies that the cupbearer returned to the court immediately after having been told the meaning of the dream, which he then conveyed to the court. Thereafter, the king insisted that the man who interpreted the dream be brought before him, for he was certain that a man of such insight could benefit him greatly. Upon the royal request, the cupbearer returned to bring Yusuf peace be upon him out of prison, but was surprised that the latter refused to leave and, instead, said to the one who came to take him to the royal court: ‘Go back to your master and ask him about what happened to those women who cut their hands–my Lord knows all about their treachery’ (Yusuf: 50).

Thus, Yusuf peace be upon him was not responsive to the man who had come to free him from his torments in jail. He made it clear that he will only be responsive if his innocence is proved and recognised by the king, for it is possible that this had been hidden from the king during all this time. For this reason, Yusuf peace be upon him wanted the king to investigate the matter of his innocence with regard to what had happened with the women who had cut their hands and had tried to seduce him into debauchery.

We should pay attention to the fact that Yusuf peace be upon him made a subtle allusion to his innocence by saying: ‘…my Lord knows all about their treachery’ (Yusuf: 50). This statement is implicitly referring to what the women had told Yusuf peace be upon him regarding the necessity of responding to the lustful desire of the governor’s wife.

We should note that Quranic stories supply us with lessons that serve us in our daily lives. These narratives are not for entertainment; rather, their wisdom is meant to be a guiding light to the decisions that we make in life.

As a matter of fact, a man’s complete innocence is very important; that is, all unfounded doubts about someone must be discarded before tackling anything. In the same connection, Yusuf peace be upon him demanded that all accusations against him be lifted, such that no one may claim overtly or secretly that he had moral shortcomings. Someone could have said about him, ‘Is this not Yusuf who was involved in the affair with the governor’s wife and who made him yield to her?’

In the same vein, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘I marvel at the patience of my brother Yusuf peace be upon him and his generosity–may Allah pardon him–for someone was sent to him to interpret the dream, and were I (in Yusuf’s place) I will have only told him (the interpretation) after being released (from prison). I marvel at his patience and generosity [a second time]–may Allah pardon him–for someone was sent to release him (from prison) and he refused to leave until his innocence was made known. Had I been in his place, I will have hurried through the door. But, he wanted first to be exonerated'.(1)

Furthermore, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him emphasised Yusuf's remarkable patience, self-respect, uprightness and dignity by stating, 'The honorable, the son of the honorable, the son of the honorable, (was) Yusuf, the son of Ya'qub (Jacob), the son of Ishaq (Isaac), the son of Ibrahim (Abraham)'. Prophet Muhammad also said, 'Were an envoy to seek me out after having dwelled in prison for a long period like that of Yusuf peace be upon him I will have been responsive'. He peace and blessings be upon him then recited the following verse: 'But when the Messenger came to fetch Yusuf, he said, 'Go back to your master and ask him about what happened to those women who cut their hands….' (Yusuf: 50)(2)

In these Hadiths, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him illustrated Yusuf's extraordinary patience and uprightness, as well as his fear of having fingers pointing at him after being released from prison, saying, 'That is the one who seduced his master's wife'.

Moreover, this Prophetic Hadith alludes to Yusuf's insistence on proving his innocence, for it is more seemly for him to work towards establishing his innocence after being released from prison. This also means that an honourable person, by nature, does not foolishly take advantage of a situation; rather, he addresses each situation on its own terms and plans accordingly. Clearly, Yusuf peace be upon him was sure about his innocence, but he wanted to ascertain that the king will not be the last person to realise this.

(2) This Hadith is narrated by Imam Ahmad in his Musnad (2/332) and by At-Tirmidhi in his Sunan (3116). At-Tirmidhi opined that this Hadith is classified as good. Likewise, this Hadith was narrated by Al-Hakim in his Mustadrak (2/346). All these narrators related this Hadith on the authority of Abu Hurayrah. Al-Hakim said, 'This Hadith is authentic according to the stipulations of Muslim, but neither Al-Bukhari nor Muslim have narrated this Hadith as the (above mentioned) version'. Adh-Dhahbi did not comment on Al-Hakim's statement.

In this connection, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him spoke the truth when he affirmed, ‘Give up what is doubtful to you for that which is not doubtful; for truth is peace of mind and falsehood is doubt’.(1) Therefore, he saw that avoiding questionable affairs was an integral part of faith in Allah the Almighty. On the other side of the coin, some become envious when they see an eminent person, and their envy may cause them to speak badly and spread lies about who they are jealous of, making people unfairly doubt the eminent person’s integrity. Out of caution, you must therefore protect yourself by avoiding all circumstances that may raise suspicion; and when you come across anything doubtful or any form of doubt, you must shun it completely.

We have a lofty example in Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him; it is narrated that he peace and blessings be upon him was observing ‘i‘tikaf’ during the last ten days of Ramadan when his wife Safiyah Bint Huyayy visited him one night and talked with him for some time. After that, she stood up to return to her room, and Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him accompanied her until she reached the door of the Mosque which faced his wife Umm Salama’s dwelling. At that moment, two members of the Ansar (Supporters) who were passing stopped to greet Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and then they departed. As they were leaving, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to them, ‘Do not run away. She is (my wife) Safiyyah Bint Huyayy’. Both of them said, ‘Glory be to Allah (how could we think something evil of the Prophet)’. Whereupon he explained, ‘Satan circulates in man’s body just like blood circulates in [his] body, and I was afraid lest it should instil any evil [thought] in your minds’.(2)

(1) This Hadith was narrated by Abu Dawud At-Tayalisi in his Musnad (1178), Imam Ahmad in his Musnad (1/200) and At-Tirmidhi in his Sunan (2518) on the authority of Al-Hassan ibn ‘Ali. At-Tirmidhi graded this Hadith as a good, authentic Hadith.

(2) The soundness of this Hadith is agreed upon by both Al-Bukhari and Muslim, who narrated it on the authority of Safiyyah Bint Huyayy. See Al-Bukhari, Sahih, Hadith no. 6219; and Muslim, Sahih, Hadith no.2175.

In the story we are discussing, the king summoned the women who had cut their hands and who had attempted to make Yusuf peace be upon him yield to their enticements. This is what the Lord the Most High says in the following verse:

قَالَ مَا خَطْبُكُنَّ إِذْ رَٰوَدتُّنَّ يُوسُفَ عَن نَّفْسِهِۦ ۚ قُلْنَ حَٰشَ لِلَّهِ مَا عَلِمْنَا عَلَيْهِ مِن سُوٓءٍ ۚ
قَالَتِ ٱمْرَأَتُ ٱلْعَزِيزِ ٱلْـَٰٔنَ حَصْحَصَ ٱلْحَقُّ أَنَا۠ رَٰوَدتُّهُۥ عَن نَّفْسِهِۦ وَإِنَّهُۥ لَمِنَ ٱلصَّٰدِقِينَ ﴿٥١﴾

The king asked the women, 'What happened when you tried to seduce Joseph?' They said, 'God forbid! We know nothing bad of him!' and the governor's wife said, 'Now the truth is out: it was I who tried to seduce him – he is an honest man' [51]
(The Quran, Yusuf: 51)

We know that the first attempt to seduce Yusuf peace be upon him was carried out by the governor's wife, but that the former remained chaste. After that the wife invited the women to her banquet, and the female guests cut their hands when they saw Yusuf's dazzling beauty. We also know for certain that the women almost overwhelmed him with sexual innuendos about which Yusuf said: '…If You do not protect me from their treachery, I shall yield to them and do wrong' (Yusuf: 33).

Next, the king called for the women and asked, 'What was this (past) concern of yours (khatbukun) when you tried to seduce Yusuf?' (Yusuf: 51) As for the Arabic word 'al-khatb' from which 'khatbukun' (this concern of yours) is derived, it denotes a great event or an unusual circumstance that is a subject of conversation among the people; it is not something that simply took place between two people. On the contrary, it is an event that shakes the city at the time it happens.

What Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him said to a group of angels is a case in point. Allah states: 'He [Ibrahim] said, "What, then, is your concern (khatbukun), O messengers?!" They said, "Surely we are sent to a guilty people"' (adh-Dhariyat: 31-32). In other words, the angels reassured Ibrahim peace be upon him of their mission; they were sent to punish the guilty community.

Likewise, upon returning to his people and finding that As-Samiri had fashioned a calf out of the gold taken from the people of Pharaoh, Allah states that Musa (Moses) peace be upon him asked As-Samiri: ‘He said, “What, then, was the reason [that made] you do this (khatbuka), O Samiri?”’ (Ta Ha: 95)

Back to the story of Yusuf peace be upon him in the verse under discussion; the king asked: ‘What was this (past) concern of yours when you tried to seduce Yusuf?’ (Yusuf: 51) This statement proves that the story was narrated to the king in detail, that he was greatly shocked, and that he deemed it to be a great event. The king’s reaction also sheds light on the universality of ethical principles which always remain the same and do not alter with time or place. The verse states that the women replied: ‘Allah forbid! We know nothing bad of him!’ (Yusuf: 51) Here, we notice that they failed to mention their own attempts at seducing Yusuf peace be upon him because the central point was to establish the latter’s innocence before the king. As for their proclamation: ‘Allah forbid!’ (Yusuf: 51), it is a way of affirming that Yusuf peace be upon him is too righteous to perform any misbehaviour, as Allah the Almighty had protected him from sinning. At that moment, the governor’s wife interjects: ‘…and the governor’s wife said, “Now the truth is out…”’ (Yusuf: 51). The admittance of the governor’s wife implies that it was no longer possible to hide her culpability, and that the hidden truth of the matter had finally been revealed. Truth had triumphed over falsehood, and it was necessary for her to confess what had truly taken place: ‘…it was I who tried to seduce him–he is surely [one] of those who are truthful’ (Yusuf: 51). The king’s wife continues her confession in the following verse saying:

ذَٰلِكَ لِيَعۡلَمَ أَنِّي لَمۡ أَخُنۡهُ بِٱلۡغَيۡبِ وَأَنَّ ٱللَّهَ لَا يَهۡدِى كَيۡدَ ٱلۡخَآئِنِينَ ﴿٥٢﴾

[Joseph said, ‘This was] for my master to know that I did not betray him behind his back: God does not guide the mischief of the treacherous [52] (The Quran, Yusuf: 52)

This wife’s statement was intended to announce Yusuf’s innocence, and to communicate that she did not take advantage of his being away from them in prison to seek revenge on him for having refused her seduction. Moreover, she implies that she did not conspire, plot or even connive against him while he was locked up in prison.

This proves that wicked elements in the human soul can be triggered by a certain object, but when the possible interest disappears, the soul regains its natural agreeable character. In fact, the initial act of wrongdoing can sometimes be positively utilised by the transgressor as a means that encourages him to act virtuously afterwards in areas where he has no weak points. By doing so, the good act covers the misdeed, as the Lord the Most High states: ‘Surely, good deeds take away evil deeds. That is a reminder for the mindful’ (Hud: 114).

In fact, if a person exposes a transgressor’s misdeed, the exposer deprives society of the latter’s potential good deeds. It is for this reason that I often advise others to cover the misdeeds of wrongdoers, for this very sin may inspire the wrongdoer to perform good deeds that will wipe out his sins. In the same connection, it has been said, ‘If you examine human history, you will notice that even men of virtuous characters and principles have foibles and shortcomings. However, these great figures try to compensate for their shortcomings by performing good deeds that erase their sins. That is because they keep remembering their weaknesses, and this pushes them to do even more good’.

Having admitted her guilt, the governor’s wife said: ‘Allah does not guide the mischief of the treacherous’ (Yusuf: 52). In other words, she acknowledged that Allah Glorified is He thwarts the conniving traitors and prevents them from reaching their aims.

The governor’s wife continues, as stated in the Quran:

وَمَآ أُبَرِّئُ نَفۡسِيٓۚ إِنَّ ٱلنَّفۡسَ لَأَمَّارَةُۢ بِٱلسُّوٓءِ إِلَّا مَا رَحِمَ رَبِّيٓۚ إِنَّ رَبِّي غَفُورٞ رَّحِيمٞ (٥٣)

I do not pretend to be blameless, for man’s very soul incites him to evil unless my Lord shows mercy: He is most forgiving, most merciful [53] (The Quran, Yusuf: 53)

With this statement, the governor’s wife concluded her discourse. Here, she explained why she attended the royal gathering: she did not attend to absolve herself, since she said: ‘I do not pretend to be blameless, for man’s very soul incites him to evil...’ (Yusuf: 53)

Affirming the fact that the human soul, in general, incites man to do evil leads us to conclude that Yusuf peace be upon him as a human being, has desires.

A number of scholars(1) opined that the verse under discussion relates the speech of Yusuf peace be upon him in response to the governor's wife's confession: '…it was I who tried to seduce him–he surely is [one] of the truthful. This [I say] so that he may know I did not betray him behind his back: Allah does not guide the mischief of the treacherous' (Yusuf: 51-52).

According to this opinion, it is suitable for Yusuf's response to be: 'I do not pretend to be blameless, for man's very soul incites him to evil except when my Lord showers His Mercy [protecting a person from sinning]...' (Yusuf: 53). Upon reading the text in this context, one may interpret Yusuf's mention of the evil-inciting soul as a warning against being proud of one's own faith. Being a divinely ordained Messenger, he knows that it is Allah the Almighty Who saved him from the women's plots.

In the same connection, Yusuf's Prophethood was a form of Divine Mercy towards him, for the divinely conferred infallibility and Way of Guidance protected him from deviation into which any normal human being may fall.

Furthermore, it is out of Mercy that Allah the Almighty affirms that the inner self incites man to evil. This pithy statement amply clarifies the nature of the human soul; the desire does not simply disappear after inciting man to do one evil deed. On the contrary, you should be mindful, man, of the nature of the inner self! It continually urges man to do evil deeds.

In this connection, we know that all the Divine Obligations are either orders or prohibitions, and man may very well view these orders as a heavy burden. We also know that Divine Prohibitions may prevent man from actions that appear to be desirable; they appear to satisfy the person and please certain instincts within man.

That is why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Paradise is surrounded by hardships, and Hellfire is surrounded by temptations'.(1) In this Hadith, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him refers to the fact that sinful acts may be alluring, but a person with a sound mind has enough self-control to assess the long-term repercussions of his acts. Such a person only considers the immediate pleasures that result from his action after having contemplated its final outcome. In fact, some of what the person derives immediate short-lived pleasure from might be a cause of long-term difficulties.

(1) This opinion is held by Ibn Jarir At-Tabari and Ibn Abu Hatim. The most common interpretation which most appropriately fits the context of the story and its meanings is that the speaker in the verse was the governor's wife. We maintain this because the words of the verse were uttered in an unbroken manner in front of the king while Yusuf peace be upon him was not present, rather he was brought before the king only after the meeting had taken place. Ibn Kathir, Tafsir Al-Quran Al-'Azhim, 2/581.

Hence, we say that the one who wrongs himself by following his lower desires is neither aware of the immense reward of obeying Allah the Almighty nor of the punishments of disobeying Him. Had this person considered the reward of obedience and the punishment that results from disobedience, he will surely be careful not to sin.

That is why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'The one who commits illegal sexual intercourse is not a believer at the time of committing illegal sexual intercourse, a thief is not a believer at the time of committing theft, and a drinker of alcohol is not a believer at the time of drinking'.(2) As such, at the moment a person commits a sin, he hides his faith and ignores the fact that his life may come to an end before he can repent or expiate for his wrongdoing. Man errs when he thinks about how long he will live, for no one knows when his appointed time will come, nor does anyone know how long it will be until Allah punishes him for his wrongdoings on the Judgement Day.

Each one of us should remember the following Hadith of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him '(A person's) death is (his) Day of Judgment, and he who dies faces his own Day of Judgment'.(3)

(1) This Hadith is narrated by Imam Ahmad, Muslim and At-Tirmidhi on the authority of Anas Ibn Malik. See Imam Ahmad, Musnad, 3/153, 254; Muslim, Sahih, Hadith no. 2822; and At-Tirmidhi, Sunan, Hadith no. 2559.

(2) This Hadith is narrated by Al-Bukhari and Muslim in the book of Iman, on the authority of Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him. See Al-Bukhari, Sahih, Hadith no. 2475; Muslim, Sahih, Hadith no. 57.

(3) In his book, Al-'Ajluni mentioned this Hadith on the authority of Anas ibn Malik. The Hadith continues in the following manner: 'Mention death frequently, for if you remember it half-heartedly, [Allah the Almighty] will make it difficult for you, and if you remember it seriously [Allah the Almighty] will render it easy for you'. See Al-'Ajluni, Kashf Al-Khafa', Hadith no. 2618.

We find a fine example in 'Uthman ibn 'Affan, the third Caliph after Prophet Muhammad, who used to stand in front of a grave and weep until his beard became wet with tears. Someone asked him the reason behind this, 'Why do you not weep when you mention Paradise and the Hellfire, but you weep when you stand in front of a grave?' He responded, 'I heard Prophet Muhammad peace be upon him say, "Indeed, the grave is the first stage among the stages of the Hereafter. So, if one is saved from it, then what comes after it is easier than it. And if one is not saved from it, then what comes after it is worse than it".'(1) To sum up, let no one consider his appointed time of death is far-off.

The verse in question continues: '…except when my Lord showers His Mercy [protecting a person from sinning]: He is All Forgiving, Most Merciful' (Yusuf: 53).

We know that there are certain medications which cure, and that there are certain things which strengthen man's resistance to disease and fortify his immune system. Likewise, Allah the Almighty is All Forgiving, and He overlooks one's sins and erases them. Moreover, He is Most Merciful: He offers man the ability to resist the spiritual diseases for man not to be afflicted by any ailments. In other words, He gives man power to resist evil so he does not fall into sin.

In this connection, Allah the Almighty says: 'We send down the Quran as a healing and a mercy to those who believe' (Al-Isra': 82). The very act of hearing the Quran cures you from psychological ailments and fortifies your resistance to spiritual illnesses. In fact, listening to the Quran releases potential therapeutic energies in the depths of your being.

Furthermore, the Quran is a mercy for you when you embrace it as your Way of Guidance and apply it to your life. It makes you resistant to disease: it is both a medical treatment and a preventive care at the same time.

Allah Glorified is He says after that:

(1) This Hadith was narrated by Imam Ahmad, Ibn Majah and At-Tirmidhi on the authority of 'Uthman ibn 'Affan. At-Tirmidhi graded it as Hasan, Gharib (good but with only one narrator in one of its levels). See Ahmad, Musnad, 1/63; Ibn Majah, Sunnan, Hadith no.4267; and At-Tirmidhi, Sunan, Hadith no. 2308.

وَقَالَ ٱلۡمَلِكُ ٱئۡتُونِي بِهِۦٓ أَسۡتَخۡلِصۡهُ لِنَفۡسِيۖ فَلَمَّا كَلَّمَهُۥ قَالَ إِنَّكَ ٱلۡيَوۡمَ لَدَيۡنَا مَكِينٌ أَمِينٞ ﴿٥٤﴾

The king said, ‘Bring him to me: I will have him serve me personally,’ and then, once he had spoken with him,
‘From now on you will have our trust and favour’ [54]
(The Quran, Yusuf: 54)

We notice that the king said: ‘Bring him to me…’ (Yusuf: 54) twice:(1) the first time was when he heard the interpretation of the dream, but Yusuf peace be upon him refused to leave the prison prior to having his innocence proven. Another possible interpretation of this part of the story is that he left prison and attended the meeting with the women, including the governor’s wife.

The king saw that Yusuf peace be upon him was endowed with high moral qualities and vast knowledge. After the first meeting between them, the king had a chance to think over the man’s qualities. Indeed, his first encounter with Yusuf peace be upon him assured the king and gave him peace of mind. Subsequently*, Yusuf peace be upon him* found a place in the king’s heart.

The second time is when the king wanted to draw Yusuf peace be upon him close to him and make him a royal advisor. Allah the Almighty conveys this idea in the verse under discussion: ‘…Bring him to me: I will draw him close to me’. Then, once he had spoken with him, he said, ‘From now on you dwell with us, having a secure and honourable position and our trust’ (Yusuf: 54).

This attachment or bond only occurred after the king had spoken with Yusuf peace be upon him and after the latter had created a good impression on him. After speaking with him, the king was sure that Yusuf peace be upon him had protected himself from the most irresistible instinct: sexual attraction.

Moreover, the king became certain that Yusuf peace be upon him accepted his fate in prison in which he dwelled for such a long period of time. The king also realised through the interpretation of the dream that Yusuf peace be upon him was a man of great learning and insight into the nature of things. He interpreted the dream despite the fact that he was imprisoned, and he only left prison to prove his innocence or after his innocence was confirmed.

(1) The first time occurs in the following verse: ‘The king said, “Bring him to me”, but when the messenger came to fetch Yusuf, he said, “Go back to your master and ask him about what happened to those women who cut their hands—my Lord knows all about their treachery”’ (Yusuf: 50); and the second time is when the Lord the Most High says here: ‘The king said, “Bring him to me: I will draw him close to me”. Then, once he had spoken with him, he said, “From now on you will dwell with us, having a secure and honourable position and our trust”’ (Yusuf: 54).

For all the above-mentioned reasons, Yusuf peace be upon him became one of the king's close trustees. The king declared his trust in him by proclaiming: '…From now on you will dwell with us, having a secure and honourable position (makeen) and our trust' (Yusuf: 54). This statement puts an end to all possible plots and schemes against Yusuf peace be upon him for a place that is 'al-makeen' (a secure and honourable position) is a place where no harm can reach a person because of his high position.

That is why the Lord the Almighty describes Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him who descended with the Divine Revelation, by saying: 'This is the speech of a noble messenger, who possesses great strength and holds a secure and honourable position with the Lord of the Throne' (at-Takwir: 19-20).

Consequently, Yusuf peace be upon him was one of the ruler's confidants. In fact, it was he who was executing orders, and he had a bond with the subjects. Yusuf was endowed with power by the king, and he was also trustworthy with his people.

Problems in our contemporary societies occur when the ruler prefers the people he trusts over the experienced, honest people. That is how the delicate balance of justice is upset. The astute ruler should elect those endowed with both qualities: those who are worthy of the ruler's trust and who are, at the same time, honest with the people; and in this way, the balance of life is restored according to the Divine Way of Guidance.

When Yusuf peace be upon him heard the king make the declaration: '…From now on you will dwell with us, having a secure and honourable position and our trust' (Yusuf: 54), he decided to ask the king for something related to the interpretation of the dream: 'You will diligently sow for seven consecutive years as usual. Store all that you reap, leaving it in the ear, apart from the little you eat. After that will come seven years of hardship which will consume all but a little of what you stored up for them, After that will come a year when the people will have abundant rain and will press grapes' (Yusuf: 47-49). This is an economic agenda that demands planning, implementation, supervision, sound management, determination, and knowledge. Moreover, Yusuf's demand implied that the future will surely unfold in accordance with his interpretation of the dream. The verse reads:

قَالَ ٱجۡعَلۡنِي عَلَىٰ خَزَآئِنِ ٱلۡأَرۡضِۖ إِنِّي حَفِيظٌ عَلِيمٞ ٥٥

Joseph said, 'Put me in charge of the nation's storehouses:
I shall manage them prudently and care- fully' [55]
(The Quran, Yusuf: 55)

This statement confirms Yusuf's certainty that the impending years will require sound governance. There is no doubt that the upcoming years will be fruitful; however, the harvest of these years must not be squandered as they will provide the means to survive the approaching difficult years. The task (of ensuring that the grain is stored during the first seven years) demands both honesty and knowledge.

Clearly, Yusuf peace be upon him proved himself to be both honest and knowledgeable. Here arises a good question, which is, 'Is not Yusuf's demand an indirect way of asking for power?' But the rule(1) states that: he who asks for power should not be granted a position of authority'. We answer that Yusuf peace be upon him did not ask for power, rather, he asked to reform (the agricultural planning of) Egypt in order to preach his Call and fulfil his Message. He was put in a position of authority and will therefore be obeyed, not being subservient nor forced to yield to the commands of others because he was completely confident and certain in his beliefs.

Certain dire situations arise in which the consequences of an inexperienced person taking power and failing are unbearable. In such situations, the person who is confident in his ability to resolve a problem must bring himself to the fore.

(1) A proof of this principle is in the Hadith on the authority of Abu Musa Al-Ash'ari who narrated that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'By Allah, we do not appoint someone to this post (public office of authority) who seeks it or someone who contends for it'. See Muslim, Sahih, Hadith no.1733.

Let us offer an example to clarify this point; assume that a ship full of people is suddenly assailed by a storm. Imagine that the captain does not know what to do, and that someone claims he is able to get all out of the storm and lead them to safety. Clearly, the captain should let him take command of the ship if he has proof that the man is indeed competent. After the complicated situation is solved, the captain must thank the man who saved them and take command of his ship once again.

Clearly, one has the right to ask for power if such situations arise. If one sees that another inexperienced person is unable to solve a problem, one should offer to remedy the situation. In such a case, it is in fact a collective obligation to intervene for the sake of society at large. In this case, the person who asked for authority possesses two courageous traits:

Firstly: he asked for authority because he is confident in his ability to accomplish the task. Secondly: he prevented the person who does not have enough experience from assuming a position for which he had no administrative skills, as this will result in matters being governed in ignorance. That is, when the trustworthy, experienced people replace those who is incompetent, truth prevails and ignorance has no control over anything.

Back to the verse in question; Yusuf peace be upon him asked the king: ‘Put me in charge of the nation’s storehouses: I shall manage them prudently and carefully’ (Yusuf: 55). The provisions in the storehouses will enable the ruler (Yusuf) to manage the economy. Some said he asked the king to place him in charge of the storehouses because he wanted to put economic policies into practice. These policies will make it possible for them (Egyptians) to subsist during the upcoming seven years of drought. Such an undertaking requires wisdom, diligence, and knowledge.

Yusuf peace be upon him charged people gold or silver for their food provisions. Those who did not own gold or silver bartered food with precious rocks or livestock. The poor who did not have such valuables sold their children into slavery. The head of the impoverished family used to say, ‘Take my child as a slave, and in return give me enough food to feed the rest of my family’.

Yusuf peace be upon him excelled in the management of affairs during the period of drought. Each person had to not eat excessively, thereby filling 'only one intestine rather than seven'. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said in the following Hadith, 'the believer fills one intestine (is satisfied with a little food), and the disbeliever eats to fill seven (eats much)'.(1)

During these years of hardship, administering provisions demanded meticulous planning and the avoidance of any wasteful spending. Each item was worth a particular value, and each person collected whatever was within his means. After the prolonged drought was replaced by abundant rains, Yusuf peace be upon him returned all things to their rightful owners. When Yusuf was asked, 'Why did you seize things from the people if you were going to return them anyway?' He replied, '(I did this) for each person to take only the minimum needed to survive through the years of drought'.

We witness this sort of phenomenon among those who feed their cattle with the subsidised bread. When the price of bread rises, each person purchases within his means and ascertains that none of the loaves goes to waste.

The economic power of Egypt during these times of drought was limited; therefore each person had to work hard for his or her livelihood.

This sort of struggle can be still witnessed in our lives: when someone does not have the means to buy meat, he might stop yearning for it. In fact, some may put on a show by conceitedly proclaiming, 'My stomach no longer tolerates meat!'

Moreover, a poor person might assert that he loves smaller sized fish because they are tasty, unlike the foul-smelling flesh of larger fish. This same person might claim to love fresh radish because it is delicious.

Many years ago, we used to study far away from our homes. In our study dormitories, we sometimes had only one piece of falafel which we used to split into parts to be enough for the last morsel of bread we ate. But if we had five pieces of falafel, each person ate half a falafel per bite. Thus, it is clear that each man acts according to his means and resources. A poet once said:

The soul desires things when it is tempted but it is content when given little.

---

(1) This Hadith was narrated by Muslim in the book of drinks on the authority of Jabir and Abdullah ibn 'Umar Allah be pleased with them. See Muslim, Sahih, Hadith no. 2060.

Allah the Almighty then says:

وَكَذَٰلِكَ مَكَّنَّا لِيُوسُفَ فِي ٱلْأَرْضِ يَتَبَوَّأُ مِنْهَا حَيْثُ يَشَآءُ
نُصِيبُ بِرَحْمَتِنَا مَن نَّشَآءُ وَلَا نُضِيعُ أَجْرَ ٱلْمُحْسِنِينَ ﴿٥٦﴾

In this way We settled Joseph in that land to live wherever he wished: We grant Our mercy to whoever We will and do not fail to reward those who do good [56] (The Quran, Yusuf: 56)

Thus Allah the Almighty established Yusuf's authority in the land of Egypt and the latter administered the affairs of Egypt in a diligent and just manner. When the time of drought came, it did not only afflict Egypt but also the surrounding regions. This is proven by the fact that some people came to Egypt from other regions asking for provisions. Yusuf's brothers, who travelled from Ash-Sham (northern area of the Arabian Peninsula) asking for food not only for themselves but also for their families who were waiting for them, is a case in point. This demonstrates that the area inflicted with drought was very vast.

We can understand from the Lord's saying: 'In this way we settled Yusuf in that land to live wherever he wished...' (Yusuf: 56) that although Yusuf peace be upon him owned houses in many places, no one should think of him as an extravagant squanderer of public funds; but one should remember that people in authority take good care of the region where the ruler's house is located.

This fact can be seen in the modern world: when a head of state visits a certain part of his country, local authorities repave the streets, mend the facilities and sometimes beautify the surroundings by planting flowers. As a matter of fact, if local authorities labour so intensively when a head of state is on a visit, how well maintained do you think a place will be if the ruler had a mansion therein? There is no doubt that local authorities will take good care of maintaining the public facilities in such a region.

Hence, the saying of Allah: 'In this way We settled Yusuf in that land to live wherever he wished...' (Yusuf: 56) implies that the public facilities of the entire country where Yusuf peace be upon him lived were well maintained. For this reason, no one should misinterpret this verse to mean that Yusuf peace be upon him was living luxuriously and squandering extravagantly. Rather, we should understand that these expenditures benefitted those around him, whether intentionally or coincidentally.

That is to say that Yusuf's full mastery over Egypt was not only a form of mercy for him, but for the people of Egypt as well. That is why Allah the Almighty says in the same verse: 'We grant our mercy to whoever We will and do not fail to reward those who do good' (Yusuf: 56).

In this way, whoever did not have access to potable water will enjoy a clean source of water, and whoever had difficulty finding a comfortable environment in which to live will find that his district will become comfortable, being fully endowed with the facilities of that time. This is because the house of Yusuf peace be upon him–who had been granted complete authority over Egypt–was next to his home. Consequently, the needs of that neighbour will be met thanks to the administrative structure and the authorities which cared for all the people living therein. Hence, granting Yusuf peace be upon him mastery over the land of Egypt was a form of Mercy from the Lord not only towards Yusuf, but also towards those around him.

Allah the Almighty concludes this noble verse by asserting: '…and do not fail to reward those who do good' (Yusuf: 56). The Arabic word 'al-mushin' (a doer of good) refers to a person whose performance exceeds what is demanded of him.

In this verse, it is clearly noted that the act of 'ihsan' (doing good) is attributed to Yusuf peace be upon him; this is because having built houses in different parts of Egypt, he treated the people around his houses well by ensuring high standards of public facilities and other services.

As a matter of fact the Lord the Most High fully and copiously rewards the people of ihsan, just as He rewarded Yusuf peace be upon him by establishing his authority in the land of Egypt and making his subordinates love him.

Allah the Almighty then says:

وَلَأَجۡرُ ٱلۡأٓخِرَةِ خَيۡرٞ لِّلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ وَكَانُواْ يَتَّقُونَ ٥٧

The reward of the Hereafter is best for those who believe and are mindful of God [57]
(The Quran, Yusuf: 57)

Here, the Lord Glorified is He makes it clear that His Reward to 'al-muhsineen' (the people who do good) is not confined to this world. Rather, He confers a better and everlasting reward on them in the Hereafter.

As for the Arabic word 'khayr' (the best), it can have two distinct connotations: firstly, it may denote that one thing is better than another thing, yet both of them possess the quality of goodness. This is the intended meaning in the verse under discussion. A case in point is Prophet Muhammad's Hadith in which he said, 'A strong believer is better (khayr) and dearer to Allah than a weak one, and both are good. Adhere to that which is beneficial for you. Keep asking Allah for help and do not refrain from it. If you are afflicted in any way, do not say, "If I had taken this or that step, it will have resulted in such and such", but only say, "Allah has determined this and did as He willed". The word 'if' opens the gates of satanic thoughts'.(1)

Secondly, this word, i.e. 'khayr' (the best) can be used as the antithesis of evil. For example, Allah the Almighty says: 'So he who has done an atom's weight of good (khayran) shall see it. And he who has done an atom's weight of evil shall see it' (az-Zalzala: 7-8).

In the verse under discussion, Allah the Almighty wants to indicate that there has to be a balance in this life. However, this balance is not achieved if you were to say to man in general that he will be rewarded for his good deeds in the Hereafter, for at that time only the true believer will be rewarded for his good deeds. The disbeliever, on the other hand, transgresses the rights of others, sheds blood, steals, and/or causes corruption on earth as he does not believe in the Hereafter.

(1) This Hadith is narrated by Imam Ahmad, Muslim and ibn Majah on the authority of Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him. See Ahmad, Musnad, 2/366, 370; Muslim, Sahih, Hadith no.2664; and ibn Majah, Sunan, Hadith no.79.

This is precisely the reason why Allah the Almighty has decreed that rewards take two forms, as follows: a reward in this world as a recompense for any good deeds the doers of good may have performed, be they believers or disbelievers; and a reward in the Hereafter that the Lord the Most High prepares for those who believe in Him Glorified is He. That is why Allah the Almighty says in the verse in question: 'The reward of the Hereafter is the best for those who believe and are mindful of Allah' (Yusuf: 57). This verse clarifies that the reward of the life to come is far better than the reward of this worldly life because the reward of the former is eternal, whereas the reward of the latter is temporal. In fact, man will lose the reward of this worldly life either when it expires or when death overtakes him.

The different natures of both rewards are of particular importance because man's time in this world is confined to the length of his life span, whereas the Will of Allah Glorified is He has decreed that life in the Hereafter shall be eternal.

Allah the Almighty then speaks of Yusuf's brothers, saying:

وَجَآءَ إِخۡوَةُ يُوسُفَ فَدَخَلُواْ عَلَيۡهِ فَعَرَفَهُمۡ وَهُمۡ لَهُۥ مُنكِرُونَ ٥٨

Joseph's brothers came and presented themselves before him. He recognized them – though they did not recognize him [58] (The Quran, Yusuf: 58)

This verse tells us clearly that Yusuf peace be upon him recognised his brother, whereas they did not recognise him. This is understandable because they threw him into the well when he was still a young boy. After the travellers found him, the journey of life took its course and he was sold to the governor of Egypt. Then, Yusuf experienced the events that we have examined, including the governor's wife's trying to seduce him and his seven years in prison. During these long years, Yusuf peace be upon him became physically mature and strikingly beautiful.

Clearly, such events leave their mark on a man's physical features. Moreover, Yusuf's brothers came after Yusuf had assumed a very high position within the government, and this prestige obliged him to be royally arrayed and regally posed.

On the other hand, Yusuf peace be upon him recognised his brothers because he was separated from them when they were young adults and when the effects of time had already left an impression on their physical features. We know that, with the passing of time, a person's physical traits become more clearly delineated. However, the physical changes that happen to an adult are much less than the changes that happen to a child when he grows.

The brothers were compelled to seek Yusuf's help because of the drought which not only afflicted Egypt, but also the surrounding areas. Yusuf's fame became widespread because he had saved food provisions for the time of drought. That is why his brothers were sent by their father to ask for provisions and food.

The brothers did not imagine for a split-second that the person in front of them was their brother Yusuf whom they had cast into the well.

Allah the Almighty subsequently says:

وَلَمَّا جَهَّزَهُم بِجَهَازِهِمْ قَالَ ٱئْتُونِي بِأَخٍ لَّكُم مِّنْ أَبِيكُمْ ۚ
أَلَا تَرَوْنَ أَنِّيٓ أُوفِي ٱلْكَيْلَ وَأَنَا۠ خَيْرُ ٱلْمُنزِلِينَ ﴿٥٩﴾

And once he had given them their provisions, he said,
'Bring me the brother [you left with] your father!
Have you not seen me giving generous measure and being the best of hosts? [59] (The Quran, Yusuf: 59)

There is no doubt that they spoke to him of their condition, of their father and brother, Benyamin (Benjamin), nor is it not clear that he ordered for them to be fully furnished with provisions after they asked for them.(1) In this verse, the Arabic word 'jihaz' refers to the provisions for which they, i.e. Yusuf's brothers, had left their country and come to him in Egypt.

(1) In his Tafsir, ibn Kathir mentioned that As-Suddi and others said that when Yusuf peace be upon him addressed his brothers, he asked them, 'Why have you come to my country?' They replied, 'Governor, we are here (to ask) for provisions'. He then asked, 'Are you spies?' Having said, 'By Allah*, we are not (spies)!' Yusuf responded, 'So, where have you come from?' The brothers replied, 'From the land of Kan'an, and our father is Ya'qub, the Prophet of Allah'. Yusuf then asked, 'Does he have other children?' 'Yes, we used to be twelve brothers, but our youngest brother, who was the dearest to our father, perished in the wilderness. However, our half-brother is still alive, and our father kept him to help him forget his grief about his lost son', they replied. So Yusuf peace be upon him ordered them to be housed and served generously. See ibn Kathir, Tafsir Al-Quran Al-'Azhim, 2/483.*

Having provided them with provisions, Yusuf peace be upon him asked them to bring their brother, Benyamin, with them the next time. He said to them: 'Have you not seen me giving a generous measure and being the best of hosts?'(1) (Yusuf: 59) This statement is a reminder that Yusuf peace be upon him was generous and gave them a generous measure. Apparently, the brothers asked him for more provisions under the pretext that they had a younger brother whom they had left with their elderly father. Upon hearing this, Yusuf peace be upon him asked them to bring their brother in return for an extra measure of provisions. Being a just ruler, Yusuf peace be upon him did not like to give out provisions without clear proof of need. Each of the brothers came to Egypt on camels, loaded with goods that they intended to give in exchange for food. Yusuf peace be upon him made it clear that if they brought Benyamin with them the next time, they will be granted an extra load of food provisions.

The brothers related Yusuf's condition to their father when they asked him to let Benyamin go on the journey with them. The following verse makes mention of their plea; Allah the Almighty says: 'We shall be entitled to another camel-load of grain…' (Yusuf: 65).

As for the statement: '... I have been the best of hosts' (Yusuf: 59), it means that Yusuf peace be upon him warmly welcomed his guests and treated them generously. His brothers were cognisant of this when they were treated kindly and were housed in luxurious guest quarters. In these guestrooms, anything that a person could possibly need was at their disposal.

The Arabic word for host which is used in this verse is 'munzil'; it is derived from the verb 'nazala', that is, 'to descend'. This appears to be antithetical to the idea of exalting or honouring a guest. In reality, however, a 'munzil' is someone who furnishes a guesthouse with all the necessary provisions. In the same connection, Allah the Almighty describes Paradise as being 'nuzul' in the following verse: 'A hospitable gift (nuzulan) from the Forgiving, the Merciful' (Fussilat: 32). Therefore, due to His Absolute Clemency and Mercy, Allah the Almighty has fashioned Paradise to be beyond man's imagination. As long as Allah the Almighty

---

(1) The Arabic word 'an-nuzul' implies dwelling in a place. The words 'an-nuzul' and 'nuzul' also refer to what is served to the guests. See ibn Mandhur, Lisan Al-'Arab, the root 'nazala'.

Himself is the One Who prepares paradise, then it is for certain beyond all human imaginations.

In the same vein, I once told my brothers and friends who were amazed by the luxury of a grand hotel in San Francisco, ‘When a person sees something that is sumptuous, lavish or beautiful that someone else owns, he reacts in two possible ways which reflect the state of his soul; he either reacts enviously and therefore with a degree of hatred and odium, or, if he is a believer, he feels happy and says, “This worldly blessing that I behold with my eyes makes me filled with a longing for Paradise because I am looking at what was created by one man for another. And if this was the creation of man, how will the Lord’s Creation of paradise be?” After all, it is He Who created the universe and all men therein!’

I often say that every time I meet someone who has been gifted with a bounty, my belief in Allah the Almighty grows more steadfast. Things which are fashioned by one person for another cannot be compared to those that the Creator of mankind has fashioned for the believers.

As for the person who regards someone’s blessing enviously, he is depriving himself of the happiness that this blessing brings to others, himself included. This is because the Lord’s Bounty is propitious not only for its bearer but also for the person who delights in the blessings of others. If you delight in the fortunes of others, be sure that a blessing will come to you. However, if you resent the fortunes of others, then blessings will stay away from you.

For this reason, you must delight in a blessing that someone else has been granted, in order for blessings to come to you. If you act accordingly, you will not burden yourself trying to obtain or maintain blessings because they will come to you through Divine Grace.

Back to the verse in question; when Yusuf said: ‘I have been the best of hosts’ (Yusuf: 59), he asserts how justly he treated them; a point which is proven by the fact that he has given them full measure and treated them generously. Furthermore, there is no doubt that when they bring their younger brother, they will be met with the same warm welcome.

Afterwards, The Quran mentions Yusuf’s discourse with his brothers:

فَإِن لَّمْ تَأْتُونِى بِهِۦ فَلَا كَيْلَ لَكُمْ عِندِى وَلَا تَقْرَبُونِ ﴿٦٠﴾

You will have no more corn from me if you do not bring him to me, and you will not be permitted to approach me [60] (The Quran, Yusuf: 60)

Yusuf peace be upon him was aware of the fact that it was difficult for the brothers to bring Benyamin (Benjamin) with them to Egypt. Clearly, their father will be reluctant to entrust the brothers with him. That is why Yusuf peace be upon him gave them the following warning: ‘You will have no more wheat from me if you do not bring him to me...’ (Yusuf: 60). As a matter of fact, peace be upon him gave this warning to his brothers and he also knew fully well that they had no choice but to obey him. After all, their country was barren and afflicted by both drought and famine. Furthermore, he added: ‘…and you will not be permitted to approach me’ (Yusuf: 60). This implies that they will not be allowed to approach the land of Egypt over which he has total authority. As we shall see, the brothers will tell their father: ‘Father, we have been denied any more wheat [unless we take our brother with us]; so send our brother back with us that we may be given another measure. We shall guard him carefully’ (Yusuf: 63).

Having been warned by Yusuf peace be upon him the brothers replied saying what is told to us by Allah the Almighty in the following verse:

قَالُوا۟ سَنُرَٰوِدُ عَنْهُ أَبَاهُ وَإِنَّا لَفَٰعِلُونَ ﴿٦١﴾

They said, ‘We shall do all we can to persuade his father to send him with us, indeed we shall’ [61] (The Quran, Yusuf: 61)

The statement: ‘We shall do all we can to persuade(1) his father’ (Yusuf: 62) implies that it will not be easy to convince his father to hand over the son to them. Moreover, the brothers recalled how they treated Yusuf peace be upon him beforehand. We should also take into account that the act of persuasion often requires negotiation, give and take, or even manipulation. Previously, we have discussed this idea in Allah’s saying: ‘The woman in whose house he was living tried to seduce him’ (Yusuf: 23).

(1) In other words, we will do everything within our means to ensure that he is brought to you. Indeed, we will spare no effort to prove that we mean what we say. See ibn Kathir, Tafsir Al-Quran Al-‘Azhim, 2/483.

In the verse under discussion, the brothers underlined their intention to persuade their father saying: '… indeed we shall' (Yusuf: 61). In other words, they will exert their utmost effort to convince their father to send Benyamin with them, knowing well that it is a great favour to ask of their father and at the same time a difficult thing to accomplish. Allah the Almighty then says:

وَقَالَ لِفِتْيَٰنِهِ ٱجْعَلُوا۟ بِضَٰعَتَهُمْ فِى رِحَالِهِمْ لَعَلَّهُمْ يَعْرِفُونَهَآ
إِذَا ٱنقَلَبُوٓا۟ إِلَىٰٓ أَهْلِهِمْ لَعَلَّهُمْ يَرْجِعُونَ ٦٢

Joseph said to his servants, 'Put their [traded] goods back into their saddle- bags, so that they may recognize them when they go back to their family, and [be eager to] return' [62] (The Quran, Yusuf: 62)

In other words, Yusuf peace be upon him ordered his servants to pack the merchandise–which they had intended, in their first meeting, to barter in exchange for wheat and foods–into his brothers' saddlebags. Moreover, Yusuf's servants were instructed to do this in secrecy, thereby providing them with an incentive to return once again.(1) After relating this incident, Allah the Almighty says:

فَلَمَّا رَجَعُوٓا۟ إِلَىٰٓ أَبِيهِمْ قَالُوا۟ يَٰٓأَبَانَا مُنِعَ مِنَّا ٱلْكَيْلُ فَأَرْسِلْ
مَعَنَآ أَخَانَا نَكْتَلْ وَإِنَّا لَهُۥ لَحَٰفِظُونَ ٦٣

When they returned to their father, they said, 'Father, we have been denied any more corn, but send our brother back with us and we shall be given another measure. We shall guard him carefully' [63] (The Quran, Yusuf: 63)

This was the first thing that the brothers told their father after their return with the provisions. They wanted to clarify to Ya'qub p*eace be upon him* that they will be denied re-entrance to Egypt if they did not bring Benyamin with them.

Furthermore, the brothers told their father how generously they were treated by the governor of Egypt. They made it clear to him that they will be given another measure only if he allowed Benyamin to go with them to Egypt. They further assured their father that they will take good care of him. Clearly, the brothers were trying to allay their father's suspicions, given what they had done to Yusuf peace be upon him in the past.

---

(1) Regarding this issue, ibn Kathir mentioned many different opinions. One of these opinions is that Yusuf peace be upon him feared that the brothers did not have other goods to exchange for food. Yet others opined that he was too ashamed to charge his brothers and his father for food. See ibn Kathir, Tafsir Al-Quran Al-'Azhim, 2/483.

At that point, the Lord the Most High states Ya'qub's response, saying:

قَالَ هَلْ ءَامَنُكُمْ عَلَيْهِ إِلَّا كَمَآ أَمِنتُكُمْ عَلَىٰٓ أَخِيهِ
مِن قَبْلُ ۖ فَٱللَّهُ خَيْرٌ حَٰفِظًا ۖ وَهُوَ أَرْحَمُ ٱلرَّٰحِمِينَ ﴿٦٤﴾

He said, 'Am I to entrust him to you as I did his brother before? God is the best guardian and the Most Merciful of the merciful' [64] (The Quran, Yusuf: 64)

Here, Ya'qub peace be upon him is reminding his children that due to the fact that they had previously lost Yusuf peace be upon him and alleged that a wolf had devoured him, they were not worthy of his trust this time. Ya'qub peace be upon him added: '…Allah is the Best Guardian and the Most Merciful of the merciful' (Yusuf: 64). This statement alludes that he had agreed to let Benyamin accompany them to Egypt, for he was praying to Allah the Almighty to guard his son during their journey.

After this conversation ended, Ya'qub's sons started unpacking their provisions. Allah the Almighty says regarding this incident:

وَلَمَّا فَتَحُوا۟ مَتَٰعَهُمْ وَجَدُوا۟ بِضَٰعَتَهُمْ رُدَّتْ إِلَيْهِمْ ۖ قَالُوا۟ يَٰٓأَبَانَا مَا نَبْغِى ۖ هَٰذِهِۦ
بِضَٰعَتُنَا رُدَّتْ إِلَيْنَا ۖ وَنَمِيرُ أَهْلَنَا وَنَحْفَظُ أَخَانَا وَنَزْدَادُ كَيْلَ بَعِيرٍ ۖ ذَٰلِكَ كَيْلٌ يَسِيرٌ ﴿٦٥﴾

Then, when they opened their packs, they discovered that their goods had been returned to them and they said, 'Father! We need no more [goods to barter]: look, our goods have been returned to us. We shall get corn for our household; we shall keep our brother safe; we shall be entitled to another camel-load of grain – an extra measure so easily achieved!' [65] (The Quran, Yusuf: 65)

Thus, they discovered that the merchandise that they had brought to Egypt with the intention of exchanging them for food provisions had been returned to them. Moreover, they declared to their father that they could not possibly desire more, for they had actually received the food provisions they needed to sustain themselves and their families.

The brothers recapitulated: they had to bring their younger brother on their next trip to Egypt, and they will surely take good care of him and will return to their homes with an extra camel-load of grain. This is something easily granted by the governor of Egypt.

In the following verse, Allah the Almighty tells us about the condition Ya’qub laid down for his sons, saying:

قَالَ لَنْ أُرْسِلَهُۥ مَعَكُمْ حَتَّىٰ تُؤْتُونِ مَوْثِقًا مِّنَ ٱللَّهِ لَتَأْتُنَّنِى بِهِۦٓ إِلَّآ
أَن يُحَاطَ بِكُمْ ۖ فَلَمَّآ ءَاتَوْهُ مَوْثِقَهُمْ قَالَ ٱللَّهُ عَلَىٰ مَا نَقُولُ وَكِيلٌ ﴿٦٦﴾

He said, ‘I will never send him with you, not unless you swear by God that you will bring him back to me if that is humanly possible.’ Then, when they had given him their pledge, he said, ‘Our words are entrusted to God’ [66]
(The Quran, Yusuf: 66)

Here, we notice how kind-hearted Ya’qub peace be upon him is, for he accepted to send Benyamin (Benjamin) with the brothers to Egypt. This kindness is also expressed in his saying: ‘…Allah is the Best Guardian and the Most Merciful of the merciful’ (Yusuf: 64). He, however, demanded that the brothers pledge solemnly to return Benyamin safely. The only possible justification for returning from Egypt without him could be if they were faced with circumstances that could not be resolved by human means, such as being surrounded by enemies who wanted to kill them all. One might say that Ya’qub’s saying: ‘…if that is humanly possible...’ (Yusuf: 65) is a form of prophetic cautiousness.

Afterwards, Ya’qub’s sons gave him their pledge, and swore to return Benyamin back safely from Egypt, declaring the Lord Glorified is He a witness over them.

When Ya’qub peace be upon him said: ‘…Our words are witnessed by Allah’ (Yusuf: 66), he was referring to the fact that Allah the Almighty was fully aware of this oath and guaranteed it, and if his sons were to break this oath, Allah the Almighty will punish them.

Afterwards, Ya'qub peace be upon him gave further advice to his twelve children:

وَقَالَ يَٰبَنِيَّ لَا تَدۡخُلُواْ مِنۢ بَابٖ وَٰحِدٖ وَٱدۡخُلُواْ مِنۡ أَبۡوَٰبٖ مُّتَفَرِّقَةٖۖ وَمَآ أُغۡنِي عَنكُم مِّنَ
ٱللَّهِ مِن شَيۡءٍۖ إِنِ ٱلۡحُكۡمُ إِلَّا لِلَّهِۖ عَلَيۡهِ تَوَكَّلۡتُۖ وَعَلَيۡهِ فَلۡيَتَوَكَّلِ ٱلۡمُتَوَكِّلُونَ ٦٧

He said, 'My sons, do not enter all by one gate – use different gates. But I cannot help you against the will of God: all power is in God's hands. I trust in Him; let everyone put their trust in Him' [67] (The Quran, Yusuf: 67)

We should take into account that Ya'qub peace be upon him made this statement prior to the brothers' second journey to Egypt, that is, after having known of both Yusuf's generous hospitality towards them and the fact that their merchandise had been returned to them. In short, he knew that the brothers had gained the favour of the governor of Egypt.

In general, when someone assumes a high position, it is expected that he will have rivals. This explains Ya'qub's wariness and fear that someone might plot against his sons who were, after all, foreigners in Egypt.

Thus he, i.e. Ya'qub peace be upon him ordered them to enter Egypt through different gates. In the past, the travellers used to access the old Egyptian cities through various gates which were opened and closed at appointed hours. By entering the city through separate gates, the brothers attracted the least attention possible.

For fear that his sons will be envied by others, Ya'qub peace be upon him ordered them to enter from different gates. We should note that envy (and its potentially malicious consequences) is a reality (which should not be denied).

That is why Allah the Almighty has taught us to seek refuge in Him from envy, since He knows that human means cannot defend oneself against the harms that envy can sometimes cause. The Lord Glorified is He says: 'Say, "I seek refuge in the Lord of the dawn; From the evil of what He has created; And from the evil of the utterly dark night when it comes; And from the evil of those who blow on knots; And from the evil of the envious when he envies' (al-Falaq: 1-5). When it comes to matters of envy, it is impossible to seek refuge in a fellow human being. This is because the source of envy (that is, the envious person who is casting the evil eye) is often hard to identify. Indeed, the 'radiations' of the envious person's eye can assail anyone who has been blessed. Moreover, since we live in an age of unprecedented material development in which radiation has been used to split things, it is conceivable that envy also has 'radiation' which Allah the Almighty gives to certain individuals. In these cases, a simple look may be as piercing and harmful as an arrow or a bullet.

In the same connection Allah the Almighty says: '…and none knows the hosts of your Lord but He Himself' (al-Muddaththir: 31). So, why, someone may ask, does Allah the Almighty give such abilities to some of His creatures?!

We contend, 'He Glorified is He endows some of His creatures with gifts which they misuse. In addition, each human being is endowed with this injurious gaze to a certain degree. However, it is envy that generates the deleterious effects of this evil look. Keep in mind that one can admire things without being envious simply by saying, "Allah's Will (be done); there is no power but from Allah. O Allah, bless this thing or person!"'(1)

In this way, one puts out the flame of envy which fuels the evil eye. You should also seek refuge in Allah, the Creator of mankind and of all wonders, by reciting the following verse: 'Say "I seek refuge in the Lord of the dawn; From the evil of what He has created; And from the evil of the utterly dark night when it comes; And from the evil of those who blow on knots; And from the evil of the envious when he envies"' (al-Falaq: 1-5). You could also recite the words that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him used to say when supplicating Allah the Almighty for protection of Al-Hassan and Al-Hussayn*, Allah be pleased with them*. These words are, 'I seek refuge with Your Perfect Words from every devil, from poisonous pests and from every evil, harmful, envious eye'. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to them, ‘Your forefather (i.e. Ibrahim (Abraham)) used to seek refuge with Allah for Ishmael (Ismail) and Ishaq (Issac) by reciting these words’.(1)

(1) Allah Glorified is He says: 'And why did you not say when you entered your garden, "Allah's Will (be done); there is no power but from Allah?"' (al-Kahf: 39)

It is also known that ‘When anything distressed the Prophet, he prayed’.(2) He used to do this because such a problem that distresses him or one of his followers could not be resolved by human means. When such problems befall man, one must take refuge in the Lord, the Powerful Supporter, but of course after taking the secondary means into consideration. In this way, your invocation will be that of a distressed person who is urgently in need of help; rather than that of an indolent person who does not consider the secondary means.

In the same vein, Allah the Almighty says: ‘Who [other than Allah] answers the distressed one when he calls upon Him and removes evil…’ (an-Naml: 62). A distressed person is one who has no solutions to his problem, and only implored Allah the Almighty after having made use of everything that was available to him. So, you should not ask for Divine Help before making full use of what He the Almighty has provided for you.

In the verse under discussion, we find that Ya’qub peace be upon him had advised his children, in fear of envy, not to enter as a group through one gate, but to enter through different gates. However, firm faith in Allah the Almighty and submission to the Divine Decree are clear in Ya’qub’s words when he said: ‘But I cannot help you against the Will of Allah....’ (Yusuf: 67). In other words, my advice to you cannot protect you from anything that is willed by Allah the Almighty. My words are merely cautionary, but it is Allah the Almighty Who decides whether or not you will reap the fruit of taking such cautionary steps. It is for this reason that Ya’qub peace be upon him added: ‘…all power is in Allah’s hands. I trust in Him; let everyone put their trust in Him’ (Yusuf: 67). The destiny of each creature depends on Allah the Almighty and clearly Ya’qub peace be upon him places his trust in Allah. Indeed, it behoves every believer to place his trust in Allah the Almighty.

Ya'qub's sons heeded their father's advice as shown in the following verse in which the Lord the Most High says:

وَلَمَّا دَخَلُوا۟ مِنْ حَيْثُ أَمَرَهُمْ أَبُوهُم مَّا كَانَ يُغْنِى عَنْهُم مِّنَ ٱللَّهِ مِن شَىْءٍ إِلَّا حَاجَةً فِى
نَفْسِ يَعْقُوبَ قَضَىٰهَا ۚ وَإِنَّهُۥ لَذُو عِلْمٍ لِّمَا عَلَّمْنَٰهُ وَلَٰكِنَّ أَكْثَرَ ٱلنَّاسِ لَا يَعْلَمُونَ ﴿٦٨﴾

And, when they entered as their father had told them, it did not help them against the will of God, it merely satisfied a wish of Ya'qub. He knew well what We had taught him, though most people do not [68] (The Quran, Yusuf: 68)

In other words, the brothers' entry through different gates could not prevent the unfolding of Allah's Predestination, since nothing can thwart His Decree. Perhaps the father wanted to prevent the plots, suspicions or the evil eye of enviers from afflicting his children; but even after taking all precautions, there is nothing that can resist Allah's Decree.

That is why Allah the Almighty says: '…it merely satisfied a wish of Ya'qub…' (Yusuf: 68). Ya'qub peace be upon him was fully aware of the reality that nothing can go against Allah's Will; for any cautionary measures cannot help people avert Allah's Predestination.

The Lord the Most High says the following about Ya'qub peace be upon him: '…For he was, due to what we had taught him, full of knowledge' (Yusuf: 68). In other words, Ya'qub peace be upon him fully understood the fact that one must utilise the means at hand. He was also fully aware that pursuing the secondary causes and means does not go against putting one's trust in Allah the Almighty for Allah has created these means and causes as a mercy for the people.

Allah the Almighty then concludes this verse by His Saying: '…though most people do not know' (Yusuf: 68). That is to say that most people are unable to identify the fact that they must both utilise the means at hands while seeking the Help of Allah the Almighty at the same time. This is precisely what makes life difficult for such people.

Allah Glorified is He then says:

وَلَمَّا دَخَلُوا۟ عَلَىٰ يُوسُفَ ءَاوَىٰٓ إِلَيْهِ أَخَاهُ ۖ قَالَ إِنِّىٓ أَنَا۠
أَخُوكَ فَلَا تَبْتَئِسْ بِمَا كَانُوا۟ يَعْمَلُونَ ﴿٦٩﴾

Then, when they presented themselves before Joseph, he drew his brother apart and said, 'I am your brother, so do not be saddened by their past actions' [69]
(The Quran, Yusuf: 69)

When the brothers presented themselves before Yusuf peace be upon him he welcomed them warmly and graciously. This hospitality was granted because they fulfilled their promise to him by bringing his full brother Benyamin. It is clear that Yusuf peace be upon him longed to see his brother Benyamin. We have learned previously that Benyamin is Yusuf's only full brother since they share the same mother (Rahil), while the rest of the brothers were born to different mothers.

The Lord's saying: '…he drew his brother…' (Yusuf: 69) indicates that Yusuf peace be upon him was longing to see his brother once again.

Moreover, saying: 'I am your brother, so do not be saddened by their past actions' (Yusuf: 69) makes it clear that his brothers had ostracised and mistreated Benyamin for some time. That is why Yusuf peace be upon him tried to cheer his younger brother up and to relieve the pain caused by his brothers' actions.

Allah the Almighty then says:

فَلَمَّا جَهَّزَهُم بِجَهَازِهِمْ جَعَلَ ٱلسِّقَايَةَ فِى رَحْلِ
أَخِيهِ ثُمَّ أَذَّنَ مُؤَذِّنٌ أَيَّتُهَا ٱلْعِيرُ إِنَّكُمْ لَسَٰرِقُونَ ﴿٧٠﴾

And, once he had given them their provisions, he placed the drinking-cup in his brother's pack. A man called out, 'People of the caravan! You are thieves!' [70] (The Quran, Yusuf: 70)

This verse indicates that Yusuf peace be upon him had supplied them with food provisions as he had promised and as he had done in the past. But he wanted his brother Benyamin (Benjamin) to stay with him in Egypt. Moreover, how could he take him from his brothers who had taken a solemn oath to return him to their father and not to lose him or fall short of their duty regarding him, as they had previously done with Yusuf peace be upon him in the past?

Clearly, a stratagem was necessary to be able to keep Benyamin with Yusuf. This plot was to be indirectly carried out by his brothers who had mistreated Yusuf peace be upon him and who were very envious of him and of his brother, Benyamin.

Here, the story of the king's drinking-cup which was used as a measuring instrument and which was placed in his brother's camel-pack, comes to the fore.

As for the Arabic word 'as-siqayah', it denotes various meanings, all of which are derived from the root 'saqa' (spelled with the letters sin, qaf and ya'). It refers to the act of providing pilgrims and people with drinking water.

In this connection, the Quran says: 'What! do you make (one who undertakes) the giving of drink to the pilgrims and the guarding of the Sacred Mosque like him who believes in Allah and the Last Day…' (at-Tawba: 19).

As-Siqayah may also refer to the water storage from which people drink, or even the bucket that is used to pull water from a well. In the verse in question, 'as-siqayah' refers to the king's drinking-cup that was also used as a measure for the food provisions; it indicated the value of what is measured.

In the same connection, the Arabic word 'saa'' is a synonym of the word 'siqayah', and therefore it also refers to a drinking-cup, a measure for provisions and a utensil to draw water from wells.

Allah the Almighty relates the stratagem used by Yusuf peace be upon him to keep Benyamin with him, saying: 'He placed the drinking-cup in his brother's pack' (Yusuf: 70). In other words, he, i.e. Yusuf, ordered one of his servants to place the royal drinking-cup in Benyamin's camel-pack. A pack which is carried by camels and which contains a traveller's belongings is referred to in Arabic as 'ar-rahl'.

Having mounted their camels and prepared to return to Ash-Sham (northern part of the Arabian Peninsula), they were surprised by the herald's outcry. Allah the Almighty relates this episode: '…A man called out, "People of the caravan! You are thieves!"' (Yusuf: 70) In other words, you owners of the camels, verily, you are thieves. Clearly, theft is a particularly heinous act for which the thief must be punished, especially when the stolen object is valuable.

Apparently, Benyamin agreed beforehand to this plot in order to stay with Yusuf peace be upon him until his parents come to Egypt. Here arise two good questions, ‘Why did Benyamin agree to be involved in this plot if his absence will only deepen Ya’qub’s sadness?’ And, ‘How could Yusuf peace be upon him accuse his brothers of a theft that they did not commit?’

I contend, ‘Let us examine the subtle meanings of the Quran and try to understand its verses in depth. If we study the Quran carefully, we will understand that Ya’qub’s sadness for having lost Yusuf peace be upon him had totally overwhelmed him, and so the loss of Benyamin could not affect him greatly. This is substantiated by the fact that when the sons of Ya’qub peace be upon him returned and recounted to him the story of the drinking-cup and Benyamin’s detainment in Egypt, his only response was, “Alas for Yusuf!” (Yusuf: 84), and he did not mention Benyamin’.

‘As for the accusation of theft, this verse does not explicitly state what exactly was stolen. From Yusuf’s point of view, the brothers had stolen him from Ya’qub peace be upon him and cast him into the well’.

At this point, the Quran states Yusuf’s brothers’ response to the herald’s outcry:

قَالُوا۟ وَأَقْبَلُوا۟ عَلَيْهِم مَّاذَا تَفْقِدُونَ ﴿٧١﴾

And they turned and said, ‘What have you lost?’ [71] (The Quran, Yusuf: 71)

In other words, Yusuf’s brothers turned towards those who had accused them of theft and asked, ‘What have you lost? Why do you accuse us of larceny?’

Here, the Quran states the accusers’ reply:

قَالُوا۟ نَفْقِدُ صُوَاعَ ٱلْمَلِكِ وَلِمَن جَآءَ بِهِۦ حِمْلُ بَعِيرٍ وَأَنَا۠ بِهِۦ زَعِيمٌ ﴿٧٢﴾

They replied, ‘The king’s drinking-cup is missing,’ and, ‘Whoever returns it will get a camel-load [of grain],’ and, ‘I give you my word’ [72] (The Quran, Yusuf: 72)

In other words, Yusuf’s servants exclaimed, ‘The king’s drinking-cup, which is called ‘as-suwa‘’, is missing. The person who finds it will be rewarded with a camel-load of food provisions, for perhaps it was placed unintentionally in one of your bags'. The heralds' chief pledged to reward the person who found the drinking-cup before their bags were inspected. This reward, as previously stated, was a camel-load's worth of food provisions and supplies.

To this accusation of theft, the brothers of Yusuf peace be upon him answered:

قَالُوا۟ تَٱللَّهِ لَقَدْ عَلِمْتُم مَّا جِئْنَا لِنُفْسِدَ
فِى ٱلْأَرْضِ وَمَا كُنَّا سَٰرِقِينَ ﴿٧٣﴾

They said, 'By God! You must know that we did not come to make mischief in your land: we are no thieves' [73] (The Quran, Yusuf: 73)

The saying of Allah the Almighty: 'By Allah!' (ta Allahi) is an oath in Arabic. The letter 'ta'' generally precedes the Divine Name when an oath is accompanied by a sense of surprise or amazement. That is, Yusuf's brothers swore by Allah the Almighty in astonishment for having been accused of theft for such an accusation had never been levelled against them before. Moreover, everyone knew that they did not come to Egypt to make mischief.

In the following verse comes the response of the heralds who had declared that the king's drinking-cup had been stolen:

قَالُوا۟ فَمَا جَزَٰٓؤُهُۥٓ إِن كُنتُمْ كَٰذِبِينَ ﴿٧٤﴾

They asked them, 'And if we find that you are lying, what penalty shall we apply to you?' [74] (The Quran, Yusuf: 74)

This question, which was addressed to the brothers of Yusuf peace be upon him was posed by his servants regarding the pre-established punishment of thieves. That is to say, 'What should they, i.e. the servants of Yusuf, do if they were to find the royal drinking-cup in one of the brother's camel-packs– thereby proving that their claims to innocence were untrue?'

It was known during that time that a person who was caught stealing remained a captive of the owner of the stolen object. This law was employed by Yusuf's paternal aunt who loved him and who had raised him after his mother's death. Remember when Ya'qub peace be upon him wanted to take his son back, the aunt hid a cherished heirloom,(1) which had been passed down to her from her father Ishaq (Issac) peace be upon him under Yusuf's clothes. Having claimed that Yusuf had stolen it, she kept him with her. Consequently, Ya'qub peace be upon him was only able to take his son back after the aunt's death.

Yusuf's objective was therefore to keep his brother with him. Clearly, he was aware of this law (before hiding the drinking-cup in Benyamin's camel-pack). In this way, he made his brothers unknowingly decide to let Benyamin stay with him, which was exactly what he longed to do.

The Quran mentions their response, saying:

قَالُوا۟ جَزَٰٓؤُهُۥ مَن وُجِدَ فِى رَحْلِهِۦ فَهُوَ جَزَٰٓؤُهُۥ ۚ كَذَٰلِكَ نَجْزِى ٱلظَّـٰلِمِينَ ٧٥

And they answered, 'The penalty will be [the enslavement of] the person in whose bag the cup is found: this is how we punish wrongdoers' [75] (The Quran, Yusuf: 75)

Hence, the brothers themselves decreed the judgment, and even added emphatically: '…this is how we punish wrongdoers' (Yusuf: 75). In this way, the brothers indirectly helped Yusuf peace be upon him to achieve his goal; that is, to keep his full-brother with him in Egypt. With his brothers' acting in accordance with his plan, Yusuf peace be upon him ordered for their belongings to be inspected.

Allah the Almighty then says:

---

(1) The precious object is in reference to the belt that Ishaq peace be upon him used to wrap around his waist. Yusuf's paternal aunt was Ishaq's eldest child. She fetched Ishaq's belt and strapped it around Yusuf peace be upon him under his clothes. In this way, she was able to retain him and not return him to Ya'qub peace be upon him. Consequently, Yusuf peace be upon him remained with her until her death. See ibn Kathir, Tafsir Al-Quran Al-'Azhim, 2/486.

فَبَدَأَ بِأَوْعِيَتِهِمْ قَبْلَ وِعَآءِ أَخِيهِ ثُمَّ ٱسْتَخْرَجَهَا مِن وِعَآءِ أَخِيهِ ۚ
كَذَٰلِكَ كِدْنَا لِيُوسُفَ ۖ مَا كَانَ لِيَأْخُذَ أَخَاهُ فِى دِينِ ٱلْمَلِكِ إِلَّآ أَن
يَشَآءَ ٱللَّهُ ۚ نَرْفَعُ دَرَجَٰتٍ مَّن نَّشَآءُ ۗ وَفَوْقَ كُلِّ ذِى عِلْمٍ عَلِيمٌ ﴿٧٦﴾

[Joseph] began by searching their bags, then his brother's, and he pulled it out from his brother's bag. In this way We devised a plan for Joseph – if God had not willed it so, he could not have detained his brother as a penalty under the king's law – We raise the rank of whoever We will. Above everyone who has knowledge there is the One who is All Knowing [76] (The Quran, Yusuf: 76)

The plan was to begin by inspecting the bags of his ten half-brothers before searching through those of his full brother. This way, Yusuf peace be upon him allayed in advance their suspicions that he had asked for Benyamin to be brought to Egypt in order to carry out this plan. The inspection of the full-brother's bags resulted in the discovery of the king's drinking-cup, and as a result, the law of the people of Ya'qub peace be upon him was imposed and Benyamin was 'condemned' to stay with Yusuf peace be upon him. This clever plan proves Yusuf's intelligence and wisdom.

Clearly, we see that the Lord Glorified is He willed for a plot to be carried out in Yusuf's interest; a fact which is proved by the Saying of Allah: '…In this way We devised a plan for Yusuf…' (Yusuf: 76). This clearly means that He the Almighty contrived a plot to Yusuf's advantage.

Allah the Almighty continues: '…if Allah had not willed this, he could not have detained his brother according to the king's law...' (Yusuf: 76). In other words, Yusuf peace be upon him could not have retained his brother under the Egyptian king's law if the brothers had not accepted in advance that their law for theft entailed confinement of the thief.

Allah the Almighty continues: 'We raise the rank of whoever We will. But above everyone who has knowledge, there is One Who is All Knowing' (Yusuf: 76). It is clear that Allah the Almighty endowed Yusuf peace be upon him with an exalted position, devised a plot for him and enabled him to achieve his goal. It goes without saying that Yusuf merited these rewards. Moreover, it is worth repeating that the Lord the Most High had raised Yusuf's rank of knowledge and wisdom.

This scheme was not carried out for the sake of harming Benyamin (Benjamin) or causing him any harm. Rather, Allah the Almighty wanted the best for both Yusuf peace be upon him and his brother. Let me mention in passing that there are many calamities which befall people, but the victims rarely perceive the blessings that are born out of such trials.

The believer must realise that unexpected trials do occur in life. When these happen, he must believe that the trial he was inflicted with is ultimately beneficial for him. For example, Yusuf's brothers had previously plotted against Yusuf, but what was the ultimate result of their plot? Allah the Almighty willed for their plot to ultimately benefit Yusuf peace be upon him.

Furthermore, the verse tells us that Allah Glorified is He endowed Yusuf peace be upon him with deep knowledge, as He the Almighty says: 'But above everyone who has knowledge, there is One who is All-Knowing' (Yusuf: 76).

The Arabic expression 'dhi 'ilm' used in the verse refers to someone who is endowed with knowledge. Here, we should take into account that this expression entails both a subject and an object: first of all there is the person who receives knowledge, and second the knowledge which is received. Combined together, they give rise to a man of learning (sahib 'ilm) above whom there is always '…One Who is all Knowing' (Yusuf: 76). In other words, this verse denotes that Knowledge is one of Allah's Attributes.

Here arises a question, which is, 'How did Yusuf's brothers respond to Benyamin's captivity?' They were clearly dumbfounded and their first reaction was to reprimand Benyamin for having the drinking-cup in his bag. We should note that it was not out of pity that they defended him and tried to prevent him from being detained by Yusuf peace be upon him. Rather, they just wanted to keep their promise to their father that they will guard him.

The following verse sheds light on the brothers' previous attitude toward Benyamin: 'Although we are many, Yusuf and his brother are dearer to our father than we are...' (Yusuf: 8).

Obviously, the brothers knew that Yusuf peace be upon him and his brother were born to a different mother, namely Rachel. Had Benyamin been their full-brother, they will have undoubtedly shown more compassion toward him.(1) Benyamin exclaimed to his brothers, ‘Verily, he who packed my bags is also the one who packed yours’.

At this point, one of the brothers said, ‘By Allah! The children of Rachel, none has brought down more calamities upon us than you!’ to which Benyamin retorted, ‘The children of Rachel have suffered more on account of your deeds than you have suffered on account of theirs!’

The Quran states the reply of the brothers:

قَالُوٓا۟ إِن يَسْرِقْ فَقَدْ سَرَقَ أَخٌ لَّهُۥ مِن قَبْلُ ۚ فَأَسَرَّهَا يُوسُفُ فِى نَفْسِهِۦ
وَلَمْ يُبْدِهَا لَهُمْ ۚ قَالَ أَنتُمْ شَرٌّ مَّكَانًا ۖ وَٱللَّهُ أَعْلَمُ بِمَا تَصِفُونَ ﴿٧٧﴾

[His brothers] said, ‘If he is a thief then his brother was a thief before him,’ but Joseph kept his secrets and did not reveal anything to them. He said, ‘You are in a far worse situation. God knows best the truth of what you claim’ [77]
(The Quran, Yusuf: 77)

This verse clearly indicates that the brothers claimed that the seeds of thievery were planted in Benyamin just as they were planted in his full-brother beforehand. This statement, which was an attempt by the brothers to distance themselves from Benyamin’s apparent misdeed, brought to light their resentment of Yusuf peace be upon him and Benyamin.

Their saying: ‘If he has stolen, his brother stole before him’ (Yusuf: 77) is referred to in technical linguistic terms as a conditional statement. A conditional statement means that one incident occurs in response to a previous one. There are some events which take place all by themselves, while others occur as a result of another happening.

(1) In his exegesis of the Quran, Al-Qurtubi said, ‘When they saw that (the drinking-cup was discovered in Benyamin’s camel-pack) Yusuf’s brothers lowered their heads and approached the youngster, saying, “Woe unto you, Benyamin! Never have we seen such a day. Your mother Rachel gave birth to two children who are both thieves”. But Benyamin retorted, “By Allah! I did not steal it (the cup) and I have no idea who put it in my camel-pack”.’ See Al-Qurtubi, Jame‘ Al-Bayan, 5/3569.

Let us offer an example to fully clarify this point; you may tell a student, ‘If you study your lessons, you will succeed’. Here, two distinct events are involved: studying and succeeding. According to this statement, succeeding is dependent on the act of studying, and studying must take place before the second event occurs.

Here, the brothers’ statement: ‘If he has stolen, his brother stole before him…’ (Yusuf: 77) is intended to clarify the reason why Benyamin was involved in the theft.

Another example of a conditional statement is found in the following verse: ‘But if they reject you, indeed Messengers were rejected before you…’ (Al-‘Imran: 184).

That is Allah the Almighty made the following clear to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: if they refuse to believe the Revelations that you communicate from on high, do not then be saddened or distressed, for all the Messengers before you were also rejected by many of their people. This is because previous Prophets conveyed a Message that the people denied, and therefore their present rejection of your Message, Prophet Muhammad, is almost inevitable. It is through this reasoning that one understands how the conditional statement in this verse is met.

In the verse under discussion, the Lord the Most High relates the brothers’ statement: ‘If he has stolen, his brother stole before him…’ (Yusuf: 77). In other words, ‘Governor of Egypt, do not be astonished by Benyamin’s theft for it is a trait which is characteristic of the children of Rachel’. The irony of this statement is that the brothers were unknowingly addressing Yusuf peace be upon him the son of Rachel!

Any unjust misfortune that befalls righteous people is prone to cause a certain degree of imbalance. We witness this when a righteous person, for example, is angered or upset by someone’s slanderous words. Such libels harm him and stimulate him to respond angrily to such slanderous words.

It is precisely for this reason that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him advised us how to deal with anger in the following Hadith in which he said, ‘When one of you becomes angry while standing, he should sit down. If the anger leaves him, well and good; otherwise he should lie down’.(1) This will help the angry person to constrain his anger. Moreover, this position of the body helps channel the energy of one’s anger into other directions.

In the verse in question, Yusuf peace be upon him did not respond to their insults; hence Allah Glorified is He says: ‘…Yusuf kept his secrets…’ (Yusuf: 77). Clearly, he could have told the brothers about what had happened with his aunt who, out of love, had accused him of stealing the belt in order to keep him by her side. However, he wanted to conceal his identity and let events take their natural course: ‘…Yusuf kept his secrets and did not reveal anything to them...’ (Yusuf: 77).

We should take into consideration that Yusuf peace be upon him kept his secrets and did not reveal anything to his brothers despite the fact that he was hurt by their comments. He, nevertheless, thought to himself: ‘You are in a far worse situation. Allah knows best the truth of what you claim’ (Yusuf: 77). This is due to the fact that they, i.e. the brothers, were the ones who took him as a young boy to play and then threw him into the well, leaving his father forlorn. In addition, he did not steal anything from his aunt–in fact, he himself was stolen; they stole a son from his father.

If these were the thoughts that were going through Yusuf’s mind, there is no doubt that they were reflected in his bodily demeanour. His inner thoughts which were reflected on his facial and bodily expressions might have communicated his feelings to his brothers. After all, speech is merely a series of words which carry a meaning to the listener, and the content of Yusuf’s thoughts must have been communicated through his non-verbal reactions.

As for Allah’s saying: ‘…Allah knows best the truth of what you claim’ (Yusuf: 77), it denotes that He knows best the truth of what Yusuf’s brothers were claiming, either by their words or gestures.

(1) This Hadith is narrated by Imam Ahmad, Abu Dawud and ibn Hibban on the authority of Abu Dharr Allah be pleased with him. Al-Haythami said, ‘This Hadith was narrated by Ahmad. Its narrators are upright, and attentive’. See Imam Ahmad, Musnad, 5/152; Abu Dawud, Sunnan, Hadith no. 4782; ibn Hibban, Sahih, Hadith no. 5688; and Al-Haythami, Majma‘ Az-Zawa’id, 8/71.

As for the word 'tasifun' (you claim), it is often used referring to speech, as in Allah's saying: 'But do not say, for the lie that your tongues describe (tasifu), "This is lawful and this is unlawful"…' (an-Nahl: 116). In other words, the falsity of your words is clearly manifest. Upon close analysis, we understand that the word 'tasifun' (you claim) used in the verse under discussion is often used to refer to the speech whose falseness is self-evident.

The Quran then relates the brothers' response to Yusuf peace be upon him,

قَالُواْ يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلۡعَزِيزُ إِنَّ لَهُۥٓ أَبٗا شَيۡخٗا كَبِيرٗا فَخُذۡ أَحَدَنَا
مَكَانَهُۥٓۖ إِنَّا نَرَىٰكَ مِنَ ٱلۡمُحۡسِنِينَ ٧٨

They said, 'Mighty governor, he has an elderly father.
Take one of us in his place. We can see that you are a very good man' [78] (The Quran, Yusuf: 78)

With these words, they began negotiating with Yusuf peace be upon him and appealing to his merciful nature by saying: '…he has an elderly father...' (Yusuf: 78).

We notice that the Arabic word 'kabir' (old or great) can be used in many different ways. For example, an elderly person is referred to as 'kabir'. In addition, it is used to refer to someone of high position.

In the same connection, Allah the Almighty also says: '…a grievous word (kaburat kailmah) it is that comes out of their mouths; they speak nothing but a lie' (al-Kahf: 5). Furthermore, the Arabic word 'kibr' denotes 'majesty', whereas the expression 'al-kibar fi as-sin' denotes old age.

In the verse in question, Yusuf's brothers said: '…he has an elderly/great father...' (Yusuf: 78). Thus, they asked him to deal leniently with Benyamin because his father was either dignified or aged.

That is to say that his father was a great man and the chieftain of his tribe, and when he hears that his son was detained for having stolen something, he will be greatly hurt. So, please take this fact into consideration, governor of Egypt, and protect his father's honour, might, and reputation by concealing his son's misdemeanour for the sake of his father.

Another possible interpretation is that the brothers’ words refer to the fact that the father is an old man who does not have the strength to hear the shocking news, especially since he had already lost one of his children.

So, they made him an alternative offer: ‘…Take one of us in his place…’ (Yusuf: 78). In other words, they asked Yusuf peace be upon him to complete his hospitality, for he had hitherto welcomed them warmly, had given them a nice place to stay and provided them with food provisions for free. After all, anyone who treats someone with such kindness will surely be responsive to their plea by taking one of the other brothers instead of the young boy.

These appeals were intended to speak to Yusuf’’s heart, but the law decreed that only the culprit could be punished for his wrongdoings. This is precisely why the brothers’ appeals to Yusuf peace be upon him fell on deaf ears. In the following verse, the Lord the Most High relates Yusuf’s response, saying:

قَالَ مَعَاذَ ٱللَّهِ أَن نَّأۡخُذَ إِلَّا مَن وَجَدۡنَا مَتَٰعَنَا عِندَهُۥٓ إِنَّآ إِذٗا لَّظَٰلِمُونَ ﴿٧٩﴾

He replied, ‘God forbid that we should take anyone other than the person on whom we found our property: that would be unjust of us’ [79] (The Quran, Yusuf: 79)

In this verse, Yusuf peace be upon him seeks refuge in Allah the Almighty from the sin of detaining someone who did not steal the kings drinking-cup. After all, what wrong will such a person have done? Clearly, no one deserves to be punished for a sin committed by someone else.

When we come across the word ‘i’dhan’ with ‘nunation’ at the end, we may infer that a part of the sentence has been omitted. In other words, Yusuf peace be upon him said, ‘If we were to detain someone with whom the royal drinking-cup was not found, then, behold, we will be among the evildoers’.

The letter ‘nun’ at the end of ‘idhan’ serves as an ellipsis in the sentence above.

We come across an analogous example from the Quran in Allah’s saying: ‘And you at that time (hina i’thin) (sit) looking on’ (al-Waqi‘a: 84). That is, when one becomes a helpless onlooker at the moment of someone’s death when the soul reaches the dying person’s throat. The letter ‘nun’ at the end of the word ‘hina i’thin’ (at that time) replaces the above-mentioned sentence.

So Yusuf peace be upon him wanted to remind his brothers that he had no right to detain any of them other than Benyamin (Benjamin) since the royal drinking-cup was found in the latter's bags. Nor will it have been right for Yusuf peace be upon him to wrong or punish someone on account of another person's offenses. By this stage, Ya'qub's sons understood that the quandary could not be easily remedied, especially since theft is a serious form of misconduct.

Allah the Almighty describes the brothers' state in the following verse, saying:

فَلَمَّا ٱسۡتَيۡـَٔسُواْ مِنۡهُ خَلَصُواْ نَجِيّٗاۖ قَالَ كَبِيرُهُمۡ أَلَمۡ تَعۡلَمُوٓاْ أَنَّ أَبَاكُمۡ
قَدۡ أَخَذَ عَلَيۡكُم مَّوۡثِقٗا مِّنَ ٱللَّهِ وَمِن قَبۡلُ مَا فَرَّطتُمۡ فِي يُوسُفَۖ فَلَنۡ أَبۡرَحَ
ٱلۡأَرۡضَ حَتَّىٰ يَأۡذَنَ لِيٓ أَبِيٓ أَوۡ يَحۡكُمَ ٱللَّهُ لِيۖ وَهُوَ خَيۡرُ ٱلۡحَٰكِمِينَ ﴿٨٠﴾

When they lost hope of [persuading] him, they withdrew to confer with each other: the eldest of them said, 'Do you not remember that your father took a solemn pledge from you in the name of God and before that you failed in your duty with regard to Joseph? I will not leave this land until my father gives me leave or God decides for me – He is the best decider [80] (The Quran, Yusuf: 80)

The verb 'ya'isa' denotes the loss of hope. Note that the Quran uses the verb 'istay'asa' here rather than 'ya'isa' which implies that they had not merely lost hope, but they were in fact completely disheartened.

In short, the brothers pleaded in different ways for Yusuf peace be upon him to change his position, but their pleas were of no avail, and their petitions were met with closed doors. It is as if the brothers had lost so much hope that they begged for 'hopelessness' itself to befall them. This degree of desperation only ensues from circumstances that are devoid of the slightest flicker of hope.

Moreover, every time they had some hope, their means of attaining a solution were blocked. In their despair, they asked for hopelessness, as it were, to convince Yusuf peace be upon him to let Benyamin return with them to their father.

The verse continues: ‘They withdrew to hold a conference with each other…’ (Yusuf: 80). In other words, they retired to discuss in private, away from the onlookers: Yusuf peace be upon him the governor, his assistants and their brother Benyamin who was the object of the quandary.

It is worth pointing out that the act of ‘al-munajah’ (holding a conference in private) denotes communicating something secretly, which in turn implies that the issue under discussion should not be disclosed to others.

We should note that the verb ‘khalasu’ (to withdraw) ends with a plural pronoun, while ‘najiyyan’ (the state of holding a conference) is singular. This is actually one of the issues about which a reader, who does not possess a deep knowledge of Arabic, may be unable to understand and thus question, ‘How does the Quran place a plural verb with a singular noun?’ We contend, ‘If the inquirers who posed this question were endowed with a deep understanding of the Arabic language, they will have known that this grammatical structure is entirely acceptable in Arabic’. A case in point is Allah’s saying: ‘And the angels, moreover, are [Prophet Muhammad’s] assistants or support’ (at-Tahrim: 4).

Clearly, such questioners are oblivious to the fact that there are certain Arabic words whose form does not change when they are used in the singular or the plural form. In the aforementioned verse, we can say that describing the angels (plural) using the word ‘zhahir’ (‘assistants’ or ‘a support’ which can be both singular and plural) implies that they were uniting their strength into a single cohesive force.

Let us offer another example to clarify this point; the Quran relates what Ibrahim (Abraham), ‘The Friend of the All-Merciful’, said in the following verse: ‘He said, “Have you then considered what you have been worshipping; You and your fathers before you. Surely they are enemies to me; but not (so) the Lord of the worlds’ (ash-Shu'ara': 75-77).

In these aforementioned verses, the word ‘‘aduwun’ is translated ‘enemies’ although it is in the singular, that is literally the enemy. In other words; Ibrahim’s statement incorporated all the deities that the idol worshipers venerated, and considered them one single enemy.

Likewise, words like ‘siddiq’ (the trustworthy person) or even ‘‘adl’ (a just person) can be used to refer to both the singular and the plural.

Let us look at the word ''adl' (a just person) more closely. In the Egyptian judicial system, for example, when a decree is being decided, the judge does not issue it individually; rather, he comes to a decision after consulting with two other judges. Accordingly, the decree is issued by three individuals: the head of the court and two other judges sitting on his right and left, and serving as advisors. Afterwards, when the decree is issued, one says, 'The judges rule is just (using ''adl', in the singular form)'. That is to say that one does not say, 'Each judge has made a just ruling'.

The same applies to the word 'najiyya' in the verse under discussion. Having lost all hope of leniency on Yusuf's part, the brothers withdrew from the people around them, forming one group separate from everyone else, to counsel each other.

Normally, the eldest brother gives the first opinion, for he usually has enough experience and wisdom to make the right decision.

Here, Allah the Almighty relates the eldest brother's opinion: '…the eldest of them said, "Do you not remember that your father took a solemn pledge from you in the name of Allah and before that you failed in your duty with regard to Yusuf? I will not leave this land until my father gives me leave or Allah judges for me—He is the best to judge' (Yusuf: 80).

From this verse, it can be inferred that the speaker is oldest of the other brothers, or that he is the leader of the caravan. Having noticed that his brothers were resigned to the idea of returning to their father without Benyamin, who was detained by the governor of Egypt, the eldest brother expressed his opinion. He reminded his brothers that their father had taken a solemn pledge from them to bring Benyamin back to him if that were humanly possible. He also reminded them that their history with their father was blemished, for he had once entrusted them with Yusuf peace be upon him but they did not keep their word.

Based on this line of reasoning, the eldest brother decided to stay in Egypt and not to return to his father until the latter gave him leave; until Allah Glorified is He wills for the governor of Egypt to return Benyamin to him; or until he, i.e. the eldest brother, dies in Egypt. The position adopted by the eldest brother is in fact a defensive one for he is too ashamed to return to his father without Benyamin. One might say that he chose to let his brothers bear the burden of facing Ya’qub peace be upon him.

In fact, it appears that the one who suffered the most from this quandary was the father, Ya’qub peace be upon him. After all, he had lost Yusuf peace be upon him during the youngster’s first trip, and now in the second trip he has not only lost Benyamin but also the eldest brother who was the leader of the caravan.

In a word, the eldest brother’s decision to stay behind only increased the torment of their father. During their private meeting, the brothers should have discussed and examined the dilemma from different angles. Unfortunately, the eldest brother who is the leader of the caravan put an end to the much-needed discussion. When they asked their eldest brother about what they should do, he gave the following answer which is stated in the following verse:

ٱرْجِعُوٓا۟ إِلَىٰٓ أَبِيكُمْ فَقُولُوا۟ يَـٰٓأَبَانَآ إِنَّ ٱبْنَكَ سَرَقَ وَمَا
شَهِدْنَآ إِلَّا بِمَا عَلِمْنَا وَمَا كُنَّا لِلْغَيْبِ حَـٰفِظِينَ ﴿٨١﴾

So go back to your father and say, “Your son stole.
We can only tell you what we saw. How could we guard against the unforeseen? [81] (The Quran, Yusuf: 81)

Thus, the eldest brother–or the leader of the caravan–ordered his brothers to return to their father and to relate to him the details of what had happened, ‘Benyamin was accused of theft and we only recount this story after the servants of the governor found the royal drinking-cup in his bags. Furthermore, we do not know whether someone had put it secretly in his bag or it was a plot or an intrigue’.

‘O father, we are only telling you what was conveyed to us. The governor punished him in conformity with our law. Based on our interactions with Benyamin, we do not accuse him of theft, but the undeniable fact that the royal drinking-cup was discovered in his bags lies at the root of this problem’.

However, the eldest brother knew that Ya’qub peace be upon him might not believe his sons, since their history with their father gave the latter reasons to doubt the story. That is why the eldest brother–or the leader of the caravan–advised his brothers to tell the father the following:

وَسْـَٔلِ ٱلْقَرْيَةَ ٱلَّتِى كُنَّا فِيهَا وَٱلْعِيرَ ٱلَّتِىٓ أَقْبَلْنَا فِيهَا ۖ وَإِنَّا لَصَٰدِقُونَ ﴿٨٢﴾

Ask [in] the town(1) where we have been; ask the people of the caravan we travelled with: we are telling the truth [82]
(The Quran, Yusuf: 82)

In other words, they said to Ya'qub, 'Father, if you doubt what we say, then you can ask the people of the town where Benyamin (Benjamin) was captured; for the incident drew much attention, as it took place in front of a crowd of people. Moreover, the caravans that we travelled with also witnessed the incident. Above all, one of the palace servants announced publicly that the king's drinking-cup had been lost, and the camel-packs were inspected in public'.

'Therefore, if you want to ascertain that what we say is true, ask the people of the caravan we travelled with, for they are just as aware of the incident as we are. You can also confirm our report with the people of the town where the incident happened'.

One point is worth noting in the discourse of Yusuf's brothers to their father; which is related in Allah's saying: 'Ask [in] the town where we have been and the people of the caravan we travelled with…' (Yusuf: 82). We know that every action has a doer, object, spatial location, time, cause, and an amount of energy which allows it to actualise.

In some cases, the particular spatial location is the primary factor of an action. In such cases, an Arabic speaker attributes the action to its spatial location, as in the verse in question: 'Ask [in] the town…' (Yusuf: 82).

Clearly, this means, 'Ask the people of the town'. One might also say that the news of Benyamin's theft was so widespread that even inanimate objects knew of the episode in detail. Another possible interpretation is that Yusuf's brothers asked their father to order the earth itself to inform him of the episode; for, after all, he was a Prophet who was inspired by Allah Glorified is He.

(1) In his exegesis, Al-Qurtubi said, 'Al-Qaryah (the town) in this verse implies Egypt. However, it has also been suggested that it denotes one of Egypt's towns where the brothers stopped and were given provisions'. Note that there is a rhetorical style in the beginning of this verse, that is, the true subject of the verb 'ask' is omitted. The original sentence is as follows, 'Ask the people of the town'. See Al-Qurtubi, Jame' Al-Bayan, 4/3580.

Then Yusuf's brothers said to their father: '…and [ask the people of] the caravan we travelled with…' (Yusuf: 82). The Arabic word 'al-'r' (caravan) denotes riding animals, including she-camels, camels, donkeys and mules, which carry loads.

The brothers' saying: '…and [ask the people of] the caravan we travelled with…' (Yusuf: 82) implies that the caravan had a more important role to play other than that of a simple mount.

What happened at the battle of Badr is a case in point. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him set out to intercept the caravan which was coming from Ash-Sham and was carrying bales of merchandise. This assault was intended as a payback for the properties of Al-Muhajirun (the migrants) that the disbelievers of Mecca had appropriated. Moreover, the caravan was inadequately protected by guards and shepherds.

However, the warriors who came from Mecca were called by a special name, 'an-nafir', that is, the fighters who fled (nafaru) [to the caravan] to ward off the battalion of believing Muslims, and not just warriors (al-muqatileen). Thus, every major detail of an event is named after a significant episode that took place during the unfolding of that event.

Back to the verse in question; Allah the Almighty narrates the conversation between Yusuf's brothers and their father when the former returned without both Benyamin and their eldest brother or the leader of the caravan. Allah the Almighty states: '…and [ask the people of] the caravan we travelled with…' (Yusuf: 82). It may be expected that the inspection of the brothers' bags took place at a slight distance from any built-up area.

The palace soldiers–or Yusuf's servants–inspected the brothers' camel-packs in which the king's drinking-cup was discovered. This location where that happened was called 'qaryah' (town), just as nowadays we designate an area as 'customs' in which all packages entering or leaving a country are inspected.

Thus, the statement: '…Ask in the town where we have been…' (Yusuf: 82) implies, 'Ask the people of the town in which our bags were inspected'.

Likewise, their saying: '…and [ask the people of] the caravan we travelled with...' (Yusuf: 82) implies, 'Ask those travellers in other caravans who accompanied us on the trip'.

It worth noting that the brothers repeated their assertion: '…we are telling the truth' (Yusuf: 82) because they were aware of the fact that they had previously lied to their father. Thus they wanted him to verify the veracity of their words this time, for if their father asked about the incident, he will find out that they were indeed telling the truth. In short, the brothers suggested for their father to ask others because this time they were telling the truth.

Allah the Almighty narrated their statement using the following nominal sentence: '…we are telling the truth' (Yusuf: 82). The brothers knew well that their father was once suspicious of them when they brought the shirt of their younger brother, Yusuf, stained with false blood, claiming he had been eaten by a wolf.

Afterwards, Allah the Almighty relates Ya'qub's response to his sons:

قَالَ بَلۡ سَوَّلَتۡ لَكُمۡ أَنفُسُكُمۡ أَمۡرٗاۖ فَصَبۡرٞ جَمِيلٌۖ عَسَى ٱللَّهُ أَن
يَأۡتِيَنِي بِهِمۡ جَمِيعًاۚ إِنَّهُۥ هُوَ ٱلۡعَلِيمُ ٱلۡحَكِيمُ ﴿٨٣﴾

Their father said, 'No! Your souls have prompted you to do wrong! But it is best to be patient: may God bring all of them back to me – He alone is the All Knowing, the All-Wise' [83] (The Quran, Yusuf: 83)

As a matter of fact, any action that is opposed by the conscience, whose consequences one fears and from which one naturally shrinks in shame, are actions which weigh heavily on the human soul. Moreover, in order to undertake such hideous actions, the soul must undergo a process of stimulation and incitement. This act of incitement is called 'sawwal' in Arabic. In this connection, Allah the Almighty states Ya'qub's response: 'No! Your souls have prompted (sawwalat) you to do wrong!...' (Yusuf: 83). In other words, your own souls had incited you to commit a terrible act that no upright person could approve of. This is not the first time that Ya'qub peace be upon him addressed his sons in this (reprimanding) manner. When they came with Yusuf's shirt stained with false blood, Ya'qub retorted: '…Nay, your souls have prompted (sawwalat) you to make up a tale! [For me] patience is good and most fitting; from Allah alone I seek help to bear what you are saying'' (Yusuf: 18). Having heard their account, Ya'qub peace be upon him prayed to Allah the Almighty for help. This plea suggests that the brothers' claims and the events of the story had not yet come to an end. Rather, they will be followed by incidents which require a great amount of patience as well as Divine Succour.

Notice that the verse under discussion is different from the latter verse, for while they both mention the evil soul's incitement and Ya'qub's imploring Allah the Almighty for patience, one senses in the verse under discussion that the winds of relief and respite were drawing near. This is because Ya'qub peace be upon him said: 'May Allah bring all of them back to me...' (Yusuf: 83). In this verse, he was praying for a hope which indicates the approaching relief, which took place soon after this.

Certain absentminded people ask, 'Why did Ya'qub peace be upon him state: "May Allah bring all of them back to me..." (Yusuf: 83) when the only absent individuals were Yusuf peace be upon him and his full brother?' We answer, 'Have you forgotten the eldest brother who refused to leave Egypt without Ya'qub's explicit permission or Allah's Relief?'

To recapitulate: Ya'qub peace be upon him was, at that time, missing three of his sons: Yusuf peace be upon him Benyamin and Sham'oon (Simon). For this reason, he said: 'May Allah bring all of them back to me...' (Yusuf: 83) rather than 'May Allah bring both of them back to me'.

Allah the Almighty concludes this verse with His saying: 'He alone is the All Knowing, the All-Wise' (Yusuf: 83). Undoubtedly, Allah the Almighty knows the whereabouts of Ya'qub's missing sons, for He is the Omniscient. Moreover, He is All-Wise in His Actions regarding us.

Afterwards, Allah the Almighty continues to state Ya'qub's response:

وَتَوَلَّىٰ عَنْهُمْ وَقَالَ يَٰٓأَسَفَىٰ عَلَىٰ يُوسُفَ وَٱبْيَضَّتْ
عَيْنَاهُ مِنَ ٱلْحُزْنِ فَهُوَ كَظِيمٌ ﴿٨٤﴾

And he turned away from them, saying, 'Alas for Joseph!' His eyes went white with grief and he was filled with sorrow [84] (The Quran, Yusuf: 84)

Ya'qub peace be upon him withdrew from them and sought refuge in solitude, for the news that they imparted to him caused him great sadness. This is because he was, after all, a human being and so he was distressed by Yusuf's absence, for his longing for Yusuf peace be upon him was at the root of his calamities.

In Arabic, one often expresses grief using phrases such as 'wa huznah', 'wa asafah' and 'wa musibatah'. Such expressions imply that one is deeply troubled by some event, as if he were calling out, 'Sadness, come to the fore, because this is your moment!'

Another possible interpretation is that Ya'qub exclaimed: 'Alas for Yusuf!' (Yusuf: 84) because Benyamin was the one, from all his children, who was the most similar to Yusuf peace be upon him.

Ya'qub's loss of Yusuf peace be upon him was the first calamity that befell him. But this (heartbreak) was followed by a second, namely the absence of Benyamin.

Allah's saying: '...His eyes became white...' (Yusuf: 84) means that Ya'qub peace be upon him had shed so many tears that the black pupils of his eyes began to take on a white colour. Ya'qub's eyes 'became white' as a result of his extreme grief which he was concealing from others and constraining within himself.

We should take into account that it is possible for Ya'qub peace be upon him to suppress his anger–triggered by the tragic loss of Benyamin–toward his sons. However, physical reactions to grief cannot be controlled by anyone.

For example, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him wept and shed tears because of the death of his son Ibrahim (Abraham). Abd Ar-Rahman Ibn 'Awf Allah be pleased with him said to him, 'You are crying? Did you not prohibit (your followers) from crying?' He said, 'No. But I prohibited two foolish immoral voices: a voice during a calamity while clawing at one's face and tearing one's clothes, and Shaitan's scream'.(1)

In the same vein, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him also said, 'The eyes shed tears and the heart is grieved, but we will not say [anything] except what pleases our Lord. O Ibrahim! Indeed, we are grieved by your departure'.(2)

Consequently, we realise that Allah the Almighty does not want man to be tough and hard like a rock that never reacts to external events. Rather, He Glorified is He wants man to respond (emotionally) to events; for this human quality should be in one's very nature. After all, Allah the Almighty calls for compassion and this is why the believer should value this quality.

Allah the Almighty created man's emotions and instincts. Had He willed to create humans without these two qualities, He will have clearly done this. However, He endowed mankind with feelings and an innate disposition (towards sentimentality) for specific reasons.

However, when feelings and human nature deviate from their intended function, the Divine Way of Guidance deters them, as this Guidance is intended to regulate and moderate one's impulses that spring from emotions or from human nature. Man's love for food is a case in point. In this case, the Divine Way of Guidance orders you to eat beneficial food, but it prohibits gluttony. The inborn human passion of seeking knowledge is another example that further clarifies this point. The Divine Way of Guidance commands you to know useful things, but not to apply this instinct to spy on others. In addition, Allah the Almighty has endowed us with sexual instincts for the preservation of the human species so that we may multiply and bear children. This does not mean, however, that we should use our sexual instincts to unlawfully satisfy our desires. Hence, we conclude that the Divine Way of Guidance preserves and regulates the natural instincts and emotions for them to be in line with their specific functions. Emotional bonds–for example–cause a father to treat his young child kindly and to care for him. It could therefore be said that the believer should value his natural instincts and emotions.

(1) This Hadith is narrated by At-Tirmidhi on the authority of Jabir ibn Abdullah Allah be pleased with him. At-Tirmidhi graded it as a good Hadith. This Hadith is narrated in this form by At-Tirmidhi, but in Fath Al-Bari it adds, 'the sound produced by singing, distractions or play, and the wind instruments of the devil'. See At-Tirmidhi, Sunnan, Hadith no. 1005; and Fath Al-Bari, 10/174.

(2) This Hadith is narrated by Al-Bukhari and Muslim on the authority of Anas ibn Malik Allah be pleased with him. See Al-Bukhari, Sahih, Hadith no. 1303; and Muslim, Sahih, Hadith no. 2315.

Allah describes Ya'qub peace be upon him saying: '…he was filled with sorrow (kazhim)' (Yusuf: 84), which suggests that he tried his best to control his feelings. This is because the Arabic word 'kazhim' (filled with sorrow) is derived from the expression 'kazhamtu al-qirbah', that is, 'I closed up the water skin'. In other words, I sealed the mouth of the water skin tightly, thereby ensuring that no water will pour out. This is similar to one's constraint of anger or sadness, etc. Allah the Almighty then says:

قَالُوا۟ تَٱللَّهِ تَفْتَؤُا۟ تَذْكُرُ يُوسُفَ حَتَّىٰ تَكُونَ حَرَضًا
أَوْ تَكُونَ مِنَ ٱلْهَـٰلِكِينَ (٨٥)

They said, 'By God! You will ruin your health if you do not stop thinking of Joseph, or even die' [85]
(The Quran, Yusuf: 85)

Here arises the following question, which is, 'Who posed the question in this verse, since Ya'qub peace be upon him had withdrawn from his children?'

We contend, 'Ya'qub peace be upon him not only lived with his sons, but also with his grandchildren. In addition, certain accounts state that a group of people entered upon him and said to him, "By Allah! You have grown frail, Ya'qub even though you have not attained the age of your father Ishaq (Isaac)!"'

In other words, they said to Ya'qub peace be upon him 'Ya'qub, you have become old, weak and in poor health', whereupon Ya'qub peace be upon him said, 'I have become weak because of Yusuf's absence'. Allah the Almighty then reprimanded him for this statement and said, 'Do you complain of your deep sadness to Allah's creation?' This is why he lifted his arms in reply, 'I have made a mistake, my Lord; forgive me!' 'I forgive you' said Allah Glorified is He.(1)

As such, it is clear that Ya'qub peace be upon him was addressed by one of his children or grandchildren, who said: 'By Allah! You will ruin your health (haradan) if you do not stop thinking of Yusuf, or even die' (Yusuf: 85). In other words, you will continue to recall Yusuf peace be upon him and what happened to him until you ruin yourself and die. As for the Arabic word al-harad' (ruining your health), it refers to someone who is on the verge of dying or has already perished.

Ya'qub's response was recounted as:

قَالَ إِنَّمَآ أَشۡكُواْ بَثِّي وَحُزۡنِيٓ إِلَى ٱللَّهِ وَأَعۡلَمُ مِنَ ٱللَّهِ مَا لَا تَعۡلَمُونَ ٨٦

He said, 'I plead my grief and sorrow before God.
I have knowledge from God that you do not have [86]
(The Quran, Yusuf: 86)

As a matter of fact, the act of complaining about one's grief or sorrow to Allah the Almighty is regarded a form of worship. The Arabic word 'bath-th' denotes a calamity that one cannot contain within himself, and therefore shares with someone else.

When a person of great standing does something apparently harmful to an ordinary person, the latter reacts in two possible ways: the first typical reaction is to deal with the great person gently by imploring his kindness and leniency and seeking his forgiveness and pardon. The second possible response on the part of that person in question is to rebel against the person of great standing, while thinking, ‘Let him do as he pleases, I do not care’.

(1) In his Tafsir, As-Suyuti mentioned this account on the authority of Talha ibn Masriful-'Ayyami. As-Suyuti ascribed it to ibn Jarir At-Tabari. Talha said, 'I was informed that a neighbor entered upon Ya'qub and said to him, 'Ya'qub, why is it that you are in such a state of physical weakness and decrepitude. You have not even reached the age of your father?' (The grieving father) replied, 'I have become physically weak and debilitated because of my concern for Yusuf which Allah has inflicted me with'. At this point, Allah revealed the following to Ya'qub, 'Ya'qub, do you complain (of your deep sadness) to one of My creatures?' Ya'qub said, 'Lord, I have made a mistake; forgive me!' Allah then answered, 'I have forgiven you'. Ever since that day, when asked about his state, Ya'qub said: 'I complain of my grief and sorrow before Allah' (Yusuf: 86). See As-Suyuti, Ad-Durr Al-Manthur, 4/571.

In this connection, Allah the Almighty says in His Noble Book: ‘Yet, why did they not, when Our Punishment came to them, humble themselves…’ (al-An‘am: 43). When a misfortune befalls us and we invoke Allah the Almighty the misfortune itself cleanses us from our sins and our forgetfulness of Him. In addition, it reminds us of Him the Almighty for it is He Alone Who can remove grief.

On the other hand, woe unto the person who acts pompously and deems himself to be above all vicissitudes! Indeed, Allah the Almighty showers His Mercy upon those who call out to Him in times of misfortune. At this point, one may ask why Ya’qub peace be upon him did not repeat the words that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him taught us in this regard: ‘Who, when a misfortune befalls them, say, “Surely, we belong to Allah and to Him we shall surely return”’ (al-Baqara: 156). We assert that this prayer is one of the blessings that have been conferred to the followers of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

The following anecdote is pertinent in this respect; when some Muslims entered upon ‘Ali Ibn Abu Taleb peace and blessings be upon him who was suffering from an illness and was moaning in pain, they asked him, ‘Abu Al-Hassan, are you in pain?’ He answered, ‘I seek support and solace (only) in Allah’.

In the verse in question, Ya’qub peace be upon him stated that he only complains of his sorrow and misery to Allah the Almighty for He is Able to remove all harm. This noble behaviour on Ya’qub’s part sprang from the knowledge that was revealed to him and not to his sons and grandchildren. Ya’qub peace be upon him intuitively felt that Yusuf peace be upon him was still alive, as he doubted the fictitious story of the wolf. He had a presentiment that the vision which Yusuf peace be upon him had (secretly) told him will be realised by Allah’s Grace.

Ya’qub’s words stated in the following verse:

يَٰبَنِيَّ ٱذۡهَبُواْ فَتَحَسَّسُواْ مِن يُوسُفَ وَأَخِيهِ وَلَا تَاْيۡـَٔسُواْ مِن
رَّوۡحِ ٱللَّهِۖ إِنَّهُۥ لَا يَاْيۡـَٔسُ مِن رَّوۡحِ ٱللَّهِ إِلَّا ٱلۡقَوۡمُ ٱلۡكَٰفِرُونَ ﴿٨٧﴾

My sons, go and seek news of Joseph and his brother and do not despair of God’s mercy – only disbelievers despair of God’s mercy’ [87] (The Quran, Yusuf: 87)

We notice that the ones who were absent in this situation were three: Yusuf peace be upon him, Benyamin (Benjamin) and the eldest brother who insisted on staying in Egypt until his father gave him permission to return or until Allah the Almighty granted him relief.

We should pay attention to the fact that this verse makes mention of Yusuf peace be upon him and his brother, and excludes the eldest brother–or the leader of the caravan. One may ask why? We opine that the reason for this is that Yusuf peace be upon him and his younger brother were the weaker party who had suffered from the mistreatment of their brothers. Moreover, they were separated from their father at a young age, while no one prevented the eldest brother from leaving Egypt and returning to his father at any time. That is why Ya’qub said: ‘My sons, go and seek news (tahasasu) of Yusuf and his brother…’ (Yusuf: 87).

As for the Arabic word ‘tahasasu’ (seek news), it is derived from the word ‘hassa’ which in turn denotes a sense of perception. These senses of perception are means by which man receives data from the outside world. In fact, information is only gathered if it is perceivable through the senses. Only after being perceived by the senses, is the information transferred to the mental sphere. Thus, we learn that our sense organs are channels which enable us to know about matters. Note that our senses are not limited to the five outward physical senses; in fact, modern scientists have discovered other inward senses which we have discussed on numerous occasions.

Hence, Ya’qub’s command: ‘My sons, go and seek news of Yusuf and his brother…’ (Yusuf: 87) means, ‘Employ your senses to the best of your ability in order to reach the truth of this matter’.

It is known that the word ‘spy’ (al-jasus) refers to someone assigned to undertake reconnaissance and gather information–using many of his senses– of the movements of the enemy. In Arabic, the word 'spy' is referred to as 'jasus' and also ''ayn'.

In common vernacular, one addresses an eavesdropper by saying, 'Look into (literally: smell out) the story behind this or that matter'.

Ya'qub's statement continues: '…and do not despair of Allah's Mercy—only disbelievers despair of Allah's Mercy' (Yusuf: 87). In other words, Ya'qub peace be upon him said to them, 'Beware of telling me, "We searched for them, we employed everything within our means and exhausted all of our energy, but we did not find them", for Allah the Almighty is Ever-Present, and He is Ever-Merciful'.

People of the past used to say, 'There is no calamity as long as You are our Lord'. This means that when you are afflicted with something unbearable, you must seek refuge in Allah the Almighty. In this connection, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is our example; 'When anything distressed him (Prophet Muhammad), he stood up and prayed'.(1) By doing this, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him sought refuge in the Lord of all means and causes; for Allah is above all causality. Test this for yourselves: when dealing with a dilemma, pray, and you will find a solution to your problem before the prayer ends.

As for the Arabic word 'rawh', translated as mercy in the verse at hand, it can be pronounced in two different ways: 'rawh' and 'ruh'. 'Al-Rawh' is literally a scent or a gentle wind that blows and produces a cooling effect. We experience this, for example, while resting during a scorching summer day, when a gentle breeze blows past and refreshes us with its cool winds and pleasant scent. Allah the Almighty refers to this meaning when He says: 'Then happiness (rawh) and bounty and a garden of bliss' (al-Waqi'a: 89) .As mentioned, we can truly appreciate 'al-rawh' on a hot day, when we are resting in a garden, for example, and a gentle breeze blows past, carrying with it the lovely perfume of flowers. As for the Arabic word 'ar-ruh', it is the spirit which

(1) This Hadith is narrated by Imam Ahmad and Abu Dawud on the authority of Hudhayfa ibn Al-Yaman Allah be pleased with him. See Ahmad, Musnad, 5/388; and Abu Dawud, Sunnan, Hadith no. 1319.

Allah the Almighty blows into inanimate things, and through which He gives them life and enables them to move.

Here, Ya'qub peace be upon him mentions an important principle which every believer should try to act upon, namely: '…only disbelievers despair of Allah's Mercy' (Yusuf: 87). This guiding principle of never losing hope in Allah's Mercy is central to our belief because only those who disbelieve in the Existence of Allah the Almighty are at risk of losing hope. This reason is also believed to be the main factor behind the high rate of suicide among atheists; a true believer, by contrast, does not commit such an act, for he knows that there is a Lord Who helps His slaves.

As long as the believer makes use of the available means and causes, Allah the Almighty will confer bounties on him that are beyond cause and effect. This fact is plainly stated in Allah's saying: 'And whoever is careful of [his duty to] Allah, He will make for him a way out, And give him sustenance from [sources] he never expected. And whoever trusts in Allah, He is sufficient for him; surely Allah will bring about what He decrees. Allah indeed has appointed a due measure for everything' (at-Talaq: 2-3).

All of these blessings are conferred on the believer who is conscious of Allah the Almighty. I challenge anyone to find a person of faith who has never been gifted by these blessings. As long as a man carries out his duties and is conscious of Allah the Almighty he will find that unanticipated relief was granted to him after a period of hardship. In short, Allah the Almighty is the believer's Ultimate Refuge. Let us give an example to fully clarify this point; although Allah is beyond comparison. Assume that you are walking down a street with nothing more than one Egyptian Pound in your pocket, and then you lose your one and only pound. Will you feel troubled? Yes. But if you have saved ten pounds in your house, then your sadness over the lost pound will be less intense. Moreover, if you have saved one thousand pounds in your bank account, then you will not be upset for having lost one pound.

Whoever believes in Allah Glorified is He and makes use of the means in this world, will undoubtedly find a solution to his problems and relief from all troubles that he cannot bear relying only on human means. Here, we should pose the following question, 'Why should man lose hope?'As a matter of fact, only atheists lose all hope since they do not believe in God. Moreover, if someone believes in a god that is unaware of his pain; or a god that perceives his worshiper's pain but does not help him–either because it is unable or unwilling to do this–then this god is not a true deity and is not worthy of our belief.

However, the true believer, on the other hand, knows for certain that he worships the Omnipotent God, Allah, Who rewards the believer that makes use of the earthly means and causes by giving them results that are beyond causal circumstances. Moreover, when He withholds something from the believer, this is in itself a Divine Bestowal, for He, the All-Merciful, withholds what will bring harm to him.

Allah the Almighty then draws our attention to another episode in the story, that is, when Yusuf's brothers presented themselves before him in his palace in Egypt. The verse reads:

فَلَمَّا دَخَلُوا۟ عَلَيْهِ قَالُوا۟ يَـٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلْعَزِيزُ مَسَّنَا وَأَهْلَنَا ٱلضُّرُّ وَجِئْنَا بِبِضَـٰعَةٍ مُّزْجَىٰةٍ
فَأَوْفِ لَنَا ٱلْكَيْلَ وَتَصَدَّقْ عَلَيْنَآ ۖ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ يَجْزِى ٱلْمُتَصَدِّقِينَ ﴿٨٨﴾

Then, when they presented themselves before Joseph, they said, 'Mighty governor, misfortune has afflicted us and our family. We have brought only a little merchandise, but give us full measure. Be charitable to us: God rewards the charitable' [88] (The Quran, Yusuf: 88)

Note that Allah the Almighty does not name the person whom the brothers addressed. This is because he is the protagonist of the story: namely, Yusuf peace be upon him. Instead, he is addressed with the following honorary title: 'Mighty governor, misfortune has afflicted us and our family…' (Yusuf: 88). In other words, they, the brothers, said to him, 'Hunger has assailed us to the point of emaciation'. Having addressed Yusuf peace be upon him with this honorary title, the brothers then began to appeal to Yusuf's emotions. After all, he was in power and they were in need.

The brothers' discourse continues: 'We have brought only a little merchandise, but give us full measure. Be charitable to us: Allah rewards the charitable' (Yusuf: 88). We know that they came to Egypt in order to seek news of Yusuf peace be upon him and his brother. And the investigators cunningly chose to flatter and evoke sympathy in order to acquire their needs. By praising the governor as ‘the mighty one’, they were suggesting that he is capable of granting them what they came for, as it was within his power. By complaining of their hunger and emaciation, the brothers were stirring the governor’s sympathy. Furthermore, they declared that they had only a little merchandise to barter for food.

The Arabic word ‘muzjah’ (little) suggests a sum that is to be tendered by the buyer or the seller. A derivative of the word ‘muzjah’, i.e. the word ‘yuzji*’* also appears in Allah’s saying: “Do you not see that Allah drives along (yuzji) the clouds, then gathers them together, then piles them up…’ (an-Nur: 43). That is, the verb ‘yuzji’ denotes ‘to move onwards’. In the light of this verse, what does the word ‘muzjah’ denote?

Let us offer an example from our daily lives–which you can test for yourself–that will shed light on the verse in question. Imagine that you have an amount of money that is made up of old and new bills. When making a purchase, you instinctively pay with the old rather than with the new notes; you will find yourself content to spend your worn bills, and keep your new bills. In some cases, the seller might ask you to exchange one of the old bills for a new one. When spending money, you prefer to get rid of your tatty paper-bills. It is in the light of this human tendency that we may understand the following part of the verse: ‘…only a little merchandise...’ (Yusuf: 88). The word ‘muzjah’ suggests that the merchandise is of low quality. Thus, the hardship that they underwent has made them unable to barter for provisions with high quality merchandise which they had previously done.

Allah the Almighty continues to relate the brothers’ plea, saying: ‘…but give us full measure. Be charitable to us: Allah rewards the charitable’ (Yusuf: 88). In other words, they were begging for the governor to give them a full measure of provisions and not to shorten the measure, despite the fact that their merchandise was disproportional to the provisions they were asking for. Furthermore, they asked the governor to consider the disproportion in the transaction as a form of charity. Thus, they offered him a price higher than their little merchandise: namely, the reward of giving charity. After all, no human being could possibly compensate someone for his charitable acts, as the act of providing a reward for this is the Absolute Right of Allah the Almighty.

At this point, a very good question arises, which is, 'Were they not descendants of a Prophet, and therefore could not accept charity?' To answer this question, we should note that forbidding the progeny of a Prophet to accept charity is a law that only applies to the family of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and therefore only concerns his followers. This legal ruling is derived from his saying, 'Indeed, zakat should not be given to the family of Muhammad; it will be like giving them [something] from the impurities of the people'.(1)

Back to the verse in question; the brothers' appeals had a great impact on Yusuf peace be upon him. The latter looked at them and smiled, thereby revealing his front teeth. Yusuf's front teeth were unlike any front teeth that they had seen.

Allah the Almighty continues:

قَالَ هَلۡ عَلِمۡتُم مَّا فَعَلۡتُم بِيُوسُفَ وَأَخِيهِ إِذۡ أَنتُمۡ جَٰهِلُونَ ٨٩

He said, 'Do you now realize what you did to Joseph and his brother when you were ignorant?' [89]
(The Quran, Yusuf: 89)

The inclusion of the above-mentioned question at this point in the dialogue compelled the brothers to contemplate and ponder carefully in order to discover the true identity of the speaker. The question was accompanied by the following clement words: '…what you did to Yusuf and his brother when you were ignorant?' (Yusuf: 89) These words imply that Yusuf peace be upon him excused his brothers on the grounds that their wrong actions stemmed from ignorance. Furthermore, Yusuf peace be upon him did not address them smugly or arrogantly which is the way that often characterises the people who have such a stature as his. In short, Yusuf's objective was to mitigate the shock of discovering that the speaker was Yusuf himself. That is why he mentioned that their actions were the result of ignorance.

(1) This Hadith is narrated by Imam Ahmad and Muslim in the book of zakat on the authority of 'Abd Al-Mutalib ibn Rabi'a, as follows, 'Indeed, Zakat should not be given to the family of [Prophet] Muhammad, it will be like giving them [something] from the impurities of the people'. See Imam Ahmad, Musnad, 4/166; and Muslim, Sahih, Hadith no.1072.

Let us give an example to clarify this point; assume that you are mistreated by someone in the past. With time, your resentment towards the transgressor allays, and you remind him about his previous actions by saying, 'Your actions in those days were simply the result of your immaturity, but you are now mature and are able to understand the true nature of things'.

The fact that Yusuf peace be upon him addressed the brothers with this benevolent tone implies that he felt sorry for all the calamities that had befallen them. And, when he smiled, the brothers saw Yusuf's four front teeth and so recognised him.(1) The verse below recounts the dialogue which followed; Allah the Almighty says:

قَالُوٓاْ أَءِنَّكَ لَأَنتَ يُوسُفُۖ قَالَ أَنَا۠ يُوسُفُ وَهَٰذَآ أَخِيۖ قَدۡ
مَنَّ ٱللَّهُ عَلَيۡنَآۖ إِنَّهُۥ مَن يَتَّقِ وَيَصۡبِرۡ فَإِنَّ ٱللَّهَ لَا يُضِيعُ
أَجۡرَ ٱلۡمُحۡسِنِينَ ﴿٩٠﴾

And they cried, 'Could it be that you are Joseph?' He said,
'I am Joseph. This is my brother. God has been gracious to us: God does not deny anyone who is mindful of God and steadfast in adversity the rewards of those who do good' [90]
(The Quran, Yusuf: 90)

They, the brothers, recognised Yusuf peace be upon him and discovered the speaker's true identity, whereupon they said: 'Could it be that you are Yusuf?' (Yusuf: 90). We should notice that this is a rhetorical question which serves to highlight their astonishment, bewilderment and delight in having accomplished the mission that Ya'qub peace be upon him had assigned to them.

---

(1) In his Tafsir, Al-Qurtubi said that when Yusuf peace be upon him smiled, his four front teeth resembled stringed pearls. ibn 'Abbas said, 'When Yusuf smiled, they were reminded of him and exclaimed in their astonishment, "Could it be that you are Yusuf?" (Yusuf: 90)' Al-Qurtubi mentioned other accounts of this incident in his Tafsir. See Al-Qurtubi, Jame' Al-Bayan, 5/3591.

Yusuf peace be upon him responded: ‘I am Yusuf, and this is my brother’ (Yusuf: 90). Obviously, they were well aware of the fact that Benyamin was Yusuf’s full brother, but Yusuf peace be upon him included his brother in his answer to imply that Benyamin had also been blessed by Divine Grace, and that Allah the Almighty had honoured them both.

In the verse, Yusuf peace be upon him expressed his gratitude to Allah the Almighty for having been blessed so graciously, saying: ‘Allah has been gracious to us: Allah does not deny anyone who is mindful of Him [Allah] and steadfast in adversity the rewards of those who do good’ (Yusuf: 90). He uttered this general principle for the benefit of his brothers and anyone who listens or reads the Quran. Indeed, he was a living proof of this truth; given everything that he experienced from the day he had his dream to this point in the story.

To recapitulate, Yusuf peace be upon him was the embodiment of these words; for Allah the Almighty had conferred His Grace on him and his brother by relieving them from their calamities. In the end, the two brothers were united.

Yusuf peace be upon him presented the reason for Allah conferring Blessings by saying: ‘…anyone who is mindful of Allah...’ (Yusuf: 90). The one who is mindful of Allah is the one who avoids displeasing Him, fears Him on account of His Majestic Attributes, follows His Divine Way of Guidance, bears any adversity patiently, does not fall short in worshipping and obeying Him, and avoids all sinful acts, no matter how appealing they may seem. Indeed, Allah the Almighty does not fail to reward those who do good and fear Him. It is they who merit His Mercy and Grace both in this world and the Hereafter, on the grounds of being mindful of Him.

Afterwards, Allah the Almighty states the brothers’ response to Yusuf peace be upon him saying:

قَالُوا۟ تَٱللَّهِ لَقَدْ ءَاثَرَكَ ٱللَّهُ عَلَيْنَا وَإِن كُنَّا لَخَٰطِـِٔينَ ﴿٩١﴾

They said, ‘By God! God really did favour you over all of us and we were in the wrong!’ [91] (The Quran, Yusuf: 91)

The expression ‘ta’llah’ (by Allah) is a form of swearing by Allah the Almighty. As for their saying: ‘Allah really did favour you over all of us…’ (Yusuf: 91), it means that Allah the Almighty favoured Yusuf peace be upon him over them, but He did not do this unjustly. Rather, Yusuf merited the kingship and high standing and position that Allah Glorified is He had conferred on him.

Thus, the brothers admitted their wrongdoing to Yusuf peace be upon him and confessed that they had mistreated him when they sought to be loved to the same level as him by their father. In the end, Yusuf gained the love of the Lord of their father, the Lord of the Worlds, which is why they confessed that the state and condition in which they lived was a conclusive proof that they were in the wrong.

We should pay attention to the difference between the word 'khat'in' and 'mukht'in' which both refer to wrongdoers. In order to illustrate the difference, we should recall what the governor of Egypt told his wife: '…but you [wife], ask forgiveness for your sin–you are one of those who do wrong (al-khat'in)' (Yusuf: 29).

Note that the governor said 'khat'in' instead of 'mukht'in'. Both have the same root, but there is a subtle difference in the meanings imparted by the two words; A 'khati'' is someone who knows what actions should be taken but nevertheless transgresses, but the 'mukhti' is someone who acts wrongly despite his intention to do the right thing. It is out of ignorance that the 'mukhti'' errs, while the 'khati'' consciously does wrong.

Having admitted that they were at fault, Yusuf peace be upon him said what Allah the Almighty mentions in the following verse:

قَالَ لَا تَثْرِيبَ عَلَيْكُمُ ٱلْيَوْمَ يَغْفِرُ ٱللَّهُ لَكُمْ وَهُوَ أَرْحَمُ ٱلرَّٰحِمِينَ ﴿٩٢﴾

But he said, 'You will hear no reproaches today. May God forgive you: He is the Most Merciful of the merciful [92] (The Quran, Yusuf: 92)

The word for bitter reproach in Arabic is 'at-tathreeb' which is derived from the word 'ath-tharb' which refers to a thick layer of fat that one finds enveloping the stomach of an animal after it has been slaughtered. If the animal was lean and was not fed adequately, one does not find this layer of fat, 'ath-tharb', because it is consumed by the animal's body for energy.

Therefore, 'at-tathrib' literally suggests that the bitter reproach melted away the fat inside his stomach and caused him to bleed. In fact, the human body, as it were, almost collapses under the weight of reproach.

There is a Hadith which relates that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'When the slave-woman of any of you commits adultery and this (offence of hers) becomes clear, she should be flogged (as a prescribed) punishment, but hurl no reproach at her. If she commits adultery again, she should be punished again by flogging, but hurl no reproach upon her. If she commits fornication for the third time and it becomes clear, then he [her master] should sell her, even if only for a rope of hair'.(1) In other words, they should not say to her, 'You who have done this or that act'. Rather, let her be penalised only according to the divinely revealed law. But if she does not refrain from this act, then it is better for the owner to sell her. Thus, we understand that a bitter reproach or scolding can give rise to stubbornness.

Back to the verse in question; Yusuf peace be upon him said: '…Today, may Allah forgive you: He is the Most Merciful of the merciful' (Yusuf: 92).

At this point, someone may pose the following question, 'Why did Yusuf peace be upon him pray that Allah forgive them on that day? After all, they might have sought His Forgiveness earlier!' We answer, 'Yusuf's praying for their forgiveness was uttered within the limits of his knowledge to put his brothers' hearts at peace'. His statement: '…He is the Most Merciful of the merciful' (Yusuf: 92) implies Yusuf understood the fact that every form of mercy in this world, including that which a person shows to another, is ultimately derived from the Mercy of Allah the Almighty. Yusuf peace be upon him made this statement with certitude that his supplication will be answered since he himself had pardoned their past mistreatment towards him; clearly, it befits Allah to forgive them for Allah the Almighty is more Merciful to them than Yusuf.

The discourse between Yusuf peace be upon him and his brothers is subsequently focused on their father, Ya'qub peace be upon him. Having been informed of what had happened to his father after being separated from him,

---

(1) This Hadith is narrated by Muslim on the authority of Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him. See Muslim, Sahih, Hadith no. 1703.

Yusuf peace be upon him said to his brother what Allah the Almighty relates in the following verse:

ٱذْهَبُوا۟ بِقَمِيصِى هَٰذَا فَأَلْقُوهُ عَلَىٰ وَجْهِ أَبِى يَأْتِ
بَصِيرًا وَأْتُونِى بِأَهْلِكُمْ أَجْمَعِينَ ﴿٩٣﴾

Take my shirt and lay it over my father's face:
he will recover his sight. Then bring your whole family back to me' [93] (The Quran, Yusuf: 93)

Yusuf peace be upon him knew that his father used to close his eyes tightly out of grief, and that he was about to lose his sight. He therefore ordered his brothers to take the shirt that he used to wear to his father.

Some books of history relate that the eldest brother who once refused to depart from Egypt and had said: 'I will not leave this land until my father gives me leave or Allah judges for me—He is the best to judge' (Yusuf: 80), addressed Yusuf saying, 'Governor of Egypt, I am the one who carried the shirt stained with false blood to my father. As such, allow me to carry this shirt to my father in order for the reward of this action to erase my past sinful deed'.(1)

Regarding the shirt which was to be taken to the father, Yusuf peace be upon him specifically instructed his brothers to: '…lay it over my father's face: he will recover his sight' (Yusuf: 93). Notice that Yusuf peace be upon him did not say, 'your father's face', rather, he said: '…my father's face...' (Yusuf: 93). This clearly shows the fatherly warmth which Yusuf peace be upon him had missed since his absence from his family which caused his father's deep sadness. As for the phrase: '…he will recover his sight' (Yusuf: 93), it means that either his sight will be restored or that the father will be able to see Yahudh (Judah) in front of him in full health.

Yusuf peace be upon him added: '…Then bring your whole family back to me' (Yusuf: 93). This command is a very precise Quranic expression. In other words, Yusuf is commanding them to return with anyone who is related to them or who works for them.[1] Note that Yusuf peace be upon him did not command to 'Bring your immediate families'; this was so that they do not come back with only the people of great standing.

(1) In his Tafsir, Al-Qurtubi said, 'As-Suddi related that Yahudh (Judah) carried the shirt. The latter addressed Yusuf in the following manner, "I am the one who presented the shirt with false blood (to my father) and caused him so much grief, and I am the one who will carry (this second shirt) to bring him joy and to restore his sight". For this reason, Yahudh carried the shirt'. See Al-Qurtubi, Jame' Al-Bayan, 5/3593.

It is also worth pointing out that in his instructions to his brothers to come back to him with their family, Yusuf peace be upon him did not make mention of his father. This is because he was the governor of Egypt, and such a command necessitated that the father will come. But by not mentioning Ya'qub peace be upon him by name, Yusuf peace be upon him is, in fact, exalting him.

Allah the Almighty continues:

وَلَمَّا فَصَلَتِ ٱلْعِيرُ قَالَ أَبُوهُمْ إِنِّي لَأَجِدُ رِيحَ يُوسُفَ ۖ لَوْلَآ أَن تُفَنِّدُونِ ﴿٩٤﴾

Later, when the caravan departed, their father said,
'You may think I am senile but I can smell Joseph' [94]
(The Quran, Yusuf: 94)

The verb 'fasalat' (set out) literally denotes that a thing which was attached to another became unfastened. The expressions 'fasalat al-'ir' means that the caravan had left the city and had begun its journey. That is to say that the caravan had left the borders of Egypt and was heading toward Ya'qub peace be upon him. At that time, Ya'qub peace be upon him told his grandchildren who were present: '…I can smell Yusuf…' (Yusuf: 94).

We know that the shirt which was sent with the eldest brother carried the smell of Yusuf peace be upon him. However, Ya'qub's grandchildren did not believe him, which is why the latter added: 'You may think I am senile...' (Yusuf: 94). In other words, I smell the scent of Yusuf, even if you might call me senile. The word for senile in Arabic is 'tafnid' which is the period of mental decay which is caused by aging.

Among the remarkable discoveries that modern science has made is that sounds and images leave traces in the air. This is in spite of the fact that our human senses inform us that sounds or images vanish instantaneously in air. In addition, modern scientists are now attempting to use various radiations to piece together the image of, say, a group of people who were seated somewhere one or two hours beforehand. Such attempts prove that images emit radiations and shadows which hover around their source for some time before dispersing.

[1] In his Tafsir, Al-Qurtubi related that Masruq said, 'The relatives of the brothers added up to ninety-three, including all males and females'. See Al-Qurtubi, Jame' Al-Bayan, 5/3593.

The same is true for sounds. Modern scientists are trying to piece together the sounds that were emitted in the past. They affirm that nothing in the universe is lost, as everything in the universe is preserved in one form or another.

If images and sounds cannot be lost, the same is true for smells. Note that a dog, for instance, detects a scent from far distances. Nowadays, dogs are even used by police to detect drugs. It is precisely for this reason that dogs are trained to work at airports and the borders of countries. The animals are created with a divinely gifted ability to recognise someone's smell among thousands of other smells.

In addition, modern science, which has been bestowed by Allah the Almighty on man, is now searching for a means to construct past images or retrieve sounds from surrounding spaces. Based on these two points, it should not be difficult to believe that when the caravan left the city gates and began its journey back to Ya'qub's home, he was able, through divinely imparted means, to smell the scent of Yusuf peace be upon him emanating from the shirt which was carried by the caravan.

If someone should ask, 'Why is it that Ya'qub peace be upon him detected Yusuf's fragrance only after the caravan had left the city walls and was en route to him?' We answer: 'This is because when the caravan was moving within the city, the scent of Yusuf's shirt was mixed with other city odours. Indeed, any city has many different smells, and rarely does one smell dominate over others. In contrast, in the open countryside, a gust of wind can carry a fragrance over long distances without being impeded by other smells and obstacles'.

We, Muslims, believe that everything in the universe is conserved in some form and cannot simply disappear; a fact which is proven by the saying of Allah the Almighty: 'And most surely there are keepers over you: honourable recorders' (al-Infitar: 10-11).

Every action that you carry out is recorded in your book of deeds, which is why your record will be put in front of you and you will be commanded to read it. At that time, your own self will be sufficient as a reckoner against you.

Back to the verse under discussion; those who were in the company of Ya'qub peace be upon him responded to his statement by saying:

قَالُوا۟ تَٱللَّهِ إِنَّكَ لَفِى ضَلَـٰلِكَ ٱلْقَدِيمِ ﴿٩٥﴾

But [people] said, 'By God! You are still lost in that old illusion of yours!' [95] (The Quran, Yusuf: 95)

It is as if they were tired of listening to Ya'qub peace be upon him speaking of Yusuf, and thus dismissed his words by retorting, 'How long are you going to be lost in your old illusion?' By using the word 'dalah' (illusion), they do not mean deviation from the Divine Way of Guidance; rather, they were referring to Ya'qub's actions which are unrelated to piety, such as his extreme love of Yusuf peace be upon him, his attachment to him, longing for his return, frequent mentioning of his name and anticipating that he will meet him, etc. Those who were with Ya'qub did not understand his attitude towards Yusuf, as they thought that the latter had died.

Finally, the bearer of good tidings came to Ya'qub peace be upon him; Allah the Almighty says:

فَلَمَّآ أَن جَآءَ ٱلْبَشِيرُ أَلْقَىٰهُ عَلَىٰ وَجْهِهِۦ فَٱرْتَدَّ بَصِيرًا ۖ قَالَ أَلَمْ
أَقُل لَّكُمْ إِنِّىٓ أَعْلَمُ مِنَ ٱللَّهِ مَا لَا تَعْلَمُونَ ﴿٩٦﴾

Then, when the bearer of good news came and placed the shirt on to Jacob's face, his eyesight returned and he said,
'Did I not tell you that I have know- ledge from God that you do not have?' [96] (The Quran, Yusuf: 96)

Finally, the bearer of good tidings arrived. According to some narrations, the bearer of good tidings was either Yahudh (Judah) or the eldest brother who refused to depart from Egypt without his father's permission or a solution from Allah the Almighty for the problem of Benyamin's detainment.

As we have seen, Yusuf's servants accused Benyamin of theft to realise Yusuf's desire to keep his brother by his side.

So, the bearer of good tidings came to the father with Yusuf's shirt, and he placed it over the father's face as Yusuf peace be upon him had instructed. Having done this, Ya'qub peace be upon him no longer had any reason to weep, and he became ecstatically happy. He reacted with great joy because during his days of deep sorrow over Yusuf peace be upon him when he cried so often that his eyes turned white, Allah the Almighty inspired to him that Yusuf peace be upon him was still alive, and this resulted in Ya'qub weeping due to his intense longing to see his son again.

Likewise, Yusuf peace be upon him had received a Divine Inspiration wherein he was informed that laying the shirt over his father's face will, by Allah's Grace, restore Ya'qub's eyesight. Needless to say, the joy also had a deep psychological impact on Ya'qub's health. Thus, the victory of truth and Prophethood was eventually realised.

Ya'qub peace be upon him said: '…Did I not tell you that I have knowledge from Allah that you do not have?' (Yusuf: 96) This rhetorical question was not intended to humiliate the brothers, but rather to affirm the veracity of the prophecies and news communicated by Prophets, for the reality corroborated Ya'qub's previous words: 'My sons, go and seek news of Yusuf and his brother, and do not despair of Allah's Mercy—only disbelievers despair of Allah's Mercy' (Yusuf: 87).

Therefore, when you receive a piece of information from someone who is infallible, you should not doubt it, for the normal mind grasps the realities which are only within its capacity. However, there are realities that are beyond a person's mental grasp.

Furthermore, when someone infallible speaks to you of realities that are beyond a person's mental grasp, be sure not to dismiss his words, regardless of whether you have understood him or not, and even if his words are beyond your mental capacity to understand.

At this point, Yusuf's (Joseph's) brothers confessed their sins; their confession is related in Allah's saying:

قَالُوا۟ يَـٰٓأَبَانَا ٱسْتَغْفِرْ لَنَا ذُنُوبَنَآ إِنَّا كُنَّا خَـٰطِـِٔينَ ﴿٩٧﴾

The [brothers] said, ‘Father, ask God to forgive our sins – we were truly in the wrong’ [97]
(The Quran, Yusuf: 97)

Thus, the brothers admitted their sins and addressed Yaqub (Jacob) peace be upon him with the title of ‘father’ so that he might pray to Allah the Almighty to forgive their numerous sinful acts. After all, the brothers harmed their father and caused him to grieve. Such offenses are not forgiven unless the wrongdoer confesses their sins. Notice that the brothers said, ‘…we were truly in the wrong.’ (Yusuf: 97) This statement clearly indicates that they were aware of the right course of action but chose to act otherwise.

Afterwards, Allah the Almighty rstates Yaqub’s response, saying:

قَالَ سَوْفَ أَسْتَغْفِرُ لَكُمْ رَبِّىٓ ۖ إِنَّهُۥ هُوَ ٱلْغَفُورُ ٱلرَّحِيمُ ﴿٩٨﴾

He replied, ‘I shall ask my Lord to forgive you:
He is the Most Forgiving, the Most Merciful’ [98]
(The Quran, Yusuf: 98)

We should notice that Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him had previously told them: ‘You will hear no reproaches today. May Allah forgive you: He is the Most Merciful of the Merciful’ (Yusuf: 92). However, in the verse under discussion, their father states, ‘I shall ask my Lord to forgive you...’ (Yusuf: 98). Ya`qub (Jacob) peace be upon him did not say, ‘I will soon ask my Lord to forgive you’. The reason is that it takes elderly people more time to carry out an action than youths. That is why their father delayed invoking Allah to forgive them for a later time.

In his exegesis, Imam Al-Alusi explains why the position of Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him with regard to asking Allah the Almighty to forgive his brothers differs slightly from that of his father, saying, ‘Ya`qub (Jacob) peace be upon him delayed asking for their forgiveness because asking for a brother to forgive his siblings is different from asking a father to forgive his sons. A brother does not have the same rights as a father, and a father's anger is greater than that of a brother.'

Moreover, the sins referred to in the verse are the brother's major sins from which Ya`qub (Jacob) peace be upon him suffered over very long years. Interestingly, some opine that Ya`qub (Jacob) peace be upon him delayed asking for their forgiveness until dawn because Allah the Almighty answers the supplications at that time.

Afterwards, Allah the Almighty draws our attention to the moment when Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him was reunited with his entire family after they had moved to his dwelling in Egypt. Allah the Almighty says:

فَلَمَّا دَخَلُوا۟ عَلَىٰ يُوسُفَ ءَاوَىٰٓ إِلَيْهِ أَبَوَيْهِ
وَقَالَ ٱدْخُلُوا۟ مِصْرَ إِن شَآءَ ٱللَّهُ ءَامِنِينَ ﴿٩٩﴾

Later, when they presented themselves before Joseph, he drew his parents to him – he said, 'Welcome to Egypt: you will all be safe here, God willing' [99] (The Quran, Yusuf: 99)

We know that Yusuf's (Joseph's) grandfather, Ishaq (Issac) peace be upon him was not present, and that it is the father's side and not the mother's which predominated during that period of time, which is why the word 'parents' in this verse refers to Yusuf's (Joseph's) father and his maternal aunt because his mother had passed away.(1)

It appears that Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him received them ceremoniously in Egypt, for they were welcomed by Egypt's dignitaries and officials before they entered the country. This first welcome was intended to alleviate their travel fatigue, and it is during this reception that Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him drew his parents to him.

He peace be upon him then accompanied his family as they entered Egypt and said, 'Welcome to Egypt: you will all be safe here, Allah willing.' (Yusuf: 99) Thus, Yusuf's (Joseph's) family was officially welcomed twice.

(1) In his exegesis, Al-Qurtubi stated that Rachel is the mother of Yusuf (Joseph) and Benjamin, and she died while giving birth to Benjamin. See Al-Qurtubi, Jama' Al-Bayan, 5/3598.

When Allah the Almighty says: he drew his parents to him (Yusuf: 99), He is describing the warmth with which Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him and his parents – who had long been separated – greeted each other. After all, the father was longing to see his son. Moreover, there is no doubt that he had heard from his sons of Yusuf's (Joseph's) high standing and stature. Likewise, Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him was yearning to meet his father again.

Being left to our instinctive emotions, our reactions when we meet people have no rules. They are emotional reactions stemming from feelings of longing, love, respect etc. Let us offer an example to illustrate this point. There are certain individuals that you simply greet with a handshake, while there are others whom you hug and welcome warmly upon meeting them, for you are overcome by joy. All these reactions have no specific rituals. A proof of this fact is that Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him drew his parents to himself and hugged them.

An analogous instance from the life of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him took place at the Battle of Badr. Prior to the fight, he was holding a pointed spear in his hand and lining men in rows. He passed by Sawad ibn Ghaziya from the tribe of Bani `Uday ibn An-Najjar who happened to be standing out of line – in other words, being out of line from the other warriors, and he was making the line of men uneven. Seeing that Sawad ibn Ghaziya was out of line, Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him poked him in the belly with his spear and said, 'Stand in line, Sawad.' Sawad replied, 'You harmed me! Yet Allah has sent you with Truth and Justice, so grant me retribution for causing me this pain.' Thereupon, Messenger Muhammad exposed his belly and said, 'Take your revenge,' but Sawad hugged him and kissed his belly. Prophet Muhammad asked, 'Why are you doing this, Sawad?' The latter responded, 'Messenger of Allah, we are where we are – meaning at the threshold of mortal combat – and I wanted my last interaction with you to be for my skin to touch yours.' So, Messenger Muhammad prayed to Allah the Almighty to confer His Bounty on Sawad.'(1)

Allah the Almighty says:

---

(1) See ibn Hisham, Sirat ibn Hisham, 2/626; and ibn Kathir, Al-Bidayah wa An-Nihayah, 3/271.

وَرَفَعَ أَبَوَيۡهِ عَلَى ٱلۡعَرۡشِ وَخَرُّواْ لَهُۥ سُجَّدٗاۖ وَقَالَ يَٰٓأَبَتِ هَٰذَا تَأۡوِيلُ رُءۡيَٰيَ مِن قَبۡلُ قَدۡ
جَعَلَهَا رَبِّي حَقّٗاۖ وَقَدۡ أَحۡسَنَ بِيٓ إِذۡ أَخۡرَجَنِي مِنَ ٱلسِّجۡنِ وَجَآءَ بِكُم مِّنَ ٱلۡبَدۡوِ مِنۢ بَعۡدِ أَن
نَّزَغَ ٱلشَّيۡطَٰنُ بَيۡنِي وَبَيۡنَ إِخۡوَتِيٓۚ إِنَّ رَبِّي لَطِيفٞ لِّمَا يَشَآءُۚ إِنَّهُۥ هُوَ ٱلۡعَلِيمُ ٱلۡحَكِيمُ ١٠٠

And took them up to [his] throne. They all bowed down before him(1) and he said, 'Father, this is the fulfilment of that dream I had long ago. My Lord has made it come true and has been gracious to me – He released me from prison and He brought you here from the desert – after Satan sowed discord between me and my brothers. My Lord is most subtle in achieving what He will; He is the All Knowing, the Truly Wise [100] (The Quran, Yusuf: 100)

Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him took his parents up to his throne because he did not want to be situated in a symbolically superior position. This act reflects his love, reverence, and respect towards his parents.

As for the Arabic word al-a`rsh (throne), it refers to the seat from which the king handles his political affairs. The family bowed down in worship to Allah the Almighty for having been united once again. We should consider that they did not bow down in worship to Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him; rather, they bowed down in worship to the only One worthy of that; Allah the Almighty.

In the same connection, I say to those who tried to argue about why Ya`qub's (Jacob) family prostrated to Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him 'Are you more zealous of caring for Allah's rights than Allah Himself'? In other words, it is Allah Glorified is He the One Who inspired Ya`qub (Jacob) and his children to do so.

(1) Al-Hassan Al-Basri maintained that the prostration was not in the form that we Muslims know; in fact, it was a custom in which the person saluting would tilt his head forward; such was their way of greeting. Ath-Thawri, Ad-Dahak and others said, 'The prostration resembled the traditional Muslim prostration, the difference being that this prostration was a form of salutation rather than worship. In his exegesis, Al-Qurtubi explains that the exegetes of the Quran unanimously agree that the prostration, whichever form it took, was a salutation and not a form of worship.' See Al-Qurtubi, Jama' Al-Bayan, 5/3600.

After all, it is Allah the Almighty Who states the fact that Yusuf's (Joseph's) family prostrated to him. Moreover, it is He Who ordered the angels to prostrate before Adam peace be upon him.(1) Why then do some people interpret these verses to mean that the angel bowed down in worship to Adam? The true believer understands that the prostration of the angels before Adam was a form of obedience to a Divine Command. In addition, Adam was created by Allah the Almighty from clay and He blew His Spirit into him. Therefore, commanding the angels to prostrate before him is meant to show their gratitude for Allah's creation of humankind.

The same is true for the prostration of Ya`qub's (Jacob) family to Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him; it is a form of giving thanks to Allah the Almighty for reuniting them. Moreover, Allah the Almighty states this fact in the verse in question, and He does not declare Ya`qub's (Jacob's) family sinful for doing such an act.(2) Thus, their prostration was meant to offer their salutations to Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him as he was perfectly capable of returning their greetings in the same way.

Once again, it must be emphasised that their prostration before Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him was not intended as a form of worship, for worship is an act that is carried out by an inferior who is trying to approach his superior, but the worshipped being does not reciprocate the worship. If the act of prostration in worship was to anyone other than Allah the Almighty then its doer is punished for this misdeed, for prostrating in worship to anyone other than Him the Almighty is absolutely forbidden.

Worshiping Allah the Almighty implies following His commandments and avoiding His prohibitions. Therefore, the prostration in the verse in question is a group reaction stemming from their gratitude for being granted relief after hardship and sadness. Allah the Almighty rewards for such act of worship.

(1) `This is a reference to Allah's saying: 'And when We said to the angels: Make obeisance to Adam they did obeisance…' (al-Baqara: 34)

(2) Allah the Almighty has abrogated this (custom) in our Shari'a. Furthermore, He replaced the custom of genuflection with exchanging words of salutation. Qatadah said, 'Such was the salutation reserved for kings in their time, and Allah the Almighty has given this community of the faithful (that is, the Muslims) greetings of peace, that is, As-Salamu `Alaykum, which is the greeting of the people of paradise.' See Al-Qurtubi, Jama' Al-Bayan, 5/3600.

The greeting offered by a servant, which can be reciprocated by another or even answered in a better manner, is something which Allah the Almighty does not prohibit and it has nothing to do with worship.(1)

We must, therefore, realise that the family's prostration to Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him can be reconciled by means of reason which agrees with the language of The Quran, while considering the circumstances of the story.

If we ponder Ya`qub's statement and the sadness that he suffered, as well as Yusuf's (Joseph's) brothers' compunction for their past actions and for the hardship that they underwent, we will surely conclude that the prostration was intended to show their gratitude to Allah the Almighty Who controls all things. This way of comprehending the matter is better than making unjustified claims. Let us ask the following question, 'Did they perform this prostration without Allah's Knowledge of it'? Of course, they did not.

After this part of the verse, we come across words addressed by Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him to his father, 'Father, this is the fulfilment of that dream I had long ago. My Lord has made it come true....' (Yusuf: 100). The dream referred to in this verse is the first scene in the story of Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him. In this regard, Allah the Almighty relates the latter's words as follows, 'I dreamed of eleven stars and the sun and the moon: I saw them all bow down before me.' (Yusuf: 4)

In the verse under discussion, Yusuf (Joseph) said, 'My Lord has made it come true (Yusuf: 100). This statement indicates that his dream has been fulfilled. Indeed, Yusuf's (Joseph's) father and brothers realised this when they prostrated to him in salutation and gratitude. As stated above, they– the eleven brothers, the father and the aunt who replaced the mother – did not prostrate with the intention of worshiping Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him. Finally, this means that the dreams of prophets are inevitably fulfilled. In the same connection, someone may pose the following question, 'What about the unfulfilled dream of Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him in which, Allah the Almighty orders him to sacrifice his son"? After all, Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him was on the verge of carrying out the command, and Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him was resigned to Allah's Decree. We contend; 'Only prophets are legally obliged to undertake the commands which are revealed to them in dreams. This is because Satan cannot penetrate their dreams. In other words, prophets are infallible with regards to demonic attacks in the dream-state.

(1) `Anas ibn Malik narrated 'We asked, 'Messenger of Allah should we bow to each other if we meet?' He responded, 'No.' Then we asked, 'Should we hug each other?' He again responded, 'No.' Then we asked, 'Should we shake each other's hand?' He responded, 'Yes.' This Hadith is narrated by Al-Qurtubi in his Tafsir and he ascribed it to ibn A`bd Al-Barr in his book At-Tamhid. See Al-Qurtubi, Jam` Al-Bayan, 5/3600.

However, if a normal human being were to claim that he had a dream in which he was ordered to carry out some specific action, we would say, 'You are not obliged to carry out this order which you dreamt of. After all, Islamic law does not oblige you to do so, not to mention that Satan is able to penetrate into your dreams.'

In contrast to normal mortals, Ibrahim's (Abraham's) performing the command– which came to him in a dream – of sacrificing his son, and his attempt to do so stem from his legal binding to orders which come to him in dreams.

Allah the Almighty speaks of this incident to show us the great tribulation which Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him faced. In addition, this anecdote reveals his utter submission to Allah's Decree and his willingness to meticulously carry out every order. Allah the Almighty states this fact in the following verse, 'And when his Lord tried Ibrahim (Abraham) with certain words, he fulfilled them. He said, "Surely I will make you a leader of men."' (al-Baqara: 124) The hardest of tests which Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him passed through was to obey the command of sacrificing his son with his own hands. That is why I always insist that only the prophets are obliged to obey the commands that they receive in dreams. Normal people, however, must consider dreams that are contrary to the Divine Way of Guidance to be of demonic origins.

Back to the verse in question; Allah Glorified is He continues to state the remainder of Yusuf's (Joseph's) speech, saying, 'and has been gracious to me— He released me from prison...' (Yusuf: 100). Here arises the following question, 'Why did Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him not chronologically mention the misfortunes which he had to endure, such as when his brothers cast him in the well'? We contend: 'He did not want to bring up past incidents which would spoil his long-awaited reunion with his family. However, he mentioned other calamities which he endured after the incident of the well, including his enslavement and incarceration after refusing to succumb to the desires of the governor’s wife. He also recalled how Allah the Almighty has been gracious toward him and released him from prison. Furthermore, after being liberated, he was blessed in many ways, including his ascension to power.

Someone might also proclaim that the story is not harmonious since some incidents are mentioned while others are omitted. We answer that the story is in perfect harmony because we should make a distinction between historical accounts whose purpose is to relate historical facts and stories whose purpose is to relate morally and spiritually significant narratives of the past.

The verse in question is centred on the union of the brothers, the father, and the aunt. Therefore, there is no need for stating chronological facts which would cause dissention. This is especially true since Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him had previously said, ‘You will hear no reproaches today. May Allah forgive you: He is the Most Merciful of the Merciful’ (Yusuf: 92).

Moreover, Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him had previously addressed them with benevolence by attributing their misdemeanour to ignorance on their part; a fact which is crystal clear in the saying of Allah, ‘He said, “Do you now realise what you did to Yusuf (Joseph) and his brother when you were ignorant?”’ (Yusuf: 89)

In the verse under discussion, Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him evokes the blessings that Allah the Almighty bestowed upon him, saying, ‘this is the fulfilment of that dream I had long ago. My Lord has made come true’ (Yusuf: 100). Furthermore, he gratefully acknowledges Allah’s Grace by saying, ‘and has been gracious to me— He released me from prison’ (Yusuf: 100). The previous part of the verse only mentions the grace that was bestowed upon Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him, whilst the next part mentions Allah’s Grace to his family, ‘and He brought you here from the desert’ (Yusuf: 100).

The verb ahsan (to be gracious) is sometimes followed by the particle ila (to) and thus means that someone has been gracious to me. Other times, it is followed by the particle ba` as in the verse in question. In other words, the Graciousness of Allah the Almighty permeated all aspects of Yusuf’s (Joseph’s) life; He made him a ruler and brought his family from the desert.(1) On the other hand, when the word ihsan is followed by the particle ila, this means that graciousness is bestowed specifically upon Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him for only the latter may benefit from it.

To recap, Allah the Almighty has endowed Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him with two types of graciousness: one type which is specifically bestowed upon him, and another restricted to his family.

He considered their arrival from the desert as a form of Divine Graciousness because people of the desert live in a secluded and primordial state. They do not settle in a fixed location. They do not belong to a society, nor have solid houses to live in. Furthermore, they subsist on flora and rainwater, and they carry their belongings on camelback, roaming from one region to another. People of the desert are deprived of the blessings offered by civilisation. In urban areas, everything that you need is within your grasp. However, life in the desert compels man to seek his livelihood in different places of the earth. Therefore, life in civilised cities is more settled than life in the desert.

The Arab poet Ahmad Shawqi(2) Allah rest his soul portrays the difference between life in the desert and in the city in the following fictitious argument between someone who zealously defends life in the desert, and another who is equally passionate about defending city life. The poet says:

'Behold, ibn Jurayj, for I am the arid desert,

And (I carry on) in this parched subsistence.

And (I subsist) from he who is drawing milk from the goats,

And from he who is igniting the fire somewhere else.

(Unlike) those who listen to the songs of Ma`bad and Al-Ghariq,

We are tormented by howling hyenas!

---

(1) In his exegesis, Al-Qurtubi says, 'It is related that Ya`qub (Jacob) lived in Can`an, and that he belonged to a people who were rural herdsmen. Some opine that Ya`qub (Jacob) was not born in the desert, but that he moved to the desert where he lived.' See Al-Qurtubi, Jame' Al-Bayan, 5/3602.

(2) Ahmad Shawqi is an innovative poet and was the 'prince of (Arab) poets' of his time. He is still looked up to as the greatest Arab poet of the modern age.

They (city dwellers) eat exquisite meals,
And we drink our livestock’s milk.’

Ibn Jurayj is complaining of the hardships and monotony of desert life in which he only sees the usual sights such as of goats being milked and fires being lit. Unlike the people of the city, the desert people are not enjoying the voices of the famous singers of their days. Rather, they listen to the sounds of howling hyenas. The desert people do not eat meals prepared by cooks; rather, they drink milk that is produced by their livestock.

Layla, who is zealously defensive of the desert, then retorts:

‘O ibn Jurayj, Hind has wrongly abused the desert!
And (unduly) critical in her judgment was she!
For the desert is naught but the abode of the generous,
And the dwelling place of (men of) pure conscience.
To her belongs the horizon where the sun dawns,
And city dwellers possess the place where dusk begins.
(The desert women) are like sweet basil extending to the horizon,
But (so few are) city women that they (resemble) basil sprouting from a flowerpot!
Consumed by love are they, while the city ladies
Are more attentive to their wellbeing than to love!’

The Arabic word i`tasafat in the first line means ‘to wrongly abuse’. In other words, Hind has wrongly abused the desert. Then the speaker numerates the virtues of the desert, pointing out that the desert women are like sweet basil stretching as far as the eye can see, while the women of cities evoke the image of a basil sprout growing in a flowerpot or any other container.

Then the poet speaks of the virtues of desert people, and he takes pride in the fact that desert women are passionate lovers who are consumed by their love, even though their beloved cannot assure them material comfort. The poet alleges that the desert woman is so consumed by love that she becomes inflicted with tuberculosis and dies. By contrast, the city women’s good health follows her falling in love.

Back to the verse in question, Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him expresses his gratitude to Allah the Almighty for having been so gracious to him and to his family who was brought from the desert to live in the civilised land of Egypt. The newly arrived family beheld the stark contrast between the parched life of the desert and the easy and soft life of the city.

Thereafter, Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him briefly mentions the animosity that his brothers had once felt toward him, saying, '…after Satan sowed discord between me and my brothers…' (Yusuf: 100). Clearly, this is a conciliatory reference to the conflict between Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him and his brothers for he attributed it to the discord that was sown by Satan. In other words, the dispute did stem from a shortcoming within their souls. This verse suggests that the brothers' discord was the result of Satan's whispers that had the effect of a painful prick which triggers the person to act harmfully. This image is derived from a goad with which a horse trainer commands his horse. Unlike a stab, a prick is a poke which stirs someone into action.

In this vein, Allah the Almighty warns us against the works of Satan in the following verse, 'And if a false imputation from Satan afflicts you, seek refuge in Allah.' (al-A'raf: 200) Everyone knows that the animosity of Satan towards mankind has long existed, and by seeking refuge in Allah the Almighty from Satan, you obtain protection from demonic forces. In this regard, Allah the Almighty says, 'surely, those who guard (against evil), when a visitation from Satan afflicts them they become mindful, then lo! They see.' (al-A'raf: 201) This verse clearly shows that when man recalls the animosity between him and Satan, he should safeguard himself against dark satanic whispers by strengthening himself with faith in Allah the Almighty.

Allah the Almighty concludes the verse in question: '… My Lord is most subtle in achieving what He will; He is the All Knowing, the Truly Wise.' (Yusuf: 100) Indeed, Allah the Almighty is the Omniscient Who manages all things.

As for the word lutf, it implies lightness, and its antonym is kathafa, that is, heaviness or density. Something which is latif (light) has very light body mass. However, when lutf is understood in its aspect of subtleness, one could say that the subtler something is, the more rigorous it is, as it cannot be impeded by any obstacle.

When we consider Allah's attribute of having Subtle Knowledge, we understand it in the sense that there is nothing that can stand in the way of His Divine Will and that He knows the location of all things. Indeed, Allah the Almighty is the All-Aware and the Knower of subtleties. Thus, nothing can escape Allah's Sublet Knowledge, nor can anything be hidden from Him.

I repeat, there is nothing in this world which can prevent the Divine Will from unfolding, and Allah the Almighty knows the locations of all entities in existence. In other words, Allah's Glorified is He Knowledge is absolute. Furthermore, He is All-Wise and handles every event with precision. No person can contribute anything to Allah the Almighty for He has Absolute Perfection.

Thereafter, Allah the Almighty states Yusuf's (Joseph's) prayer in the following verse, saying:

رَبِّ قَدْ ءَاتَيْتَنِى مِنَ ٱلْمُلْكِ وَعَلَّمْتَنِى مِن تَأْوِيلِ ٱلْأَحَادِيثِ ۚ فَاطِرَ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضِ
أَنتَ وَلِىِّۦ فِى ٱلدُّنْيَا وَٱلْءَاخِرَةِ ۖ تَوَفَّنِى مُسْلِمًا وَأَلْحِقْنِى بِٱلصَّٰلِحِينَ ﴿١٠١﴾

My Lord! You have given me authority; You have taught me something about the interpretation of dreams; Creator of the heavens and the earth, You are my protector in this world and in the Hereafter. Let me die in true devotion to You. Join me with the righteous' [101] (The Quran, Yusuf: 101)

We know that Lordship implies creating something from naught, supplying dependent creatures with sustenance and providing a setting in which procreation is possible to ensure the survival of the species. Moreover, these variables must interrelate in a harmonious manner.

Indeed, Allah the Almighty created things from naught, ensured the continuation of life by supplying creatures with sustenance and He sustained the life of the human species through marriage and reproduction. In the same connection, we should note that every human receives their share from the bestowal of Lordship, whether he is a believer or a disbeliever. Moreover, everything within creation is subservient to all human beings, for Allah the Almighty has brought human beings into existence, and therefore ensured their subsistence.

As Islam teaches us, Allah the Almighty not only imparts upon His believing servants the blessings of Lordship but also grants them with the bestowal of Divinity embodied in the Divine Way of Guidance. So, when Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him proclaims, 'My Lord! You have given me authority…' (Yusuf: 101), he implies that it is Allah the Almighty Who granted him dominance, power and authority. This is so because no one – including the wicked oppressors – can overpower Allah the Almighty. It is precisely for this reason that Allah the Almighty says in another verse, 'Say, "O Allah, Master of the Kingdom! You give the kingdom to whomsoever You pleases and takes away the kingdom from whomsoever You pleases, and You exalts whom You pleases and abases whom You pleases in Your Hand is the good; surety, You has power over all things."' (Al-'Imran: 26) Obviously, the act of granting dominion is never met with resistance by rulers; however, taking away dominion is often resisted by whoever is losing power. Moreover, Allah the Almighty honours and humbles whom He wills.

When a believer truly grasps the meaning of this verse, he realises with certitude that there is no fleeing from Allah's predestination. The believer will realise that granting or taking away of power are both blessings from Allah the Almighty. Likewise, being honoured or humbled by Allah the Almighty is a blessing, because humility, far from being a privation, prevents man from falling into vanity and pride and from harming other people's faith.

Concerning the above-mentioned verse, some people said, 'We must refer to an implicit meaning, that is, while the act of granting dominion and honouring is good, the act of taking away dominion and humiliating is evil'. Such people say this because their statement is based on the assumption that this verse contains two blessings and two privations. We contend: 'What you deem to be a privation is in fact a blessing from Allah the Almighty since everything He wills is good'.

Back to the verse in question; Yusuf's (Joseph's) statement, 'My Lord! You have given me authority (al-mulk) …' (Yusuf: 101) requires that we distinguish between the meaning of al-mulk and al-milk. Everyone possesses certain things such as clothes, a pen, house, furniture etc. Such items are called al-milk (possessions). As for al-mulk (dominion), it is to have control over those who possess things.

Allah the Almighty has granted certain people dominion over His creatures. He firstly granted the people ownership of their possessions and then granted some of them dominion over their possessions. Allah the Almighty grants and withdraws power from people in such a way, for power is never absolutely in one person's possession.

Consider, for example, the fate of the Shah of Iran who was invested with tremendous power and ruled over a civilised nation and a powerful army. Afterwards, Allah the Almighty withdrew power from the Shah through certain people who began to undo the basis for his political authority. Eventually, the Shah was overthrown.

In this fleeting world, you have authority over the outer parts of your body: you command your hand to hit someone, and it does so. Man persists in this state until the Final Day when he has no power over his body. On this day, Allah the Almighty has dominance over things Alone. He proclaims in the following verse, 'To whom belongs the kingdom this day? To Allah, the One, the Subduer (of all).' (Ghafir: 16)

On the Day of Judgment, men of power are stripped of their authority, and dominance belongs to Allah Alone.

Note that aside from mulk (authority) and milk (possessions), we have the word malakut which is the world that is not perceived by our senses. In this connection, Allah the Almighty says, 'And thus did We show Ibrahim (Abraham) the kingdom (malakut) of the heavens and the earth...' (al-An'am: 75).

This verse clearly tells us that Allah the Almighty revealed to Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him the world of secrets that are hidden in His creatures. When witnessing modern scientists uncovering the mysteries of the plant and animal realms, one is bewildered by the precision of Allah's creation.

Moreover, whoever Allah the Almighty has granted the subtle knowledge and the insight of the scholars, penetrates the outer world and sees the intelligible realm with the eyes of knowledge. This vision allows him to uncover secrets and unveil hidden truths.

In his prayers to his Lord, Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him adds, 'You have taught me something about the interpretation of dreams...' (Yusuf: 101).

Here, Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him is acknowledging Allah's Graciousness to him for having granted him the knowledge of the interpretation of dreams. It is through this knowledge that he peace be upon him could interpret the dreams of the two prisoners who were incarcerated with him in jail, as well as the dream of the king which caused Yusuf's (Joseph's) rise to power; a fact which is by no means surprising considering Allah's Almightiness.

Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him gratefully exclaims, 'Creator of the heavens and the earth...' (Yusuf: 101). Since Allah the Almighty is the Creator of all things, it is not surprising that He should teach Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him many forms of knowledge. It is as if Yusuf's (Joseph's) faith had attained the rank in which he knows with certitude the contents of the following verse in which Allah the Almighty says, 'Does He not know, Who created? And He is the Knower of the subtleties, the Aware.' (al-Mulk: 14)

In our daily life, we witness inventions benefiting not only the inventor but also other beneficiaries. The inventor of the threshing machine or a plough, for example, instructs us how to use these machines or tools. Clearly, his instructions are meant to ensure that the device operates properly.

Let us offer another example to further clarify this point; when our car breaks down, we call a mechanic to look at it. If the mechanic is a trustworthy person, he informs you of the mechanical problem with exactitude and thus fixes it. However, if the mechanic is dishonest, he will damage engine parts that were intact, and will make unneeded reparations for the car. Thus, we see that each inventor is cognisant of the secrets and intricacies of his invention. Considering this conclusion, what are we to say of Allah the Almighty the Greatest Creator of all? Surely, He is the All-Aware and the Knower of all things.

Given what we just explained, why did Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him speak of Allah the Almighty as, 'Creator of the heavens and the earth.' (Yusuf: 101)? The reason for this is that he peace be upon him knows for certain that Allah the Almighty has created man, and that man has a beginning and an end. Only Allah the Almighty knows when our end will be, for man may die a day old, he may perish in his mother's womb or he may die after having experienced life and its vicissitudes for one hundred years.

In contrast, the heavens and the earth are long-standing creations. The sun has never needed any spare parts, for it has never fallen! The sun heats the earth, while it is far above it. Moreover, it is because of Allah's Will that the sun does not fall upon the earth. Allah the Almighty stated, '...And He withholds the heaven from falling on the earth except with His permission; most surely Allah is Compassionate, Merciful to men.' (al-Hajj: 65) Consider the following verse as well, 'Certainly the creation of the heavens and the earth is greater than the creation of men, but most people do not know.' (Ghafir: 57) Man undergoes changes and he dies, but the heavens and the earth, on the contrary, are unchanging, unless Allah the Almighty wills otherwise.

Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him continues his supplication to Allah the Almighty saying, 'You are my protector in this world and in the Hereafter...' (Yusuf: 101). Allah the Almighty is indeed Yusuf's (Joseph's) Protector in this world for He granted him victory, drew him closer unto Himself and supported him when he was faced with hardship. This verse clearly shows how he is invoking Allah the Almighty for His Blessings in this ephemeral world, and for His Reward in the Hereafter.

Since Allah the Almighty is Yusuf's (Joseph's) Protector in this world and in the next, the latter also asks, '…Let me die in true devotion to You. Join me with the righteous.' (Yusuf: 101) By asking, 'Let me die in true devotion to You… (Yusuf: 101), Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him is invoking Allah the Almighty to make him a beneficiary of His Reward in the Hereafter, just as he enjoyed Allah's Bounty in this worldly life.

Muslim scholars have remarked that Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him is unique in having desired to depart this life. After all, when man is granted success in this world, his aspirations are never-ending and he always craves for more bounty.

The annals of Islamic history record that when `Umar ibn `Abd Al-`Aziz,(1) the Commander of the Believers, was presented with a soft piece of clothing, he would ask for one that was even smoother. Likewise, when offered a tender dish, he would demand for another that was even tenderer. However, when he became Caliph, people offered him clothing, but he would ask for clothing that was rougher in texture. This went on to the point that the members of his retinue began to think that he was no longer sound in the way he treated himself. These people did not understand that his soul always longed for better things; when he yearned for the rank of Emir, he was granted it, and when he desired to be Caliph, he assumed that position. Finally, after having ascended to the heights of power, he could long for nothing other than Paradise.(1)

(1) He is Abu Hafs, the righteous caliph who ruled over the Umayyad dynasty in Ash-Sham. He was born in 61 A.H. and was raised in Medina and Al-Walid gave its Emirate to him. After Al-Walid, he became a minister for Sulayman ibn `Abd Al-Malik in Ash-Sham. He then became Caliph in the year 99 A.H., but his reign was short because he died in 101 A.H. at the age of 41. See Az-Zirikli, Al-A`lam, 5/50.

One of `Umar ibn `Abd Al-`Aziz's companions, Ma`mun ibn Mahram Allah be pleased with them relates that he once entered upon `Umar and found him praying to Allah the Almighty for death. He asked him, 'Commander of the Believers, why do you ask your Lord for death when he has made you a cause of such goodness (on Earth)? You have revived the practices of Prophet Muhammad; you have put an end to religious innovations, and your presence is a blessing to all Muslims.'

`Umar ibn `Abd Al-`Aziz responded, 'Should I not be akin to the righteous servant of Allah who, after receiving His full bounty, prayed, '…Let me die in true devotion to You. Join me with the righteous' (Yusuf: 101)?'

We should note that the supplication, '…Let me die in true devotion to You. Join me with the righteous.' (Yusuf: 101) is composed of two parts; the first part is asking Allah the Almighty to let him die; while the second is to let him die as one who has submitted himself to Him the Almighty.

Clearly, each person dies regardless of whether he asks for death. Therefore, the first part of this prayer is not asked for itself, for each one inevitably dies. Thus, Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him asked for the second part of this prayer, namely; to die in a state of perfect submission to Allah the Almighty. It is for this reason that upon visiting graves we utter, ‘May you be safe, O inmates of the abodes of the believers and the Muslims, and if Allah pleases, we shall follow you.’(1)

(1) In his book, Abu Nu`aym Al-Asfahani relates that `Umar ibn `Abd Al-`Aziz said, 'My soul is unrelentingly desirous. Each time the worldly life offers it something, it desires something better. When offered the greatest thing on earth, namely; to be a Caliph, my soul still longed for something superior. Sa`id ibn `Amir said that paradise is better than being Caliph.' See Al-`Asfahani, Hilyat Al-`Awliya`, 5/331.

In this connection, if someone were to ask, ‘Why does one say ‘If Allah wills, we shall follow you,’ even though death is inevitable’? We say, ‘We say “If Allah wills” out of our desire to join as believers the ranks of the dead who have preceded us’.

Someone may also pose the following question, ‘Why would a prophet say to Allah the Almighty ‘Join me with the righteous’ (Yusuf: 101)? After all, righteousness is only possible in this world by following the Divine Way of Guidance that a Prophet of Allah is sent with’. We answer, ‘The word ‘righteous’ in this verse encompasses all of the prophets and others who have believed in the Message revealed by Allah the Almighty.’

The verse in question brings an end to the story of Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him.(2) Afterwards, Allah the Almighty turns our attention to the moral of the story. This story is different from other Quranic stories because it is completely related in one chapter of The Quran, whereas the rest of the stories are dispersed throughout various places in it.

Another exception to this general trend in the Quran is the story of Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him which is also narrated from beginning to end in one chapter. Certain critics have superficially observed that the stories of the Quran are redundantly repeated in various scattered thereof. In response to this observation, I always insist that this apparently repetitive narrative is a synthesising of the various events of each story which, if reassembled, would amount to the complete story.

(1) Buraydah Al-Aslami Allah be pleased with him narrated, ‘Prophet Muhammad used to teach them (i.e. the companions) whenever they came out to visit the graveyard to say, “May you be safe, O inmates of the abodes of the believers and the Muslims, and if Allah pleases, we shall follow you, we pray to Allah for well-being for ourselves and for you.”’ See Imam Ahmad, Musnad, 5/353, 359; and Muslim, Hadith no. 975.

(2) Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him lived his last days in Egypt, and died when he was 107 years old. In his Tafsir, Al-Qurtubi narrated that Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him was buried by the Nile river in a marble coffin. The reason for this is that each group of people desired to bury him in their graveyard to be blessed by being buried by his side. This escalated to the point where a fight was about to break out. Finally, the people decided to bury him at the source of the Nile, allowing the water to pass over his body and to be diffused throughout Egypt. Four hundred years later, when Musa (Moses) peace be upon him left Egypt with the people of Israel, he exhumed Yusuf's (Joseph's) body from the Nile and transported his casket to Jerusalem where he lies buried with his fathers.' See Al-Qurtubi, Jame' Al-Bayan, 5/3605.

Furthermore, Allah the Almighty wanted certain events of each story to be retold for a specific purpose. Generally, the Quranic narratives were revealed to strengthen the heart of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Throughout his twenty-three years as a Messenger, he suffered great calamities and needed reassurance at every moment. So, Allah the Almighty revealed these stories to strengthen his heart.(1) In some instances, Allah Glorified is He tells him peace and blessings be upon him not to be sad, for what he is facing is similar to what the messengers before him had suffered.(2)

In fact, one sometimes comes across a single narrative that is made up of two elements, such as the story of the enmity between Musa (Moses) peace be upon him and Pharaoh in which Allah the Almighty says, ‘And Pharaoh’s family took him up that he might be an enemy and a grief for them...’ (al-Qasas: 8).

In this verse, the hostility is prompted by Musa (Moses) peace be upon him. About this subject, Allah the Almighty also says, ‘there shall take him up one who is an enemy to Me and enemy to him…’ (Ta Ha: 39).

Here, enmity is reciprocated because it arises from two parties. In fact, opposition or enmity is not sustainable when there is only one party involved. A short fight may take place when there is a one-sided enmity, but the reciprocal enmity between two parties prolongs the duration of that fight.

A second example is to be found in the same story of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him when Allah the Almighty relates an event which took place in the early days of his life; that is, prior to his mother’s casting him into the river in accordance with Allah’s Decree. In this regard, Allah the Almighty says, ‘And

(1) Allah the Almighty says, ‘And all we relate to you of the accounts of the apostles is to strengthen your heart therewith; and in this has come to you the truth and an admonition, and a reminder to the believers.’ (Hud: 120)

(2) Allah the Almighty says, ‘And if they call you a liar, truly apostles before you were called liars, and to Allah are all affairs returned.’ (Fatir: 4)

We revealed to Musa’s (Moses’) mother, saying, “Suckle him, then when you fear for him, cast him into the river and do not fear nor grieve”’ (al-Qasas: 7).

In this verse, Allah the Almighty is heartening Musa’s (Moses’) mother before she casts her son into the river. Allah the Almighty is also foreshadowing the incident prior to its unfolding. At the moment she was about to place her son into the river, Allah the Almighty revealed to her, ‘Put him into a chest, then cast it down into the river, then the river shall throw him on the shore; there shall take him up one who is an enemy to Me and enemy to him…’ (Ta Ha: 39).

Those who proclaim that the stories of the Quran are told in a haphazard manner are oblivious to the fact that the story of Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him appears in a single chapter of the Quran. Nor do they recall that the story of Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him is related continuously and in chronological order, from Yusuf’s (Joseph’s) first dream to his ascension to power and ending with reuniting with his family.

Furthermore, the story was revealed in one chapter after the disbelievers of Mecca asked Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him about it. They knew well that he was not tutored by a teacher, nor could he read from a book. Furthermore, they were aware of his life before being a prophet; however, when he proclaimed to them that Allah the Almighty had revealed the Quran to him, they refused to believe, claiming that he hears anecdotes from hither and thither. Yet, when they asked him peace and blessings be upon him to recount them the story of Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him he recounted it in full and from beginning to end.

Concluding the story, Allah the Almighty says:

ذَٰلِكَ مِنۡ أَنۢبَآءِ ٱلۡغَيۡبِ نُوحِيهِ إِلَيۡكَۖ وَمَا كُنتَ لَدَيۡهِمۡ إِذۡ أَجۡمَعُوٓاْ أَمۡرَهُمۡ وَهُمۡ يَمۡكُرُونَ ١٠٢

This account is part of what was beyond your knowledge [Muhammad]. We revealed it to you: you were not present with Joseph’s brothers when they made their treacherous plans [102] (The Quran, Yusuf: 102)

The demonstrative pronoun ‘this’ in this verse is about the story of Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him. The verse is addressed to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. This verse clearly shows that he was not present with Yusuf's (Joseph's) brothers when they said, 'Although we are many, Yusuf (Joseph) and his brother are dearer to our father than we are...' (Yusuf: 8).

Thus, Allah the Almighty has informed him peace and blessings be upon him of things which he was not present to witness.

As we have said previously, al-ghayb (the unseen) is what is absent from your sight but not from someone else's. Note that this type of ghayb is a relative one. However, there is also an absolute ghayb which refers to what is absent from your knowledge and from other human beings as well. In fact, there are three obstacles which veil the unseen world from our sight: The first is the obstacle of the past time which you did not experience, or of the future which has not yet come to pass. The second is the obstacle of spatial location. The third is the obstacle rendered by the present moment. In other words, there are things which are currently taking place in one location or another, but you are oblivious to these events by being in a different position in space.

Allah's saying, 'We revealed it to you…' (Yusuf: 102) means that Allah the Almighty secretly reveals unto you, O Prophet Muhammad, the incident of when the brothers gathered together to decide whether to kill Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him or to cast him into the dark depths of the well.

In this way, Allah the Almighty lifted the veil of the past and gave Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him insight into a story which He had not known previously. Obviously, he was not a direct witness of what had happened between the brothers. He was not instructed by a teacher, and nor did he read of this story in a book, for he was unlettered and could neither read nor write.

In the same connection, Allah the Almighty describes him peace and blessings be upon him as, 'And you did not recite before it any book, nor did you transcribe one with your right hand, for then could those who say untrue things have doubted.' (al-'Ankabut: 48)

The disbelievers of Mecca were fully aware of Messenger Muhammad's movements – including where he lived, the places he travelled to, and the people he met – prior to his prophetic mission. Had they known that he had read a book, it would surely have been a reason for them to accuse him of lying. They foolishly claimed, '…Only a mortal teaches him.' (an-Nahl: 103). In response to their fallacious claim, Allah the Almighty says: 'The tongue of him whom they reproach is barbarous, and this is clear Arabic tongue.' (an-Nahl: 103) In this way, Allah the Almighty refuted their claim.

Furthermore, He has informed Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him of many things of the unseen world. We have previously elaborated extensively on verses which state that he was not present when certain events took place. For example, Allah the Almighty says, 'This is of the announcements relating to the unseen which We reveal to you; and you were not with them when they cast their pens (to decide) which of them should have Maryam (Mary) in his charge, and you were not with them when they contended one with another.' (Al-'Imran: 44)

Another example is Allah's saying, 'And you were not on the western side when We revealed to Musa (Moses) the commandment, and you were not among the witnesses.' (al-Qasas: 44) Thus, this verse implies that Messenger Muhammad's peace and blessings be upon him knowledge of the above events comes originally from Allah the Almighty.

Having received instructions from the Jews, the disbelievers went up to him peace and blessings be upon him and inquired about the story of Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him in their vehemently and obstinately sceptical manner. In response to their inquiry, he peace and blessings be upon him related the story of Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him in one chapter of The Quran, unlike most of the other Quranic narratives, which were revealed in the form of dispersed narratives.

Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him related the story in its entirety since they asked for the whole story rather than a specific segment from it. Moreover, the disbelievers expected him to refuse to answer their question out of ignorance, but he answered them in full.

After hearing of the story of Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him the disbelievers should have realised that it is Allah the Almighty who sent Messenger Muhammad and taught him this story. However, the disbelievers refused to believe. This saddened Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and so Allah the Almighty told him not to be upset or despondent, ‘Perhaps you will kill yourself with grief because they do not believe.’ (ash-Shu'ara': 3) Allah Glorified is He also says, ‘Then maybe you will kill yourself with grief, sorrowing after them, if they do not believe in this announcement.’ (al-Kahf: 6) Thus, Allah the Almighty explains to him that he should only convey the Message.

Allah has revealed these consoling words to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him when he realised that the disbelievers were obstinate in their disbelief even though he had satisfied their inquiries. The disbelievers, nevertheless, rejected the Truth; a fact which is recorded in The Quran, ‘And they denied them unjustly and proudly while their soul had been convinced of them; consider, then how was the end of the mischief-makers.’ (an-Naml: 14) They denied the Message sent to them because they were concerned solely with temporal power. They should have believed in that which Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had brought to them, but it was stubbornness which came between them and certain truth and faith.

When a person is stubbornly clinging to an idea, neither an undeniable proof nor a flawless logic can persuade them to think otherwise. Similarly, the disbelievers denied Prophet Muhammad’s message after having heard the story of Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him in its entirety. They wanted to maintain dominion over their helpless servants and to maintain tyrannical control over other people. Since they hated the idea of being equalised with other people, they rejected the religion of Islam because it addresses all of humanity in a just and equal manner.

In the following verse, Allah the Almighty mentions a principle of universal significance, saying:

وَمَآ أَكۡثَرُ ٱلنَّاسِ وَلَوۡ حَرَصۡتَ بِمُؤۡمِنِينَ ﴿١٠٣﴾

However eagerly you may want them to, most men will not believe [103] (The Quran, Yusuf: 103)

This verse clearly shows that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would not be able to guide all the people to Islam, no matter how strongly he might desire it. In fact, he had a burning desire for his people to believe in his Message; after all he was one of them.

In this connection, Allah the Almighty speaks of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saying, ‘Certainly a Messenger has come to you from among yourselves; grievous to him is your falling into distress, excessively solicitous respecting you; to the believers (he is) compassionate.’ (at-Tawba: 129) Despite Prophet Muhammad’s concern for them, they rejected his Message which caused him to grieve.

On the other hand, there is a particular verse that shows what the Jews – who incited some people of Mecca to ask him peace and blessings be upon him about the story of Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him– are concerned about. Allah the Almighty states, ‘And you will most certainly find them the greediest of men for life (greedier) than even those who are polytheists…’ (al-Baqara: 96).

In short, the people of Mecca should have believed in his peace and blessings be upon him Message since they were presented with irrefutable proofs that he was indeed a Messenger of Allah.

Back to the verse in question, Allah the Almighty says, ‘However eagerly you may want them to, most men will not believe.’ (Yusuf: 103) Allah Glorified is He revealed this verse to console Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and to remind him that the impoverished spiritual state of the people of Mecca is not limited to them; rather, it is the state of most people. Here arises the following question, ‘Why do most people disbelieve?’ The reason is that most people are unable to properly measure that which the Divine Way of Guidance is offering in this worldly life and in the Hereafter. So, when man adopts Allah’s Way of Guidance, he must take account of the rewards that he will reap in the Hereafter. In this way, one will fully realise firstly that no matter how much he tries to please his soul with worldly pleasures, their time in this world is confined to Allah’s Decree, and secondly that life could come to an end at any moment.Unlike what many people believe, Allah the Almighty did not veil the durations of our lives in this world to be unknown to us. On the contrary, the uncertainty of our life span is a basis for clarity because the possibility of departing from this world at any given moment makes man vigilant regarding their spiritual duties.

Thus, there is wisdom in sudden deaths, for they serve as reminders to man that death has no cause. Rather, death is a cause in itself which should induce piety. Furthermore, this is the case even when death results from sickness or an unanticipated happening. In short, man takes pleasure in this world for an amount of time that has been preordained by Allah the Almighty. In contrast to the ephemeral nature of worldly pleasures, man delights in the pleasures of the Hereafter eternally with Allah's unlimited bestowals.

The rewards that the believer enjoys in the Hereafter correspond to Allah's unlimited Omnipotence. In other words, the believer's reward in the Hereafter is not according to the limited capacity of the creature, but according to Allah's Absolute Power.

Consider a person who is oblivious to the reality of the Hereafter, that is, a person who denies the Hereafter and only lives for the pleasures of this fleeting world; we would say to such a person, 'Reflect on what Allah the Almighty prohibits, and what He commands you, and consider the fact that these proscriptions and commands do not only apply to you, but that they apply to millions of other believers'.

If you were to carefully reflect on this fact, you would realise that if Allah's prohibitions forbid you from engaging in activities that could harm others, they at the same time prohibit others from doing the same to you. When seen from this angle, the benefits of such prohibitions can be measured in worldly terms, regardless of the religious advantages.

In short, we should consider the above in light of the maxim that 'averting things which cause corruption or harm should take precedence over reaping benefits'. Let us offer an example to clarify this maxim; imagine that a person who loves you is about to toss an apple at you, and at the same time, someone who hates you throws a stone at you. If the two objects were cast at you simultaneously, you should obviously dodge the rock before catching the apple. Thus, we come to understand that 'the act of averting things which cause corruption or harm should take precedence over reaping benefits'.

Man should take account of this principle in all his affairs because some the modern devices, civilizational innovations and scientific inventions which benefit us to a certain extent, had proven to be devastatingly harmful.One example is the invention of the insecticide DDT which killed not only unwanted insects but also important birds.

It is precisely for this reason that Allah the Almighty says, ‘And follow not that of which you have not the knowledge.’ (Al-Isra’: 36) Prior to putting an invention into operation, you must first assess its benefits and harms. Only after these experiments should modern inventions be used.

For example, when installing electricity in their homes, some people place electric outlets far above the ground and beyond the reach of children. The reason for this precaution is to prevent infants from placing their fingers in the sockets and being electrocuted. In fact, some engineers have invented a device which automatically cuts the electric current when electricity comes into contact with a human hand.

This abovementioned precaution is also an example of ‘averting things which cause harm before reaping benefits’. In short, one should always be cautious when dealing with modern inventions.

Back to the verse under discussion; Allah the Almighty says, ‘However eagerly you may want them to, most people will not believe.’ (Yusuf: 103) When Allah the Almighty says, ‘most people will not believe’ (Yusuf: 103), does this mean that the believers are a minority?! We contend, ‘No, the believers are not a minority because Allah the Almighty is referring to the disbelievers as akthar (most/more), which is not only used in comparison with aqqal (less) but also with kathir (many). That referring to the disbelievers as ‘most of the people’, does not mean that the believers are the minority.

Consider the verse in which Allah the Almighty proclaims, ‘Do you not see that Allah is He, Whom obeys whoever is in the heavens and whoever is in the earth, and the sun and the moon and the stars, and the mountains and the trees, and the animals and many (kathir) of the people; and many (kathir) there are against whom chastisement has become necessary…’ (al-Hajj: 18). In this verse, the pronoun kathir (many) is repeated twice about two distinct sets of people pertaining to the same group.

Thus, in the verse in question, Allah the Almighty made it clear to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that no matter how strongly he desires for people to believe in Allah’s Message, most of them will reject it. The verb used in this verse to show his eagerness is harasa which denotes attaching oneself and exerting great effort to retain or accomplish something which we deem to be either beneficial or something which wards a harm. Al-hirs therefore denotes the attachment of the soul to an objective and this demands great effort.
